V. 4. That ſpiritual rock that followed them] The Jews have now a relation, whether by way of ſtory, or of parable, that the water that came out of the rock in Horeb, Exod. 17. 6. or the ſtreams that flowed, or overflowed, Pſal. 78. 20. did follow the Iſraelites through their journeying in the wilderneſs: and that it did ſo may appear probable, becauſe in that dry wilderneſs we hear no more of their wanting water, till Cadeſh, which was ſome 36 years after this, when they had taken a contrary way in their journeying, by which means, (as alſo by God's making this new tryal of them, and to that purpoſe ordering the change of their journey) that water might now ceaſe to follow them, which before, as long as the miraculous flowing laſted, might naturally, without any new miracle follow them all their voyage. This ſaying of theirs S. Paul makes uſe of in a myſtical ſenſe, making Chriſt indeed to be the rock in a ſpiritual ſenſe, and that Chriſt following (coming really, ſo long after, into the world) but even then (ſo long ago) ſpiritually, and in power preſent among them.

c. Παίζειν

V. 7. To play] That the word παίζειν here is to be taken in an unclean ſenſe, may appear probably by the uſe of the word mocking among the Jews. This will be diſcerned by the Hieruſalem Targum on Gen. 21. 9. on that of Iſmael's mocking; In ſtead of theſe words in the Hebrew, Sarah ſaw the ſon of Hagar mocking, they read by way of paraphraſe, Et vidit Sara filium Ægyptiæ facientem opera mala, quæ fieri non oportuit, illudentem, & cultum peregrinum exercentem, And Sarah ſaw the ſon of the Ægyptian doing evil works which ought not to be done, mocking, and exerciſing ſtrange worſhip. Where the opera mala quæ fieri non oportuit, the evil works that ought not to be done, are the ἄθεσμα, 2 Pet. 2. 7. and ἀθέμιτα, 1 Pet. 4. 3. that is, thoſe unnatural filthy ſins which were ſo ordinary among the heathens, uſed as part of their Gentile worſhip, and thoſe, it ſeems, noted by the phraſe of illudere or mocking, which there and here, and in other places (according to the civility of the ſacred ſtyle) is made uſe of, rather then others which ſignifie more groſly thoſe acts of unnatural filthineſs. So Rabbi Solomon mentions an interpretation, that Iſmael had committed uncleanneſs, and that that is the meaning of the Hebrew צחק to mock, Gen. 39. 17. And Lyra on that of Gen. 21. ſaith that the Hebrew word is equivocal, and ſignifies ludentem, idololatrantem, occidentem, & coeuntem, vel laſcivientem, mocking, committing Idolatry, killing, committing uncleanneſs and wantonneſs. And then there will be little doubt but the words of the ſame Targum on Exod. 32. 6. (the place from which the words in this place are taken) & ſurrexerunt ſibi ludentes cultu peregrino, and they aroſe mocking themſelves after the ſtrange, or heathen, worſhip, may belong to that alſo. To which purpoſe 'tis farther obſervable that ἐμπαίζειν (which may well be reſolved Synonymous to παίζειν, but cannot ſo well be miſtaken for playing as the other may, but diſtinctly ſignifies illudere to mock) is the rendring of צחק (which is the word in Exodus whence theſe words are cited) Gen. 39. 14. and 17. in that ſtory of Potiphar's wife and Joſeph, and certainly ſignifies uncleanneſs there. Thus Tobit 3. 18. where Anna to ſhew her ſelf free from all uncleanneſs, ἀπὸ πάσης ἁμαρτίας ἀνδρὸς from all ſin of, or with man, v. 17. adds in St. Jerome's tranſlation, nunquam cum ludentibus miſcui me, I never aſſociated myſelf with them that mock'd; where no doubt Uncleanneſſes are meant, and 'tis probable that the Greek, which he tranſlates ludentibus, was παιζόντων, though our Greek copies wholly leave out that part of the period. And if the comparing of the ſtory, Act. 7. 41. where 'tis ſaid in this matter εὐφραίνοντο they rejoiced in the works of their hands, be apt to encline to the other interpretation, as ſuppoſing that παίζειν to play, is all one with εὐφραίνεσθαι to rejoice, and conſequently that both denote their dancing before the idol, it will be eaſily anſwered, that εὐφραίνεσθαι rejoicing there ſignifies moſt properly the rejoicing at a feaſt, Lu. 22. 19. and 15. 23, 24, 29, 32. and 16. 19. and ſo following the offering of ſacrifice to their idols, ſhall note the ſacrifical feaſt, and be all one with eating and drinking here, but not with παίζειν, whether playing, or mocking, that attends it; and ſo ſtill παίζειν may fitly thus be interpreted, eſpecially when in this place it follows immediately after ἐπεθυμηταὶ κακῶν luſters after evil things (in the notion that κακῶς ζῆν to live ill is uſed by Pharorinus in the word ἀσελγῆ wanton, that is, for this very ſin, and ſo κακία illneſs, Rom. 1. 29.) and is attended with μηδὲ πορνεύωμεν neither let us commit fornication, &c. referring to that other act of the like ſin, Num. 25. 2, 3. and thence, I ſuppoſe, it is, that to his exhortation of flying from Idolatry, v. 14. he ſubjoins v. 15. I ſpeak to wiſe men, judge ye what I ſay, not willing to ſpeak more plainly, or to add more words on that ſubject, (ſee Note on Eph. 5 f.)

Εὐφραίνεσθαι

d. Ἐξολοθρευτὴς

V. 10. Deſtroyer] That which is here called ἐξολοθρευτὴς deſtroyer is in the Hieruſalem Targum, Exod. 4. 26. called perdens, and that there explained by Angelus mortis, a meſſenger of the Lord's, v. 24. that came to kill him. This is otherwhere called the deſtroying Angel; for what is here ſaid they were deſtroyed by the deſtroyer, is in the ſtory from whence 'tis taken, Num. 14. 37. they died by the plague before the Lord. So the Angels that came to Lot's houſe are ſent to deſtroy the city, Gen. 19. 13. In all which and many more places where plagues are ſaid to be inflicted of God by Angels, it doth not appear that the Angels uſed as inſtruments of thoſe plagues, are the fall'n Angels or devils, but thoſe heavenly that wait on God to execute his wrath, as well as conveigh mercies. Thus God's coming with his Angels is an expreſſion of deſtructions, and yet thoſe are μυριάδες ἁγίων holy myriads, Jude 14. or multitudes of heavenly Angels, (ſee Note on Jude d.)

V. 16. Cup of bleſſing] The Jews uſed to conclude the feaſt wherein the Paſchal lamb was eaten with a cup of wine. This they called כוס הלל poculum laudationis the cup of praiſing, becauſe they ſang an hymn at that time, ſee Mat. 26. 30. and εὐλογίας of bleſſing; and from thence the receiving the wine in the Sacrament, being by Chriſt inſtituted after his Paſchal ſupper, is here called by that title. Of the word εὐλογεῖν to bleſs, ſee Note on Mat. 14. c.

V. 28. The earth is the—] If theſe words be to be read in this place, the meaning of them will be, that in a matter of this nature of eating, they have little temptation to ſin againſt conſcience, when they conſider the great ſtore of other food, even all the plenty of the world, which they may lawfully enjoy, and let the idol-ſacrifices alone. But the King's MS. which leaves them out, ſeems to be in the right, (and 'tis eaſie to imagine how the tranſcribers might here inſert them on occaſion of διὰ συνείδησιν here, the ſame words after which v. 25. theſe words had followed) and then the 29th verſe will immediately adhere to the end of v. 28. becauſe of conſcience; Conſcience, I ſay, &c. which connexion will be otherwiſe diſturbed.

Paraphraſe. CHAP. XI.

1. And do ye in like manner, as oft as there is occaſion for the good of others, deny your ſelves the uſe of your Chriſtian liberty.

1. BE ye followers of me, even as I alſo am of Chriſt.]

2. Now for you that have written this letter to me, and aſked my advice in all theſe particulars, I cannot but commend you, that ye have been ſo mindful of my doctrine, that ye have adhered ſo cloſe to it, that ye have not been ſeducible by any falſe teachers in any of theſe particulars, but have appealed to me, for my opinion of them.

2. Now I praiſe you, brethren, that you remember me in all things, and keep the * ordinances as I delivered them to you.]

* traditions παραδόσεις

3. But

3. But I would have you know that the head of every man is Chriſt; and the head of the woman is the man, and the head of Chriſt is God.]

3. To proceed then to your next quære, in order to matters of decency in the Church, it is fit for you to conſider the ſubordination of perſons in the Church, viz. that as Chriſt in reſpect of his office of mediator is under God, but above all men, ſo the man being under Chriſt is above all women, and conſequently that their garb in the Church muſt be proportionable to this.

4. Every man praying or prophecying, having his head covered, † [b] diſhonoureth his head.]

4. Every man that doth any office in the Church, that either prays, or expounds the word of God, or ſings Pſalms, &c. (ſee Note on Luke 1. m.) if he do it with his head and face covered, this is indecent, againſt the liberty and dignity of his ſex, it being a ſign of ſhame and infamy in a man to have his head and face covered.

5. But every woman that prayeth or propheſieth with her head uncovered, * diſhonoureth her head: for it is even all one as if ſhe were ſhaven.]

5. But every woman that doth any office in the Church, that is employed as a member of a congregation, joining with the Miniſter, whether Paſtor, or Prophet, in diſcharging of any Chriſtian duty, ſuch as is prayer, or expounding, or ſinging Pſalms, &c. (ſee note on Luke 1. n.) and hath her head or face uncovered, this is contrary to decency in her, againſt the modeſty and meekneſs of her ſex, as much as it is for her to cut her hair, and wear it as men do.

6. For if the woman be not covered, let her alſo be ſhorn: but if it be a ſhame for a woman to be ſhorn or ſhaven, let her be covered.]

6. The uſe that is made of the not cutting a woman's hair, of letting it be worn at the length, is that it may be a kind of veil or covering to her, v. 15. which is an argument that as 'tis uncomely or unfaſhionable for her to have her hair cut after the manner of men, ſo it is uncomely to have her head uncovered after the manner of men, the diſtinction of ſexes being to be maintained in the one as well as in the other.

7. For the man indeed ought not to cover his head, for as much as he is the image and [b] glory of God: but the woman is the glory of the man.]

7. For the man indeed is to be uncovered, that being a ſign of power and majeſty, and man (being the image of God, and a beam and irradiation, as it were, of God) is an image of his power and majeſty, and therefore ought ſo to appear; but the woman ſhe is but the beam of the man, having no power but from him, and ſo her ſubjection to the husband being her duty, ſhe therefore is to be covered, which is a ſign of that ſubjection.

8. For the man is not of the woman, but the woman of the man.]

8. As you know in the forming of man and woman, the woman was made of the rib of the man, and ſo is to be reſolved inferior to him.

9. Neither was the man created for the woman, but the woman for the man.]

9. And the creation of the woman was, that ſhe might be the helper, miniſterial and uſeful to the man, not ſo the man to the woman; which is another proof of her being inferiour to him, and that a reaſon ſtill, why ſhe ſhould wear a covering on her head, eſpecially in the time of divine ſervice, where her behaviour ought to be moſt decent, and agreeable to her condition.

10. For this cauſe ought the woman to have † [c] power [d] on her head, [e] becauſe of the Angels.]

10. And eſpecially when the Angels are generally believed to be preſent in the places of God's publick worſhip, this piece of decency in the woman, her being covered, ought moſt ſtrictly to be obſerved, as we will be moſt careful of doing no indecent thing in the preſence of ſuch pure divine ſpirits.

11. Nevertheleſs, neither is the man without the woman, neither the woman without the man in the Lord.]

11. But this inferiority of the wife to the husband muſt not ſo be urged, that the man being independent from her, ſhould be thought to have no reſpect unto her, (which may be ſeaſonable to tell the Gnoſticks, who were great deſpiſers of marriage) any more then the woman ſhould be from the man.

12. For as the woman * is of the man, even ſo is the man alſo by the woman; but all things are of God.]

12. For as the woman was formed out of Adam's rib, ſo all the ſons of Adam were born and conceived and propagated by women, and man and woman united by God, from whom all things are.

13. Judge in your ſelves, is it comely that a woman pray unto God uncovered?]

13 But for that of women's behaviour in the place of publick ſervice, judge you by what is decent among you, is this decent for her to have her head uncovered in time of divine ſervice?

14. Doth not even [f] nature it ſelf teach you, that if a man † have long hair it is a ſhame unto him?]

14. Doth not the univerſal cuſtom of all nations make this diſtinction between ſexes, that men wear their hair cut, and that is decent in them?

15. But if a woman * have long hair, it is a glory to her: for her hair is given her for a covering.]

15. And women do not, but wear it at length, and that is decent in them: and to what purpoſe is this, but that their hair may be a kind of veil or covering to them?

16. But if any man ſeem to be contentious, we have no ſuch cuſtom, neither the Churches of God.]

16. And if after all this, any man will farther contend in this matter, all that I ſhall add is, the conſtant cuſtom of all the Apoſtolical Churches, that women in the Churches ſhould conſtantly be veiled, and that may be of ſufficient authority with you.

17. Now † in this that I declare unto you, I praiſe you not, that you come together not for the better, but for the worſe.]

17. Now one thing there is wherein you are much to be blamed, that your aſſemblies are not ſo Chriſtian as they ought.

18. For firſt of all, when ye come together in the Church, I hear that there be diviſions among you, and I partly believe it.]

18. For firſt I am told, and I have ſome reaſon to believe it, that there are diviſions and factions among you, which expreſs themſelves in your aſſemblies.

19. For there muſt be alſo * hereſies among you, that † they which are approved may be made manifeſt among you.]

19. And indeed there is ſome good uſe to be made of diviſions among Chriſtians, that ſo the honeſt and orthodox may be more taken notice of.

20. When ye come together therefore into one place, * this is not to eat the Lord's ſupper.]

20. That which I am to blame in you is, that your publick common meetings, which ſhould be as at the table of the Lord, to eat a Church-meal, a common Chriſtian feaſt, are indeed much otherwiſe, none of that communicativeneſs and charity among you, as is required in ſuch, ſee Note on Act. 1 f.

21. For in eating every one † taketh before other his own ſupper; and one is hungry, and another is drunken.]

21. For at your feaſts of charity accompanying the Lord's ſupper, which were intended for the relief of the poor, and wherein all the gueſts are to be equal, no man to take place, or eat before another, no man to pretend any right to what he brought, but every man to contribute to the common table, and to eat in common with all others, this cuſtom is utterly broken among you; he that brings a great deal, falls to that, as if it were in his own houſe, at his own meal, and ſo feeds to the full, whereas another, which was not able to bring ſo much, is fain to go hungry home; and ſo your meetings are more to feed your ſelves, then to practiſe a piece of Chriſtian charity, to which thoſe ſacramental aſſemblies were inſtituted.

22. What, have ye not houſes to eat and to drink in? or deſpiſe ye the Church of God? and * ſhame them that have not? what ſhall I ſay to you? ſhall I praiſe † you in this? I praiſe you not.]

22. This certainly is to do as you were wont at home, and you may as well ſtay there and do thus; this is quite contrary to the inſtitution of Church-meetings, and the not only ſending away hungry, but even reproaching and putting to ſhame thoſe that are in want, and are not able to bring any great offering along with them. This ſure is a great fault among you.

23. For I have received of the Lord that which I alſo delivered unto you, that the Lord Jeſus the ſame night in which he was betrayed, took bread,

24. And when he had given thanks, he brake it, and ſaid, Take, eat, this is my body which is broken for you; this do in remembrance of me.]

23, 24. For from Chriſt it was that I received (thō I were not preſent there) what I delivered in my preaching among you, that Chriſt, Chriſt, when he inſtituted his laſt ſupper, took, and bleſſed the bread, and then eat it not all himſelf, nor preferred any one before another by a more liberal portion, but gave it in an equal diſtribution to every one at the table, and that as an expreſſion and token of his life for all of them, without preferring one before another, and then appointed all his diſciples to imitate this action of his, to meet and eat as at a common table, not one to engroſs all or deprive others, and ſo to commemorate the death of Chriſt, and the unconfined mercy of that, by this ſignificative typical charity of theirs.

25. And when ſupper was ended, he took alſo the grace-cup, (ſee note on c. 10. e.) and delivered it about, telling them, that this action of his was an emblem of that covenant of grace and bounty, which he would ſeal in his blood to all, without reſpect of perſons, and commanding them to imitate and commemorate this impartial charity of his, whenſoever they met together at the holy table.

25. After the ſame manner alſo he took the cup when he had ſupped, ſaying, This cup is the New * Teſtament in my blood; this do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me.]

* Covenant διαθήκη

26. And do ye, ſaith he, in all your ſacred feſtivals thus ſhew forth to God and man, this gracious act of my bounty in giving my life for my people, and continue this ceremony till I come again at the end of the world.

26. For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, * ye do ſhew the Lord's death till he come.]

* declare ye καταγγέλλετε

27. So that to offend in this kind againſt this inſtitution of this feaſt, by doing contrary to the univerſal charity deſigned therein, is to ſin againſt the body and blood of Chriſt, to take off from the univerſality of Chriſt's goodneſs and mercy in that death of his.

27. † Wherefore whoſoever ſhall eat this bread, and drink this cup of the Lord unworthily, ſhall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord.]

† So that ὥστε

28. It is therefore fit that every man examine himſelf throughly, whether he be rightly grounded in the faith of Chriſt, of which this Sacrament is an emblem, and accordingly when upon examination he hath alſo approved himſelf, (ſee note on Rom. 2. f.) when he is fitly prepared, let him come to that table, and partake of it in a Chriſtian manner.

28. But let a man examine himſelf, and ſo let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup.]

29. And he that doth come without that preparation, and ſo underſtands not the truth of Chriſt's univerſal mercy in his death, ſignified by this inſtitution of the Lord's ſupper, or conſequently receives it not in an holy manner, incurs damnation, in ſtead of receiving benefit by ſuch eating and drinking of it.

29. For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himſelf, not [g] diſcerning the Lord's body.]

30. And the want of this due preparation to, and performance of this duty, the factions and diviſions that are among you, have brought many puniſhments upon ſome of you, afflictions, (ſee Gal. 4. a.) diſeaſes and death it ſelf, as was threatned upon thoſe who at the feaſt of the Paſſover put not all leaven out of their houſes, Exod. 12. 19.

30. For this cauſe many are weak and ſickly among you, and * many ſleep.]

* Some ἱκανοὶ

31. Which had never fallen upon you, if you had not by ſuch faults needed admonition and diſcipline, God never puniſhing them that do not ſtand in ſome need of being awaked thus, and ſtirr'd up by his puniſhments.

31. For if we would † judge our ſelves we ſhould not be judged.]

32. And when we are puniſhed, 'tis for our good, that being reformed by ſtripes, we may be freed from thoſe puniſhments which fall on the unreformed to all eternity.

32. But when we are judged we are chaſtened of the Lord, that we ſhould not be condemned with the world.]

33. To conclude then, when ye meet at one of theſe Chriſtian feſtivals, have that care and charity to all others as well as your ſelves, that all eat together by equality, as having a common right to a feaſt of charity, that ſo ye may celebrate it as ye ought to do.

33. Wherefore, my brethren, when ye come together to eat, tarry one for another.]

34. And he that cannot do thus, let him ſtay at home, and eat there, for he may there diſpoſe of himſelf as he pleaſe, which here he muſt not do: and his making no difference betwixt a meal at home, and this Chriſtian feſtival in the aſſembly, is a great ſin in him, and may expect puniſhment accordingly. For the other particulars mention'd by you, I will defer the ordering of them, till I come my ſelf unto you.

34. And if any man hunger, let him eat at home, that ye come not together to condemnation. * And the reſt will I ſet in order when I come.]

* As for the other things I will when I come give appointment for them, Τὰ δὲ λοιπὰ ὡς ἂν ἔλθω διατάξομαι

Annotations on Chap. XI.

[a] V. 4. Diſhonoureth his head] It was a part of the puniſhment of malefactors among ſeveral nations, to have a covering put over their faces; and therefore in the Roman form of giving ſentence this was part, Caput obnubito, Cover his head, and that belong'd to the whole head, the face alſo. So among the Perſians in the ſtory of Heſter, c. 7. 8. the word went out of the King's mouth, and they covered Haman's face. And this ſeems to be the literal notation of κατὰ κεφαλῆς ἔχων, having over the head, which is here uſed, ſo having upon the head, as comes down upon the face alſo, as that differs from ἐπὶ κεφαλῆς ἔχειν, having the veil upon the head only. This therefore, which was the faſhion of condemned perſons, is juſtly ſaid καταισχύνειν τὸν κεφαλὴν αὐτῆς, to reproach, or ſhame his head.

Καταισχύνειν τὴν κεφαλὴν

[b] V. 7. Glory] The Hebrew כבוד ſignifies both glory and beam (the beams of the Sun being ſo glorious, that all glory is deſcribed by them) and is rendred both by δόξα and ἀπαύγασμα, and one of them may be here taken for the other, δόξα glory for ἀπαύγασμα beam or irradiation, ſuch a beam which flowing from another, derived from another, implies that from whence it flows to be more honourable. Or elſe the word may ſignifie ſimilitude, likeneſs, in both places of this verſe; for ſo it is uſed by the Septuagint, Num. 12. 8. δόξα κυρίου, the ſimilitude of the Lord, and Pſal. 17. 15. δόξα σου thy likeneſs, where the Hebrew hath תמונה in both places. And ſo here it will agree with εἰκὼν, the man is the image and ſimilitude of God, and the woman of the man.

Δόξα

[c] V. 10. Power] What the word ἐξουσία ſignifies here will be beſt conjectur'd, not by hearkning to the critical emendation of Jacobus Gothofredus, who would read ἐξουβίαν the Latine exuviam in ſtead of it, but by looking on the Hebrew word which ſignifies the woman's hood, or veil, and that is רדיד, whoſe theme רדד ſignifies dominion or power over any thing or perſon, according to which notion of the theme, the word ἐξουσία muſt needs be anſwerable to the Hebrew רדיד, and conſequently, though it ſignifie power primarily, is yet fitly ſet here to ſignifie a veil (and by the Vulgar tranſlation in ſome copies rendred velamen) by the ſame proportion as רדיד, deduced from the root ſignifying power, is put for a woman's veil, Cant. 5. 7. and Iſa. 3. 23. and ſo Gen. 24. 65. and 38. 14. and explain'd by the Targum by צעיף a veil, peplum, theriſtrum, ſuch as Rebecca and Tamar uſed. And this more fitly in reſpect of the diſcourſe, or rational importance of this place, which v. 8. proves that the woman ſhould wear a covering in token of her husband's power over her. So when Euſtathius a Biſhop of Sebaſtia in Conſtantine's time, among other things τὰς γυναῖκας κείρεσθαι παρεσκεύαζεν, cauſed women to be polled, againſt him the Council of Gangra made a * Canon in theſe words, εἴτις γυναικὸν διὰ νομιζομένην ἄσκησιν ἀποκείροιτο τὰς κόμας, ἃς ἔδωκεν ὁ Θεὸς εἰς ὑπομνησιν τῆς ὑποταγῆς, ὡς ἀναλύουσα τὸ πρόσταγμα τῆς ὑποταγῆς, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω, if any woman for ſome exerciſe of pretended piety ſhall poll her hair, which God gave for a remembrance of ſubjection, let her be excommunicated, as one that diſſolves the ordinance of obedience, or ſubordination, of the woman to the man. So Photius Epiſt. 210. The woman ought to be ſubject to the man, καὶ τῆς ὑποταγῆς σύμβολα τὸ ἐπὶ τῆς κεφαλῆς κάλυμμα φέρειν, and bear the ſign of her ſubjection, a covering on her head, which he there ſets as the meaning of this place. As for that on which this whole interpretation is founded, the cuſtom of uſing one Greek word for another, when the Hebrew ſignifies both, it hath been formerly obſerved, Note on Mar. 14. f. and need not now ſeem ſtrange, or be repeated again.

ἀνδράσιν ἀκαλύπτοις εἰς τὸ δημόσιον παρεῖναι, It is the cuſtom (and conſequently decent) for women to come into the publick covered, and for men uncovered. And Clemens Alex. Pædag. l. 2. c. 10. Ἐγκαλύφθω δὲ τῷ κεφαλῷ, καὶ τὸ πρόσωπον ὑποσκιάζεσθαι προσήκει, ὡς μὴ δόσιν εἶναι θηρατὴν ἀνθρώπων τὸ κάλλος τοῦ σώματος, 'Twas appointed that the heads and faces of women ſhould be covered and ſhaded, and that the beauty of the body ſhould not be a ſnare to catch men. So ſaith Dicæarchus of the Thebans, ἱματίων ὄντι τῆς κεφαλῆς κάλυμμα τοῦτο τὸ ὄζειν, ὥστε προσωπίδι δοκεῖν πᾶν τὸ πρόσωπον κατειλῆφθαι, οἱ γὰρ ὀφθαλμοὶ διαφαίνουσι μόνον, τὰ δὲ λοιπὰ μέρη τοῦ προσώπου πάντα κατέχεται τοῖς ἱματίοις, Their heads and faces were all covered as with a mask, and nothing but their eyes to be ſeen. And ſo of the city of Tarſus, (St. Paul's country) ſaith Dio Chryſoſtome, that the women came ſo attired into publick, ὡς μηδὲν αὐτῶν μέρος ἰδεῖν τινα, μήτε τοῦ προσώπου, μήτε λοιποῦ σώματος, that no part, either of their face, or the reſt of their body, might be ſeen. And for thoſe that have not uſed, or retained that cuſtom of wearing veils or coverings, yet the univerſal cuſtom of women among all people, is to wear their hair at length, and that is uſeful to cover their faces, and necks, and ſhoulders, and that is the reaſon of the mentioning their long hair, that nature teaches them, v. 15. and that it is as fit for her to be ſhaven as uncovered, v 6.

Ib. Becauſe of the Angels] The preſence of God in any one place more then in another is not eaſily conceivable by any. And therefore that any place ſhould be called his houſe, or place of reſidence, his temple wherein he dwells, 2 Cor. 6. 19. muſt needs be in ſome other reſpect, and what that is, is ſufficiently explicated by Jacob, who upon the viſion of Angels at Luz, awakes, and ſays, that the place was venerable, and that God was in it, and that it was the houſe of God; which concludes that the appearance or preſence of Angels is that from which God is ſaid to be peculiarly preſent any where, and which fits that place to be God's houſe; and thus Eccleſ. 5. 5. when we read, from the Hebrew, before the Angel, the Septuagint interpret it πρὸ προσώπου τοῦ Θεοῦ before the face of God, making the Angel and God's preſence all one. Thus Pſal. 68. the Myriads of Angels are ſaid to be God's Chariots, places to receive God, as he is ſaid to ſit on the Cherubims, and to flie on the wings of the wind; or Angelical ſpirits, Pſal. 18. Agreeable to this was it, that God was ſaid to be in the Ark between the Cherubims, and that the Ark was therefore called the glory, the Schechinah or inhabitation of God, and many things of this nature in the Old Teſtament, (ſee Note on Mat. 3. k.) And proportionably, both under the Old and New Teſtament, the Angels have been thought to be preſent in the places of God's publick ſervice. Thus Phil. περὶ ἀρετ. p. 541. ſpeaking of the hymns of Moſes, ſaith, they were compoſed διὰ πατρὸς ἁρμονίας καὶ συμφωνίας εἰδους ὑφ' ὃ καταλύσειν ἄνθρωπόν τε καὶ ἄγγελοι λειτουργοί, with all kind of harmony and ſymphony, that men and angels, which attend, do hear, making the Angels, as well as men, auditors of the hymns in the Temple, and, as it follows, ἔφορος διακόσμου μὴ τι παρ' ὠφέλειαν ἐκπλεῖ, overſeers to look that all be done as it ought. So Tertullian De Orat. Angelo adhuc orationis aſtante, the Angel of prayer ſtanding by. So Chryſoſtome ſpeaking of the diſorderlineſs of ſome in the Church, οὐκ οἶδας ὅτι μετ' ἀγγέλων ἕστηκας; ſaith he, knowe'ſt thou not that thou ſtandeſt with the Angels? μετ' ἐκείνων ᾄδεις, μετ' ἐκείνων ὑμνεῖς, καὶ χορὸς γελᾷς; thou ſingeſt with them, praiſeſt God with them (referring queſtionleſs to the ancient form in the Liturgy, with Angels and Archangels, &c. we laud and magnifie, &c.) and ſtandeſt thou laughing? Agreeable to which is that of the Pſalmiſt in the Septuagint tranſlation, Pſal. 138. 1. ἐναντίον ἀγγέλων ψαλῶ σοι, In the preſence of the Angels I will ſing unto thee; which that it belongs to the Temple, appears by that which follows v. 2. προσκυνήσω πρὸς ναὸν ἅγιόν σου, I will worſhip toward thy holy temple, that is, the Sanctuary, they ſtanding in atrio, in the Court, not in ναῷ in the Sanctuary, when they worſhipp'd. So in St. Baſil's Liturgy we have this form, Δέσποτα κύριε ὁ Θεὸς ἡμῶν ὁ καταστήσας ἐν οὐρανοῖς τὰς τάγματα, καὶ στρατιὰς ἀγγέλων, &c. εἰς λειτουργίαν τῆς σῆς δόξης, συνελθεῖν σὺν τῇ εἰσόδῳ ἡμῶν καὶ σύνοδον ἁγίων ἀγγέλων συνεργούντων ἡμῖν, καὶ συνδοξολογούντων σοὶ τὸν Χριστόν σου, O Lord our God, that conſtituteſt the orders and hoſts of Angels and Archangels for the miniſtry of thy glory, make thy holy Angels enter with us, that we may officiate and praiſe thy goodneſs together. Thus ſaith * Procopius of God, that he doth by the Angels οἰκείαν ποιεῖν ἐπιφάνειαν ἐν ναῷ, exhibit himſelf, or appear peculiarly in the Temple. And ſo in the very heathen Plutarch (περὶ ἐκλελ. χρησ.) ſpeaking of the δαίμονες, which differ little in their notion from that of Angels among Chriſtians, he ſaith of them, that they are ἐπίσκοποι θείων ἱερῶν, καὶ μυστηρίων ὀργιασταὶ, overſeers of their divine offices, and prieſts of their myſteries; and Iamblichus to the ſame purpoſe, that every Temple hath its keepers. Which being ſuppoſed and taken for granted, the account will be clear, why the woman muſt be covered becauſe of the Angels, that is, that ſhe ought to do that which was moſt decent, in that place where the Angels were preſent to behold them, and that yet more particularly, when ſhe hath thoſe Angels, (which uſe to be preſent in ſuch places) for her example alſo, who by covering their faces uſe to teſtifie their ſubjection toward God; for ſo we read of the Seraphim, Iſa. 6. 2. with two wings they covered their face, To which Photius adds Epiſt. 210. that the Angels are ἐπόπται καὶ μάρτυρες τῆς ἐξ ἀνδρὸς γυναικὸς γενέσεως αὐτῆς καὶ ὀπτῆρες, lookers on, and witneſſes of the woman's production out of the man.

V. 14. Nature] What is meant by φύσις here, which is ſaid to teach that men are to cut, women not to cut their hair, may be gueſs'd, firſt by the practice and vow of the Nazarites, of never cutting their hair, which yet was allowed and commended by God in ſome men, which it would not have been, if the practice had been againſt the law of Nature, or if that were the notion of φύσις here; ſecondly, by the words precedent, v. 13. πρέπον ἐστὶ, &c. is it decent? which though it belong to the woman's praying uncovered, yet when being uncovered and cutting her hair are made unfit upon the ſame principle, v. 6. the τὸ πρέπον or decency will be an interpretation of the φύσις nature, as v. 6. αἰσχρὸν uncomely is applied to both the being ſhaven, and uncovered; thirdly, by the notion of φύσις in other Authors for cuſtom, ſo ἤδη ἔθη πέφυκε φύσεις, cuſtoms are acquired natures in Galen, and in Ariſtotle Rhet. l. 1. c. 11. καὶ γὰρ τὸ εἰθισμένον ὥσπερ πεφυκὸς ἤδη γίνεται, ὅμοιον γὰρ τὸ ἔθος τῇ φύσει, ἐγγὺς γὰρ τὸ πολλάκις τῷ ἀεὶ ὄντι· διὰ δὲ μὲν φύσις τὸ ἀεὶ, τὸ δ' ἔθος τὸ πολλάκις, Cuſtom and nature are near and like one another, and that which is frequently done is next that which is always done. And therefore when in Lucian, in the perſon of Demoſthenes, we have συγγίνωσκέ μοι μὴ πεφυκότι κακῷ γίνεσθαι, pardon me, that am not born to be ill, or naturally ill, Phil. Melanchthon renders it ignoſce mihi, qui non conſuevi inconſtans eſſe, pardon me that am not wont to be ſo, that being an ordinary notion of πεφυκέναι among Authors; and ſo 'tis ordinary for that to be called the law of Nature, which was but the law of Nations, ὥσπερ ἔθνος ἐν, ἢ ἔθνη χρῶνταί τινα, which one nation, or ſome nations uſe, in Harmenopulus, ἐξαβ. l. 1. tit. 1. And ſo in the Digeſts (de ſtat. Hom. l. lex naturæ) that which was but the law of many nations, ut qui naſcitur ſine legitimo matrimonio matrem ſequatur (which, though it held among the Grecians and Romans, did not among other nations) is called lex Naturæ, the law of Nature; as on the other ſide, Dio. Chryſ. ἀεὶ ἔθους, of cuſtom, comprehends the law of Nature under that ſtyle. Fourthly, by the uſe of the word φύσις in the New Teſtament, as Epheſ. 2. 3. τέκνα φύσει ὀργῆς children of wrath by nature, applied to the national univerſal cuſtom of idolatry among the Gentiles, as appears v. 2. in which you (Epheſian Gentiles) ſometimes walked, and v. 3. among whom we all (we Romans, from whom he wrote) ἀνεστράφημέν ποτε, ſometime converſed, ὡς καὶ οἱ λοιποὶ as the reſt alſo of the heathen world. Juſt as the ſame Idolaters, Wiſd. 13. 1. are called φύσει μάταιοι, vain; that is idolatrous, by that general cuſtom among them. To this matter the teſtimony of Suidas is moſt clear on the word φύσις, where having enlarged on the ſignification of it in Philoſophy, he adds, ὅταν δὲ ὁ Ἀπόστολος λέγῃ, καὶ ἡμεν τέκνα φύσει ὀργῆς, ὡς καὶ λοιποὶ, οὐ χρὴ τοῦτο τὸ σημαινόμενον τῆς φύσεως λέγειν, ἐπεὶ τὸ ποιῆσαν ἔθος ἂν εἴη τὸ ἔγκλημα, ἀλλὰ πάθος ἔμμονον καὶ κακίαν πολυχρόνιον καὶ κενὴν καὶ πονηρὰν συνήθειαν, but when the Apoſtle hath thoſe words, which were by nature, &c. he takes not the word, Nature, in this notion, but for an evil, durable diſpoſition, or chronical cuſtom. So when the Apoſtle ſaith of the Gentiles, that παρὰ φύσιν beſide nature they were graffed into a good olive tree, being but a wild olive themſelves, Rom. 11. 24. he ſure means by Nature the cuſtom of the Jews, which by analogie with Levit. 19. 19. was extended to a prohibition of graffing one fruit-tree into another kind, or else he refers to the constant custom and rules of gardening, never to graff an ill fruit upon a good stock. And so sure 'tis in this place, either the universal custom of all nations, or the fashion of the place, or of the generality of people, for men and women to distinguish their sexes by cutting or not cutting of the hair.

g. Διακέλευση

V. 29. Discerning] The Hebrew קדש signifies two things, to sanctifie, and to discriminate, and is accordingly sometimes rendred by ἁγιάζειν, and once by διαστέλλειν, Jos. 20. 7. From hence it seems to be that διακρίνειν here, being the literal rendring of one notion of the Hebrew קדש, is taken for the other of hallowing or sanctifying the Lord's body, that is, eating the Lord's supper, (in a different manner from that of eating our ordinary meal, or ἴδιον δεῖπνον our own supper, viz.) as the institution of Christ, to represent his death for the world, and the diffusive mercy of that, by our Christian liberality, and furnishing a common table, where the poor as well as rich may feast, and not the rich eat all to themselves; which is the profaning of that feast of the body of Christ.

Paraphrase.

CHAP. XII.

*the spiritual πνευματικῶν

1. Now to that other part of your letter, concerning those that are moved and acted by the spirit, whether good or ill, (see c. 14. 37. and Note on Luke 9. d.) and foretell, &c. by that means, I desire to admonish and direct you, brethren, and to give you some characters to discriminate one from the other, when they come into your assemblies, as sometimes some with evil spirits did, (Euseb. Hist. l. 4. 16.) and as Simon the Magician is said to have contended with S. Peter.

1. NOW concerning * a spiritual gifts, brethren, I would not have you ignorant.]

2. When ye were heathens, ye know the oracles pretended to foretel things to come, and by your desire to know such things, ye were seduced to idols; which were so far from being able to presage, that they were not able to speak, and the answers that were given you there, were neither given you by the idols, nor their priests, but by the devil in them.

2. Ye know that ye were Gentiles, carried away unto these dumb idols, even as ye were led.]

3. The way therefore to discriminate them is this, that no man who pretends spiritual gifts in the Church, who is led or speaks by the Spirit of God, will ever speak evil of Jesus; and no such man again hath any of those extraordinary powers of miracles, &c. and doth them in the name of Christ, but he is acted by the holy Spirit, the doctrine and commands of Christ being so contrary to, and destructive of the evil spirits, and their designs among men, that the devil will never assist men with his power to set up that.

* the Lord Jesus κύριον Ἰησοῦν

3. Wherefore I give you to understand, that no man speaking by the spirit of God, calleth Jesus † accursed: and that no man can say, * that Jesus is the Lord, but by the holy Ghost.]

4. But of the gifts that come from the Spirit of God there are differences, and though all men do not the same things, yet in them all the Spirit is the same: and therefore they that have not these extraordinary gifts in so high a degree as others, should not be sadned for that, as long as they have sufficient to demonstrate that they have the Spirit.

4. Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit.]

5. And there are diversities of offices and ministeries, but all performed to the one true God.

5. And there are differences of administrations, but the same Lord.]

† them all in all men πάντα ἐν πᾶσιν

6. And there are diversities of affiations or inspirations, but the God that worketh all these in all men is the same.

6. And there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God which worketh † all in all.]

* for that which is profitable πρὸς τὸ συμφέρον

7. But the exercise of these spiritual gifts, whereby the Spirit manifests it self to be in any man, is designed still for some benefit or advantage of the Church; and therefore those powers that tend to no use or advantage in the Church, are to be suspected not to come from the Spirit of God.

7. But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man * to profit withal.]

8. The gift that one man hath from the Spirit is the special ability of speaking parables, and veiling wise conceptions: Another hath the understanding and interpreting the mysteries of Scripture, (see note on ch. 1. c. and note on 2 Pet. 1. c.)

8. For to one is given by the Spirit the word of wisdom, to another the word of knowledge by the same Spirit,]

9. Another hath a miraculous faith, or by which he works all kinds of miracles: another hath from the same Spirit a peculiar power of curing diseases without the help of physick.

9. To another faith by the same Spirit, to another the gifts of healing by the same Spirit,]

† the operations of powers ἐνεργήματα δυνάμεων

10. Another hath strange formidable powers of inflicting diseases, nay death it self, on malefactors, (see note d.) Another the faculty of interpreting scripture. Another of knowing men's hearts, whether they be sincere or no, (in order to Ecclesiastical discipline in censures and diseases.) Another to speak some languages which he was never taught, (see note g.) which served both as a miraculous act to confirm the Gospel, and as a help to reveal it to men of all countries. Another the power of interpreting strange languages to such in the congregation, who had not understood the language in which the Apostles had spoken, v. 30.

10. To another † the working of miracles, to another prophecie, to another discerning of spirits, to another divers kinds of tongues, to another the interpretation of tongues.]

11. But all these worketh that one and the self-same Spirit, dividing to every man severally as he will.

12. So in like manner is Christ and his Church many members in one body, see Gal. 3. note d.

12. For as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body being many are one body: [so also is Christ.]

13. For in baptism being made partakers of the same Spirit we are entred into one body to be fellow-members with all Christians, of what quality or sort soever we are: And the cup of charity or thanksgiving, appointed by Christ in his last supper to be used in his Church, is a token and band of the same unity among Christians, and signifies the animating of all by the same spirit.

13. For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit.]

14, 15, 16, 17. For as the body is made up of several members for several uses, so is the Church of Christ, each of them profitable for some end; and therefore though one be inferiour to some others, yet hath that no reason to envy them.

14. For the body is not one member, but many.

15. If the foot shall say, Because I am not the hand, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body?

16. And if the ear shall say, Because I am not the eye, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body?

17. If the whole body were an eye, where were the hearing? If the whole were hearing, where were the smelling?]

18. It hath therefore seemed best to God to give several men several offices in the Church, which they are to be content with, not repining that they are not more honourably employed.

18. But now hath God set the members every one of them in the body, as it hath pleased him.]

19. For if every member were equal to all others, there could not be a subordination, and an assignation to several offices, as in a body there must be.

19. And if they were all one member, where were the body?]

20. And therefore God hath so ordered it, that each should have his peculiar office, and all together be united into one body.

20. But now are they many members, yet but one body.]

21, 22. Every one having need and use of every

21. And the eye cannot say to the hand, I have no need of thee: nor again the head to the feet, I have no need of you.

22. * Nay

22. * Nay much more thoſe members of the body which ſeem to be feeble, are neceſſary.]

* But the members of the body that ſeem to be more weak are! much more neceſſary. Αλλὰ πολλῶ μᾶλλον, τὰ δοκοῦντα μέλη τοῦ σώματος ἀσθενέστερα ὑπάρχειν, ἀναγκαῖά ἐστι and are aſhamed of, being moſt neceſſary.

23. And thoſe members of the body which we think to be † leſs honourable, [* upon theſe we beſtow more abundant honour,] and our uncomely parts have more abundant comelineſs.

† more diſhonourable or ſhameful ἀτιμότερα

23. we cloath and cover moſt diligently;

24. For our comely parts have no need: [but God hath tempered the body together, having given more abundant honour to that part which lacked.]

24. but God hath ſo diſpoſed of the ſeveral parts of the body, that ſome ſhall have a natural beauty, others that want that, ſhall be ſupplied by clothes, which are an artificial beauty,

25. That there ſhould be no ſchiſm in the body, but that the members ſhould have the ſame care one for another.]

25. That there may be no ſeparation of intereſts or deſires in the body, and ſo likewiſe in the Church, but that the ſeveral members may be as ſolicitous every one for another member, as for its ſelf.

26. And whether one member ſuffer, all the members ſuffer with it; or one member be † honoured, all the members rejoice with it.]

26. From whence it follows, that as in the body, every member hath a fellow-feeling with each other, ſo all true members of the Church have the ſame common intereſts and concernments, whether of ſuffering or of rejoycing.

27. Now ye are the body of Chriſt, and members * in particular.].

* about theſe we put τούτοις ἐστὶ δεμὼ

27. And this muſt be by you applied to your ſelves, who are, being conſidered all together, the Church, though not the Church Univerſal, yet a ſpecial part thereof, the Church of Corinth, (ſee Chryſoſtome) and ſo the myſtical body of Chriſt, and the ſeveral perſons of you, members of that body, that particular Church.

28. And God hath ſet ſome in the Church, firſt [b] Apoſtles, ſecondarily [c] prophets, thirdly [d] teachers, after that [e] miracles, then gifts of healings, [f] helps, [g] governments, [h] † diverſities of tongues.]

† made glorious δεξάζεται

28. And the chief officers conſtituted by God in the Church, are 1. Apoſtles ſent to plant the faith, and having done ſo, either to govern being preſent, or ſuperintend being abſent, in all Churches. 2. Prophets, who having many ſpiritual gifts, teach where the Apoſtles have planted, and confirm believers, and impoſe hands, (ſee note on Act. 15. e.) 3. Doctors or teachers of Churches already conſtituted, and ſo all one with Biſhops, differing from prophets only in this, that they taught out of the inſtructions which they had themſelves received, without any ſpecial revelation. Then as endowments of theſe and parts of their function, were theſe five things, 1. Powers of inflicting diſeaſes and death it ſelf upon the diſobedient. 2. Gifts of healing them that received the faith. 3. The care of the poor. 4. The power of governing the Churches where they were planted. And laſtly, ſome ſorts of languages neceſſary to their preaching to the Gentiles, (though not the gift of all tongues, which came down on the Apoſtles.) b. c. d. e. f. g. h.

29. Are all Apoſtles? are all prophets? are all teachers? * are all workers of miracles?

* have all powers

30. Have all the gifts of healing? do all ſpeak with tongues? do all interpret?]

29, 30. Thus do the ſeveral offices and gifts in the Church belong to ſeveral perſons, and not all to one, and each is to be content with his lot, and uſe it to the benefit of the Church.

31. But covet earneſtly the beſt gifts: And yet ſhew I unto you † a more excellent way.]

† a far more excellent καθ' ὑπερβολὴν

31. I conceive then that you do well every one to ſeek (and contend in prayer) earneſtly for thoſe gifts which are moſt uſeful and profitable to the Church, wherein you miniſter: But therein deceive not your ſelves, (as they do that make uſe of theſe to faction and diviſion, ſcorning and vilifying of thoſe that are not ſo well gifted as they) but know from me, that none of thoſe external abilities are to be compared with that one grace of charity, the love of our brethren, and the performance of thoſe duties toward them which God requires of us, chap. 13. 4. &c. the ſeverals of which, as they are deſpiſed by you, ſo they are much more excellent then thoſe offices and gifts that tend moſt to the edifying of the Church, and I ſhall proceed to ſhew you that.

Annotations on Chap. XII.

a. Πνευματικὰ ἀν

V. 1. Spiritual gifts] That Πνευματικῶν may here be uſed in the Maſculine, not Neuter Gender, is moſt evident; and if it be ſo, then it muſt ſignifie ſpiritual perſons, not things. So the word is certainly uſed c. 14. 37. If any ſeem to be a Prophet or ſpiritual, ſuch as have any divine afflation. Thus in Palladius, Lauſiac. Hiſt. c. 43. Ἔγνων ἀκριβῶς πνευματικὸν αὐτὸν ὄντα, καὶ προγινώσκειν πάντα, I knew exactly that he was a ſpiritual perſon, and foreknew all things. *p. 963. D.

b. Ἀπόστολοι

V. 28. Apoſtles] The word Ἀπόστολοι Apoſtles is known to ſignifie here, not meſſengers of a common nature, but commiſſioners from Chriſt, ſent with the ſame power which he had from his father, Joh. 20. 21. to plant and govern the Church, and to that end, to part the world between them into ſo many μοῖρες, and κλῆροι, and ἴδιοι τόποι, portions, and lots, and proper places, and provinces, Act. 1. 25. over which they were ſet. And ſo though, when Chriſt was here on earth, theſe were Diſciples and followers of his, yet after his departure, and the deſcent of the Holy Ghoſt, they are inſtated in the ſupreme authority in the Church. See Note on Joh. 20. b.

c. Προφήτας

Ib. Prophets] Next after the Apoſtles are Prophets placed in the Church, both here, and Epheſ. 3. 5. and 4. 11. Their office was to preach more fully the Goſpel of Chriſt to thoſe who had formerly received it, and to that end they were inſpired by God with that ſpecial gift of interpreting the prophecies, &c. of the Old Teſtament, thereby to confirm the Jews in the faith, and beſide many other ſpiritual gifts, they had that of foretelling things to come, as appears by Agabus, and thoſe that went down from Jeruſalem to Antioch, Act. 11. 27. Theſe differed from Apoſtles on one ſide, were inferior to them ἐκ εἶχον τὴν Ἀποστολὴν, had not that higher commiſſion, ſaith Theophylact, and being joined with Doctors, Act. 13. 1. did yet in this differ from them, ſay the Scholiaſts, that the Prophets did ſpeak all from the Spirit, πάντα ἀπὸ πνεύματος φθεγγόμενοι, οἱ δὲ διδάσκαλοι οἰκοθεν, but the doctors from themſelves. Such were Judas and Silas, Act. 15. (ſee note e.) who being Biſhops of Judæa, were farther furniſh'd with the gift of prophecie, and προφῆται ὄντες being prophets, v. 32. διὰ λόγου πολλοῦ παρεκάλεσαν ἀδελφοὺς καὶ ἐπεστήριξαν, exhorted and confirmed the brethren, or Chriſtians, as other the like did lay on hands on Paul and Barnabas by revelation from the Holy Ghoſt, Act. 13. 3. their revelation being an evidence of their gift of prophecy, their laying on hands an exerciſe of their Epiſcopal power. And ſuch were the two witneſſes, Rev. 11. 3. who are there ſaid to propheſie in ſackloth, that is, after the manner of Prophets in the Old Teſtament, to preach the will of God, and foretel things to come, who that they were the Biſhops of Jeruſalem, ſee Note on that place.

d. Διδάσκαλοι

Ib. Teachers] Διδάσκαλοι Doctors are here ſet down in the third place, differing, as hath been ſaid, from Prophets only in this, that they ſpake οἰκοθεν from themſelves, and had not the gift of foretelling things to come. But for the office of teaching and confirming thoſe which had already received the Goſpel, and for the governing of the Churches as Biſhops, in that they agreed with them; and accordingly Act. 13. 1. the ſame perſons are there call'd Prophets and Teachers. And therefore 'tis to be obſerved, that Epheſ. 4. 11. Teachers are ſet as all one with ποιμένες Paſtors (the Biſhop's title, ſaith * Chryſoſtome, and ſo ſay the Scholiaſts, τοὺς τὰς ἐκκλησίας ἐγκεχειρισμένους, &c. thoſe that govern the Churches, the Biſhops, he calls Paſtors, ſuch was Timothy, Titus, and the like.) So in Bede Eccl. Hiſt. l. 2. c. 2. Epiſcopos ſive Doctores, Biſhops or Doctors. So * S. Chryſoſtome, Epiſt. 2. ſpeaking of the inceſtuous Corinthian, πολλοὶ φασιν ὅτι καὶ διδασκάλου τάξιν ἐπεῖχε, many ſay he had the place of a Doctor, ſtreight adds, τὰ πρωτεῖα ἔχειν τῆς ἐκκλησίας, he had the preſidency of the Church: τοὺς μὲν ποιμένας καὶ διδασκάλους, ſome paſtors and teachers, not diſtinguiſhing them, as Apoſtles, and Prophets, and Evangeliſts, with a τοὺς δὲ ſome to each, but only connecting them with the καὶ, ἐξηγητικὸν, the particle and, by way of explication, and ſo noting them to be two names for one thing, and accordingly ποιμένες Paſtors, is not mentioned here.

here. The particular notation of the word διδάσκαλοι must be first taken from the difference observable betwixt κηρύσσειν and εὐαγγελίζεσθαι, preaching, on one side, and διδάσκειν, teaching, on the other, so as the word and doctrine differ, 1 Tim. 5. 17. the first belonging to the planting, the second to the watering, that is, instruction and exhortation and confirmation superadded to the preaching or planting the faith any where. This office of instructing and confirming cerainly belonged primarily to the Bishop in every Church, Act. 13. 1. and was not competible to any but him, or whom the Bishop appointed to it, (as the Apostles sent the Evangelists to preach for them, where they could not come themselves) by neglect of which wholsome practice, all heresies and seeds of new doctrines have gotten into the Church. Thus in Justine Martyr Apol. 2. when the Anagnostes or Reader hath read the portion of Scripture out of the Apostles or Prophets, he holds his peace, and the προεστὼς Præfect or Bishop τὴν διδασίαν ποιεῖται makes the exhortation, after the manner that we see practised by Paul, Act. 13. 15, 16. And agreeable to that it is that the Bishop should be stiled Διδάσκαλος Teacher. So Chrysostome, and Theophylact on 1 Tim. 4. 14. Τὸ τῆς διδασκαλίας καὶ ἱερωσύνης ἀξίωμα μέγα ὄν, &c. the dignity of Teacher or Priest being great, &c. by both noting the ἱερωσύνη or Priesthood, to which ὁ Τιμόθεος ἤρθη, Timothy was there chosen, that is, his Episcopal power. (Of this see more, Note on Jam. 3. a.)

e. Ib. Miracles] Having set down the three prime sorts of dignities in the Church, Apostles, Prophets, Teachers, with the distinctive terms of πρῶτον, δεύτερον, τρίτον, first, secondly, thirdly, the Apostle adds now in another stile, ἔπειτα δυνάμεις, εἶτα χαρίσματα ἰαμάτων, after powers, then gifts of healings. Of which two it must first be observed, that they do not denote several persons distinct from the former, (for 'tis evident the Apostles had both, the powers, and the gifts) but only several χαρίσματα, or extraordinary gifts, with which the Apostles and Prophets and Teachers were all endowed. And consequently these cannot be imagined to constitute new orders in the Church, nor those that follow in this place, helps, &c. Secondly, for the meaning of δυνάμεις powers, it is most probable that by it is denoted the same thing that by the ἐνεργήματα δυνάμεων v. 10. operations of powers (which are there also join'd with gifts of healing) and those may denote those operations or exercises of powers which we find exemplified in St. Peter on Ananias and Sapphira, in Paul on Barjesus, (either inflicting immediate death, or diseases upon them, or pronouncing that they should come, and accordingly it followed) and in those first times, in the Governours of the Church, by their censures delivering men up to Satan, εἰς ὄλεθρον σαρκὸς, to the destruction of the flesh, to inflict deseases on them. And this may very probably be the meaning of δυνάμεις powers here also; and so 'tis acknowledged by Theophylact. And these seem to be the τέρατα prodigies wrought by the Apostles, Act. 2. 43. upon which 'tis said that fear was on every soul, in like manner as it was said upon the death of Ananias ch. 5. 10. in respect of these powers of the Apostles

f. Ib. Helps] That ἀντιλαμβάνεσθαι signifies to succour, or relieve any in distress, hath been said, Note on Lu. 10. b. and there is no doubt but ἀντιλήψεις here is to be taken in that sense, relieving and providing for the poor out of the stock of the Church; and this here set down as a special part (as the κυβερνήσεις is another) of the office of those men which were set down in the beginning of the verse, the powers and the gifts of healing referring to the virtues and assistances by which they were back'd in the discharge of their office, and so, in an inferiour degree, the γένη γλωσσῶν, sorts of tongues, in the close of the verse, skill in some languages, which was usefull to their preaching to the nations; but these two, helps and governments, denoting two special parts of their office, under which all was indeed contained, which had not been before intimated in their names. For as to the former of these, the relieving of the poor, that always belonged to the Apostles and Bishops; and though the Deacons were employed in one inferiour part of it, the serving tables, Act. 6. the distributing of the several portions daily to the poor widows, &c. as διάκονοι under the οἰκονόμος, servants under the steward, yet the supream trust and charge was reserved to the Apostles and Bishops of the Church. So Act. 20. 35. St. Paul appoints the Bishops, ἀντιλαμβάνεσθαι τῶν ἀσθενούντων, to relieve, or succour, those that were weak, or sick, which by the Context, (the mention of Christ's words, It is better to give than to receive) is applyed to acts of charity, supply of corporal wants. And so in the 41. Can. of the Apostles, Δεῖ τὸν ἐπίσκοπον, &c. A Bishop must have the care of the monies, so that by his power all be dispensed to the poor by the Presbyters and Deacons, and we command that he have in his power the goods of the Church. So Justin Martyr Apol. 2. Συλλεγόμενον παρὰ τῶν προεστῶτος ἀποτίθεται, καὶ αὐτὸς ἐπικουρεῖ ὀρφανοῖς τε καὶ χήραις, that which is gathered is deposited with the Præfect, or Bishop, and he helps, relieves the orphans and widows, καὶ ἁπλῶς πᾶσιν ἐν χρείᾳ ὅσοι κηδεμὼν γίνεται, and becomes the curator, or guardian, to all absolutely that are in want. So Ignatius in his Epistle to Polycarp the Bishop of Smyrna, μετὰ τὸν κύριον σὺ χηρῶν φροντιστὴς ἔσο, After the Lord thou shalt be the curator of the widows. And accordingly Polycarp himself speaking of the Elders or Bishops, among the parts of their office reckons ἐπισκεπτόμενοι πάντας ἀσθενεῖς they visit and take care of all that are sick, μὴ ἀμελοῦντες χήρας ἢ ὀρφανοῦ ἢ πένητος, not neglecting the widow, or orphan, or the poor, and therefore, saith he, must be far from the love of Money, as St. Paul appoints in the qualification of the Bishop. And therefore as the bounty of the first believers, Act. 2. was brought to the Apostles feet, and they by that means were made the dispensers of it; so the contribution that Paul and Barnabas brought in time of famine to the poor brethren in Judæa was by them delivered into the hands of the Elders or Bishops of the Churches of Judæa, Act. 11. 30. as to the stewards which had the supream power on earth of ordering this family of Christ. And so Epaphroditus that was sent with the liberality of the Church to Paul, Phil. 4. 18. and is therefore called λειτουργὸς τῆς χρείας μου, he that ministred to his wants, Phil. 2. 25. is by Theodoret and others affirmed to be the Bishop of the Philippians at that time. By all which the account and reason appears why the ancients do explain ἀντιλήψεις by προστασίας, helps here, by præfectures, this office of providing for, and looking to the poor being a special part of the Bishop's power, which he had over the goods of the Church in the forecited Canon Apostolical.

Ἀντιλήψεις

Λειτουργὸς τῆς χρείας μου

g. Ib. Governments] The word κυβερνήσεις is all one with the Latin gubernationes, and so denotes the power and office of ruling and governing particular Churches already planted by the Apostles, and by them committed to the care of the Bishops, set down here under the stile of διδάσκαλοι teachers, who, as they farther instructed the congregations which had received the faith, so did they rule and order and administer them (Κυβερνᾷ διοικεῖ, saith Hesychius.) Hence I suppose it is, that as ποιμὴν pastor, and ποιμαίνειν to discharge the office of a Pastor, denotes this power of ruling, and is the description of an ἡγεμὼν a ruler, Mat. 26. ὅστις ποιμανεῖ τὸν λαὸν, who shall rule the people, and is applied first to Christ, Mat. 26. 31. Joh. 10. 11, 14. Heb. 13. 20. 1 Pet. 5. 4. (and join'd with Bishop, 1. Pet. 2. 25.) then to St. Peter, Joh. 21. 16. then to the Bishops of Asia, Act. 20. 28. then to the Bishops of the Jews in their several dispersions, 1. Pet. 5. 1. so 'tis joined with διδάσκαλος teacher, Ephes. 4. 11. and not as a several office from that (as Apostles, Prophets, and Evangelists had been) but as two parts of the same persons office, τοὺς μὲν ποιμένας καὶ διδασκάλους some Pastors and Teachers, noting these governours of the several Churches to have been the teachers also: And so here the διδάσκαλοι being named in the former part of the verse, κυβερνήσεις is added in the latter, to denote the ruling powers that belonged to those teachers: διδάσκαλοι with the addition of ἀντιλήψεις and κυβερνήσεις here, being all one in effect with the Pastor and Teacher in one person, Eph. 4.

h. Ib. Diversities of tongues] What γλωσσῶν here signifies, will be best discerned by * Eustathius, who expresseth it by ἀποξενωμένην διάλεκτον, a strange language; and by * Clemens, who calls them ἀπεπλήκτους τὰς βαρβάρων φωνὰς, the voices of barbarians which have not been learn'd. And tho' this equally belongs to all strange languages, yet it must be observed that γένη γλωσσῶν kinds, or sorts, of tongues in this place, and v. 10. signifies with some restraint, not all the languages of the world, as was in the effusion of the spirit on the Apostles Act. 2. but some sorts of languages which they had never learn'd, in order to their preaching to those people which used those languages. For it must be observ'd, that though the power of miracles, indefinitely all miracles, even to the raising the dead, removing removing mountains, &c. were beſtowed on the Apoſtles by Chriſt, and ſo in like manner power of ſpeaking all languages of the world; yet theſe in this full latitude were not thought fit to be beſtowed on other perſons after them, but with ſome limitations, to one this, to another that, which was uſeful toward the building up of the Church, now that the foundation was already laid by Chriſt and the Apoſtles. Hence is it that ſome are peculiarly endowed with gifts of healing, not having thoſe other powers, called δωάμεις or ἐνεργήματα δωάμεων here and v. 9. nor the πίστις faith, v. 9. that which extended to all miracles, even to removing of mountains, ch. 13. 2. And ſo in like manner, ſome had ſome certain languages (as a χάρισμα or gift) by inſpiration; yet not all, becauſe that was not in order to their buſineſs. And as the power of ſpeaking with all tongues is called indefinitely λαλεῖν ἑτέραις γλώσσαις ſpeaking with other tongues, and here ch. 13. 1. γλώσσας ἀνθρώπων λαλεῖν καὶ ἀγγέλων, ſpeaking with the tongues of men and of Angles; that is, all kind of languages imaginable (proportionable to the πᾶσα πίστις all faith v. 2.) ſo this more limited gift is expreſſed by γένη γλωσσῶν, ſorts, or kinds, of languages, and γλώσσῃ λαλεῖν, ch. 14. 2. ſpeaking with a tongue, that is, ſome one tongue or more; for of him it is ſaid, ver. 13. Let him pray that he may interpret, which it ſeems he is not yet able to do, and ſo not to ſpeak with all tongues. For if he could, then underſtanding himſelf well enough (as he is ſuppoſed to do, v. 4. 14.) it muſt needs follow, that he would alſo be able to interpret himſelf, and not need another qualified to that purpoſe, v. 27. In like manner as here, v. 30. tongues and interpreting belong not both to the ſame perſons, nay, c. 14. 28. when two or three ſpeak in unknown tongues, 'tis ſuppoſed poſſible that neither of them may be able to interpret or declare intelligibly to the people what hath been ſaid, in which caſe the Apoſtle bids them that ſpeak ſtrange languages, hold their peace in the Church, that is, in the preſence of believers, for to them the ſtrange language is wholly uſeleſs. Thus though St. Paul thank God that he doth γλώσσαις λαλεῖν μᾶλλον πάντων ὑμῶν, c. 14. 18. ſpeak with tongues more then all, in the Church of Corinth; yet his very ſaying ſo is an intimation that he had not the gift of all tongues, as being not one of thoſe Twelve on whom that gift deſcended, Act. 2. yet furniſhed abundantly for his office with the languages of all thoſe to whom he was to preach.

CHAP. XIII.

Paraphraſe.

1. THough I ſpeak with the tongues of men and of Angels, and have not charity, I am become * as [a] ſounding braſs, or a tinckling cymbal.]

1. If I have never ſo perfect a degree of the gift of languages, and do not withal ſtudy and endeavour the good and edifying of the Church, I am no better then a trumpet or cymbal that ſounds a triumph, for vanity or boaſting, but not at all for profit or benefit of the Church.

* a reſounding braſs, or a loud-ſounding cymbal

2. And though I have the gift of prophecy and underſtand all myſteries, and all knowledge, and though I have all faith, ſo that I could remove mountains, and have no charity, I am nothing]

2. And though I can expound ſcripture, and know all the moſt myſterious and ſubtile parts of it, as the Gnoſtick hereticks pretend to have (ſee note on 2 Pet. c. 1.) and if I have the higheſt degree of that faith by which miracles are wrought, ſo as to be able to remove mountains, and do not employ my gifts to the good of others, I am not to be compared with thoſe that have that moſt excellent gift, c. 12. 13. and make uſe of it accordingly, to the benefit of (and preſerving unity in) the Church.

3. And though I * beſtow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing.]

3. If I have the liberality to give away all my goods, and even the care and ſolicitude to diſtribute them to thoſe that ſtand in need of them, and do not this out of any principle of charity and compaſſion, to contribute to the good of others, but either to pleaſe men, or acquire glory; and ſo in like manner, if I proceed to part with my very life, adventuring the moſt cruel death, even to be burnt alive, and have no charity, or ſincerity of love to others, live and die without that moſt Chriſtian neceſſary virtue, I am in compariſon never the better for it.

* diſtribute all my goods and ψωμίζω πάντα τὰ ὑπάρχοντά μου

4. Charity [b] ſuffereth long, and [c] is † kind, charity envieth not, charity [d] vaunteth not it ſelf, is not puffed up,]

4. It is the property and commendation of this virtue of charity, to be ſo far from wronging others, that it teacheth forbearance, makes a man perfectly patient, and not revengeful of injuries, very kind, tender and compaſſionate, as ſenſible and zealous of other mens good as of his own, makes a man far from envying, very well pleaſed at all other mens happineſſes, abates all fooliſh elation of mind, ambition and oſtentation, as alſo all pride and inſolence in over-valuing himſelf, and deſpiſing others, ſo very obſervable in the preſent Hereticks, and diſturbers of the Church, the Gnoſticks,

5. Doth not [e] behave it ſelf unſeemly, ſeeketh not her own, is not * eaſily provoked, [f] † thinketh no evil,]

5. Keeps men from uſing others unſeemly either in words or geſtures, or from diſorderly behaviour in the Church, enclines them to take care of others good and profit, and not only of their own praiſe, &c. (ſee note on Rom. 14. d.) permits not a man to fall into immoderate, violent diſtempers of anger upon what ever provocation (ſee note b.) imputes and reckons all the good, but none of the evil that is done by any,

* highly provoked or exaſperated † doth not impute the evil

6. [g] Rejoyceth not in iniquity, but * rejoyceth in the truth,]

6. Is far from rejoycing at any other ſins, his doing amiſs, nay is paſſionately affected with ſorrow for it; but when others live and act as faithful Chriſtians ought to do, he is very much concerned in that, rejoyceth at it,

* congratulates with the truth, συγχαίρει τῇ ἀληθείᾳ

7. † [h] Beareth [i] all things, believeth all thing, hopeth all things, endureth all things.]

7. Inclineth a man to hide or conceal all the evil of another that he knows, ſo far as is for his good, and is not contrary to the greater good of others, to believe without prejudice all the good that he hears, or can have any ground in charity to believe of him, to hope that which he believes not, and never ſo far to deſpair of his repentance, as to give over the uſing all probable means which may reclaim him, and to endure much pain, and trouble, and loſs, to procure a greater good for others, then the evil we ſuffer herein is to our ſelves.

8. Charity never faileth: but whether * there be prophecies, they ſhall fail; whether there be tongues, they ſhall ceaſe; whether † there be knowledge, it ſhall vaniſh away.]

8. And for this charity, the love of God and our brethren, as it hath many branches of excellent virtue in it, ſo hath it privileges above all other graces or gifts of the Spirit, particularly this, that it ſhall be uſeful to us, and be exerciſed by us in another world, it ſhall never be outdated, but laſt even in heaven, when our imperfect gifts of prophecy, languages, explication of myſteries, ſhall be ſwallowed up in that abyſs of perfections

* prophecies they ſhall be done away, προφητεῖαι, καταργηθήσονται

† Knowledge that ſhall be done away, γνῶσις καταργηθήσεται

9. For we know in part, and propheſie in part.

10. But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part ſhall be done away.]

9, 10. For our knowledge and prophecie, and other graces and gifts being now imperfect, muſt give way to the perfect ſtate, and become abſolutely uſeleſs then.

* was affected, ἐφρόνουν † reaſoned, ἐλογιζόμην

11. When I was a child, I ſpake as a child, I * underſtood as a child, I † thought as a child; but when I became a man, I put away childiſh things.]

11. As it fares in the change of ages in a man, our words, our affections, our inclinations, and our reaſonings, are quite changed; in the compaſs of a few years, we neither ſay, nor deſire, nor underſtand any thing, as ſome years before we did: ſo much more is it betwixt this and another life.

* we ſee yet βλέπομεν ἄρτι † I yet know, ἄρτι γινώσκω

12. For * now we ſee through a glaſs darkly, but then face to face: † now I know in part, but then ſhall I know even as alſo I am known.]

12. For now our viſion is very dark and imperfect, looking at things as when they are ſhewed us through a glaſs, on purpoſe to give us but a glimpſe of them; but when we come to heaven, we ſhall then ſee as perfectly as if we look'd cloſe to it, know God as truly as we have hitherto been known by him.

13. And now abideth faith, hope, charity, theſe three; but the greateſt of theſe is charity.]

13. So that it is evident, that as faith, hope, and charity, are far to be preferred before all other gifts of the ſpirit, which are given men for the benefit of others v. 2. ſo of thoſe three graces or divine virtues charity is the moſt excellent, whether conſidered in it ſelf, or in the duration of it. In it ſelf it is the moſt neceſſary grace here, v. 1. &c, and all the other whether graces or virtues are but means for the working of this, our Faith teacheth it, and our Hope excites it, and Charity is the end of the Commandment, and Faith muſt be perfected perfected by it, and without it all the gifts mentioned, v. 1, 2. are nothing worth, and are given men for the working of that in others: and ſo likewiſe in reſpect of the duration, the gifts were ſoon to vaniſh, (and are now vaniſhed long ſince, the gift of miracles, of languages, &c.) and Faith and Hope will vaniſh with this life; for Faith is of things not ſeen, and therefore ceaſeth when viſion cometh, and ſo Hope, if it be ſeen, is not Hope, but Charity ſhall never be outdated, but laſt and flouriſh when we come to heaven, and be then a ſpecial ingredient in our happineſs, which indeed conſiſts in loving God, and having common deſires with him, and loving all whom he loves, (not the damned, who are veſſels of his wrath) and that eternally.

Annotations on Chap. XIII.

a. Κύμβαλον

V. 1. Sounding braſs] That κύμβαλον cymbal here is an inſtrument of loud muſick may appear, not only by the Epithets which are given it Pſal. 150. 5. the loud cymbals, and the high-ſounding cymbals, but alſo by the reſt of the conſort there mentioned, the ſound of the trumpet in the firſt, and (after the Pſaltery and harp, timbrel and pipe, ſtringed inſtruments and organs) this of the Cymbal in the laſt and higheſt place, and that no doubt a πνευματικὸν a wind inſtrument of braſs, as appears by Heſychius, who renders χαλκόστομα inſtruments with braſen mouths, by χάλκα κύμβαλα braſen cymbals. So improbable is it that this ſhould be that tinckling inſtrument of ſo ſlight and low a ſound, that now we call by that name. This more appears by Ἀλαλάζον the Epithet here added to it, ἀλαλάζον, which certainly ſignifies a loud noiſe or cry, a ſhout either of mariners and the like, when they ſet all uniformly to ſome work of difficulty, to hoiſe the main ſail, to which they all muſt join, and ſummon one another to it by that ſhout, or elſe of conquerors in a field, Ἀλαλάζει, ὀπινικίως ἠχεῖ, the word notes ſhouting for victory, ſaith Heſychius, and Ἀλαλαγμὸς, ὀπινικὸν ὕμνον, ἢ εὐφημον βοὴ, 'tis a ſong of victory, or ſhout of acclamation. And that ſignifies this inſtrument to be ſuch as was then uſed (as the trumpet, ment, I ſuppoſe, by the χαλκὸς ἠχῶν reſounding braſs, is now) for thoſe ſolemn military Ovations and triumphs; and in that reſpect it ſeems moſt applicable to the gift of tongues in the Church, as that is oppoſed to charity. Charity is all for the edification, the benefiting and profiting of others; but the gift of tongues being only uſeful, as a miracle, to convince unbelievers, and to ſpeak intelligibly to them which are of another nation, and not at all uſeful to believers of their own nation that underſtood not a ſtrange tongue, may, in reſpect of them, fitly be compared to a Cymbal, or trumpet, ſounding a triumph for oſtentation, but not for edification, as is inſiſted on at large in the fourteenth Chapter.

b. Μακροθυμεῖν

V. 4. Suffereth long] The notion of μακροθυμεῖν for ſlowneſs to wrath, or revenge, in oppoſition to quick reſentment of injuries, is ſufficiently known, Rom. 9. 22. and ſo it is to be taken here, as a firſt and principal act of charity, on which χρηστεύεται, is kind, or good, or gentle, or gracious, fitly attends. This differs from the ὐ παροξύνεται, is not exaſperated, or highly provoked to anger, v. 5. eſpecially in two things. 1. Παροξυσμὸς notes the height or pitch to which it advanceth, as the paroxyſme is the ſharp fit of the fever; and ſo that part of the character of Charity is, that where that is planted, it moderateth anger, and ſuffers it not to boil to that height, but this of μακροθυμία is the deferring and putting it off; the charitable man is ſo far from raſh anger, or ſudden revenges, that he can bear and forbear long. 2. Παροξυσμὸς is reſtrained to the paſſionate, ſharper part of anger, which is called ὀργὴ, as the former to the rational and heavier part of it, θυμὸς, which relates to revenge, or inflicting of puniſhment. This is otherwhere expreſſed by βραδὺς εἰς ὀργὴν ſlow to wrath, Jam. 1. 19. by ἀνεξίκακος 2 Tim. 2. 24. bearing with evil, not apt or forward to puniſh thoſe that do amiſs; to which is annexed ἐν πραΰτητι παιδεύων, in meekneſs inſtructing oppoſers. Contrary to this are the ἀνήμεροι fierce 2 Tim. 3. 3.

c. Χρηστεύεται

Ib. Is kind] Χρηστότης ſignifies εὐσπλαγχνίαν, ἤ ὠμὸς ἢ πάλαι σωφιλάνθρωπον, τὸ ἀπὸ ὡς οἰκεῖα ἰδιοποιούμενον, ſaith Phavorinus, tenderneſs of compaſſion, kindneſs toward the neighbour, making all things that belong to him as if they were his own; and ſo it ſeems to ſignify here, that it is the property of Charity, where it is planted, to infuſe a benignity into their nature, making them conſider others as they do themſelves, and ſo extend the ſame liberality and kindneſs to them that ſtand in need of it, that in the like caſe they would wiſh to themſelves; a God-like quality, attributed to God himſelf, ὅτι Κύριος χρηστὸς, the Lord is gracious, 1 Pet. 2. 3.

d. Περπερεύεται

Ib. Vaunteth not] What the word περπερεύεται) ſignifies, or of what origination it is, whether Greek or Latin, is ſomewhat difficult. Among the ancient Greeks it is not met with, but among the moſt ancient Latins it is; Perperi in Accius, and perperitudo, and perperàm facere very ordinarily: Which makes it reaſonable to reſolve it a Latin, not a Greek word originally. Then for the meaning of it, in the Latin it ſignifies generally to do amiſs, perperàm oppoſed to rectè; but in the Greek, the Gloſſaries, and the ancient Fathers do differ, and yet pretty well agree. Περπερεύεται, καταπαίρεται, ſaith Heſychius, is elated, ſets himſelf out at the greateſt advantage; and Πέρπερος μὴ βλακείας ἐπαιρόμενος, lifted up, and fooliſh, (and therefore when in Phavorinus we read Περπερεία, ἢ κλακεία, it ſhould doubtleſs be read ἢ βλακεία fooliſhneſs, and ſo preſently to the ſame word he hath, ἢ ἡ βλακεία.) And Phavorinus hath pointed to this place, ὃ περπερεύεται, ὁ Ἀπόστολός φησι, τυτέστιν, ὃ περπατεῖ, (for which St. Chryſoſtome reads, ὃ περπαιύεται, and what that is will be beſt judged from Antiochus, * λογ. ὁ'. μὴ ὑπεραιρόμενον——μήποτε περπευόμενον, not lifted up above meaſure, not exalted with an opinion of himſelf, as appears by the oppoſites there, ταπινόφρων lowly-minded, κατεσμένος τῇ καρδίᾳ, depreſs'd in heart, λογιζόμενος ἑαυτὸν ἀχρεῖον δοῦλον εἶναι, accounting himſelf to be an unprofitable ſervant) when the Apoſtle ſaith, ὐ περπερεύεται, the meaning is, that he runs not headlong, præcipitous, as giddy proud fools are wont to do. Περπιτὴς, ſaith Heſychius, πρόπλων πρὸ τοῦ λογισμοῦ, that falls upon any action before conſideration, or deliberation, raſh, unadviſed: ſo * Antiochus λογ. ρι'. ſpeaking of longanimity and lenity of mind, ſaith, that he that hath it, is (among other things) ἀπέρπερος, not guilty of that præcipitous raſhneſs that wrathful men are ſubject to (and therefore when Heſychius hath Περπερᾷ, περπέπει, it will be reaſonable to correct, and read it, περπιπεῖ.) * Clemens Alexandrinus renders περπερεία καλλωπισμὸς, adorning and dreſſing ones ſelf gayly; and † St. Baſil, Τί ἔτι περπερεύεσθαι; πᾶν ὃ μὴ δὰ χρείαν, ἀλλὰ δὰ καλλωπισμὸν παραλαμβάνεται What doth it ſignify? All that is put on not for uſe, but ornament. So in * Cicero ad Attic. Ego autem ipſe, Dii boni, quomodo ἐνεπερπερευσάμην novo auditori Pompeio? that is, πῶς ἐκαλλωπισάμην, how did I ſet my ſelf out, play the orator, decking or adorning my ſpeech with borrowed beauty? where, it ſeems, it notes an oſtentation of eloquence, as of any thing elſe. From theſe ſeverals put together the reſult may ſeem to be this, that περπερεύεται ſignifies that ambitious oſtentation, ſetting himſelf out, which proceeds from a fooliſh, giddy pride and elation of mind; and puts a man forward upon all headlong, precipitous actions in purſuit of his own glory, or to ſatisfy his own intemperate humour. Thus in Accius, ductabilitas nimia, and perperitudo, are put together, an eaſineſs to be led, and an haſty raſh precipitous behavior. And then the excellence of charity (as in other things) appears in this, that, where it is truly planted, it keeps a man from this fooliſh, giddy elation of mind, which breaks out precipitouſly into all ambitious, oſtentatious actions, and renders him ridiculous by an undue unconſiderate purſuit of his own glory, or praiſe; whereas the true Chriſtian love of others, ſo contrary to ſelf-love, the ſource of all this, is buſied in the advancement of the real concernments of others, and ſets conſiderately about that, and runs not headlong after ſuch improper ways of getting in any aerial empty good unto themſelves.

e. Ἀσχημονεῖ

V. 5. Behave it ſelf unſeemly] What ἀσχημονεῖ here ſignifies, is a matter of ſome queſtion. That which ſeems moſt commodious to ſome circumſtances of the place is, that it is one effect of the grace and duty of Charity to our Brethren, that he that hath it, doth never uſe others unſeemly in words or geſtures, but eſpecially not reproachfully. Thus will it fitly be joined to ὐ φυσιοῦται is not puffed up, contumelious behaviour being a natural concomitant of pride and arrogance. And accordingly as Heſychius renders Ἀσχημονεῖ (for ſo it ſhould be read, not as the copy corruptly hath it, Ἀσχολῶς) ἀκοσμεῖ doth uncomely in general, ſo he explains Ἀσχήμων θάνατος ὀνειδισμὸς an uncomely death, by ὀνειδισμὸς reproachful, contumelious, to which it will be conſequent quent, that the Verb may alſo ſignifie to deal reproachfully, and to do ſo is very contrary to Charity, of which therefore it is here denied. The notion which Eraſmus hath of it for being aſhamed of nothing, doing any the meaneſt offices, though it might be agreeable to the Context, as an act of high Charity, doth no yet any way agree with the nature of the word. And the other notions of doing no diſhoneſt thing, &c. affixt by others, will not agree with the Context, which belongs all to duties of charity to other men, whereas this is terminated in our ſelves. Only it may be worthy of conſideration, whether (this chapter of the marks and effects of charity being founded in the diſcourſe of giſts in the Church, c. 12. and both compared with and ſet before them, here, v. 1, 2, 8. and alſo ſet oppoſite to the factions and diviſions incident to the irregular uſe of them, and ſo particularly purſued c. 14.) this, and many other parts of the character of charity, be not ſo to be interpreted, as may moſt immediately refer to that matter. Thus the three immediate precedents here, ὐ ζηλοῖ, ὐ περπερεύεται, ὐ φυσιῦται, envieth not, vaunteth not, is not puffed up, ſeem peculiarly to mark out the malice and pride and oſtentation of the Gnoſticks, and then, proportionably, ſo may ὐκ ἀσχημονεῖ behaves not it ſelf diſorderly; that is, where true Chriſtian charity is, (oppoſed to γνῶσις knowledge, c. 8. 1.) it hath this effect, it keeps men from irregular diſorderly behavior in the Church, ſuch as are mentioned c. 14. throughout, but eſpecially v. 23, 35. and in reſpect of which it is preſcribed in the end of the chapter, that all things be done (in the Church certainly) εὐσχημόνως orderly, which may very reaſonably be thought to interpret the contrary here, ὐκ ἀσχημονεῖ, and therefore I have not omitted this interpretation in the paraphraſe.

Ib. Thinketh no evil] What λογίζεται τὸ κακὸν ſignifies muſt be doubtful, becauſe both λογίζεσθαι and κακὸν are capable of two interpretations: λογίζεσθαι may ſignify to think, as that ſignifies to deſign; Λογεῖται, διαλογίζεται, ἐνθυμεῖται, ſaith Heſychius; and κακὸν evil may be hurt or miſchief: and then λογίζεσθαι τὸ κακὸν will be to imagine miſchief, deſign in the mind, contrive hurt to any, and ſo thinking evil ſignifies Gen. 50. 20. and διαλογισμοὶ πονηροὶ, evil thoughts, are wicked machinations, (ſee Note on Mat. 15. e.) On the other ſide λογίζεσθαι is to reckon, to account, and τὸ κακὸν evil is alſo wickedneſs in any man, as well as miſchief to him. And then λογίζεσθαι τὸ κακὸν is to impute, or account, ſin to any man. Thus λογίζεσθαι ἁμαρτίαν Rom. 4. 8. is rendred truely, imputing of ſin, that is, accounting ſin to any, reckoning it, charging it on him. To this purpoſe S. Chryſoſtome ὐδὲν πονηρὸν ὑποπτεύει κατὰ τοῦ φιλουμένου, he ſuſpects no ill of him whom he loves, and μηδὲ ὑπόνοιαν πονηρὸν δέχεσθαι ἀνέχομένη, charity endures not to receive any ill ſuſpicion of any. And this latter is more probably the meaning of the Phraſe here. For this may fitly be reckon'd among the excellent effects of Charity, that it keeps a man, in whom it is, from reckoning or imputing of evil to any man; whatſoever good another doth, it makes one impute that to him, commend him, reward him for that, as it was God's charity to Abraham (and to all ſincere believers) that he did λογίζεσθαι δικαιοσύνην, impute righteouſneſs unto him, though he performed not exact obedience, or ſuch to which the reward was due. But τὸ κακὸν the evil, that which is amiſs, (all one with τὸ ἁμαρτίαν the ſin) ὐ λογίζεται, it will not ſuffer him to impute that any way to his diſadvantage. This a man will be otherwiſe apt enough to do, if Charity do not reſtrain him; and a moſt commendable virtuous act it is, a ſpecial ingredient in raiſing that great elogie of Charity premiſed in the firſt verſes of the Chapter, that it accounts, reckons, imputes the good, but not the evil, whereas the deſigning of miſchief is it ſelf ſo vile a thing, ſo contrary to the laws of common humanity, that an heathen virtuous man, without the advantage of Chriſtian charity, will not think fit to do ſo: And meerly to reſtrain one from that diabolical, malicious humour, is not ſo commendable, or ſo excellent a thing. To this rendring of it agree the ſeveral gloſſes in Heſychius, Λογισμοῖς, ὑποῖς, and Λογιζόμενοι, ἀπειλημμένοι, and Λογίζεται, φυλάττεται· 'tis certainly a falſe print for ὑποίζεται, for it follows Λογίζομαι, τῷ χοιρὶ ὑποίζω· and Λογίζομαι, εὐθυμοῦμαι, φυλάττω, it ſhould certainly be again εὐθυμοῦμαι, ὑποίζω. All tending to this, that it ſignifies to reckon, (ſee Note on Rom. 3. b.) as generally it doth in the New Teſtament. Another notion yet there is which is affixed to this phraſe, that λογίζεσθαι τὸ κακὸν is to ſuſpect evil, but that is expreſs'd by another phraſe, ἐνθυμεῖσθαι πονηρὰ, Mat. 9. 4. and that Charity permits not a man to do that, is in effect ſaid, v. 8. in πάντα πιστεύει it believes all things, believes always the beſt of every man, for that is all one with ſuſpecteth not evil.

V. 6. Rejoiceth not in iniquity—] For the explaining this verſe, it muſt firſt be reſolved what is meant by ἀδικία iniquity, and ἀλήθεια truth. Ἀδικία may ſignifie (in oppoſition to the peculiar notion of truth) deceit or falſeneſs, as when it is ſaid of Chriſt, ὅτι ἀληθής ἐστιν, this is true, and ὐκ ἔστιν ἀδικία ἐν αὐτῷ, Joh. 17. 18. there is no unrighteouſneſs in him, that is, no deceitfulneſs, (ſee Note on Lu. 16. a.) And then the meaning will be, that true Charity infuſes ſuch a value of truth, and diſlike of deceit and couſenage, that it permits not any man to be pleaſed with any ſuch Act either in himſelf or others. But as ἀδικία is oft uſed in a wider ſenſe for all wickedneſs, and peculiarly for the villanies of the Gnoſticks, Rom. 1. 18. ſo is ἀλήθεια taken for purity and ſincerity of goodneſs, 1 Cor. 5. 8. and ſo 3 Joh. 3. and often in other places; and then as ὐ χαίρει, ὐ rejoiceth not, denotes the taking no pleaſure, but on the contrary being very ſad, extreamly grieved, (as Iſa. 66. 4. that in which I delighted not is their abominations, v. 3.) ſo the full meaning of the verſe will be, that Charity will make a man truly mourn and grieve at any ſin committed by others (ſo far is it from the practice of the Gnoſticks, which delight in debauching men to unchriſtian ſins,) and moſt heartily rejoice to ſee men diſcharge their Chriſtian duty, live in all manner of ſincerity. And thus ſaith S. John 3 Joh. 4. that he hath no greater joy, then to hear that his children walk in the truth.

V. 7. Beareth] That στέγω ſignifies to cover, and is within a very little, the Latine tego, and from thence στέγος tectum, is ſufficiently known; and therefore by Heſychius 'tis firſt expreſſed by κρύπτει, ζωώχει, to cover, to contain, and then by βαστάζει, ὑπομένει, to carry, to endure. And that this notion of covering belongs principally to concealing, in oppoſition to ſpeaking out or reporting, may appear by Heſychius alſo, who in the word στέγανον explains it by τὸ δυνάμενον στέγειν τοὺς λόγους, καὶ μὴ ἐξαγγέλλειν, to cover words, and not report them, and Στεγανώτερον, σιωπηλότερον, referring to ſilence, or holding the peace. And this is the moſt probable notion of the word here, where ſpeaking of Charity, that it rejoiceth not in iniquity (that is, is ſo far from joying to ſee another offend, that it produceth great ſorrow and compaſſion for it) but, on the other ſide, rejoiceth together in the truth, is very glad to ſee men do as they ſhould do, live in all Chriſtian ſincerity, he adds πάντα στέγει, as a farther evidence of that temper, conceals all the ill of another, unleſs when 'tis greater charity to reveal it, (as Pro. 10. 12 it is ſaid of love, that it covers all ſins) and then goes on, πιστεύει πάντα, believeth all things, that is, all thing that are ſaid for the excuſe or mitigation of a fault, (which is the quality of the ſupernal wiſdom, Jam. 3. 17. that 'tis εὐπειθὴς eaſy to be perſwaded of that which tends to mitigate the fault) and when nothing is ſaid in defence, or excuſe, yet ἐλπίζει πάντα hopeth the beſt that the matter is capable of: And then follows πάντα ὑπομένει endureth all things, whatſoever of injury comes to him by another's fact, he is moſt ready to bear, and never meditate revenge. Which is the very thing that muſt be meant by this phraſe πάντα στέγει, if it were rendred, beareth all things; as in Heſychius 'tis manifeſt that στέγω in that notion of bearing is ὑπομένω to endure. And that is one farther evidence that στέγω is here in the other notion; for elſe there would be no avoiding a tautologie. It is true that ch. 9. 12. it may bear another ſenſe (for the word certainly ſignifies to endure, as well as to conceal) and yet that with ſomewhat of this notion in it; for the ſenſe lies thus, we might uſe our liberty or authority, claim the privilege of labourers, that is, to be provided for by thoſe for whom we labour, but we have not done ſo, but πάντα στέγομεν, make no ſuch claims, but endure hardſhip, rather then hinder the propagating the Goſpel by inſiſting on this right.

Ib. All things] The word Πάντα all things though it be an univerſal, is not to be taken in the utmoſt extent, but according to the uſe of the like phraſes in all languages, wherein the univerſal ſign affixed either to perſons, or times, or places, or things, ſignifies only a greater number, but not all without exception. So when Pſal. 14. 4. it is ſaid of the children of men, that they are all gone out of the way, all become abominable, it is manifeſt that it is not ſpoken of all men without exception; for v. 8. there is mention of Gods people, and v. 9. of the righteous. So for things Joh. 14. 26. the holy Ghoſt ſhall teach you all things, and bring all things to your memory; not abſolutely all, but all that were uſeful to their office. So 1 Cor. 10. 23. All things are lawful to me, that is, many of thoſe things which are unexpedient, or all indifferent things. So Phil. 4. 13. I can do all things is determined there to the things there ſpoken of, to want, and to abound, &c. and ſo here the covering, and believing, and hoping, and enduring all things, is the concealing and burying in forgetfulneſs many conſiderable injuries and evils of other men, believing, and hoping, and enduring very many things, which they which have not this excellent divine grace of Charity will never do.

CHAP. XIV.

Paraphraſe.

1. Let the prime ſupreme care be to do good to others, and in order to that, of all ſpiritual gifts which you are to deſire zealouſly, that of interpreting Scripture is the moſt uſeful, ſee note on Lu. 1. n.

1. * Follow after charity, and deſire ſpiritual gifts, but rather that ye may propheſy.] * purſue Διωκετε

2. For he that by the gift of God ſpeaketh any unknown languages, only to ſhew what he can do, muſt be ſuppoſed to ſpeak to the underſtanding of none but of God, and then he ſpeaks indeed by that gift or afflation, myſteries, or hidden things, but no body receives benefit by him.

2. For he that ſpeaketh in an unknown tongue, ſpeaketh not unto men, but unto God; for no man underſtandeth him, † howbeit in the Spirit he ſpeaketh myſteries.] † though he by the ſpirit, πνευματι δε

3. But he that declareth to others what himſelf underſtands of holy things, ſpeaks to men's profit and inſtruction, admoniſheth and exhorteth them to all Chriſtian practice, and comforteth them from the promiſes of Chriſt.

3. But he that propheſieth ſpeaketh unto men † to edification, and exhortation, and comfort.] † edification οἰκοδομὴν

4. He that ſpeaks a ſtrange language, can benefit no body but himſelf; but he that interprets Scripture, doth that which much tendeth to the comforting and benefiting the congregation, improving them in ſpiritual knowledge.

4. He that ſpeaketh in an unknown tongue edifieth himſelf, but he that propheſieth, edifieth the Church.]

5. I had much rather that ye had the gift of propheſying then of ſtrange tongues, for expounding of Scriptures is infinitely more uſeful to the Church then the gift of tongues, unleſs he that uſeth that gift doth after tell them in plain words what he meant, for unleſs he do ſo, the Church can receive no advantage by him.

5. I would that ye all ſpake with tongues, but rather that ye propheſied; for greater is he that propheſieth than he that ſpeaketh with tongues, except he interpret, that the Church may receive edifying.]

6. For ſtrange tongues are not at all profitable for them that are already Chriſtians; that which is profitable is either 1. expounding ſacred figures, or 2. communicating ones knowledge in great myſteries (ſee note on 2. Pet. 1. c.) or 3. interpreting of difficulties of Scripture, or 4. moral catechiſtical inſtitution, teaching you what men ought to do and believe.

6. Now brethren, if I come unto you ſpeaking with tongues, what ſhall I profit you, except I ſhall ſpeak to you either by revelation, or by knowledge, or by propheſying, or by doctrine?]

7. This you may diſcern by an ordinary ſimilitude; for when ſounds are made by inſtruments, unleſs thoſe ſounds are ſet to ſome tune, no man can tell what to make of it.

7. And even things without life giving ſound, whether pipe or harp, except they give a diſtinction in the ſounds, how ſhall it be known what is piped or harped?]

8. And particularly the trumpet, which is uſed to ſound alarms, doth ſo by a particular diſtinct ſound; and if that be not ſounded, no man that hears a trumpet will think himſelf bound to make ready.

8. For if the trumpet give an uncertain ſound, who ſhall prepare himſelf to the battel?]

9. So if you, that have the gift of ſtrange languages, do not by that means ſpeak that which the Auditors may underſtand (for to that end ſure were thoſe languages given, that you might ſpeak to every one in his own language, Act. 2. 6.) how ſhall any man be the better for your languages? your words ſhall be poured out into the air unprofitably.

9. So likewiſe you, except ye utter by the tongue * words eaſie to be underſtood, how ſhall it be known what is ſpoken? for ye ſhall ſpeak into the air.] * intelligible ſpeech, εὐσημον λόγον

10. There are, for example, ſeventy languages, and every nation ſpeaks ſome or other, and underſtands that, but ordinarily no other.

10. There are, it may be, ſo many kinds of † voices in the world, and none of them are without ſignification.] † languages —and none of them is without ſome language, φωνων—καὶ οὐδεν ἀφωνον (but the K's MS. leaves out αὐτων) ἀφωνον

11. And therefore if he that hath all theſe languages ſpeak to me in any but that which I underſtand, he ſpeaks to no more purpoſe to me, and I receive no more advantage from him, then if a couple of men of ſeveral countries ſhould talk one to another, and neither underſtand a word of the other.

11. Therefore if I know not the meaning of the voice, I ſhall be unto him that ſpeaketh a Barbarian, and he that ſpeaketh ſhall be a Barbarian unto me.]

12. So ye alſo, ſeeing ye would fain have ſome of thoſe extraordinary gifts of the ſpirit (ſee note on Lu. 9. e.) ſeek thoſe gifts eſpecially by which the Church may receive edification and advantage, that ſo you may do ſomewhat more than ordinary, and of that ſort is propheſying.

12. Even ſo ye, for aſmuch as ye are zealous of ſpiritual gifts, ſeek that ye may excell to the edifying of the Church.]

13. And inſtead of amazing people with ſtrange languages which they underſtand not, let him pray to God for the gift of expounding ſtrange languages, that he may help others to underſtand them that ſpeak thus.

13. Wherefore let him that ſpeaketh in an unknown tongue pray that he may interpret.]

14. For if by that gift of tongues I pray in an unknown language, my gift, or the gift of tongues which is given me, prays, but my underſtanding lies idle (ſee note on Lu. 9. e.) does no body elſe any good; I make uſe of my gift of tongues, which I my ſelf underſtand, but I make no uſe of that underſtanding of mine to make others do ſo too.

14. For if I pray in an unknown tongue, my ſpirit prayeth, but my underſtanding is unfruitful.]

15. What then is it that is moſt deſirable? Why, that if in praying I make uſe of the gift of tongues, which is intelligible to my ſelf, I pray alſo by my underſtanding, ſo as he that hath not the gift of tongues is wont to pray, that ſo my underſtanding may be uſeful to others, and help them to underſtand alſo; and ſo likewiſe that I may make uſe of the gift of tongues in ſinging Pſalms, and ſing alſo by my underſtanding, ſo as he that hath not thoſe extraordinary gifts is wont to ſing, that is, ſo as ſhall be intelligible to others.

15. What is it then? I will pray † with the ſpirit, and I will pray * with the underſtanding alſo; I will ſing † with the ſpirit, and I will ſing * with the underſtanding alſo.] † by the ſpirit πνευματι * by the underſtanding, τοῦ νοὶ † by * by

16. For if thou adminiſter the Sacrament in an unknown tongue, how ſhall the people that receive, ſay, Amen, at thy adminiſtring of it, when they underſtand thee not?

16. Elſe, when thou ſhalt bleſs with the ſpirit, how ſhall he that occupieth the room of the † unlearned ſay [a] Amen, at thy giving of thanks, ſeeing he underſtandeth not what thou ſayeſt?] † vulgar perſon ἰδιώτου

17. And in that caſe how well ſoever that be done which thou doſt, yet 'tis clear 'tis not for the advantage of others, or benefit of the Church.

17. For thou verily giveſt thanks well; but the other is not edified.]

18. I have the gift of tongues more than any of you hath it.

18. I thank my God, [I ſpeak with tongues more than you all.]

19. But for the benefit of others 'twere much better that I ſpake, though never ſo little, from my own underſtanding, ſo as he that hath not the gift of tongues is wont to ſpeak, ſo that others may underſtand, and be inſtructed by me, then never ſo much by the gift of tongues, when no man knows what I ſay.

19. Yet in the Church I had rather ſpeak five words * with my underſtanding, that † by my voice I might teach others alſo, then ten thouſand words in an unknown tongue.] * by † I may inſtruct κατηχήσω objected againſt this, that they that are thus inſpired, cannot thus ſtop themſelves; for the afflations or inſpirations of ſuch prophets as are here ſpoken of, may be ruled by the prophets, that is, by them that have them; the Chriſtian gifts of expounding, &c. being not like the afflations of evil ſpirits which put them into extaſies, God's gifts to the Church are (as even Prophecy it ſelf appeared to be in Jonah) ſuch, as it is in their power to reſtrain, and conſequently they may propheſy one after another, v. 31.

Iſaiah c. 28. 11. 'tis mention'd as a miracle ſhewed to the people, that God would ſend prophets to them in languages which they underſtood not, and yet that this ſo great a miracle ſhould not work on them.

For the Apoſtles (and ſuch am I) being the men intruſted by Chriſt to conveigh the Goſpel to the world, and to preſerve order in the Church, are to be obeyed by the Prophets themſelves; and in matters of difference the reſolution is to be made by the Apoſtles, as the Governors of the Church, not by the prophets or the ſpiritual.

Annotations on Chap. XIV.

a. ἡμὴν

V. 16. Amen] The word Amen is an expreſſion ordinarily uſed by the people, by way of aſſent to the prayer made by another before them, being an Hebrew Adverb of affirming, and ſo rendred by Symmachus πιστωμένως faithfully. For, as Maimonides ſaith, 'twas a cuſtom of the Jews in their daily prayers, that he that had not skill or ability to pray himſelf, ſhould ſay Amen, but he that had ability, ſhould pray himſelf. The former of theſe was he that is here called ἰδιώτης the private or vulgar perſon, νεώτερος 1. Pet. 5. 5, the younger, as Lucian* defines ἰδιώτης, Πολὺς ὅμιλος, ὃς ἰδιώτας καλοῦσιν οἱ σοφοὶ, the multitude or congregation, which the wiſe men call Idiots. This cuſtom is clearly deduced from Deut. 27. where all the people of Iſrael join in this; and ſo in the Pſalmiſt particularly on this occaſion of εὐλογία bleſſing of God, Bleſſed be the Lord God of Iſrael from everlaſting and world without end, and let all the people ſay, Amen. So Neh. 8. 7. All the people anſwered, Amen, λαὸς, the laity peculiarly, (as that differs from the Prieſts) who therefore in all reaſon are here meant by ἰδιώτης. The Tulmudiſts have a threefold Amen: 1. Amen pupillum, ſaith † Caninius, when one prays, and another that underſtands not what he ſaith, gives anſwer to him, parallel to this of the idiote in this place; 2ly, Amen ſurreptitium, a ſtolen Amen, when 'tis before the end of the prayer; and 3ly, Sectile, when he cuts it into two parts, A-men, as he that yawnes, or is a doing or minding ſomething elſe. Now the uſe of this Amen ἐπὶ τῇ σῇ Εὐχαριστίᾳ at thy giving thanks, ſeems here to refer to the cuſtom of the ancient, and it ſeems Apoſtolical, Primative Church, which was at the conſecrating of the Lord's Supper, for to that the giving of thanks ſeems to belong, according to the uſe of the word εὐχαριστία or εὐλογία c. 10. 16. At the ending of which, ſaith Juſtine Martyr Apol. 2. there was a ſolemn ἐπιφώνημα, Ἀμὴν, acclamation of Amen by the people.

30. Revealed] That ἀποκάλυψις doth not always ſignifie a viſion, or paſſively a receiving a revelation, by extaſie, or dream from God, but only a ſenſe or notion, a meaning or interpretation of a piece of Scripture, that through ſome figure (or the like) hath much difficulty in it, may appear by ver. 6. where in oppoſition to the miraculous ſpeaking of tongues, thoſe four ways of expounding in the Church are ſet down, and the firſt of them ἀποκάλυψις, revelation, or expounding of ſacred figures, &c. So v. 26. ἀποκάλυψιν ἔχει hath a revelation, as hath an interpretation, is of him that can expound any ſuch figure, as the other is he that can interpret a ſtrange language; and ſo here in this verſe, that which is here hath a revelation muſt be expounded by the Prophet's ſpeaking ver. 29. For thus it lies, Let the prophets ſpeak, two or three, that is, ſo many in a meeting: If another that ſitteth by have any revelation, that is, if whilſt one is a ſpeaking, another be, or conceive himſelf able to expound the difficulty, then let the firſt, that is, the prophet then a ſpeaking, hold his peace, give way to him; where, as the propbets ſpeaking is all one with having a revelation, ſo the thing thus delivered being to be judged of by others, whether it be right or no, (let others judge, v. 29.) is conclued not to be any ſpecial revelation from God, for if 'twere ſuppoſed ſuch, it ought not to be ſubject to others judging of it. And then what is here ſaid will clearly be explained by that which we read in Philo (lib. Omnem probum liberum eſſe) where ſpeaking of the Doctors of the Jews, when they are ſet in the Synagogues, Ὁ μὲν, ſaith he, τὰς βίβλους ἀναγινώσκει, One reads the bible, ſome part of it, ἕτερος δὲ τῶν ἐμπειροτάτων ὅσα μὴ γνώριμα παρελθὼν ἀναγινώσκει, And another of the more skilful, or Doctors, paſſing through thoſe that are not known, that is, the more difficult paſſages, expounds. This was called among the Jews דרש preaching or expounding in their Synagogues. See Note on ch. 1. c.

b. Ἀποκάλυψις.

Paraphraſe. CHAP. XV.

1. As to that great hereſie of ſome among you v. 12. that deny the reſurrection, I ſhall now ſpeak the very ſame which at my firſt preaching the Goſpel among you I taught, and which ye then embraced, and for ſome time, till the Gnoſtick falſe teachers crept in among you, ye never made queſtion of,

1. MOreover, brethren, I declare unto you the Goſpel which I preached unto you, which alſo ye have received, and wherein ye * ſtand,]

* have ſtood ἑστήκατε

2. By which alſo you were converted and fetch'd but from the midſt of the Gentile world, after what manner, if your memory ſerve you, I delivered the ſtory to you with all the circumſtances and explication of difficulties, unleſs your believing and receiving the Goſpel were light and raſh and inconſiderate, or unleſs what you then received be now quite vaniſhed.

2. By which alſo † ye are ſaved, * if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you, unleſs ye have believed † in vain.]

† you are eſcaped, σωζεσθε

* after what manner I preach'd unto you if you keep in memory τίνι λόγῳ εὐηγγελισάμην ὑμῖν

3. For one of the principal things which I told you, and which I my ſelf had learned at my firſt believing the Goſpel, was this, that as Chriſt died for our ſins,

3. For I delivered unto you *firſt of all that which I alſo received, how that Chriſt died for our ſins according to the ſcriptures,]

* among the principal things, ἐν πρώτοις

4. And his body was laid in the grave, and ſo on the third day, according to the prophecies of the ſcripture, he roſe from the grave,

4. And that he was buried, and that he roſe again the third day according to the ſcriptures.]

5. And after his riſing appeared to Peter, Luke 24. 34. and then to the whole college of diſciples, Luke 24. 36. conſiſting formerly of twelve, and ſo ſoon after again, though now one of them was wanting.

5. And that he was ſeen of Cephas, then of the twelve.]

6. After that he was ſeen in Galilee, Mat. 28. 7. by near five hundred believers or Chriſtians at one time, of whom a great part are now ſtill alive ready to teſtifie it, but ſome of them are dead.

6. After that he was ſeen of above five hundred brethren at once, of whom the greater part remain unto this preſent, but ſome are fallen aſleep.]

a. 7. Beſides all theſe, he was, preſently after his reſerrection, ſeen by James the Biſhop of Jeruſalem, then by all the twelve Apoſtles, John 20. 25.

7. † After that he was ſeen of [a]James, then of all the Apoſtles.]

† Then Ἔπειτα

b. 8. And after his aſcenſion to heaven he ſpake from thence, and exhibited himſelf to be ſeen by me, who before had not ſeen him, being not a diſciple of his then, but after his aſcenſion converted by him, and received through his ſpecial favour into the number of his Apoſtles, though moſt unworthy of that dignity.

8. And laſt of all he was ſeen of me alſo, as of *one [b]born out of due time.]

*an Abortive ἐκτρώματι

9. For I having firſt been a great perſecutor of Chriſtianity, though by Chriſt I was thus miraculouſly called to be an Apoſtle of his, am not yet worthy to be ſo eſteemed, but being by Chriſt ſo conſtituted, am yet for that former life of mine, inferior to all the reſt of the Apoſtles of Chriſt, who were never thus guilty.

9. For I am the leaſt of the Apoſtles, that am not meet to be called an Apoſtle, becauſe I perſecuted the Church of God.]

10. But

10. But by the * grace of God I am what I am: and his grace which was † beſtowed upon me was not in vain: but I laboured more abundantly then they all: yet not I, but the grace of God which was with me.]

10. Though being by his ſpecial favour ſo conſtituted, I have ſince laboured to walk worthy of it, and have been more induſtrious and laborious then all the reſt that had been his diſciples here; yet what I have thus done is not to be imputed to me in any manner, but to the grace and goodneſs of God that went along with me, and enabled me to do what I have done.

11. Therefore, whether it were I or they, ſo we preach, and ſo ye believed.]

11. Well then, whether ye look upon me, or upon them to whom he appeared here upon earth, and ſo were eye-witneſſes of his reſurrection, I am ſure ye can have no grounds from either of doubting of this truth, for both they and I preached the ſame among you, and at our preaching you then received and believed it.

12. Now if Chriſt be preached that he roſe from the dead, how ſay ſome among you that there is no reſurrection of the dead?]

12. Now upon this foundation thus laid, that you can have no reaſon to doubt it, it follows that the dead truly riſe, and then how comes it to paſs that ſome of your Churchmen, that have received the faith by our preaching, begin now to deny all reſurrection?

13. But if there be no reſurrection of the dead, then is Chriſt not riſen:]

13. Theſe are preſently confuted, ſuppoſing it granted that Chriſt is riſen from the dead:

14. And if Chriſt be not riſen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is alſo vain.]

14. Which if it be not true, then is that falſe which both we preached and ye believed v. 11. and in all probability whatever elſe we have built upon it.

15. Yea, and we are found falſe witneſſes of God, becauſe we teſtified of God that he raiſed up Chriſt, whom he raiſed not up, if ſo be that the dead riſe not.]

15. And ye muſt ſuppoſe of us who taught you Chriſtianity, that we taught you a meer forgery, for ſuch muſt the reſurrection of Chriſt be, if there be no reſurrection from the dead.

16. For if the dead riſe not, then * is not Chriſt raiſed.]

16. For thus one may argue backward, If there be no poſſibility for a man by the power of God to be raiſed from death, then is not Chriſt raiſed.

17. And if Chriſt be not raiſed, your faith is vain, ye are yet in your ſins.]

17. And if ſo, then all that we have preach'd to you, particularly remiſſion of ſins upon repentance, being bottom'd on the reſurrection of Chriſt, Act. 5. 31. is to be ſuppoſed falſe alſo.

18. Then they alſo which are fallen a ſleep in Chriſt are periſhed.]

18. And they that have loſt their lives for Chriſt's ſake, have had nothing to pay them for thoſe loſſes, have periſhed eternally, and ſo loſt very much by their fortitude, which muſt argue madneſſe in them, if they believed not a reſurrection, (for then they had better have kept the life they had, till a natural death had call it from them) and muſt argue a groſs error in thoſe firſt Chriſtians, Stephen and James, &c. if they believed that which had not truth in it.

19. If in this life only we † have hope in Chriſt, we are of all men moſt miſerable.]

19. And indeed, if Chriſt were not riſen, if all our hope in Chriſt hath been terminated with this life of his on earth (or if all the advantages which we reap by Chriſt, are thoſe which we enjoy here, who are worſe uſed then any other men, perſecuted continually for our profeſſion of Chriſt) it would then follow, that (as once the Apoſtles deemed themſelves upon his death, not knowing he was to riſe again, ſo) we Chriſtians ſhould be the moſt unhappy perſons, the moſt proper objects of Compaſſion that are in the world.

20. But now is Chriſt riſen from the dead, and become the firſt-fruits of them that ſlept.]

20. Which now, bleſſed be God, is much otherwiſe, for Chriſt being riſen, he, by riſing himſelf, raiſeth all others with him (as in the conſecrating of the firſt-fruits, the whole harveſt is alſo conſecrated) and then we that are miſerable here, ſhall be rewarded there, (and ſo his reſurrection is a certain proof, that other men ſhall have a reſurrection alſo, which is the ſum of the arguing from v. 12. till this place.)

21. For * ſince by man came death, by man came alſo the reſurrection of the dead.]

21. For as one man brought death, ſo another brought reſurrection into the world.

22. For as in Adam all die, ſo in Chriſt ſhall all be made alive.]

22. For as upon Adam's ſin, all that are partakers of his nature, are concluded under the ſentence of death pronounced againſt him; ſo all regenerate believers, all that are like, that belong to Chriſt, v. 23. ſhall be raiſed to immortal life,

23. But every man in his own order; Chriſt the firſt-fruits, after they that are Chriſt's at his coming.]

23. But this with ſome diſtance of time betwixt: Chriſt the firſt-fruits, ſome time before the reſt, then all regenerate Chriſtians at his laſt coming to judgment.

24. Then cometh the end, when he † ſhall have delivered up the kingdom to God, * even the Father, when he ſhall † have put down all rule, and all authority and power.]

24. Then I mean, when in the concluſion of this world, of this ſpiritual kingdom of Chriſt in the Church here below, he ſhall deliver up all his power exerciſed by himſelf and his commiſſioners, into the hand of God his Father, having firſt deſtroyed all earthly dominions, pronouncing ſentence on the great potentates, as well as the meaneſt men, or elſe having ſubdued all to his power, by converting ſome, and deſtroying all others.

25. For he muſt reign, * till he hath put all enemies under his feet.]

25. For to this purpoſe was the promiſe made to Chriſt, Pſal. 110. that his ſpiritual kingdom on earth ſhould laſt ſo long, till God hath brought all the world to be ſubject to him.

26. The laſt enemy that † ſhall be deſtroyed, is death.]

26. And of the enemies to be ſubdued death is the laſt, which therefore muſt be ſubdued (and ſo men raiſed from death.)

27. For he hath put all things under his feet; but when he ſaith, All things are put under him, it is manifeſt that * he is excepted which did put all things under him.]

27. The evidence being clear, for all enemies, all things, no one excepted, that God will ſubdue them all under Chriſt; alwaies ſuppoſing that God himſelf is excepted, of whom 'tis affirmed that he will put all things under Chriſt.

28. † And when all things ſhall be ſubdued unto him, then ſhall the Son alſo himſelf be ſubject unto him that put all things under him, that God may be all in all.]

28. And when all is ſo ſubdued to Chriſt, then ſhall Chriſt lay down that office which 'till then he exerciſeth, and in which he is conſpicuous in his Church (which 'till then he is to adminiſter) and then ſhall God the Father, Son, and holy Ghoſt, fill all the elect with glory and bliſs eternally.

29. * Elſe what ſhall they do which are baptized c for the dead, if the dead riſe not at all? why are they † then baptized for the dead?]

29. Now for them among you v. 12. which ſay there is no reſurrection of the dead, and conſequently that the dead ſhall not be raiſed at the coming of Chriſt (which was the point in hand v. 23. and from that verſe to this all betwixt being to be read as in a parentheſis, ſetting down the ſtate of all things at and after that reſurrection) I ſhall only make this demand, Why then have they in their baptiſm made profeſſion of their belief of it (ſe ver. 14, 17.) it being certain that the dead, or the reſurrection of the dead (expreſſed here for brevity under that word [the dead]) is one of the articles, and that a prime and ſpecial one, to the belief of which they were baptized, and to which baptiſm (being the putting in and taking out of the water) doth refer, as a ſignificant emblem, firſt of Chriſt's then of our reſurrection from the grave? And therefore to what end did theſe men in their baptiſm profeſs their belief of this article, if they believe it not? To be a baptized Chriſtian, and not to believe the reſurrection, is a ſtrange ridiculous thing, an hypocriſie which they will never be able to anſwer to God or man, and that which actually deprives them of all benefits of baptiſm; and yet ſuch are they if they make doubt of this.

30. And why ſhould we Chriſtians ever adventure any danger that might poſſibly bring death upon us, if we were not aſſured that there were another life, wherein all our patience and valour for Chriſt ſhould be rewarded by him? v. 18.

30. And why * ſtand we in jeopardy every hour?]

* do we run hazards κινδυνευομεν

31. I for my part proteſt by that which I take moſt joy in of any thing in the world, my fidelity to Chriſt, that I daily run the hazard of death, which ſure I ſhould not do, if I had not confidence of another life after this.

31. I proteſt by your rejoicing, which I have in Chriſt Jeſus our Lord, I die dayly.]

d. 32. Certainly all the hazards which I ran at Epheſus Act. 19. being as to man, to the eye of man, or as far as mens purpoſes could go, ſet to combate with wild beaſts, that is ſentenced and condemned (2 Cor. 1. 9.) to that kind of bloody execution on their theatres (though by the providence of God I was delivered) can bring me no advantage, unleſs there be another life after this: And were it ſo, there were ſome place for that ſaying of ſome among you, Let us enjoy the good things of this world at preſent, for within a while death comes, and there's an end of all.

32. If † [d] after the manner of men I have fought with beaſts at Epheſus, what advantageth it me, if the dead riſe not? Let us eat and drink, for to morrow we die.]

e. 33. And 'twill concern you, that are not yet thus ſeduced, to take heed that ſuch ſpeeches and diſcourſes as theſe, ſuch atheiſtical temptations to ſenſuailty upon pretence of the no future ſtate, no being after that of this life, do not work upon you: The very converſing with ſuch diſputers as theſe may corrupt ſuch eaſy ſeducible credulous people as it ſeems ſome of you are.

35. But ſome object, that if men die, how can they live again? or what kind of body ſhall they have, that which they had being rotten in the grave? (ſee note on Act. 15. c.)

35. But ſome man will ſay, How are the dead raiſed up? and with * what body doe they come?]

* what kind of ποιῳ

36. But this is a fooliſh objection, for even in corn that is ſowed, the rotting of the corn is neceſſary to the enlivening of it, or ſpringing of it up again.

36. Thou fool, that which thou ſoweſt is not quickned, except it die.]

37. And it is not the cuſtom to ſow that very thing which after comes up, the blade, and ear, and corn in it, but only the corn without the reſt, as the corn of wheat, or the like.

37. And that which thou ſoweſt, thou ſoweſt not that body that ſhall be, but bare grain, it may chance of wheat, or of ſome other grain.]

38. And when ſuch a ſingle corn is ſown without an ear or chaff about it, God cauſeth it to come in this or that form, a root and blades, and ears of wheat, and proportionably from other ſeeds according to the property of each.

38. But God giveth it a body, as it hath pleaſed him, and to every ſeed his own body.]

39. And as it is among us, one ſort of fleſh differs very much from another, ſo much more a body of a man here on earth may differ in qualities from a glorified body in heaven.

39. All fleſh is not the ſame fleſh: but there is one kind of fleſh of men, another fleſh of beaſts, another of fiſhes, and another of birds.]

40, 41, 42. Two things are obſervable in the reſurrection: 1. the improvement of all mens eſtate, who have their part in the reſurrection of the juſt, above that which here they enjoy: 2. the ſeveral degrees of glory that they then ſhall have one above another. For as heavenly bodies are more glorious then earthly, and one heavenly then another, ſo is it in the reſurrection. And for the firſt of theſe, which is the chief matter of preſent conſideration, the bodies that riſe differ from thoſe that died, the ſtate of the reſurrection differs from that of this life; that which was here, was a corruptible body, that which riſes, an incorruptible.

40. There are † alſo celeſtial bodies, and bodies terreſtrial; but the glory of the celeſtial is one, and the glory of the terreſtrial is another.

41. There is one glory of the ſun, another of the moon, and another glory of the ſtars; for one ſtar differeth from another ſtar in glory.

42. So alſo is the reſurrection of the dead: it is ſown in corruption, it is raiſed in incorruption.]

43. It is ſown in diſhonour, it is raiſed in glory; it is ſown in weakneſſe, it is raiſed in power.]

44. The body here is ſuſtained by meat and drink, but in the future ſtate 'twill be a body immortal, that wants nothing to ſuſtain it. Such bodies indeed there are of both theſe ſorts.

44. It is ſown * a natural body, it is raiſed a ſpiritual body. There is † a natural body, and there is a ſpiritual body.]

* an animal ψυχικον † an animal

45. One ſuch as Adam is mentioned to have had, Gen. 2. 7. and ſuch as we had from Adam, who communicated life to his poſterity; the other we ſhall receive from Chriſt, that reſtores them from the grave when they have been dead.

45. * And ſo it is written, The firſt man Adam was made a living ſoul, the laſt Adam was made a quickening Spirit.]

* For ſo it hath been written

46. The immortal body was not firſt formed, but that which needed ſuſtenance, ſo as without that it was to periſh, and after that the immortal body is to be returned to us in ſtead of that mortal.

46. Howbeit, that was not firſt which is ſpiritual, but that which is natural, and afterward that which is ſpiritual.]

47. The ſtock of the animal life was Adam, ſo called as an earthy man, made out of the earth; the ſtock of the immortal, Chriſt the Lord, that came down from heaven.

47. The firſt man † is of the earth, earthy; the ſecond man is the Lord from heaven.]

48. Such a body as Adam himſelf had, ſuch have all we mortal men; and ſuch a body as Chriſt now hath, ſuch ſhall we, that live like him, according to his example and precept, have at the reſurrection.

48. As is the earthy, ſuch are they that are earthy; and as is the heavenly, ſuch are they alſo that are heavenly.]

49. And as we have firſt been made like the mortal Adam, ſo ſhall we be made like the immortal Chriſt, when we come to heaven.

49. And as we have born the image of the earthy, we ſhall alſo bear the image of the heavenly.]

f 50. One thing only I ſhall add, that 'tis not poſſible that theſe earthy, corruptible, weak, ignominious bodies of ours ſhould come to heaven, unleſs they be firſt changed, purified, immortalized (ſee note on Mat. 16. 17. c.)

50. Now this I ſay, brethren, that [f] fleſh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God: neither doth corruption inherit incorruption.]

51. And therefore for thoſe that are found alive at the day of Doom, I ſhall tell you a ſecret not yet diſcovered to you, that though they do not die at all, yet muſt they all be changed before they go to heaven, theſe bodies, thus qualified as now they are, cannot come thither, ver. 50.

51. Behold * I ſhew you a myſtery; we ſhall not all ſleep, but we ſhall all be changed,]

* I tell you a ſecret. μυστηριον ὑμιν λεγω

52. In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the laſt trump (for † the trumpet ſhall ſound, and the dead ſhall be raiſed incorruptible, and we ſhall be changed.)]

52. And this change ſhall be wrought in them in a minute, at the point of time when all the world are ſummoned to judgment; for God ſhall make the Angels ſound a trumpet, or make a noiſe like that of the trumpet, call the whole world of men, that ever was or ſhall be, to judgment, and at that inſtant all that were formerly dead ſhall ariſe in immortal bodies, and thoſe that are then alive ſhall from their mortal be changed into ſuch.

53. For this corruptible muſt put on incorruption, and this mortal muſt put on immortality.]

53. For 'tis moſt certain and neceſſary v. 50. that our mortal bodies muſt be changed into immortal. m

54. So when this corruptible ſhall have put on incorruption, and this mortal ſhall have put on immortality, then ſhall be brought to paſs the ſaying that is written, Death is ſwallowed up ‖ in victory.]

54. And when this is done, then ſhall that ſaying of Hoſ. c. 13. 14. be made good, that death ſhall be deſtroyed for ever, never to recover ſtrength again over any thing, nothing from thence forth ſhall ever die. g.

56. The ſting of death is ſin, and the ſtrength of ſin is the Law.]

56. The only thing that makes death like a ſerpent, able to do us any hurt (without which it differs nothingh from a calm ſleep) is ſin, as that which gives ſin any ſtrength to miſchief us is the Law, which prohibits it; and conſeqently brings guilt upon us.

57. But thanks be to God which giveth us the victory, through our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.]

57. But thanks be to God, who by what Chriſt hath done for us hath given us victory over ſin and death, and by the conqueſt of ſin, getting out of the power of that, hath made death but an entrance to immortality.

58. Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye ſtedfaſt, unmoveable, alwaies abounding in the work of the Lord, for as much as you know that your labour is not in vain in the Lord.]

58. Theſe are arguments ſufficient to teach any Chriſtian conſtancy and perſeverance in doing and ſuffering God's will, and to oblige him to the utmoſt induſtry and diligence in the ſervice of God, knowing that nothing that we thus undergo ſhall fail of receiving a reward.

2. Ἰακώβῳ ὤφθη

V. 7. Seen of James] What is here ſaid of Chriſt's appearance unto James, is not mentioned in the Goſpels, yet is it by S. Jerome mentioned from the tradition of the Church, and that preſently after his Reſurrection, before thoſe other appearances which are here mentioned before it; which if it be true, it is neceſſary that ἔπειτα be not rendred afterward, but either as an Ordinal of dignity, not of time; or as a form of numbring up ſeveral times, without exact obſervation of the order of them, then, beſides, or in the next place, as the word is uſed in this Epiſtle, c. 12. 28. ἔπειτα δυνάμεις; where nothing of order is conſidered. Now what James this was, is affirmed by S. Hierom alſo, that James, the brother of our Lord, whom he * calls the Thirteenth Apoſtle, ſtyled James the Juſt, ſaith Euſebius, l. 2. c. κγ'. and, ſaith he, reckoned by S. Paul among the ſpecial witneſſes of the reſurrection, James the known Biſhop of Jeruſalem, whom therefore ſome of the antients affirm to have been conſtituted Biſhop there by Chriſt himſelf at this appearance of his unto him; ſee Jerome in Catal. and on Gal. c. 1. *Epiph. Ὤφθη Ἰακώβῳ τῷ ἀδελφῷ τῷ κυρίου τῷ ὑπ' αὐτοῦ κατασταθέντι ἐπισκόπῳ πρώτῳ Ἱεροσολύμων, He was ſeen by James the brother of the Lord, conſtituted by him the firſt Biſhop of Jeruſalem. So Photius the Patriarch of Conſtantinople, Epiſt. ριζ. Ἰάκωβος ὁ πρῶτος ἀρχιερέων, ᾧ διαπαντὸς χεὶρ τὸ ἱερὸν χρίσμα, καὶ ἡ ἐφεδρία Ἱεροσολύμων λαχών, James the firſt of High-prieſts (or Biſhops) who by the Lord's hand received the holy unction and Biſhoprick of Jeruſalem. What is thus ſaid of his being conſtituted Biſhop by Chriſt, is by others ſaid to have been done by Chriſt and the Apoſtles, (Euſeb. l. 17. c. ιθ'. Ἰάκωβος πρῶτος ἡ Ἱεροσολύμων ἐκκλησίας ἡ ἐπισκοπὴν ἔσχε λαχὼν μετὰ τοῦ Σωτῆρος καὶ τῶν Ἀποστόλων τὸν θρόνον, James the firſt Biſhop of Jeruſalem received it from Chriſt himſelf and the Apoſtles,) by others from the Apoſtles immediately. So Euſebius from Clem. Alexandr. l. 6'. Πέτρον, φησὶ, καὶ Ἰάκωβον, καὶ Ἰωάννην, μετὰ τὴν ἀνάληψιν τοῦ Σωτῆρος, οὐκ ἐν καὶ τοῦτο τοῦ κυρίου περιτιμηθέντας, μὴ ἐπιδιεκδικεῖσθαι δόξης, ἀλλὰ Ἰάκωβον τὸν Δίκαιον ἐπίσκοπον Ἱεροσολύμων αἱρεθῆναι, He ſaith that Peter, and James, and John, after the aſſumption of Chriſt, as being the men that were moſt favoured by Chriſt, did not contend for the honour, but choſe James the Juſt to be Biſhop of Jeruſalem. So, before Clemens, Hegeſippus ἱστορ. ε'. in Euſeb. l. 2. c. κγ'. τῶν δὲ τὸν τόπον διαδεχομένων ἐκκλησίαν ρα' (or, as others read, ρβ') Ἀποστόλων ὁ ἀδελφὸς τοῦ κυρίου ὁ Ἰάκωβος, ὀνομαζόμενος ὑπὸ πάντων Δίκαιος, After this manner did the brother of the Lord, James, called by all men the Juſt, receive the Church (of Jeruſalem) from the Apoſtles. And that this was done the firſt year after the death of Chriſt, is the affirmation of Euſebius in Chronico p. 43. which makes it out of queſtion that this was the James that is mentioned Acts 12. 17. when Peter being delivered out of priſon commands word to be carried to James and the brethren, that is, the Biſhop and the Believers there. And thence it is that he is called an Apoſtle, Gal. 1. 19. and Act. 15. 6. and 22. the Apoſtles came together, and It ſeemed good to the Apoſtles; ſo ſaith Theodoret, Τοὺς νῦν καλουμένους ἐπισκόπους Ἀποστόλους ἀνόμαζον, &c. Thoſe whom they now call Biſhops, they called Apoſtles, bringing this for a proof of his affirmation, ὅτω καὶ ἡ Ἱεροσολύμων τοῖς ἐν Ἀντιοχείᾳ ἔγραψαν οἱ Ἀπόστολοι, ſo the Apoſtles wrote from Jeruſalem to thoſe in Antioch. And this is the reaſon that in this his Church of Jeruſalem, James is ſet before Peter and John, Gal. 2. 9. and is ſaid to give the right hand of fellowſhip to Paul and Barnabas, and accordingly Paul, aſſoon as he comes to Jeruſalem, preſently goes into James, Act. 21. 18. And this is the James that wrote the Epiſtle, and is called James the Apoſtle in the Inſcription of the Epiſtle, though in the beginning of it he ſtyle himſelf a ſervant of Jeſus Chriſt. See Note b. on the Inſcription of that Epiſtle. th

V. 8. Born out of due time] The full importance of this phraſe ὡσπερεὶ ἐκτρώματι may beſt be taken from a proverbial form among the Romans, begun in Auguſtus's time. It is, from Suetonius, taken notice of by Baronius, An. Chr. 44. n. 74. but ſomewhat miſrepreſented. The words of Suetonius lie thus, in the life of Auguſtus, c. 35. Erant ſuper mille (ſenatores) & quidam indigniſſimi, & poſt necem Cæſaris per gratiam & præmium allecti, quos Abortivos vulgus vocabat, There were at that time an enormous number of Senators, above a thouſand, and ſome of them moſt unworthy of that dignity, having after the death of Cæſar by favour and bribery gotten to be elected. Theſe the multitude proverbially ſtyled Abortives. To this proverbial ſtyle of reproach St. Paul in great humility ſeems here to refer, making his own election into the Apoſtleſhip parallel to the choice and admiſſion of thoſe ſupernumerary unworthy perſons into the Senate, viz. that he, like them, was none of the regular number of the Twelve, none of thoſe firſt taken in, in Chriſt's life time, no way worthy to be an Apoſtle, as having perſecuted the Church of Chriſt, v. 19. and yet by Chriſt's grace and ſpecial favour, called and admitted to this dignity (by the grace of God I am what I am, v 10.) and in theſe ſo many reſpects, fit to be look'd on, in his own opinion of himſelf, as they were reproachfully by the people, viz. as an ἔκτρωμα an untimely birth, which conſequently hath not thoſe full dimenſions, which thoſe children are born with who have ſtay'd in the womb their full time; to which moſt aptly agrees that which follows, v. 9. as the reaſon of this expreſſion, for I am the leaſt of the Apoſtles, as the Abortive is the leaſt of children. And this is ſtill but proportiona- b. Ἔκτρωμα ble to what he every where, when he ſpeaks of himſelf, is forward to ſay, calling himſelf the greateſt, or chief, of ſinners, leſs than the leaſt of all Saints, and attributing all to the ſuperabundant mercy and grace of God, that he ſo unworthy was thus vouchſafed and dignified by Chriſt.

c. V. 29. For the dead] 'Tis to little purpoſe to ſet down the ſeveral interpretations of this place (ſee Juſtell. in Cod. Can. Eccl. Univerſæ, p. 173.) This which hath been ſet down in the paraphraſe is moſt natural, rendring ὑπὲρ for, anſwerable to the Hebrew על. For the νεκροὶ the dead, is but the title in brief of that grand Article of the Creed, that of the reſurrection of the dead, juſt as among the Hebrews עבודה זרה על of, or for, ſtrange worſhip, denotes that precept of the ſons of Adam and Noah, which prohibiteth the worſhip of any ſtrange gods, or על ברוכת השם of, or for, the benediction of the name, is the precept of worſhipping and ſerving the one true God: and ſo generally titles of Conſtitutions and of Articles are abbreviates, in a word or two. To this purpoſe 'tis the obſervation of the Learned * Joſ. Scaliger, that not only the Rabbini, but generally other Doctors, notiſſimas & vulgò tritiſſimas ſententias dimidiatas ſolent citare, Uſe to cite by abbreviature known and vulgar ſentences, inſtancing in δῶρον, Mat. 15. 5. So it appears by Suidas, uſing the Proverb ἀπὸ καταδυομένης, from the ſinking, which is but the abbreviature of Ἀπὸ καταδυομένης ὅπ, ἂν λάβῃς, κέρδος, From a ſinking ſhip whatſoever thou getteſt, muſt be counted gain. Of this interpretation of ὑπὲρ νεκρῶν we have the teſtimony of Harmenopulus De ſect. ια'. who refuting the Marcionites, adds, ἀγνοοῦντες ὡς διὰ τὸ ὅπι ὁμολογίᾳ ἡ τῶ νεκρῶν ἀναςάσεως —— τοῦθ' ὕτως εἴρηται, not knowing that it is ſpoken of the confeſſion of the reſurrection of the dead.— Of this alſo ſee Chryſoſtome, Tom. 3. p. 514. Of whoſe underſtanding of it, becauſe I ſee ſome poſſibility of doubting, I ſhall more largely conſider the words; Μετὰ τὴν ἀπαγγελίαν τῶν μυςικῶν ῥημάτων ἐκείνων καὶ φοβερῶν, καὶ τὰς φρικτὰς κανόνας τῶν ἐν τῷ ἱερατῷ κατεγχθέντων δογμάτων, καὶ τοῦτο τοῖς τέλει προσλέγομεν, ὅταν μέλλωμεν βαπτίζειν, κελεύοντες λέγειν ὃν πιςεύω εἰς νεκρῶν ἀνάςασιν, καὶ ὅπι τῇ πίςει ταύτῃ βαπτιζόμεθα, After recitation of the ſacramental and dreadful word, and the venerable rules of the doctrines brought from heaven, this at the end we add, when we are about to baptize, we command him to ſay, I believe in the reſurrection of bodies, and we are baptized in, or on, this faith. Μετὰ δὲ τὸ ὁμολογῆσαι τοῦτο μὴ τῶν ἄλλων, τότε καταδόμεθα εἰς τὴν πηγὴν τῶν ἱερῶν ναμάτων ἐκείνων, For after profeſſing this with the other articles, we are put into the fountain of thoſe ſacred waters. Τοῦτο τοίνυν ἀναμιμνήσκων ὁ Παῦλος ἔλεγεν, εἰ μὴ ἔςιν ἀνάςασις, τί καὶ βαπτίζῃ ὑπὲρ τῶν νεκρῶν, τυτέςι, τῶν σωμάτων; S. Paul therefore remembring them of this (viz. this cuſtom of profeſſing before baptiſm, with other articles, this of the reſurrection of the dead) ſaid, Why alſo art thou baptized for the dead, that is, the dead bodies? & διὰ τοῦτο βαπτίζῃ τὸ νεκρὸν σῶμα εἰς ἀνάςασιν πιςεύων, ὅτι οὐκέτι μένει νεκρὸν, καὶ σὺ μὲν διὰ τῶν ῥημάτων λέγεις νεκρῶν ἀνάςασιν, For on this thou art baptized, believing the reſurrection of the dead body, that it abides no longer dead, and thou indeed by words believeſt the reſurrection of the dead. Here 'tis evident that the phraſe ὑπὲρ τῶν νεκρῶν βαπτίζεσθαι, being baptized for the dead, is otherwiſe expreſſed by him, by διὰ τοῦτο βαπτίζεσθαι, being baptized in, or on this, and that farther expreſſed by τὸ νεκρὸν σῶμα εἰς ἀνάςασιν πιςεύειν —— believing the reſurrection of the dead body, and διὰ τῶν ῥημάτων λέγειν νεκρῶν ἀνάςασιν, by words reciting the reſurrection of the dead. Nothing then can be more manifeſt, then that this was his underſtanding of St. Paul's words, that being baptized for the dead, was being baptized in the faith and profeſſion, as of other articles of the Creed, ſo of this particularly, and in the laſt place, of the Reſurrection of the body. To this indeed he farther adds, Ὁ ἱερεὺς ὥσπερ ἐν τινὶ εἰκόνι, ὅπερ δείκνυσι, καὶ διὰ τῶν ῥημάτων ὁμολόγησας, δείκνυσί σοι καὶ διὰ τῶν πραγμάτων αὐτῶν, Then the Prieſt, as in an image, or repreſentation, demonſtrates to thee, by what he doth, the things that thou haſt believed, and profeſs'd by words, ὅταν πιςεύεις σημεῖα μὴ δίδως, τότε σοὶ καὶ τὸ σημεῖον παρέχει, when thou believeſt without a ſign, he allows thee a ſign —— viz. in putting in, and taking out of the water, which is σύμβολον τῆς εἰς ᾅδου καταβάσεως καὶ τῆς ἐκεῖθεν ἀνόδου, the ſign of deſcending into the ſtate of the dead, and aſcending from thence. Where though the action of the Prieſt, putting in, and taking out of the water, be a ſignificative proof of the ſame thing, that the baptized are baptized into the faith of the reſurrection of the dead, yet was the interpretation of the Apoſtles words fully accompliſhed in that former, of being baptized into that article of the Reſurrection, of which this action of the Prieſt was the lively ſign. And accordingly Theophylact, who ordinarily copies out S. Chryſoſtome's interpretations, doth content himſelf with the firſt only, Οἱ μέλλοντες βαπτιζῶσθαι πάντες ἀπαγγέλλουσι τὸ σύμβολον τῆς πίςεως, ἐν ᾧ μὴ ἦν ἄλλων καὶ τοῦτο περίκειται, περὶ τῶ εἰς ἀνάςασιν νεκρῶν. They that are to be baptized do all profeſs the Symbol of the faith (that S. Chryſoſtome had called the venerable rules of the doctrines that were brought from heaven) in which after others this is ſet down, I believe in the reſurrection of bodies: φησὶν οὖν, ὅπι οἱ πιςεύοντες ὅπι ἔςιν ἀνάςασις νεκρῶν σωμάτων, καὶ βαπτιζόμενοι ἐπὶ τοιαύταις ἐλπίσι, τί ποιήσουσιν ἀπατηθέντες; The Apoſtle therefore ſaith, that they that believe there is a reſurrection of the dead bodies (there's Chryſoſtome's explication of dead, by bodies) and have been baptized in, or on, theſe hopes (there's his ἐπὶ τούτῳ on this) if they be deceived (that is, if there be no reſurrection) what ſhall they do? Τί ἦν ὅλως καὶ βαπτίζονται ἄνθρωποι ὑπὲρ ἀναςάσεως, τυτέςιν ἐπὶ πεποιθήσει ἀναςάσεως, εἰ νεκροὶ οὐκ ἐγείρονται; And indeed why are men at all baptized for the reſurrection, that is, on the expectation of the reſurrection (ſtill ὑπὲρ and ἐπὶ πεποιθήσει, for, and on, the expectation of the reſurrection, are all one) if the dead are not raiſed? Zonaras alſo on Can. 18. of the Council of Carthage, though with Chryſoſtome he take in the action of the Prieſt, in putting in and taking out of the water, (which is but the confirmation of this, and is not a new interpretation of St. Paul's words) yet he firſt inſiſteth on this, that they that are baptized are inſtructed in the power of the ſacrament, and ſo taught to hope for (that ſure comprehends to believe) ὧν τῶν ἄλλων, among others (the articles wherein the Catechumeni are inſtructed) καὶ ἀνάςασιν νεκρῶν, the reſurrection alſo of the dead. And Balſamon on that Canon is juſt to the ſame purpoſe. To this there is but one thing neceſſary to be added, which will remove all difficulty from it, viz. that τινὲς ἐξ ὑμῶν v. 12. is the Nominative caſe to βαπτίζονται, thoſe of the Corinthians, that now doubted of the Reſurrection, had in their Baptiſm among other things made profeſſion of the belief of it. Which makes the Apoſtle's argument unanſwerable, becauſe they had not yet renounced their Baptiſm, though they denied the Reſurrection. The truth of the fact, that ſome of the Church of Corinth did deny the Reſurrection, is the expreſs affirmation of the Apoſtle v. 12. And that that may not be thought ſtrange, it may be remembred what Photius relates of ſome of the Philoſophers, that this was the laſt article of the Chriſtian faith which they received, as thinking it moſt contrary to thoſe Philoſophical principles imbibed by them; and, by name, of Syneſius, that he was made a Biſhop before he believed the truth of that article; for which they that had made him being queſtioned, made this Apology for ſo doing, that they found ſo many excellent graces in him, that they could not but think them uſeful to the Church of God, and confidently hope that God would not let them all periſh, but would in time give him this grace alſo, which accordingly came to paſs.

V. 32. After the manner of men I have fought with beaſts] d. That St. Paul here refers to that which befel him at Epheſus, Act. 19. may appear, 1st, by 2 Cor. 1. 8. where he mentions his great perſecution in Aſia, (of which Epheſus was the Metropolis) and preſſure ſo heavy, that, ſaith he, I deſpaired even of life, having the ſentence of death paſſed on him, as far as he could gueſs of himſelf, and ſo making his deliverance a wonderful unexpected act of God's, a kind of raiſing him from the dead; 2dly, by the mention of fighting with beaſts, which was a puniſhment that malefactors were condemned to in thoſe days. And of that particularly in Aſia we have an inſtance in thoſe firſt times in the Epiſtle of the Church of Smyrna there, about the martyrdom of Polycarpus, where they call the Aſiarchæ to let looſe a lion upon Polycarp: and by his anſwer there (that he might not, becauſe πανηγύρεις τε ἐνεργοῦνται the agones were ended) three things will be obſervable; 1st, that at that time in Aſia (where that was done) their feſtivities or ſolemnities kept in honour of their Gods, had theſe fightings with beaſts on the Theatres annexed to them, as a chief ceremony of them (ſee

Note on Act. 19. f.) 2dly, that malefactors were wont to be puniſhed at ſuch their feſtivities (as among the Jews at the Paſſover; ſee Act. 12. 4.) not only to make their puniſhments more exemplary, but as a piece of ſacrifice to their Gods; 3dly, that the Aſiarchæ, the governors of Aſia, that is, the chief officers among them, as they had the ordering of the agones, (ſee Note on Act. 19. e.) ſo they had the puniſhing of malefactors committed to them. Now that S. Paul was condemned, at leaſt by the multitude deſigned, to this puniſhment at that time, Act. 19. may thus appear, 1st, by the expreſs words of 2 Cor. 1. 9. we had the ſentence of death in our ſelves, that is, paſſed on us, but, as it follows, God delivered him out of it: 2dly, by the phraſe κατ' ἄνθρωπον here (in the ſame ſenſe as χριθῶμαι κατ' ἀνθρώπους 1 Pet. 4. 5. and τὸ κατ' ἐμὲ as much as in me is, nothing on my part wanting, Rom. 1. 15.) that is, ὅσον τὸ εἰς ἀνθρώπους, ſaith Theophylact, as much as related to, or concerned men, (parallel to that of ἐν ἑαυτοῖς in our ſelves, in that place to the Corinthians, that is, men ſo deſigned me, though God took me out of their hands, ἐξήρπασε τῆ κινδύνων ſnatched me out of the dangers (parallel to God's raiſing him from the dead there, and delivering him from ſo great a death v. 10.) 3dly, by the ſtory in the Acts c. 19. where v. 29. the city being in an uproar, they all with one conſent run to the Theatre, the place where theſe bloody Tragedies were acted, and haled Gaius and Ariſtarchus, two of Paul's companions, thither. And if Paul had come into ſight, they would have done ſo to him alſo, but the Chriſtians there would not permit him to come amongſt them, ver. 30. And v. 31. the Aſiarchæ having ſome kindneſs to Paul (a great work of God's providence that they ſhould) ſent and gave him warning that he ſhould keep cloſe, and μὴ δῦναι ἑαυτὸν εἰς τὸ θέατρον not give himſelf to the theatre, that is, not run the hazard, by coming out, to be carried thither, knowing the full purpoſe of the people to ſet him to the θηριομαχία combating with wild beaſts, if he did. Which farther appears by the Regiſter's words (in his ſpeech whereby he pacified the people) ver. 37. Ye have brought theſe men, being neither robbers of your Temple, nor blaſphemers of your Goddeſs; that is, ye have dealt with them as if they were ſome notorious malefactors, to be thus publickly puniſhed on the Theatre, whereas they have done nothing worthy of ſuch proceedings. This is a clear interpretation of theſe words, and gives a fair account of the κατ' ἄνθρωπον, ſo as to ſignifie as far as man's purpoſe cocerning us (who had condemn'd us to this death, though God delivered us) of which learned men have given ſo many, and ſo wide conjectures.

V. 33. Good manners] What χρηστὰ ἤθη here ſignifies, may perhaps be beſt underſtood by Heſychius in the word Εὐήθως, which he there explains by βλακῶς, χρηστόθως, ἀνόητος: by which it appears that the phraſe refers not to goodneſs of manners, as that ſignifies actions, and as Heſychius renders Ἦθια, συνηθῆς τρόποι, (for which the ordinary print reads τόποι) and Κακοηθείας, κακοτροπίας, but to ſimplicity and deceivableneſs of mind, and accordingly it is moſt properly rendred good diſpoſitions, or good natures, of which it is ordinarily obſervable, that they are ſubject to be ſeduced, and miſled into error or falſe doctrine, as here the denying of the Reſurrection. And accordingly it is introduced, and inforced with a μὴ πλανᾶσθε, be not deceived, noting what corruption was here to be taken heed of, that of error. The rendring the phraſe good manners, refers it peculiarly to the ſenſe of being debauch'd and corrupt in their lives, which is not commodiouſly applicable to this place, which treats only of intellectual error, and therefore this other ſenſe is with more reaſon to be here faſtned on, That converſation and diſcourſe (ſo ὁμιλία ſignifies) with Hereticks, or Philoſophers, that diſputed againſt the poſſibility of the bodies returning to life, after it was once perfectly dead, might probably ſeduce and deceive εὐήθεις, χρηστόθεις, eaſie, well-natured auditors, who are not ſo circumſpect as they ſhould be: And thus hath Theophylact interpreted χρηστὰ ἤθη, τὰ εὐεξαπάτητα, the good diſpoſitions denote thoſe that are eaſily deceived, or cheated.

V. 50. Fleſh and blood] That fleſh and blood ſignifies that ſtate of growing, feeding, corruptible bodies, ſuch as theſe we carry about us, there is little doubt. How, or with what propriety it comes to do ſo, may receive ſome light from that of Homer, Ιλιαδ. ε'. There of the Gods he ſaith,

——ὑ γὰρ τοὶ ἔδμεν, ὑ πίνομ' αἴθοπα οἶνον,
Τὕνεκ' ἀναίμονές εἰσι, καὶ ἀθάνατοι καλέονται. Il. 5. 341.

They eat no meat, nor drink no wine, therefore they have no blood, and are called immortal. Thus in the Goſpel 'tis ſaid of the ſaints in heaven, which are clearly anſwerable to the ſobereſt notion of their gods, that they neither eat nor drink, and from thence (agreeably to that which Homer concludes from thence) they are here ſaid not to be fleſh and blood, nor, as it follows, corruptible, denoting the difference betwixt the natural body we have here, and the ſpiritual hereafter.

V. 54. In victory] The Hebrew phraſe לנצח, which is ordinarily rendred εἰς νῖκος Lam. 5. 20. 2 Sam. 2. 26. Job 36. 7. Jer. 3. 5. Amos 1. 11. doth in all of them ſignifie forever, and is rendred εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα Iſa. 13. 20. and εἰς τέλος to the end Pſal. 13. 2. and ſo 'tis in this place, Death ſhall be forever (or, perfectly, or, finally) devoured.

V. 55. Where is thy ſting] Theſe words are taken out of Hoſea, c. 13. 14. where yet we read, I will be thy plague. And ſome have conjectured, that in ſtead of the Hebrew אהי I will be, the Greek read איה where? But R. Tanchum and Eb. Jannahius, ſaith Mr. P. affirm, that the Hebrew אהי is all one with איה, and ſo ſignifies where, in that very chapter of Hoſea, v. 10. אהי מלכך, where is thy ſting? and ſo then the Septuagints rendring will be literal, and the Apoſtles words lightly varied from it.

a. Πεμπω it is needfull

V. 11. Conduct.] Πεμπειν is to accompany, to bring on the way, v. 6. and to ſet forth, and, if need be, to provide for the neceſſaries of his journey. So Tit. 3. 13. where 'tis explained by ἵνα μηδὲν ὑστερῆται λείπῃ that they want nothing. So Act. 15. 3. where they that were ſent by the Church of Antioch, in all reaſon are to be beleived to have had the charge of their journey defrayed by them. As for the phraſe ἐν εἰρήνῃ in peace here added, it ſeems to refer to that notion of peace (as in, Peace be with you, &c.) which is a form of ſalutation, eſpecially at diſmiſſing the aſſembly (ſee Note on Rom. 16. c.) or at any other parting, or taking of leave, which was among the Chriſtians uſed by way of benediction, and then ἐν εἰρήνῃ in, or, with peace, will be no more then, when ye take leave, or part with them.

V. 18. Refreſhed my ſpirit] This phraſe ἀνέπαυσε πνεῦμα quieted the ſpirit, is taken out of the Greek tranſlation Zach 6. 8. in ſtead of which the Chaldee have עבידו יתרעתי they have done my deſire, that is, ſaith Maimonides, they were acceptable and welcome to me. See Joh. Coch. Tſt. Talmud. p. 300.

c. Ἐκκλησία

V. 19. Church that is in their houſe] The word ἐκκλησία the Church doth not only ſignifie the place of aſſembling together, but the perſons of thoſe that uſe to do ſo, that is, all the Chriſtians in any place. So in the beginning of this Epiſtle having named the Church which is in Corinth, he proceeds ἡγιασμένοις, κλητοῖς ἁγίοις, &c. the ſanctified, the ſaints, that is, all the Chriſtians in that place, which are meant by the word Church preceding. And ſo here the Church is all the members of the Church of Chriſt, the Chriſtians; and then οἶκος houſe ſignifying in like manner not the walls of the houſe, but the family, the perſons in it, (as when 'tis ſaid of Cornelius that he was a proſelyte σὺν παντὶ τῷ οἴκῳ αὐτοῦ, with all his houſe, that is, he and all the perſons of his family,) it is evident what is meant by the Church in their houſe, that is, all the believers of their family. The ſame are called ἡ κατ' οἶκον αὐτῶν ἐκκλησία Rom. 16. 4. the Church, or Chriſtians, belonging to their family: the prepoſitions ἐν and κατὰ being promiſcuouſly uſed in theſe writings. To this * Theophylact farther adds, that by this phraſe is intimated the great piety of the Maſters of theſe families, that had made all their houſe Chriſtians (ὅτως ἦσαν εὐσεβεῖς, ὥστε τὸν οἶκον αὐτῶν πάντα ποιῆσαι πιστὸν, τούτου γὰρ ἐκκλησίαν ὀνόμασεν) and again their great hoſpitality to ſtrangers: For where, ſaith he, ſuch virtues are, ἐκκλησία ὁ τοιοῦτος οἶκος, that houſe is a Church.

V. 22. Anathema Maranatha] Of ἀνάθεμα, as it was the ſecond degree of Cenſures taken from the Jews, and accommodated to the uſe of the Chriſtian Church, ſomewhat hath been ſaid, Note on c. 5. e. Now the addition of Maranatha μαρὰν ἀθὰ to it, ſignifies the third and higheſt degree of Excommunication, ſuper-added to that ſecond. For though ſome queſtion have been of late made of it by learned men, yet there is little reaſon to doubt, but there were among the Jews thoſe three degrees of Excommunication, נדוי, חרם, and שמאתא: the firſt a remotion from familiar converſe, ad quatuor paſſus, for four paces; the ſecond more ſolemn, with execrations out of Moſes law added to it; the third leaving the the offender to divine vengeance. This laſt is denoted, without doubt, by the origination of the word שמאתא whatſoever that be. For three derivations it is capable of, two mentioned in Moed Katon, in theſe words, What is Schammatha? Rab anſwered שם מיתה there is death, and Samuel ſaid שממא תהא there ſhall be deſolation. The third is from שם אתא Dominus venit, the Lord comes. That this third ſhould not be it, there is only this pretence, that then there would be no reaſon for the dageſh or doubling of the m in ſchammatha. But conſidering that that is no great change, and that in either of the other two greater are admitted, in the firſt the ה in the end of מיתה turned into א. and much greater in the ſecond, the word μαρὰν ἀθὰ here will give us great reaſon to forſake the two former, and pitch upon that third derivation, it being clear that the word אתא comes is the ſame in both, and for the שם and מרן it is as clear, that they are directly the ſame. The word שם is name, but in ordinary ſpeech among the Jews ſignifies the name of God, or God himſelf. And ſo doth Maran in the Eaſtern tongues ſignifie Dominus Lord, whence in Etruria the Kings were called Marani, ſaith Servius on Æneid. 12. and the Syrians are now called Maronitæ, becauſe they call Chriſt מראני our Lord. Agreeable to which it is that in Epiphanius God is by the Gazari called Marnas, and by the Cretians their virgins are ſtyled Μάρναι, that is, Κυρίαι Ladies. And thus both theſe words Schammatha and Maranatha will be directly all one with the denunciation of Enoch, Jude 14. ἦλθε Κύριος the Lord cometh, and that there explained by ποιῆσαι κρίσιν doing judgment againſt wicked men, that will not be reformed. According to this it is, that among the Spaniards, who have ſo much of the remainders of the Jews among them, this form hath been uſed, ſit Anathema maranatha, & excommunicatus; or מחר מא מן רחא אל רב let him be excommunicated from the hope of the Lord. A paſſage there is in Stephanus Byzant. περὶ πόλ. which in all probability belongs to this word. Κεραυνωθείς τε ποιμὴν ἔλεγε Ῥαμάνθας, τουτέστιν, ἀφ' ὕψους ὁ Θεός, A ſhepherd being thunderſtruck, ſaith he, cried out, Ramanthas, that is, God from above. Where though, out of Philo the Grammarian, he derive it from Raman, ſignifying height, and Athas, God, yet there is little doubt to be made but the word is a corruption in the vulgar, and ſo in the ſhepherds uſe of it for Maranatha here. The only thing remaining of difficulty is, how, ſuppoſing this a form of Excommunication, it can here be applyed to the not loving of Chriſt, which, being a ſin of the heart, ſeems not to be capable of any judges cognizance, nor conſequently of their cenſure. But it muſt be obſerved that the love of Chriſt ſignifies that perfect love that caſts out fear, and contains in it the confeſſion of Chriſt, adhering and cleaving to him (as to love a maſter, Mat. 6. 24. is, to hold to him, in that verſe) the not loving of Chriſt, is the denying of him in time of trouble, and ſignifies here him that was tainted with the error of the Gnoſticks, and ſo would not confeſs Chriſt in time of perſecution (ſee Note on Rev. 2. b.) and then there is nothing more reaſonable then that the Apoſtle, having written this whole Epiſtle againſt the ſchiſms and vicious practices and hereſies infuſed into the Church of Corinth by theſe men, ſhould conclude with a denunciation of the higheſt degree of Excommunication againſt all thoſe who ſhall thus renounce Chriſt, and fall off to theſe damnable hereſies, denying the Lord that bought them, 2 Pet. 2. 1.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS.

a. Δευτέρας Κορινθίους

THE occasion and time of writing this Second Epistle are the only things which will here be necessary to be premised; and both of these may probably be discovered. At the end of his three years stay in Asia, when he was now hastening towards Jerusalem, 1 Cor. 16. 8. that is, An. Ch. 54. he had, before his departure from Ephesus, (see Note a. on the title of 1 Cor.) written his First Epistle to them, for the checking of many enormities among them, which Stephanas, and Fortunatus, and Achaicus had brought him word of. And when the success of that Epistle of his was soon declared unto him by Titus, how that the Censures inflicted on the offenders had reduced many, and that there was a very discernable Reformation wrought amongst them by these means, he makes all haste (as soon as he had received this account) to send this Second, milder Epistle unto them, to qualifie the seeming severities of the former, and to take off the Censures again from those that had thus seasonably been reform'd by them, c. 2. 7. and 10. This shews that it was written within a short time after the former. And the same also appears by the solemn mention of the danger which he had pass'd at Ephesus, (which he had but intimated in the former Epistle, c. 15. 32. but now enlargeth on it, at the beginning of this Epistle, c. 1. 8. and c. 4. 7. &c.) viz. that caused by Demetrius and the Silver-smiths, Act. 19. 24. in which he had like to have been brought to the Theatre, to combat with wild beasts, and escaped narrowly with life: Which deliverance of his was, it seems, now fresh in his memory, and fit to be recounted by him again and again, and to be thankfully acknowledged by all that had any interest in him.

Θύρα ἀνεῳγμένη

As for the point of time wherein it was written, it may be thus probably collected. In this Epistle, c. 2. 12. he mentions his being at Troas to preach the Gospel, and his good success in converting many, which is the meaning of the door being opened him in the Lord; from thence he saith he hastened to Macedonia, on purpose to meet Titus, and understand from him the success of his former Epistle to these Corinthians, and there it seems he found him, and presently dispatch'd this Second Epistle to them, which is accordingly in the Subscription of it dated from Philippi in Macedonia, by Titus and Lucas. That this was done in that journey set down Act. 20. in the beginning, there is no question, but in what verse of that chapter this his being at Troas, (mention'd here c. 2. 12.) is described, that is the only difficulty. That it is not to be referred to that mention of Troas Act. 20. 6. appears by this, that there they came from Philippi (that is, from Macedonia) to Troas, but at the point of time mention'd in this Epistle, 'tis evident they went from Troas to Macedonia. Again, in that verse of the Acts they stayed at Troas but seven days, and in those days the disciples came together to break bread, on the Lords day, and Paul διελέγετο discoursed to them till midnight: All which supposeth them of Troas to have formerly received the Gospel, whereas at his being in Troas, which is mention'd in this Epistle, he seems to have first revealed the Gospel unto them, the door which was then opened unto him being the first reception of the Gospel in that place. It is therefore most reasonable to suppose this his being at Troas to be contained Act. 20. 1. in his passing from Ephesus, the Metropolis of Asia, into Macedonia. That Troas was not so much out of the way betwixt these two, but that by it he might pass from one to the other, appears in the following verses; for in the return from Macedonia v. 3. into Asia v. 4. they are all found at Troas v. 5. and 6. and from thence it is as clear, that Troas might be taken in his way v 1. as he went from Ephesus to Macedonia. But the brevity of S. Luke's narrations keeps this from being mention'd there, which yet may be supplied by this of S. Paul's own pen, c. 2. 12. And from thence it will be concluded that either at his being in Macedonia v. 1. (at which time he met with Titus there, 2 Cor. 2. 12.) or possibly at his return through Macedonia from Greece v. 2, 3. this Epistle was written by him, to follow the former, as soon as he discerned the success of it, and to comfort them whom that had cast down. And that it was in the second point of time, that of his return from Greece through Macedonia, may appear by c. 1. 16. where mentioning two resolutions, which he had to visit them, the former in his passage into Macedonia, the second at his return from it, both of these must needs be pass'd before the writing hereof. In this Epistle he also excuseth his not coming to them, and addeth many other things occasionally; especially he is careful to vindicate his Apostleship from some calumnies, that malicious seducers, crept into that Church, had cast upon him. And this is all that was useful to be said before-hand on this Epistle.

Paraphrase.

CHAP I.

1. Timotheus that was with you by my appointment 1 Cor. 16. 10. to see my directions observed among you, to the Christian Church in the City of Corinth, and in all other Cities and Regions through all Achaia.

1. PAUL an Apostle of Jesus Christ, by the will of God, and [Timothy *our brother, unto the Church of God which is at Corinth, with all the saints that are in all Achaia,]

2. Grace be to you, and peace, from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

3. Blessed be † God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies, and the God of all comforts,]

3. I have all reason to bless and magnifie the name of God, which purposely sent our Lord Jesus Christ into the world, and by that, and his many other gracious acts of his particular providence, hath shewed himself to be a most merciful and gracious Father unto us.

4. Who in all the pressures that have befallen me, hath eminently relieved and succoured me, and by those experiences hath enabled me to refresh and cheer up all those that are in any Affliction.

4. Who comforteth us in all our tribulation, that we may be able to comfort them which are in any trouble, by the comfort wherewith we our selves are comforted of God.]

5. *For as the sufferings of Christ †abound in us, so our consolation also aboundeth by Christ.]

*Because ὅτι † upon us abound εἰς ἡμᾶς περισσεύει * wrought by ἐνεργουμένη ἐν

so frequent evidences, that according to the proportion of our suffering for Christ, Christ doth constantly afford us comforts and reliefs, the greater our afflictions are, the greater also our refreshments from Christ.

5. By this one consideration, of which I have had led or discouraged in your Christian course by that means: for sure 'tis for your advantage that we are so. Our afflictions are matter of comfort to you, viz. that you can fall under no persecutions your selves, but what you see us endure before you, and those meerly for our doing you good, preaching the Gospel to you, endeavouring to bring you to repentance and to bliss, which is not ordinarily to be come to, but by suffering after my example. And then the refreshments and extraordinary reliefs that Christ afforded me in all my sufferings, those sure will be matter of comfort to you also, as a pledge of assurance that Christ will afford you the like refreshments here, and reward hereafter.

6. And whether we be afflicted, it is for your consolation and salvation, which is *effectual in the enduring of the same sufferings which we also suffer: or whether we be comforted, it is for your consolation and salvation.]

6. And so what afflictions soever befal us, there is no reason you should be startled or discouraged in your Christian course by that means: for sure 'tis for your advantage that we are so. Our afflictions are matter of comfort to you, viz. that you can fall under no persecutions your selves, but what you see us endure before you, and those meerly for our doing you good, preaching the Gospel to you, endeavouring to bring you to repentance and to bliss, which is not ordinarily to be come to, but by suffering after my example. And then the refreshments and extraordinary reliefs that Christ afforded me in all my sufferings, those sure will be matter of comfort to you also, as a pledge of assurance that Christ will afford you the like refreshments here, and reward hereafter.

your parts in the afflictions, so ye shall also of the reliefs and advantages by suffering.

7. And of this I make no doubt, but that as you have your parts in the afflictions, so ye shall also of the reliefs and advantages by suffering.

8. For we would not, brethren, have you ignorant of our trouble which came to us in Asia, that we were pressed out of measure, above strength, insomuch that we despaired even of life:]

you of the sharp persecutions that I lately met with at Ephesus, the chief Metropolis of Asia, Act. 19. (see note on 1 Cor. 15. d.) where I had like to have been brought out to the theatre to be devoured by the wild beasts, and indeed had no humane means to avert, nor consequently to escape it.

8. All this I say by way of preface to this advertisement which I desire to give you of the sharp persecutions that I lately met with at Ephesus, the chief Metropolis of Asia, Act. 19. (see note on 1 Cor. 15. d.) where I had like to have been brought out to the theatre to be devoured by the wild beasts, and indeed had no humane means to avert, nor consequently to escape it.

believed I should be put to death, the more I might be engaged by my deliverance, never to depend on any worldly trust, but only on God, who can rescue from the greatest extremity, even from the grave and death it self.

9. And this advantage I had of it, that the more I believed I should be put to death, the more I might be engaged by my deliverance, never to depend on any worldly trust, but only on God, who can rescue from the greatest extremity, even from the grave and death it self.

And that was then the only reaſon of my forbearing, that I might not be forced to exerciſe that Apoſtolical ſharpneſs againſt you. (as for the other, the reaſon of the change of his reſolution is plain, Act. 20. 3.)

24. That ſeverity of diſcipline I mean, that muſt not be look'd on as an act of dominion, of deſigning any advantage to our ſelves by you (ſee Mat 20. 25. and note on 1 Pet 5. 3.) but that which Chriſt hath commanded and preſcribed us, by that means to reform and amend, to work faith, and hope, and rejoycing, and all good things in you. For by Faith, that is, the doctrine of Chriſt, it is that you were firſt brought in to the ſervice of the true God, and wherein you continue ever ſince, and we deſire you ſhould do ſo ſtill, not relying on any doctrine of ours as it differs from that.

Annotations on Chap. I.

a. Πολύπροσωπον

V. 11. By the means of many perſons] The Greek πρόσωπον is ordinarily parallel and proportionable to the Hebrew פנים facies, which coming from פנה reſpexit, ſignifies oftentimes reſpectus, and ſo מפני de facie, ſignifies for, or in reſpect of; and agreeable thereto ἐκ πολλῶν προσώπων, of, or from, many faces, here ſignifies in reſpect of many, in relation to many, for the ſakes of many, or in any of thoſe forms of ſpeech by which מפני would be rendred.

b. Ναὶ καὶ

V. 17. Yea yea, and nay nay] is diſtinctly this, when we do not agree, or are inconſtant to our ſelves, now yea, and anon nay, in our words or actions. Whence is that old word naucus for a light, or frivolous perſon, from ναὶ καὶ, as 'tis deduced by Feſtus. The difference of this from the ἀπὸ τοῦ νὶ τὸ ναὶ ναὶ, καὶ τὸ οὒ, Jam. 5. 12. is cleared by the conſtruction, Let your yea be yea, and your nay be nay, that is, let your words and actions accord; ſo that the ſecond yea and the ſecond nay is not joined with the firſt, as here, but as the prædicate affirmed of it, whereas here the two yeas being all one (and ſo indeed expreſſed by a ſingle yea v. 18.) are the ſubject of the ſpeech, and the two nays, being all one again, the prædicate. To this agrees that proverb of the Jews, The juſt mans yea is yea, and his nay, nay. A third expreſſion there is, that of Mat. 5. which is in ſound very near this, and yet diſtant from it, Let your communication be yea yea, and nay nay, that is, let there be no other language but this, or the like, uſed by you, in oppoſition to the more licentious forms of oaths there mentioned.

CHAP. II.

1. And now that inſtead of coming, I write again, I was reſolved to defer it ſo long, till I ſhould hear of ſome reformation among you, that ſo this might not be, as formerly my letters were, to puniſh, to afflict, to cenſure you, ſee note on 1 Cor. 5. c.

1. BUT I determined this with my ſelf, that I would not come again to you in heavineſs.]

2. For when you are check'd or cenſur'd by me, this is ſo far from being pleaſant to me, that it is indeed at the ſame time matter of ſuch grief, that I cannot be comforted by any thing, but by the ſame you, by ſeeing that the Cenſures have wrought ſome good on you, cauſed the reformation of that in you, for which I had meant them to you.

2. For if I make you ſorry, who is it then that maketh me glad, but he that is made ſorry by me?]

3. And this ſeverity of proceeding, v. 1. which now I ſpeak of, I did rather chooſe to ſend you in a letter, 1 Cor. 5. then to defer it till my coming, in hope to find your faults amended, to have all the ſorrowful matter, that of cenſure, paſt before that time, that ſo I might have nothing to do then, but to abſolve and receive penitents, and ſo to rejoice among you, (not to inflict cenſures upon you) and that I was confident would alſo be moſt acceptable to you all.

3. And * I wrote this ſame unto you, leſt when I came, I ſhould have ſorrow from them of whom I ought to rejoice, having confidence in you all, that my joy is the joy of you all.]

* this very thing did I write, αὐτὸ τοῦτο ἔγραψα

4. For out of much affliction and anguiſh of heart I wrote unto you with many tears, not that ye ſhould be † grieved, but that ye might know the love which I have more abundantly unto you.]

4. For that which I wrote with ſome ſharpneſs, and was matter of grief to you, was ſo much more to me at the very writing of it, was a moſt heavy preſſure upon my heart, and fetch'd abundance of tears from me; by which you may know that what I did was not out of any pleaſure that I take to cenſure or afflict you, but as an effect of the greateſt love to you all, which could be imagin'd.

a. 5, 6. But for the inceſtuous perſon, the author of all this ſadneſs and ſeverity, (ſadneſs not to me alone, but in ſome meaſure, that I ſay no worſe, to all you) it is now ſufficient which he hath ſuffered by the delivering him up to Satan, 1 Cor. 5. and the ſad conſequence thereof.

5. But if any have cauſed grief, [a] he hath not grieved me, * but in part; that I may not overcharge you all.

6. Sufficient to ſuch a man is this [b] puniſhment, which was † inflicted of many.]

† before the many

7. And it is now more then time that he be abſolved by the Church, and forgiven the offence committed againſt it, and by abſolution be cheer'd up again, leſt the continuance of ſuch ſharp puniſhments ſhould not have a benign, but noxious influence upon him.

7. So that contrarywiſe, ye ought rather to forgive him, and comfort him, leſt perhaps ſuch a one ſhould be ſwallowed up with overmuch ſorrow.]

8. And therefore my preſent counſel is, that by prayers for his releaſe you expreſs your reconciliation to him, and ſo abſolve him from the Cenſures.

8. Wherefore I * beſeech you, that you would confirm your love towards him.]

* exhort, παρακαλῶ

9. And this I now write, that I may ſee whether you are as ready upon my appointment to reſtore penitents, as to inflict puniſhments upon offenders, which is another branch of your Chriſtian charity.

9. For to this end alſo † did I write, that I might know the proof of you, whether ye be obedient in all things.]

† have I written, ἔγραψα

10. Whom you are willing to have reſtor'd from excommunication (as being ſatisfied with his penance and expreſſion of repentance) I appoint or give leave to do it: (For if I have abſolved any man, I have done it by the authority I have from Chriſt, but yet in reſpect unto you, or with conſideration of what may be beſt for you, that is, for your whole Church.)

10. To whom ye forgive any thing, I forgive alſo: for if I * forgave any thing, to whom I forgave it, for your ſakes forgave I it, in the perſon of Chriſt.]

* have forgiven, κεχάρισμαι

11. That the too long continuance of the puniſhments upon the penitent offender may not be made uſe of by Satan to the hurt and ruin of the Church, either by ſwallowing him up by deſperation, v. 7. or by heightning your zeal againſt ſin into an unreconcileableneſs with the ſinner, v. 9. for Satan hath many hidden ſecret arts to miſchief Souls, which we think not of.

Annotations on Chap. II.

V. 5. He hath not grieved me] The sense affix'd to these words in this paraphrase (very distant from that which the words, as they are ordinarily read and rendred, sound) is taken distinctly from the Scholion of Theophylact, who resolving it the Apostles meaning, in both these verses, to have his charity to the incestuous person expres'd, and to give order for his Absolution, thinks this way of rendring it most proper, that joining them with himself in the dislike and sorrow, and consequently infliction of censures for the sin, he might ingage them jointly with himself in the absolving the transgressor; and this, saith he, most wisely disposed by him, that they who had so lately been commanded by the Apostle to avoid him, as a detestable person, should not now upon his giving orders for his absolution be scandalized at him, ὡς μεταμβάλλοντα as inconstant and mutable. This, saith he, is the reason that he takes them in, as partakers with him of the sorrow and censures, that he might have them his willing partners in the absolution and joy of that. And so this, saith he, is the sense of the words, ὑ γὰρ λελύπ. —— For he hath not, saith S. Paul, grieved me alone, but all you in part, that is, a little, or in some degree, that I may not say, he hath altogether grieved you, lest I should lay overmuch weight upon him; or in plain words, the truth is, he hath grieved you in like manner as me, but yet that I may not overburthen him that was guilty of that incest, or aggravate the matter against him, all that I say is, that in part, or in some measure, ye were grieved by him. This is a very commodious sense, and necessarily requires some small change of the punctation, (though the printed text in Theophylact have not observed it) partly by including in a parenthesis the latter part of this 5 verse, from ἵνα μὴ —— to the end of it, partly by putting a comma after βεβαρῶ, that so πάντας ὑμᾶς may connect with ὑπὸ πλείονων, thus 5. But if any have caused grief, he hath not grieved me, but in part, (that I may not aggravate, or lay weight, on him) you all. 6. Sufficient to such a man —— And this is a plain sense, and agrees very well with all that follows of their joint and chearful proceeding to the Absolution of the incestuous.

V. 6. Punishment which was inflicted of many] What is here meant by ἐπιτιμία ἡ ὑπὸ τ πλειόνων, the punishment which was inflicted under the many, will appear by 1 Cor. 5. 4. where concerning the incestuous person, and such as he, order is distinctly given, that he shall be delivered up to Satan for the destruction of the flesh, or bringing corporal inflictions upon him, which is certainly the ἐπιτιμία punishment here mentioned, and that συναχθέντων ὑμῶν you being gathered together, that is, in the presence of the whole congregation, to add the greater solemnity to it: And that is all one with the ὑπὸ πλειόνων here, under, or in, the presence of the many. Mean while as there the sentence was St. Paul's, κἀγὼ V. 3. I have judged as present, and v. 4. when ye are gathered together and my spirit, with the power of the Lord Jesus Christ (bestowed on the Apostle, and rulers of the Church) so here it must be supposed to be, though the solemnity was transacted with the company, and in the presence of the whose congregation.

b. ἐπιτιμία ἡ ὑπὸ τ πλειόνων

V. 17. Corrupt] That καπηλεύ & ὃς the word of God signifies the Gospel here, as it was by St. Paul made known unto men, the Christian Religion preached by him, there can be no doubt. All the difficulty is, what is meant by καπηλεύοντ. not that there can be any question of the native proper signification of that word, for it certainly signifies doing as κάπηλοι do, and those are little pedling merchants, that buy and sell to get gain; but because it is possible it may refer to some practices which such Merchants are vulgarly guilty of, mixing, and dashing their commodities, and so deceiving others, that they may inrich themselves. But though the word may possibly by a figure signifie this, yet the genuine proper notion, being very agreeable to the Context, is in all reason to be preferred. We are not, saith St. Paul, ὡς οἱ πολλοὶ, as the many. This sure refers to the false teachers of his time, and those, we know, were the Gnosticks, who as they are said to serve their belly, to love the world, and to love pleasures, and so generally to design themselves advantages by their profession, and of all things hated the Cross, renounced Christianity when it was persecuted, and brought any dangers or losses upon them; so they are particularly marked out 1 Tim. 6. 5. (that chapter where the Gnosticks are named, v. 20. and their character particularly set down) to be such as deem Godliness gain, think the Christian profession brings men secular advantages of liberty, &c. and so cannot be so single-hearted, so wholly bent to approve themselves to God, as St. Paul here professeth to be. To this interpretation of the place I am inclined by two passages in the Epistles of Ignatius, which though they are omitted in the Laurentian Copy, are yet constantly to be found in others, and if they were put in by any interpolator, they may yet be of good use to us in this matter, there being no reason to suspect the hand that inserted them of any ill design, nor yet of ignorance either of the Gnostick heresie, or of the use of the word. The former place is in the Epistle ad Philadelphienses, where speaking of the Gnostick Judaizers, enemies of the cross, whose God is their belly, minding earthly things, lovers of pleasures, and not lovers of God, having a form of Godliness, but denying the power thereof, he adds, οἱ χειρίμπορει, ἢ λόγῳ καπηλεύοντες, ἢ ἀληθῶς πωλῶνται, Merchants of Christ, huckstering the word, selling Jesus, going on to other parts of the character of the Gnosticks, corrupters of women, coveting what belongs to others, χρηματισμὸν ἀγαπῶντες greedy lovers of money. The second place is agreeable in Ep. ad Trall. There are, saith he, some vain speakers and impostors, οἱ κεκιβδηλευμένοι διὰ κακοδοξίαν, οὐκ ἐμφυτευόμενοι τῷ δένδρῳ τῷ ἁγίῳ, ἢ ἀποκοπησόμενοι ἐκ λόγου τῆς ἀγαπῆς —— not Christians, but Merchants of Christ, corrupting the name of Christ by deceit, huckstering the word of the Gospel; and who these are, he specifies in the progress of that Epistle; Simon the first-born of Satan, Menander, Basilides, the unclean Nicolaitans, τοὺς ψευδωνύμους, those that are falsely named, that is, the Gnosticks, &c.

1. Why ſhould I again be forced to mention the uprightneſs of my dealing toward you, the orthodoxneſs and purity of my doctrine after the manner that is uſual in the Church, in commending from one Church to another thoſe that are ſtrangers to them? have I any need of commendations to you, or from you to other men?

1. DO we begin again to commend our ſelves? or need we, as ſome others, epiſtles of commendation to you? or letters of commendation from you?]

2. The works of converſion that we have wrought among you, of which our own Conſcience gives us teſtimony, will ſerve us abundantly inſtead of letters commendatory from you to all others, who cannot but have heard the fame of it.

2. Ye are our Epiſtle written in our hearts, known and read of all men.]

3. And you (that is, your faith) are moſt conſpicuouſly an epiſtle of Chriſt, of the writing of which we have only been the inſtruments, the Spirit of God ſupplying the place of ink, and your hearts of the writing tables, and by this Epiſtle, this teſtimony, Chriſt that great Biſhop of our Souls doth recommend us to all men.

3. * For as (much as ye are) manifeſtly declared to be the epiſtle of Chriſt miniſtred by us, written not with ink, but with the Spirit of the living God, not in tables of ſtone, but in fleſhly tables of the heart.]

5. Not that we are ſufficient of our ſelves to think any thing as of our ſelves; but our ſufficiency is of God.]

6. And what ſufficiency of his he hath expreſs'd in the powers and methods, with which he hath furniſhed, and to which directed us the preachers and diſpenſers of the new Covenant (ſee note on the title of theſe books) that is, not of the law (ſee note on Mat. 5. g.) written and brought down in Tables by Moſes, but of the Goſpel, called by this title of the Spirit, firſt, becauſe it comes near to the ſoul, and requires purity there; ſecondly, becauſe the Holy Ghoſt came down both on Chriſt and on the Diſciples to confirm this new way; thirdly, becauſe Grace is a Gift of the Spirit, and now is joined to the Goſpel, but was not to the Law; which adminiſtration of the Spirit, and annexation of it to the word under the Goſpel, gives men means to attain eternal life, when the law is the occaſion, and by accident the cauſe of death to them, in denouncing judgment againſt ſinners, and yet not giving ſtrength to obey.

6. Who alſo hath * made us able miniſters of the new † Teſtament, not of the * letter, but of the ſpirit: for the letter killeth, but the ſpirit giveth life.]

7. And if the delivery of the Law which brought nothing but death with it; when it was written in tables of ſtone (ſee note on Mat. 5. g.) was with the appearance of Angels, and a bright ſhining which caſt ſuch a ſplendor on Moſes's face, that it would dazle any man's eyes to look on it, and yet now that glory, and that law ſo gloriouſly delivered, is done away:

7. But if the miniſtration of death † written and ingraven in ſtones was * glorious, ſo that the children of Iſrael could not ſtedfaſtly behold the face of Moſes, for the glory of his countenance, † which glory was to be done away:]

8. How much rather ſhall the preaching of the Goſpel be matter of reverence to all? (ſee Mat. 5. g.)

8. How ſhall not the miniſtration of the Spirit be rather * glorious?]

* in glory ἐν δόξῃ

9. For if the delivery of the Law, which could help men to condemnation, but could not abſolve any man, were in ſo much glory, God by his Angels appearing ſo dreadful in the mount; then much more the Goſpel, which brings with it juſtification and pardon of ſin, is to be counted exceeding glorious, to be look'd on and received by us with all reverence.

9. For if the † miniſtration of condemnation * be glory, much more doth the miniſtration of righteouſneſs exceed in glory.]

† adminiſtration διακονία

10. For the Law though otherwiſe glorious, yet being compared with the Goſpel, hath no glory at all in it (as the moon compared with the ſun is ſo utterly outſhined by it, that it appears not in the preſence thereof.)

10. For even that which was glorious † had no glory in this reſpect, by reaſon of the glory that excelleth.]

† was not ſo much as glorious, οὐ δεδόξασται

11. For if that which was it ſelf to be abolliſh'd, being but the cover that contain'd the true jewel under it, were yet deliver'd dreadfully and by a glorious appearance, then much more ſhall that which endureth for ever, that jewel it ſelf, the Goſpel or ſubſtance, contain'd under thoſe coverings or ſhadows, and ſo which is never like to be aboliſhed, and hath a durable fruit belonging to it (Grace, which the other had not) deſerve to be eſteemed glorious.

11. For if that which is done away was * glorious, much more that which remaineth † glorious.]

* by glory διὰ δόξης
† in glory ἐν δόξῃ

12. Upon theſe grounds I ſay (mentioned from verſe 5. to this verſe) I cannot but ſpeak boldly and confidently to you in vindication of my Apoſtleſhip, ver. 4.

12. Seeing then that we have ſuch hope, we uſe great plainneſs of ſpeech;]

13. Having no need to imitate Moſes who vailed his face, which was a type of the dark, not clear propoſing of the Goſpel (which is the end or principal part of the law, and the jewel contain'd under that covering) to them of old.

13. And not as Moſes, * which put a vail over † his face, * that the children of Iſrael could not ſtedfaſtly look to the *.b end of that which is aboliſhed.]

* put ἐτίθει † his own ἑαυτοῦ
* ſo that πρὸς τὸ

* or face; for the King's MS. reads τὸ πρόσωπον.

14. And accordingly ſo it continues remarkable to this preſent, the Jews ſee not Chriſt in the reading of the Old Teſtament, and ſo the cover ſtill remains upon Moſes's face, as it were, but by the Chriſtian clear doctrine, or by faith, is removed.

14. But their minds were blinded: for until this day remaineth the ſame vail untaken away, in the reading of the Old Teſtament: which vail is done away in Chriſt.]

15. And ſo though they have heard it over and over many times, yet ſtill they do not underſtand the true ſenſe of the law.

15. But even unto this day, when Moſes is read, the vail is upon their heart.]

16. But when Iſrael v. 15. or their heart v. 15. ſhall accept of the Goſpel of Chriſt then they ſhall ſee and underſtand plainly, what now is ſo obſcure to them.

16. Nevertheleſs, when it ſhall turn to the Lord, the vail ſhall be taken away.]

17. Now Chriſt is, beſides his humane nature, indued with a divine Spirit, and the Goſpel of Chriſt is called the Spirit v. 6. and where the Spirit of Chriſt, or the Goſpel is, there is freedom, and conſequently the vail (a token of ſubjection alſo 1 Cor. 11. 10.) is taken away.

17. Now the Lord is that Spirit, and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty.]

18. And ſo all we that believe in Chriſt, have that vail done away, and do clearly, though not yet ſo perfectly, behold the doctrine of the Goſpel received into our hearts changeth us into purity, &c. ſo ſhall be rewarded with eternal glory hereafter, the ſame Spirit of Chriſt which worketh the one in us, being certain to produce the other alſo.

a Συστατικαὶ ἐπιστολαὶ

V. 1. Epiſtles of commendations] Συστατικαὶ ἐπιστολαὶ, and γράμματα in this place are an intimation of an ancient cuſtom in the Apoſtolical primitive Church, which ordinarily gave their teſtimonies to all Chriſtians, that travailed from one place to another, and recommended them to an hoſpitable reception. The original of this cuſtom ſeems to have been taken from the heathens, who had their teſſeræ hoſpitalitatis, which from one friend to another, help'd them that brought them to kind entertainment, and Tertullian continues the phraſe conteſſeratio hoſpitalitatis. Many mentions of this cuſtom we find amongſt ancient writing. In Syneſius τῇ φιλίᾳ τῇ Cῦ τὸν Θαυμάσιον Cωίστημι, I commend Thaumaſius to your friendſhip, &c. And in Phavorinus, Σωίστημι τῇ φιλίᾳ καὶ τῇ ἀγαθότητι τῇ Cῆ τὸν Λαυρέντιον, ὃν πολλοῦ μοι μαθητὴν ὄντα, I commend to your friendſhip and kindneſs Laurentius, who of a long time hath been my ſcholar. And again Cωίστησί τις τινὰ τινὶ, μαρτυρῶν αὐτῷ βέλτιον, one commends a man to another, when he gives a good teſtimony of him. This was done among Chriſtians, by teſtifying the piety and orthodoxalneſs of any, and the agreement with them from whom they come in the ſame faith. And therefore when Fortunius a Biſhop of the Donatiſts affirmed and boaſted that their Church was the Catholick Church, S. Auſtin Ep. 163. ad Eleuſium, convinceth him by asking him, whether a Donatiſt could by his Literæ formatæ, or communicatoriæ, gain a man entertainment, or reception in any Church that he would name to him, being confident he could not do it. Thus ſaith Nazianzen of Julian * ſplitiſſ. a. that he imitated many of the Chriſtian rites, † εἰς τὰς δεομένους φιλανθρωπίαν, all humanity, charity to them that wanted, τὴν τε ἄλλην καὶ † ἐν τοῖς ἐπιστολιμαίοις Cωβήμασιν, οἷς ἡμεῖς ἐξ ἴσου μὲν τοῦτο τὰς χρείας ἐφοδιάζομεν, that way of it eſpecially which conſiſted in ſending letters and tokens, with which (ſaith Nazianzen) we uſe to furniſh them that are in want from one nation to another. The ſame, ſaith Zozomen, l. 5. c. 5. and Nicephorus Calliſtus, l. 10. c. 21. almoſt in the ſame words, Οὐχ ἥκιστα ζηλῶσαι λέγω τὰ συνήθη αὐτῷ ἐπιστολικῶν χαρμάτων, οἷς ἔθος ἀμοιβαδὸν τοὺς ξένους ὁποιδήποτε διϊόντας, καὶ παρ' οἷς ἂν ἀφίκωνται πάντως καταγίνεσθαι, καὶ θεραπείας ἀξιοῦσθαι, οἰόμενοι γνωρίμους καὶ φιλτάτους διὰ † τῆς συμβόλου μαρτυρίας, He eſpecially imitated the tokens (or teſſeræ) of the Biſhops letters, by which they are wont mutually to commend thoſe that travel any whither, and by that teſtimony obtain for them all friendly entertainment, as for their moſt familiar acquaintance. The ſame we may find in Lucian, in his Peregrinus. By which alſo will appear the ancient notion of the κοινωνικὰ γράμματα, not to ſignifie (as Baronius ad an. 314. and out of him Binius, t. 1. concil. p. 271. and Ferrarius De antiq. Eccleſ. Epiſt. genere, l. 1. p. 45. would have them) Epiſtles by which men were teſtified to be in communion with the Church of Rome, (which they never did, but when they were written by the Biſhop of that Church, and neither then any more than thoſe that were written by the Biſhop of any other particular Church ſignified that man's agreement in faith and communion with that particular Church) but only Letters commendatory from one place or Church to another, to recommend a perſon that ſhould travel thither, and ſo obtain for him an hoſpitable reception, lodging, diet, and all things elſe that are contained in Zozomen under the word θεραπεία proviſion, or neceſſaries, that they wanted; and this according to the notion of κοινωνέω formerly mention'd (ſee note on Act. 2. c.) for liberality and beneficence; though there is no queſtion but among other degrees of charitable reception, that of admitting them to their Churches and Sacraments was included alſo, proportionably to the forms of their teſtimonies, which, ſaith Mat. Blaſtares, were wont to mention the uprightneſs of the perſons faith, unreprovableneſs of his life, and his degree in the Church, if he had any. See Fuſtell. in cod. Can. Eccl. Un. p. 132.

b. Τέλος τῆς καταργουμένης

V. 13. End of that which is aboliſhed] If the reading be τέλος, then muſt Chriſt (which is the end of the law) that is, the Chriſtian precepts and promiſes typified by the Moſaical rites and ſhadows, be meant by it; but if the reading be πρόσωπον, then will the ἀντιπόδοσις, or ſecond part of the reſemblance, be more perfectly anſwerable to the former, thus Moſes put a vail over his own face, to ſignifie that the Iſraelites would not ſee the face (that is, diſcern clearly the moſt eminent and principal part) of the law, which is now aboliſhed, that is, of the Ceremonial law. For certainly the principal part of that was the inward purity and piety ſignified and adumbrated by thoſe ceremonies, and now taught by Chriſt more diſtinctly and plainly, and ſo that covering taken away, v. 14. only the Jews will not ſee it, but as yet their underſtandings are blinded, in the beginning of the verſe.

CHAP. IV.

Paraphraſe.

1. Herefore ſeeing we have this miniſtery, as we have received mercy, we * ſaint not;] 1. Being therefore intruſted by God with ſo honourable a charge, the preaching of this divine and glorious Goſpel of Chriſt, c. 3. 4, and 18. we have been diligent in attendance on our work;

* grow not fluggiſh, or cowardly, ἐκκακοῦμεν

2. But have renounced the hidden things of † diſhoneſty, nor walking in craftineſs, nor handling the word of God deceitfully, but by manifeſtation of the truth, commending our ſelves to every mans conſcience in the ſight of God.] 2. And have been far from uſing any of thoſe vile arts, which † ſhame might make us diſguiſe and conceal, but dealt ſimply and plainly, mixing nothing of our own with the word of Chriſt, but contenting our ſelves with ſo much of the approbation of men, as the making known the truth of God unto men ſincerely and uprightly will help us to.

3. But if our Goſpel be hid, it is hid * to them that are loſt,] 3. Which we have done ſo plainly, that if the Goſpel of Chriſt preached by us be yet obſcure, it is ſo only among obdurate obſtinate unbelievers, v. 4. ſee c. 2. 15.

* in ἐν

4. † In whom the God of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, * left the light of the glorious Goſpel of Chriſt, who is the image of God, ſhould ſhine unto them.] 4. Such as have their eyes ſo blinded by Satan, or their own worldly advantages, that the Goſpel of Chriſt moſt powerfully and plainly revealed by him, and ſhining forth in our preaching, ſince his departure from the earth, (and this moſt certainly the revelation of the immutable will of God, whom Chriſt repreſents to us, not as an ordinary picture doth the body, but as a real ſubſtantial image of him) is not permitted to have any impreſſion or influence on their hearts, they will not ſee, be it never ſo illuſtriouſly viſible.

* ſo that the illumination of the Goſpel of the Glory of Chriſt hath not ſhin'd to them, εἰς τὸ μὴ αὐγάσαι αὐτοὺς ὁ φωτισμὸς τοῦ εὐαγγελίου τῆς δόξης τοῦ Χριστοῦ

5. For we preach not our ſelves, but Chriſt Jeſus the Lord, and our ſelves your ſervants for Jeſus ſake.] 5. Certainly nothing but this can obſtruct mens minds againſt the Goſpel, as it is delivered by us, being preached ſo, as not to deſign any thing of honour to our ſelves, but only unto Chriſt, and for our ſelves, only to offer men our ſervice, to do them all the humbleſt offices of Chriſtian charity imaginable.

6. For God, who commanded the light to ſhine out of darkneſs, hath ſhined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God, in the * face of Jeſus Chriſt.] 6. For it is not any worldly conſideration that hath put us upon this employment, but that God that by his word created the light, when there was nothing but darkneſs in the world, hath in a like wonderful manner imparted this light to us, in ſending down his own Son to ſhine in our hearts, to reveal his will unto us, and this on purpoſe that we might reveal it to others, inſtruct them in the knowledge of thoſe glorious myſteries, (ſee note on 1 Pet. 1. c.) ſo illuſtrious in themſelves and advantageous to us, which God hath revealed to us by Chriſt.

7. But

b. 7. But we that are intruſted with this great treaſure of the Goſpel, are not ſo fine and pretious our ſelves, we carry bodies about us ſubject to all manner of oppoſition, and preſſures, and afflictions, and this on purpoſe deſigned by God alſo, that all the good ſucceſs we have in our Apoſtleſhip may be imputed to Chriſt, and not to us, as it would be, if we came with any ſecular power or grandure to plant the Goſpel

7. But we have this treaſure in [b] earthen † veſſels, that the excellency of the power may be of God, and not of us]

c. 8, 9. The way which God rather ſaw fit to chuſe, was to permit us to wreſtle with all difficulties, and then to ſuſtain us by his own inviſible aſſiſtance, not by any ſecular humane means, and carry us through all, and give good ſucceſs to our preaching by theſe very means:

8. We are * [c] troubled on every ſide, yet † not diſtreſſed; we are perplexed, but not in diſpare;

9. * Perſecuted, but not forſaken; caſt down, but not deſtroyed:]

10. Carrying about us the croſs and ſufferings of Chriſt, daily ſuffering after him, that ſo the ſaving effects of his reſurrection, in turning men from their evil ways (converting Infidels by our preaching) might through our ſuffering in this imployment be more conſpicuous.

10. Always bearing about in the body the dying of the Lord Jeſus, that the life alſo of Jeſus might be made manifeſt in our body.]

11. For we Apoſtles, that are looked on by ſome with envy, are continually ready to be put to death for the Goſpel, that the vital power of Chriſt in raiſing up ſinners to a new life may, through the dangers by us undergone in preaching the Goſpel, be ſhewed forth among our auditors, that receive the faith from us.

11. For we which live are alway delivered unto death for Jeſus ſake, that the life alſo of Jeſus might be made manifeſt in our mortal fleſh.]

12. And ſo truly we are not any extraordinary gainers by our employment, as to the eye of the world; the death of Chriſt v. 10. is wrought, perfected in us, we fill up his ſufferings, Col. 1. 24. by ſuffering after him, but the reſurrection and vital efficacy of Chriſt, v. 10. and 11. is ſhewed forth, and as it were perfected, in you, by our preaching and begetting faith, and confirming it in you by our afflictions, and by the example of our conſtancy, and of Gods deliverance afforded us, ch. 12. 9.

12. So † then death worketh in us, but life in you.]

† that the death is wrought in us, but the life in you, ὁ μὲν θανατος ἐν ἡμῖν ἐνεργεῖται, ἡ δὲ ζωὴ ἐν ὑμῖν

13. And having the ſame ſpirit of faith which is ſpoken of in that writing of Davids, Pſalm 116. 10. where he ſaith, I believed, and therefore I ſpake, I was ſore afflicted, &c. we do accordingly by afflictions, and pacience and conſtancy therein, confeſs God, and expreſs our faith in him.

13. We having the ſame ſpirit of faith, according as it is written, I believed and therefore have I ſpoken, we alſo believe and therefore ſpeak.]

14. Believing ſtedfaſtly that he that raiſed Chriſt out of the loweſt condition, even from death it ſelf, will make our afflictons a means of raiſing us, and preſenting us glorious in his ſight, together with you, if you do ſo too.

14. Knowing that he which raiſed up the Lord Jeſus, ſhall raiſe up us alſo by Jeſus, and ſhall preſent us with you.]

15. For 'tis for your good that we preach and ſuffer all this, that your faith may be more confirmed, and that ſo the mercy of God extending to more perſons, may, by their bleſſing God for it, abound, and tend more to the glory of God, ch. 1. 11.

15. For all things are for your ſakes, that the * abundant grace might through the thankſgiving of many † redound to the glory of God.]

16. For which cauſe we * faint not, but though our outward man periſh, yet the inward man is renewed day by day.]

* are not ſlothful οὐκ ἐκκακοῦμεν

17. For our tranſitory light ſuffering is ſo accepted by God, that it is alſo ſure to be rewarded by him with a moſt exceeding, eternal, weighty crown of bliſs or glory.

Annotations on Chap. IV.

a. Πρόσωπον Ἰησοῦ

V. 6. Face of Jeſus] This phraſe πρόσωπον Ἰησοῦ the face of Jeſus, and this whole verſe, refers to the ſtory of Moſes, deſiring to ſee the glory of God, Exod. 33. For there God in his own glorious nature could not be ſeen, v. 20. the luſture was ſo great; but with that ſight that was afforded him, though but of an Angel ſuſtaining the perſon of God, Moſes's face was enlightned, and ſhone, and became glorious, (to which the Apoſtle had before referred, c. 3. 7.) And ſo here the glory of God, that is, the revelation of his moſt divine councels for the ſaving of men under the Goſpel, is by God communicated to Chriſt, and by that means he, as he is the Son of man, and executes this Prophetick office upon earth, is much more ſhining and glorious then Moſes's face was; and then we to whom the Goſpel is now preached, look upon this face of his, though the Iſraelites could not on Moſes, and are illuminated thereby, receive the knowledge of theſe councels of God, whenſoever we look on him.

b. Σκεῦος ὀστράκινον

V. 7. Earthen Veſſels] Σκεῦος ſignifies any of the utenſils about an houſe Mat. 12. 29. Mar. 11. 6. (ſee Note on Mat. 21. b.) a diſh, a cup, &c. Of theſe ſome are teſtacea, made of ſhells of fiſhes, and they are here ὀστράκινα, as 2 Tim. 2. 20. (the only other place where the word is uſed in the New Teſtament) and this agrees very well with the matter in hand, it being ordinary to lay up thoſe things we value in ſhels, or boxes, or cabinets made of ſuch; and thoſe, in reſpect of the brittleneſs, and of the nature of them, (as the ſhells are the outſides of fiſhes) very fit to reſemble our bodies, wherein our ſouls do inhabit. And accordingly the Platoniſts making two bodies of a man, one that which carries the ſoul in it, ὄχημα ψυχῆς, the chariot of the ſoul, the other that which we touch, and ſee, the groſſer carnal part, call that ſecond ὀστράκινον, that which is the ſame to us which the ſhell is to the fiſh, which hath another finer body within it. The word Ὄστρακον teſta ſignifies not only a ſhell (from whence thoſe kinds of fiſhes are called ὀστρακόδερμα, the ſhell to them ſupplying the place of skin, and ſome others διπλόστρακα ſoft-ſhelled, as καρκῖνοι in * Nemeſius) but alſo πηλὸν ὀπτημένον baked earth, and veſſel of the potter, that hath paſſed the fire, and is taken out of the kiln, and ſo Theophylact interprets it here, and ſo it frequently ſignifies in authors. The difference of ſuch σκεῦη ὀστράκινα earthen ware, from σκεῦη κεραμέως the potters veſſels, or πήλινα veſſels of clay, before they are burnt, whilſt they remain in the potters hand in moulding, is ſet down exactly by * St. Chryſoſtome in his κατηχ. φωτ. πρὸς τοὺς μελλ. φωτίζ. that the former if they be broken, ὡς λάβοι διορθωσιν, are not capable of recovery, διὰ τὴν ἐκ τοῦ πυρὸς ἐγγινομένην αὐτοῖς ἀπὸ παντὸς ἀναισθησίαν, becauſe of the hardneſs once gotten by the fire, whereas the other, that are but of clay unbaked, and unhardened, if they be ſpoiled once, ῥᾳδίως πρὸς τὸ ἀγαθὸν ἐπανέλθῃ χῆμα, they may eaſily by the skill of the potter be returned to ſome ſecond form. Whence, ſaith he, it is that Jer. 19. 1. when the prophet was to deſcribe an irreparable deſtruction, he is bid to figure it by σκεῦος ὀστράκινον, ſuch a veſſel, or bottle of earth, broken to pieces, v. 10. But when he would put them in ſome hope of reſtauration, then God ſhews σκεῦος πήλινον ἐν ταῖς χερσὶ κεραμέως γινόμενον διαπίπτον, an earthen veſſel fallen, when it is in the hands of the artificer, c. 18. 2, 3. which he takes up, and moulds anew, the matter being yet capable of it. And this ſence and notion of ὀστράκινον alſo the place will bear, and therefore I have now ſet them both down, and lift the Reader to chuſe which he ſhall think moſt probable.

V. 8. Troubled on every ſide——] Theſe two verſes in every word refer to the antient heathen cuſtoms in the agones, of which ſomewhat hath been ſaid, Note on 1 Cor. 9. 24. St. Chryſoſtome explains them ſo in common (ἀλγῶμεν γὰρ ὑποτυχόντος, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἔστιν, ὅτι ἀπαυθένησεν ἢ πεπτωκώς, χείμωνα, εἰς γυμνασίαν, ἢ εἰς ἵτταν, We are cold, &c. as Horace of the racer, ſudavit & alſit, he ſweats and friezes,) but he applies them not ſeverally to the particular exerciſes. This, I ſuppoſe, may fitly be done, by accommodating three of the pairs to the cuſtoms of Wreſtling; one to that of Running in the race, θλίβεσθαι belongs clearly to πάλη, wreſtling, ſo ſaith Ariſtotle Rhet. l. 1. c. 5. (ſee the anonymous Scholiaſt on that place) ὁ μὲν δυνάμενος θλίβειν καὶ κατέχειν, παλαιστικὸς, He that can gripe his adverſary, and take him up, is good at wreſtling, there being two dexterities in that exerciſe, comprimere antagoniſtam, & ſubſternere, to gripe, and throw down, which Heſychius alſo calls ὠθεῖν and κρατεῖν· the firſt of theſe is here mentioned, and expreſs'd by θλίβεσθαι preſſure, to which is here oppoſed, as in a higher degree, στενοχωρεῖσθαι, ad anguſtias redigi, to be brought to deſtreſs, as when we can neither get out of his hands, nor make any reſiſtance againſt him, ſo Iſa. 28. 20. στενοχωρούμενοι ἐν δυνάμεσι μάχεσθαι, being brought to ſuch extremities we can fight no longer. So again ἀπορεῖσθαι perplexity, is fit for the wreſtler, who being ſhrewdly put to it, knows not what to do; ſo ſaith Theophylact, though we fall εἰς ἀμηχανίας to ſuch a condition that we know not what to do; ſo in Heſychius, Ἀπορεῦντες, ἀμηχανοῦντες, they that are not able to do, or attempt, any thing, yet are not ἐξαπορούμενοι, miſcarry not finally, ὀρθοὶ ἱστάμενοι, ſtand after all upright, οὐκ ὑπομένοντες, καὶ ὑπτιάζοντες, deſpare not, nor are they overcome, but find an happy iſſue out of all, νικῶντες, conquerors at laſt, ſaith Theophylact. Then for διωκόμενοι purſued, that is peculiar to δρόμος racing, as hath been formerly ſaid (Note on 1 Cor. 9. 25.) when one being foremoſt in the race, others purſue, and get up cloſe after him, being ready to outſtrip, or get before him, but do not ſo: and that is the meaning of οὐκ ἐγκαταλειπόμενοι, not outſtrip'd, or caſt behind, the word ἐγκαταλείπειν ſignifying to be out-gone, relinqui literally in Horace's notion,

——mihi turpe relinqui eſt. Vi. Æn.

So in Plutarch, τοὺς ἀπολειφθέντας καὶ στεφανοῦσι, they do not crown them that are lag, or left behind, and 1 Cor. 9. all run, but one receives the prize. So Euſtathius on Homer, Il. Φ'. Τὸν γὰρ ἁπλῶς ὑπτιασθέντα λελεῖφθαι φαμὲν, He that is overcome we ſay is left; and in Heſychius, Λεῖπτο, ἥλω ἀπεπυγχάνετο, corruptly for Λειπετο (that is, ἐλείπετο) ἄθλα ἀπεπυγχάνετο to be left, is to miſs the reward: and therefore Jam. 1. 4. thoſe that are perfect and conſummate crowned, or fit to receive the crown, are ſaid to be ἐν μηδενὶ λειπόμενοι, left behind in nothing, victorious ſtill. 'Tis true indeed that the vulgar notion of forſaken is applicable to the word among good authors. As in Ariſtotle, Rhet. l. 1. c. 10. τοὺς συγκινδυνεύοντας ἐγκαταλιμπάνειν διὰ τὸν φόβον, cowards for fear forſake, deſert thoſe that are in the ſame danger with them. But the contexture, and conſort of ſo many other agoniſtical words, and the examples of this uſe of it joined thereto, do rather incline it to the former. Then for καταβαλλόμενοι, that belongs again to πάλη, wreſtling, where he that throws the other firſt is conqueror; whereupon Heſychius, Καταβαλεῖ, νικήσῃ, ῥίψει, to caſt down, is to overcome, to throw. The ſame is expreſs'd by ὑποσκελίζειν, σφηρίζειν, ſupplanting, tripping up the heels, whence is that ſcholion of Theophylact, καταβαλλόμενοι φησὶ τῶν ἀνταγωνιζομένων, thrown by them that wreſtle with us; and then the οὐκ ἀπολλύμενοι, not deſtroyed, may either ſignifie literally ſo, not killed, that is, lying upon the ground, but not like carcaſſes there, or elſe riſing up again after the fall, and not, as the Elephant, irrecoverably down. All which belongs to the afflictions that befel the Apoſtles, their hardſhip in theſe ἀγῶνες and combats of theirs.

V. 17. Weight of glory] The Hebrew כבד ſignifies primarily two things, weight, and plenty, and from thence two things more, either glory or riches. From hence it comes, that βαρὺ is in the Greek of the Old Teſtament taken for multitude, or greatneſs, that is applied to a train, or hoſt, 1 Kin. 10. 2. and 2 Kin. 6. 14. and 18. 17. and 2 Chron. 9. 1. δύναμις βαρεῖα, a great numerous troop of attendants, or army, and 1 Mac. 1. 17. ὄχλος βαρὺς a very great multitude, and 3. Mac. συμπόσιον βαρύ, a great magnificent feaſt. Accordingly βάρος δόξης here, will be, riches, plenty, and abundance of glory, the word βάρος being the rather here uſed in oppoſition to the lightneſs of the afflictions precedent, but not to denote the heavineſs but abundance, or riches of this, as Gen. 13. 2. Abraham is ſaid to be כבד heavy, that is, plentiful, in cattle &c. the LXXII. read πλούσιος rich, and ſo c. 1. כביד ſignifies riches.

Paraphraſe. CHAP. V.

1. For of this we are confident, that if our bodies wherein we dwell as in a moveable tent, or tabernacle, be deſtroyed by the preſent preſſures that lie upon us, if our dangers ſhould end in death it ſelf, this were a matter of no terror to us, having ſo much a better abiding place provided for us by God, ſo much an happier condition then any this world is capable of, and out of reach of all ſublunary dangers, ſure to be continued to us for ever.

1. For we know that if our earthly houſe of this tabernacle were deſſolved, we have a building of God, an houſe not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.]

2. For while we are in this inferiour ſtate of bodies, we are for ever unſatisfied, , and impatient, deſiring to have thoſe ſpiritual bodies, 1 Cor. 15. 44. that purer ſtate of bliſs and immortality, as an upper garment to adorn and hide the blemiſhes and imperfections, and keep off the cold and preſſures that this body of ours is ſubject to.

2. For in this we groan earneſtly, deſiring to be * clothed upon with our houſe, which is from heaven.]

3. This I ſay upon ſuppoſition that we ſhould never die, that we were in the number of thoſe mentioned 1. Cor. 15. 53. and 1 Theſſ. 4. 15, 17. that are found alive at the laſt trump, at the day of doom, as ſome ſhall certainly be, and yet even thoſe very hartily glad to be changed, to have theſe natural bodies ſpiritualized.

3. If ſo be † that being clothed we ſhall not be found naked.]

4. For while we are in theſe bodies of clay, we are ſubject to weights and preſſures, and thoſe give us a great impatience and wearineſs, and this hath a very obſervable meaning in it; for 'tis certain we do not deſire to put off theſe bodies, to part with them finally, how weary ſoever we are: This therefore is the ſignification of it, that there is another ſort of bodies, and another ſort of life, infinitely more deſirable then theſe which we now enjoy, an eternal, immutable life of theſe our bodies, in ſtead of that mortal (ſubject to afflictions, and death it ſelf) which we now live, and that we are naturally a deſiring, a panting, a groaning after

5. And the ſame God that hath created and framed us after this manner, with bodies ſubject to ſuch preſſures, that we perpetually deſire to change them for impaſſible, hath by Chriſt promiſed us, that he will make this proviſion for us, raiſe us to immortal lives; and as a pledge and pawn to aſſure us that he will perform this promiſe, he hath by the preaching of the Goſpel, ſent to cleanſe and purify us here in ſome meaſure, which is a kind of ſpiritualizing of our bodies, and a pawn and earneſt of our future immortality, to which that Spirit ſhall raiſe us which raiſed Chriſt from the dead.

5. Now he that hath * wrought us for † the ſelf-ſame thing, is God, who alſo hath given unto us the earneſt of the Spirit.]

6. By theſe conſiderations therefore being enabled to look cheerfully on death, as that which only brings us home to God, from which theſe earthy bodies keep us ſtrangers.

6. Therefore we are always confident, knowing that whilſt we are at home in the body, we are abſent from the Lord.]

7. (And which gives us that really to be enjoyed, which we have here in this life only by faith.)

7. (For we walk by faith, not by ſight.)]

8. We make choice rather, and are infinitely better pleaſed, to leave this body behind us here, to go out, to die, that by this means we may come to our home, our bliſs in heaven; and ſo the fear or expectation of death is far from being painful to us.

8. We are confident, I ſay, and willing rather to * be abſent from the body, and to † preſent with the Lord.]

9. All our ambition and deſign being but this, that whether we continue in this earthy body of ours, or go out of it, whether living or dying, we may be acceptable to God.

9. Wherefore * we labour that, whether † preſent or abſent, we may be accepted of him.]

* we are ambitious φιλοτιμέμεθα

10. For there will certainly come a day, when every perſon that ever lived ſhall be judged by God, ſet as it were in an eminent conſpicuous place, as men that are impleaded are wont to be, and every action of his life taken into conſideration, that accordingly every man may be puniſh'd, or rewarded, body and ſoul together, according to his actions, of what ſort ſoever they be, whether good or bad, which in his life-time he hath committed in his body and ſoul together.

10. For we muſt all * appear before the Judgment ſeat of Chriſt, that every one may [a] receive the † things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or evil.]

† things by the body, or the proper things of the body. τὰ διὰ τοῦ σώματος

11. Conſidering therefore the dreadfulneſs of this appearance of God, as on one ſide we labour to perſwade men to embrace the truth, and live as thoſe that are thus to be judged, ſo we deſire to approve our ſelves to God, as our judge alſo, who, I am confident, doth approve of our ſincerity herein, and I hope you are as well ſatisfied alſo of our uprightneſs toward you.

11. Knowing therefore the terror of the Lord, we [b] perſwade men; but we are manifeſt unto God, and, I truſt alſo, are made manifeſt in your conſciences.]

12. What I ſay, is not as if I wanted again commending to you, but that I may arm you againſt thoſe falſe Apoſtles that come among you, and glory much of outward things, but know in their conſciences that they have little cauſe to do ſo, againſt whom you may fortifie your ſelves, and make anſwer to them by glorying of my patience, and perſeverance, and performances in the Goſpel, and to this end only it is, that I ſay this unto you.

12. For we commend not our ſelves again unto you, but give you occaſion to glory on our behalf, that you may have ſomewhat to anſwer them which glory in appearance, and not in heart.]

13. And what we do herein, is meant for good, my ſpeaking thus largely of my ſelf is for the glory of God, whoſe grace it is that enables me to do any thing, and any more moderate language or actions are deſigned by me to your advantage alſo: Or both together, whether one or other, they are meant to the giory of God, and your good.

13. For whether we be * beſides our ſelves, it is to God: or whether we be ſober, it is for your cauſe.]

* tranſported (ſee note on Mar. the 3. c)

14, 15. For our love to Chriſt, founded on his to us, hath us in its power, to make us do whatſoever he will have us, making this argument from this certain acknowledged truth of Chriſts having died for all men, that then certainly all men are ſinners, laps'd in a loſt eſtate, and ſo hopeleſs, unleſs they uſe ſome means to get out of that eſtate; which that he might help us to do, was the deſign of Chriſts dying for all, that we might (having received by his death grace to live a new life) live no longer after our own luſts and deſires, but in obedience to his commands that died and roſe again to that end, (to bleſs us in turning every man, &c. Act. 3. 26.)

14. For the love of Chriſt conſtraineth us, † becauſe we thus judge, that if one died for all, then were all dead:

15. And * that he died for all, that they which live, ſhould not henceforth live unto themſelves, but unto him which died for them, and roſe again.]

* he died ἀπέθανεν

16. Wherefore now we eſteem or value no man according to the outer advantages of this world, wiſdom, riches, learning, &c. which are wont to ſet men out in the eyes of the world; and although it were true that we had familiarly convers'd with Chriſt here, as ſome among you ſay they have, (they that ſay I am of Chriſt 1 Cor. 1. 12.) and prefer themſelves before others for that, and expect their doctrine ſhould be received before the doctrine of others, yet now we know that he is gone from this earth, and no man can now pretend to know Chriſts will (otherwiſe then as it was revealed at his being here) above, or any more then another, upon this bare ſcore, becauſe he once convers'd familiarly with Chriſt here: All that now we have to do with Chriſt, is to look on him, not under any ſuch notion, as a Chriſt talking familiarly with us on earth, but as an heavenly King, offering and deſigning us a ſpiritual kingdom upon our obedience and fidelity, not any temporal advantage, or matter of boaſting, upon our acquaintance with him here.

16. Wherefore henceforth know we no man after the fleſh: yea though we † have known Chriſt after the fleſh, yet now * henceforth know we him no more.]

† had known ἐγνώκαμεν

* we know him ſo no longer οὐκέτι γινώσκομεν

17. If any man profeſs to have any peculiar claim to Chriſt, this muſt be the way of judging of the ſincerity of his pretentions, if he think himſelf obliged to live a new life. The ſtate of the Goſpel is a change of every thing from what it was before, more grace, promiſe of pardon on repentance, and ſinſerity for the future, more explicite promiſes of heaven, and precepts of greater perfection: and what is all this, but an obligation, in all reaſon, to a new and a Chriſtian life?

17. Therefore if any man be in Chriſt, he is a new creature: old things are paſt away, behold all things are become new.]

18. Now all theſe things depend on God, as the author of them, who hath uſed this means of making up that breach between him and us, and hath given us power and commiſſion to give men reconciliation, peace, or pardon, or abſolution, upon renewing of their lives.

18. * And all things are of God, who hath reconciled us to himſelf by Jeſus Chriſt, and hath given to us the † miniſtery of reconſiliation,]

* but all theſe things τὰ δὲ πάντα

19. And the tenure of our commiſſion runs thus, That God hath uſed Chriſt as a means to make peace between him and the greater and worſer part of the world, the Gentiles at this time, as well as the Jews, (not by pardoning their ſins while they remain in them, but by admitting them to repentance, by not ſhutting up ways of mercy, and moreover calling them, uſing admirable methods of mercy in revealing himſelf to them) and hath put in our hands the word of reconciliation, the preaching of this Goſpel, and making known the means of grace, and adviſing and perſwading all men to make uſe of it.

19. To wit, that God was in Chriſt, reconciling the world unto himſelf, not imputing their treſpaſſes unto them, and hath * committed to us the word of reconciliation.]

* placed or depoſited in us, Θέμενος ἐν ἡμῖν

20. This therefore is the nature of our preſent imployment, to be (as our title of Apoſtles imports) proxies and negotiators of Chriſt, we ſupplying the place of Chriſt on earth, and ſo treating with men, after the manner that Chriſt did when he was here, calling ſinners to repentance, and that with all the affectionate importunity imaginable, as ſent from God on purpoſe to intreat men to it: and accordingly now we do, in Chriſts ſtead, we beſeech you to reform your lives, and make your ſelves capable of the return of Gods favour to you, (ſee note on Mat. 5. m.)

20. Now then we [c] are Ambaſſadors for Chriſt, as though God did beſeech you by us; we pray you in Chriſts ſtead, be ye reconciled to God.]

21. For Chriſt, an innocent, pure, ſinleſs perſon, hath God ſent to be a ſacrifice for our ſins, that we might imitate his purity, and thereby be, through the benefits of his death, accepted and juſtified by God.

21. For he hath made him to be [d] ſin for us, who knew no ſin, that we might be made the righteouſneſs of God in him.]

Annotations on Chap. V.

a. Κομίζεσθαι τὰ διὰ σώματος

V. 10. Receive the things done in his body] Κομίζεσθαι ſignifies to receive, by way of reward, a crown, or prize, to carry it away, as ἁρπάζειν and λαμβάνειν to ſnatch, and take off the crown ſtanding over the goal. Then τὰ διὰ σώματος the things by the body, muſt be relative, and anſwerable to πρὸς ἃ ἔπραξεν that follows, τὰ without mentioning what, only πρὸς ἃ ἔπραξεν, to what he hath done, noting this agreement and proportion betwixt that which he receives, and what he hath done, which is the clear ſence of thoſe other places, wherein God is ſaid to render to every man according to his works. Some MSS. and printed copies, the Complutenſe Edition, read in ſtead of τὰ διὰ τῷ σώματος, with the change of one letter, τὰ ἴδια τῷ σώματος, the proper, or peculiar, things of his body, and that will be very agreeable alſo, Every man ſhall receive that which is proper to him; either as the body is the ſhop of action, wherein, and whereby, as by the inſtrument, every thing is done, or as τὸ σῶμα ſignifies himſelf, by an Hebraiſm formerly mentioned, according to, or by way of, retribution to what he hath done, &c

b. Πείθειν ἀνθρώπους

V. 11. Perſwade men] What πείθειν to perſwade, and peculiarly πείθειν ἀνθρώπους to perſwade men, ſignifies in theſe books, will be ſet down at large, Note on Gal. 1. 6. (ſee alſo Note on 1 Joh. 3. e.) viz. to pacifie, to propitiate,

to gain in upon men, and obtain their approbation either of the cause they plead, or of themselves, whom they desire to approve to them. And though it be a very obvious and commodious sense of these words, knowing the terrors of the Lord we persuade men, that the consideration of the judgment to come is a very proper, forcible swasorie to amendment of life, &c. yet the circumstances of the Context rather incline it to the other notion of πείθειν, knowing the judgment to come to be so exact, that it descends to every action that is done, whether good or bad, we Apostles, who have a weighty task of duty lying on us to win souls to Christ, are obliged to pursue this work, to gain in upon men as much as we can, to approve our selves to them in all things; that they may not be scandalized by any thing done by us, but chearfully led on with a good opinion of our preaching and our persons, this being very useful toward the Apostolical design of working good upon men. Agreeably to which it follows in this same verse, we are made manifest to God, and I hope also to be manifested in, or to, your consciences: Where to be manifested to their, or in their, consciences, is all one with this notion of persuading them, that is, approving himself to them. And to this matter that which follows, v. 12. pertains also, and therefore Theophylact interprets, πείθομεν ἀνθρώπους, we persuade men, by πάντα πράττομεν ὥστε μὴ σκανδαλίζειν τοὺς ἀνθρώπους, we do all things that we may not scandalize men; and again by σκάνδαλα διορθούμεθα, we cure, or provide against, scandals, such as may hinder men in their proficiency in the Gospel.

V. 20. Are Ambassadors] The Hebrew שלוחים Apostles, signifies Legates, Nuntios also, so as in the ancient formulæ, Missi signifies Embassadours; see Marculphi form. and Bignonius's notes on lib. 1. c. 40. And so here πρεσβεύομεν is the Apostolical office, and that from God to men, offering pardon on his part, and requiring on their part reformation for the future. So as in Philostratus de vita Apoll. l. 4. c. 5. 'tis said that he was sent of an embassy from Hercules to the Thessali, ὁ δὲ τοῦς τῆς πρεσβείας ἦν, μὴ ἀπολέσθαι αὐτούς, &c. the sum of the embassy, saith he, was, that they would not be destroyed, but that having omitted sacrifice, they should now perform them again.

V. 21. Sin for us] What is meant here by the word ἁμαρτία sin will best appear by the notion of it in the Old Testament sometimes, and by the opposition to δικαιοσύνη righteousness here. In the Old Testament 'tis taken for a sacrifice for sin, Lev. 4. 3, 29. and 5. 6. and Psal. 40. 7. and so piaculum in Latin is both a sin and a sacrifice of expiation, or the person that is so sanctified. And there is nothing more ordinary in the Septuagint, then for ἁμαρτία to signifie a sacrifice for sin, and so in the Chaldee paraphrase also, Exod. 29. 14. where the Hebrew reads sin, they read, a sacrifice for sin: for indeed the Hebrew חטאת signifies primarily two things, sin and legal uncleanness, and secondarily two things more, a sacrifice of propitiation for sin, and of purification for uncleanness; and consequently being rendred sometimes, ἁμαρτία, both in the notion of sin, and also of uncleanness, Lev. 12. 6. Num. 6. 2. sometimes ἱλασμὸς and ἐξιλασμὸς propitiation, Ezek. 44. 27. 45. 19. and sometimes ἅγνισμα purifying, Num. 19. 19. ἁγνισμὸς purification, Num. 8. 7. from hence comes, that this one Greek word ἁμαρτία, as if it were of the same latitude with the Hebrew חטאת, is made use of to signifie all these severals. For that of sin I need not instance: for that of legal uncleanness, see Num. 6. 2. ἥμαρτε περὶ ψυχῆς, he was unclean by the touch of a dead body. For that of sacrifice of expiation, among many others, see Lev. 4. 25. the blood of the ἁμαρτία, sin, that is, sin-offering: And in the last for purification, either of a leaper, or a woman after child-birth, or after the touching of a dead body, the word generally used is περὶ ἁμαρτίας, for sin: so in the New Testament Rom. 8. 3. περὶ ἁμαρτίας, for sin, is the sacrifice of propitiation; and so Heb. 10. 6. and 13. 11. and so here ἁμαρτία sin, without περὶ, most distinctly. Then for the opposition wherein ἁμαρτία sin is here set to δικαιοσύνη righteousness, Christ made ἁμαρτία sin, that we might be made δικαιοσύνη righteousness, that is an argument, that as our being δικαιοσύνη righteousness, signifies our being sanctified first, and then accepted by God, justified; so his being ἁμαρτία signifies his being condemned, that is, consecrated as a sacrafice is wont to be devoted for the sins of the people.

CHAP. VI.

Paraphrase.

1. WE then * as workers together with him, beseech you also, that ye receive not the grace of God in vain:]

1. And we whose office it is to labour for that for which Christ hath laid down his life, c. 5. 21. do exhort you not to frustrate all these gracious methods of God, not to permit the Gospel (see note Heb. 13. d.) to be cast away upon you.

2. (For he saith, I have heard thee in a time accepted, and in the day of † salvation have I succoured thee: behold now is the accepted time, behold now is the day of salvation.)]

2. For the Prophet saith in the person of God, Isa. 49. 8. In a season which I had chosen, I have hearkened to thee, and in the fittest time for deliverance to come, I have interposed my help. It seems God hath his times and seasons to give deliverances, and such is this wherein I now speak, a point of time wherein God hath resolved to deliver all his persevering, faithful servants out of their persecutions. And this in all reason ought to be laid hold of by us, to escape out of the sins of the world, and so out of the wrath that belongs to them that remain therein.

3. Giving no * offence in any thing, that the ministry be not blamed.]

3. And one especial part of our labour and care is, to abstain strictly from all things that may avert any man from the faith, endeavouring to approve our selves to all, that all men may look on our behaviour in the Gospel with reverence, and not with censure, and so be attracted to Christian life, not deterred by us.

4. But in all things approving our selves as the ministers of God, in much patience, in affliction, in necessities, in distresses,]

4. Approving our fidelity in the discharge of our office, by all proper means; first by the constant, patient enduring of all sort of afflictions, viz. pressures, wants, exigencies,

5. Scourgings, imprisonments, seditions, by pains taking, denying our selves our ordinary sleep and food,

6. By continence, by the study of the divine Law in the more secret sense (see note on 2 Pet. 1. c.) by long-suffering, by bounty, by the extraordinary gifts of the Spirit, (prophesying, languages, &c.) by sincere charity, and zeal to the good of souls,

7. By the word of truth, by the power of God, by the armour of righteousness, † on the right hand, and on the left,]

7. By preaching the pure Gospel of Christ, by the power of God in doing miracles, &c. by weapons evangelical of all sorts for the temptations of a prosperous and an adverse condition, the spears in time of prosperity to repel the temptations of the world, resolution against all the assaults of carnality, and the shield in order to dangers, and approach of evil, patience, constancy and perseverance, to defend us from them;

8. By honour and dishonour, by evil report and good report, as deceivers, and yet true;]

8. Through the various fates of being contumeliously used by some, as well as reverently by others; vilified, as well as commended; counted as deceivers, when yet we are most faithful dispensers of the truth of God;

9. As unknown, and yet * well known; as dying, and behold we live; as chastned, and not killed;]

9. Esteemed and look'd on by some as if they knew us not, by others own'd and valued; some judging us as lost men, that by our needless zeal had brought destruction on us, whereas by God's help we are still alive, permitted by God to be afflicted and chasten'd, but not yet to be put to death, though of some of us 'twere verily purposed that we should, 1 Cor. 15. 32. and 2 Cor. 1. 8.

Annotations on Chap. VI.

a. Σωτηρία

V. 2. Salvation] What σωτηρία ſignifies, hath been often ſaid, (ſee Rom. 13. c.) Gods reſcuing his faithful perſevering ſervants out of their diſtreſſes; thus it clearly ſignifies here, proportionably to what it had done in the prophecie here cited, Iſa. 49. 8. In an acceptable time have I heard thee, that is, in a time that God choſe, and ſaw fit for the turn, in the day of ſalvation have I help'd thee, and I will preſerve thee, and give thee for a Covenant to this people, (a kind of rainbow to the drowned world, a ſign of a covenant that God will drown them no more in ſuch afflictions) to eſtabliſh, or raiſe up the earth, to cauſe to inherit the deſolate heritages. And therefore when he ſaith, now is the accepted time, the ſeaſon that God hath pitch'd on, now is the day of ſalvation, the meaning will be, that now the time is approaching, that the true pure Chriſtian profeſſion, thus long perſecuted by the Jews and Gnoſticks ſo ſharply, (by which means it comes to paſs, that many daily fall off to ſave themſelves) ſhall ſuddainly have reſpite by the deſtruction of the enemies every where. And ſo this is a ſeaſonable conſideration, to back the exhortation, v. 1. which the Apoſtle in all his Epiſtles did at that time ſo earneſtly preſs, that they that had received the Goſpel, and gone on ſo long, ſhould not at laſt, by falling off loſe all in the laſt act, (ſee Heb. 10. 36, 37, 38) that is, receive it in vain, loſe all the benefit that attended it. To which purpoſe the Apoſtle proceeds, v. 3. &c. to mention himſelf and his fellow-labourers, as examples to them of thoſe things which were moſt directly contrary to the Gnoſticks: Firſt, Inoffenſive living; ſecondly, Conſtancy and perſeverance under perſecutions: Firſt, blameleſneſs of converſation, v. 3. (For this falling off of the Chriſtians to the Gnoſticks was the greateſt offence and ſcandal imaginable to Chriſtianity, having ſo much impurity, &c. among them) then v. 4, 5. patience and conſtancy in all kind of preſſures, upon which again he ſubjoins, v. 6. ἁγνότης, pureneſs, and γνῶσις, knowledge, μακροθυμία, long-ſuffering, patience, and perſeverance, in oppoſition to the compliances and apoſtaſies of the Gnoſticks; pureneſs, in oppoſition to their luſts and uncleanneſs; knowledge, in oppoſition to their pretended knowledge of the ſecret meanings of Scripture, (juſt as 2 Pet. 1. 5. we find virtue, (or courage) knowledge, ἐγκράτεια continence, and patience put together) and at length πνεῦμα ἅγιον the holy Spirit, in oppoſition to their pretences of being the ſpiritual, 1 Cor. 12. 1. And after many verſes ſpent on that ſubject, he looks on thoſe apoſtate hereticks as ἄπιστοι unfaithful deſertors, v. 14. and conjures them μὴ ἑτεροζυγεῖν not to encline to them, being an heatheniſh diabolical ſort of people, v. 15. with whom being entangled, they muſt abſolutely forſake, and come ont of them as from Sodom, v. 17. which is again noted by the filthineſs of the fleſh and ſpirit, foul luſts and factions, &c. c. 7. 1.

Ἁγνότης Γνῶσις

b. Ἑτεροζυγεῖν

V. 14. Unequally yoked] The word ἑτεροζυγεῖν the Vulgar renders jugum ducere, which ſeems to have given occaſion to Budæus, and H. Stephanus out of him, to affirm that ἑτεροζυγεῖν here in this Apoſtle is uſed for ὁμοζυγεῖν to be in the yoak with another. But this is a miſtake without any grounds, ſave only the equivocalneſs of the word ζυγὸς, which ſignifies a yoak to draw in, as well as a ballance to weigh in. The word ἑτεροζυγεῖν is doubtleſs to be rendred here as in Greek authors it ſignifies, among whom a pair of ſcales or ballance, whoſe beam enclines or propends toward one part, is called ταθμὸς ἑτεροζυγὼς, (in oppoſition to ἰσόζυγος, equally enclined both ways, or whoſe beam ſtands even) trutina alteri jugus, ἑτερόρροπος, non ἰσόρροπος, a ſcale that weighs down one way, ſtands not in the equilibration. So in Phocylides.

Σταθμὸν μὴ κρύειν ἑτεροζύγον, ἀλλ' ἴσον ἔλκειν,

Let the ballance ſtand even, not enclined more to one ſide.

And ſo the ſenſe of the place will be, Be not more propenſe and enclined toward the propoſals of theſe Apoſtatizing Gnoſticks, that hereſie to which your preſent leaders would ſeduce you, then you are to us the Apoſtles of Chriſt, who love you ſo paſſionately: Which is the argument almoſt of the whole Chapter. Thus in Clement's Epiſtle to the ſame Corinthians, we find a phraſe directly parallel to this, ἑτεροκλινεῖς ἀποδρῶντες ἀφ' ἡμῶν, inclining the other way from us, that is, diſaffected to us.

7. And not by his coming only, but by the conſolation wherewith he was comforted † in you, * when he told us your earneſt deſire, your † mourning, your * fervent mind towards me, ſo that I rejoiced the more.]

7. And it was not the bare preſence of Titus that was ſuch ſolace to me, but the news that he brought me, and with which he himſelf was ſo much comforted, to wit, the news of your panting after me, lamenting moſt ſadly the ſins that I had in my former Epiſtle laid to your charge, and your earneſtneſs for me againſt thoſe that traduced me.

8. † For though I made you ſorry with a Letter, I do not repent, though I did repent; for I perceive that * the ſame Epiſtle hath made you ſorry, though it were but * for a ſeaſon.]

1. So that now though thoſe directions of mine in my firſt Epiſtle brought the cenſures of the Church upon ſome of you, (for ſo I find they did, though but for a time, with place for ſpeedy remiſſion, upon reformation) I have no reaſon to be ſorry for what I did, though the truth is, I was a while ſorry for it, and wiſh'd I had not been ſo ſevere.

9. Now, I rejoice, not that ye were † made ſorry, but that ye * ſorrowed to repentance: for ye were made ſorry after a godly manner, that ye might receive damage by us in nothing.]

9. But now that I hear what ſucceſs it hath found among you, what reformation hath been wrought by it, I profeſs my ſelf to rejoice, not that you had the cenſures inflicted on you, but that thoſe cenſures produced that effectual reformation and change, for you were dealt with according to the cuſtom of Evangelical Diſcipline; And ſo 'tis clear enough that you have not been damnified by me in this matter, but much advantaged thereby.

10. For † godly ſorrow worketh repentance to ſalvation * not to be repented of, but the ſorrow of the world worketh death.]

10. For that Diſcipline which Chriſt hath now ordained in his Church (ſee 1 Cor. 5. note c.) is very proper to work ſuch change of mind as ſhall advance to a conſtant perſevering, durable forſaking all known ſins (ſee note on Rom. 10. a.) whereas the puniſhments which are uſual in the world ordinarily end in the taking away of men's lives, or ſomewhat analogical to them in a lower degree.

11. For behold, this ſelf ſame thing † that ye ſorrowed after a godly ſort, * what carefulneſs it wrought in you, yea, † what clearing of your ſelves, yea, what indignation, yea, what fear, yea, what vehement deſire, yea, what zeal, yea, what revenge: In all things you have approved your ſelves to be clear in this matter.]

11. And an evidence thereof I have in you, whoſe having the cenſures of the Church inflicted on ſome of you, hath wrought a vehement care to make all right again, a clearing of the guiltleſs, a diſpleaſure and diſdain againſt the guilty, fear of my diſpleaſure, deſire to give me ſatisfaction, earneſtneſs to reform, yea, to deny our ſelves lawful liberties by way of penance for the former inordinacies. And ſo you have done all that is poſſible toward the acquitting your ſelves in this buſineſs.

12. Wherefore though I wrote unto you, I did it not for his cauſe that had done the wrong, nor for his cauſe that had ſuffered wrong, but that our * care for you in the ſight of God might appear unto you.]

12. When therefore I wrote ſo ſharply to you, the interpretation which you are to make of it is this, that it was not out of any diſpoſition of ſeverity againſt them that had committed thoſe crimes, the fornicators and inceſtuous perſon, 1 Cor. 5. 1. the man that ſued his brother, c. 6. 1. nor out of any partiality of kindneſs to them that had been ſufferers by thoſe crimes, him that was defrauded, 1 Cor. 6. 8. or diſturbed with law-ſuits before the heathen judicatures, v. 1. but only to expreſs my care of you, that by my writing to you in that manner you might diſcern how diligent I am to do you any good.

13. * Therefore we were comforted in your comfort; yea, and exceedingly the more joyed we. for the joy of Titus, becauſe his ſpirit was refreſhed by you all.]

13. And by this means I have received much matter of joy, hearing what good effects the cenſures had wrought upon you; and this joy was very much increaſed, to ſee how Titus was joyed, and inwardly inlivened by you.

14. For if I have boaſted any thing to him of you, I † am not aſhamed; but as we ſpake all things to you in truth, even ſo our boaſting which I made before Titus is found a truth.]

14. For whatever good I told him of you, whatever I have boaſted of your kindneſs to me, you have made it all good; and as I never ſaid any falſe thing to you, ſo whatſoever I ſaid to Titus about you, he hath by experience found to be perfectly true alſo.

15. And his inward affection is more abundant toward you, * whilſt he remembred the obedience of you all, how with fear and trembling you received him.]

15. And he hath huge kindneſs toward you, conſidering what readineſs of obedience you expreſs'd to my directions, and what chearful reception you gave him that was thus ſent from me unto you (ſee note on Phil. 2. c.)

16. I rejoice therefore that † I have confidence in you in all things.]

16. This therefore is matter of all joy to me, that I can thus confidently promiſe my ſelf of your obedience, &c. and never fear to find my ſelf deceived in my confidence.

† coveted — † have a ſuperabundance of joy over — * we were — † griped — * the lowly — † about — * telling — † ſad lamentation — * zeal for or concerning — † Wherefore though I grieved you by that Epiſtle — * that Epiſtle though for a ſhort time hath grieved you. — * were grieved, ſorrowed, bewailed, — * were grieved, ſorrowed, bewailed. — † grief according to God — * not repented of, — † your being grieved according to God — * how great apologizing — * diligence for or toward you might be made manifeſt before, or in the preſence of God —

V. 8. For a ſeaſon] The word καιρὸς ſignifies a ſeaſon, and any part of time indefinitely, but yet both in Greek and Latin is oft uſed for a ſmall, or ſhort ſpace; ſo Philem 15. πρὸς καιρὸν for a ſhort ſpace, and 1 Theſſ. 2. 17. πρὸς ὥραν καιρὸς for the ſpace of an hour; that is, for a ſhort ſpace. And ſo here εἰ καὶ πρὸς καιρὸν, though but for an hour, that is, for a ſhort ſpace; which being joined with ἐλύπησεν ὑμᾶς; hath grieved you, in the notion of that phraſe for inflicting the cenſures (ſee Note on 1 Cor. 5. c.) it denotes the infliction of ſome penance, a ſentence of abſtention for a while, for a ſhort ſpace, (for the bringing forth fruits of repentance,) after which it is to be remitted again. CHAP. VIII.

Paraphraſe.

1. Now I thought good to mention to you the liberal collection for the poor and other Churches in Macedonia,

1. MOreover, brethren, we * do you to wit of the grace of God beſtowed on the Churches of Macedonia,] which hath been made (ſee Act. 2. 47. and 4. 34. note on 1 Pet. 3. d.) at Philippi and Theſſalonica,

2. That being under an heavy affliction themſelves, they were very chearful in their liberality, being themſelves in the depth of poverty; they expreſs'd a very great bounty to others.

2. How that in a great trial of affliction, the abundance of their joy, and their deep poverty, abounded unto the riches of their liberality.]

3. For having no obligation upon them to do ſo, as being poor, v. 2. and not being ſollicited by me, they did voluntarily contribute what they were able, nay I may truly ſay more then they could well ſpare,

3. For to their power (I bear record) yea, and beyond their power, they were willing of themſelves,]

4. Inſtead of being intreated by me, earneſtly beſeeching me to receive their charity and collection (ſee note on Act. 2. e.) and convey it from them for the relief of the poor Chriſtians in Judæa,

4. Praying us with much intreaty, that we would receive the † gift, and take upon us the fellowſhip of miniſtring to the ſaints.]

5. And not only this, but as they had firſt given themſelves up to the ſervice of God, ſo they offered me their ſervice alſo, (God ſo moving them) that is, not only their bounty, but their pains, not only to ſend or give their goods, but to go themſelves, ſome of their company, to Corinth,

5. * And this they did, not as we hoped, but firſt gave their own ſelves to the Lord, and unto us, by the will of God.]

6. On a meſſage from me, to deſire Titus, who had before done ſomewhat among you concerning this contribution to the poor Chriſtians in Judæa, that he would now perfect it among you.

6. † Inſomuch that we deſired Titus, that as he had begun, ſo he would alſo finiſh * in you the ſame grace alſo.]

7. And that as ye have been richly furniſhed with faith in believing your ſelves, all that have been revealed to you, with ability of inſtructing others, with knowledge of myſteries (ſee note on 1 Cor. 1. b. c.) with all care and induſtry to do whatever you could to bring forth fruits of faith, and with extream kindneſs towards me, ſo ye would exceed in this liberality and contribution toward the poor Chriſtians alſo.

7. † Therefore (as ye abound in every thing, in faith, and * utterance, and knowledge, and in all diligence, and in your love to us) † ſee that ye abound in this grace alſo.]

8. This I ſay not by way of precept or command, laying any obligation upon you, ſee v. 10. but only by mentioning how forward others have been, the Macedonians by name, when they were themſelves in diſtreſs, v. 2. to tell you that this will be a trial of your charity, how ſincere it is, by comparing it with others, who were not ſo rich as you, and therefore if yours be as hearty as theirs, 'twill probably expreſs it ſelf on ſuch an opportunity as this.

8. * I ſpeak not by commandment, but by occaſion of the forwardneſs of others, and to prove the ſincerity of your love.]

9. For ye know the † grace of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that * though he was rich, yet for your ſakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich.]

9. For to ſuch performances as theſe ye can want no motives, when ye conſider the example of Chriſt in his dealings toward us, his liberality and bounty, in exhauſting himſelf for us, ſubmitting himſelf to ſo mean a condition, and even to death it ſelf that thereby ye, and all that will make uſe of his bounty, may be ſpiritually enriched,

10. And herein though for the degree of your liberality no precept doth oblige you, Chriſt's command of relieving the poor, leaving to you the liberty to determine the proportion, yet I ſhall give you my opinion, that as you have formerly expreſs'd ſome forwardneſs, not only to do ſomewhat for that preſent, but to reſolve to do more, if you had been, or when you ſhould be able, ſo 'twill not now be for your credit, or the reputation of your bounty, to fall ſhort of that purpoſe.

10. And herein I give my advice: for this is expedient for you † who have begun before, not only to do, but alſo [a] to be forward a year ago.]

11. And therefore now you may do well to perfect what ye then begun, that as then at a diſtance ye were forward to make the reſolution, ſo you may now perform according to your preſent ability.

11. * Now therefore perform the doing of it; that as there was a † readineſs to will, ſo there may be a performance alſo out of that which ye have.]

12. For ſuppoſing a man chearfully to do what he is able, that reſolution of his if it be perform'd, that is, if he do according to his ability, ſhall be well accepted and rewarded by God, and that which he is not able to do, ſhall never be expected of him.

12. For if * there be firſt a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not.]

13, 14. And this collection that I ſpeak of is not ſo deſigned, that other men ſhould be releaſed of their burthen by having it laid on your ſhoulders, that they ſhould be made up by your liberality, and you diſtreſs'd by giving them, but that there may be an equality, you relieving them now in this time of famine in Jewry, out of your plenty, and when you want (ſee Mar. 12. 6.) as they now do, they, when the famine is over, ſhould relieve you again out of their plenty:

13. For I mean not that other men be eaſed, and you burdened.

14. But by an equality, * that now at this time your abundance may be a ſupply for their want, that their abundance alſo may be a ſupply for your want, that there may be equality:]

15. That as it was in the gathering of Manna, no man had the more or the leſs for gathering more or leſs; ſo it might be among fellow-Chriſtians, they that had for the preſent leſs poſſeſſions, ſhould yet by ſupply from others have ſufficient, and they that had greater poſſeſſions, by relieving others, have no more left to them then they had need of.

15. As it is written, † He that had gathered much, had nothing over, and he that had gathered little, had no lack.]

16. And what I write to you for your advantage by way of care of (and advice to) you, it ſeems Titus hath had in his mind already, out of the ſame care of you, God be thanked who put it into his heart.

16. But thanks be to God, which put the ſame earneſt care into the heart of Titus for you.]

17. For he was very willing at the firſt word, nay, prevented my exhortation, and before he was ſpoken to, of his own free choice he went to you about it.

17. For indeed he accepted the exhortation, * but being more forward of his own accord he went unto you:]

* make known unto you the grace of God which hath been beſtowed in the — Τὴν χάριν τοῦ Θεοῦ τὴν δεδομένην ἐν ταῖς

18. And we have ſent with him the brother, † whoſe praiſe is in the Goſpel throughout all the Churches.]

18 And with him we ſent the Evangeliſt, (probably St. Luke, ſee note on Rom. 16. 6.) whoſe diligence in preaching the Goſpel through all Churches is ſo much commended,

19. And not that only, but who was alſo * choſen of the Churches to travel with us, with this † grace, which is adminiſtred by us to the glory of the * ſame Lord, and declaration of your ready mind,]

19. And whom the Biſhops in Synod ordain'd to go along with me this journey, and was not by my ſelf choſen to it, (ſee 1 Cor. 16. 3.) to carry this collection (wherein I had done nothing, but as a ſervant and officer made uſe of by the Macedonians) to the honour of God (whoſe ſervants they were that were thus reliev'd, and whoſe grace it was that the Macedonians were ſo liberal) and to the ſtirring up your alacrity and forwardneſs by their example.

20. † Avoiding this, that no man ſhould blame us in this abundance * which is adminiſtred by us,]

20. This I then did, and of this I now give this ſo particular account, as being very careful, that I might not be under ſuſpicion or cenſure in managing or diſpoſing that great ſum of money collected, or received by me.

21. † Providing for honeſt things, not only in the ſight of the Lord, but in the ſight of men.]

21. Providing for a good reputation before men, as well as for a good concience before God.

22. And we have ſent with them our brother, whom we have oftentimes proved diligent in many things, but now much more diligent, upon the great confidence * which I have in you.]

22. And with Titus and Luke, I have by conſent of the Churches v. 9. ſent a third, of whoſe induſtry and diligence we have often had experience, but in this buſineſs found him much more willing to be induſtrious, upon the ſpecial confidence he hath of your goodneſs and expected liberality.

23. Whether † any do enquire of Titus, he is my partner and fellow * helper concerning you: † or our brethren be enquired of, they are the * meſſengers of the Churches, and the glory of Chriſt.]

23. In brief, the perſons that are intruſted in this buſineſs are ſuch as may be truſted, Titus that accompanied me, and help'd to convert you; the other brethren, Luke, &c. men of eminence and rule in the Churches of Chriſt (ſee note on Rom 16. 6.) and ſuch as have been uſed as inſtruments to advance the Goſpel.

24. Wherefore ſhew ye to them, and before the Churches, the proof of your love, and of our boaſting on your behalf.]

24. And therefore it will concern you by your behavior in this matter to demonſtrate your own Chriſtian charity, and to let them ſee, that what I have boaſted of you hath not been without reaſon.

Annotations on Chap. VIII.

a. θέλειν

V. 10. To be forward] What θέλειν to will ſignifies in this place will appear by the ποιῆσαι to do precedent: For when to will goes before doing, as Phil. 2. 13. it doth, then it muſt be conceived to denote the reſolving of that which is after done; but when it is ſubſequent to doing, as here, then it cannot belong to that, but to ſome farther action ſtill future, either of the ſame kind with that formerly done, or of any other which is ſpecified. That here it refers to ſome farther degree of liberality to be ſuperadded to what they had already done, appears by the enſuing exhortation to conſummate the work, v. 11. and by the mention of the προθυμία τοῦ θέλειν, the forwardneſs to will, that is, to reſolve to do more, as they ſhould be able. In which reſpect it is that c. 9. 2. Paul ſaith he hath boaſted of them, that they had (ἀπὸ πέρυσι, as here, from a year ago) made a preparation for this new ſupply, for ſo παρεσκεύασται hath been prepared ſignifies, as paſſives are oft uſed for Reciprocals. As for the τοῦτο ὑμῖν συμφέρει this is profitable for you in the former part of this verſe, though it may fitly be applied to ſeveral ways of profit, that their liberality would probably bring in unto them, yet it ſeems by what follows ch. 9. 3, 4. to refer peculiarly to the reputation of their liberality that Paul had ſo proclaimed, which would render it a reproachful thing to them, if they ſhould not make it good, according to their purpoſe and his boaſting of them.

1. FOR as touching the miniſtery to the ſaints, it is ſuperfluous for me to write to you.]

1. Now concerning this contribution to the poor Chriſtians of Judæa, I ſuppoſe it utterly ſuperfluous for me to uſe any arguments to exhort you to it.

2. For I know the forwardneſs of your mind, for which I boaſt of you to them of Macedonia, that Achaia † was ready a year ago: and * your zeal hath provoked very many.]

2. For of your forwardneſs therein I am ſo far from doubting, that I have made boaſt of it to others, that the Chriſtians of all Achaia (of which Corinth was the chief city) have for a twelve-month made a preparation to ſend a new ſupply, beyond that which they then did (ſee ch. 8. 10. and note a.) and the emulation to your example, or the opinion of your forwardneſs hath ſtirred up, hath wrought much in Macedonia, made them very liberal.

3. † Yet I have ſent the brethren, leſt our boaſting of you ſhould be in vain in this behalf, that, as I ſaid, ye may be ready,]

3. And that what I have thus boaſted of your preparation, may be found true, and that you may be indeed prepared before-hand, and not ſurprized at my coming, I have ſent theſe bearers to give you warning;

4. Leſt happily if they of Macedonia come with me, and find you unprepared, we (that we ſay not, you) ſhould be * aſhamed in this ſame confident boaſting.]

4. Leſt if the Macedonians, to whom I have boaſted of your forwardneſs v. 2. come along with me to you, and find that you have not your ſupplies ready, it be matter of great ſhame to me, as it muſt be alſo to you (ſee c. 8. 10. note a.) that I have had the confidence (ſee note on Heb. 11. a.) and vanity to boaſt thus of you without cauſe.

5. Therefore I thought it neceſſary to exhort the brethren, that they would go before unto you, and make up before-hand your bounty, † whereof ye had notice before, that the ſame might be ready, as a matter of bounty, and not as of covetouſneſs.]

5. This is the reaſon for which theſe come now to you by my direction, that they may prepare and get together, and ſo compleat and perfect that collection of yours which I have talk'd of, that it may be ready as an act of beneficence and liberality in you, before I come, and not as a collection gratingly extorted from you at my coming.

6. But this I ſay, He which ſoweth ſparingly ſhall reap ſparingly; and he which ſoweth bountifully ſhall reap bountifully.]

6. And for your encouragement, this ye muſt know, that the more liberality ye ſhew herein, the greater the advantages will be to you from God, that rewardeth ſuch charities, and that in proportion to the ſeveral degrees of it.

7. Every man according as he purpoſeth in his heart, ſo let him give; not grudgingly, or of neceſſity; for God loveth a chearful giver.]

7. Whatſoever then ye have determined to give, let it be given chearfully, not with any trouble to part with it, not as if it were extorted from you, for if it be not done chearfully, 'twill never be accepted, much leſs rewarded by God.

8. And

8. And to this end I ſhall add one argument more, which will ſatisfie your only fear (that ſuch liberality may bring your ſelves to ſtraits or want) by telling you that God is the fountain of all plenty, and only diſpenſer of it, and is therefore able (and having oft promiſed it, is ſure to make it good) to make you the richer, not the poorer, by your liberality, to make every alms you give, like the oyl in the cruize, to multiply (ſee v. 10.) as you pour it out, and ſo to give you continually a ſufficient portion of wealth, that you ſtill be able out of your abundance to ſupply others, and have enough for every object of charity that can be offered to you.

a. Πεποιῆσαι χάριν

V. 8. Make all grace abound] There is no way of rendring Θεὸς δυνατὸς πεποιῆσαι χάριν but by putting πεποιῆσαι in an Active ſenſe to make abound, and that hath been formerly noted to be ordinary in the New Teſtament, (ſee Note on Mar. 14. f.) The Greek wanting the Hebrew conjugation Hiphil, which denotes making to do a thing, and having no way to ſupply it, but by uſing the Active voice in that ſenſe, ſo as πεποιῆσαι ſhall not only ſignifie Neutrally to abound, but alſo to make any man or thing to abound: Of which kind there be innumerable examples. And ſo the making their charity to abound toward them here, that is, God's bleſſing their liberality, ſo that it ſhall enrich, in ſtead of impoveriſhing them, will be all one with the encreaſing the fruits of their righteouſneſs, v. 10. their righteouſneſs there ſignifying their charity, (as hath been oft ſhewn) and the plenty conſequent to their exerciſes of that virtue, being proportionable to the fruit that comes by ſowing (the hundred-fold encreaſe which Chriſt promiſes even in this life to thoſe that forſake, or part with, any thing for his ſake) and accordingly 'tis there join'd with multiplying their ſeed, where their acts of charity are figuratively call'd their ſeed, and the bleſſings conſequent thereto the fruits of it.

Paraphraſe. CHAP. X.

1. Now I, that Paul that am ſo calumniated by ſome among you, and ſaid by way of reproach to be mild and contemptible, when I am perſonally preſent with you, but, when I am abſent, ſevere and confident toward you, I exhort you by the meekneſs and gentleneſs of Chriſt, which was ſo remarkable in him, and which I ſhall not be aſhamed to imitate, be I never ſo vilified for it: And as I exhort you, ſo

1. NOw I * Paul my ſelf † beſeech you by the meekneſs and [a] gentleneſs of Chriſt, who * in preſence am baſe among you, but being abſent, † am bold toward you:]

2. But I beſeech you that I may not be bold when I am preſent, with that confidence wherewith I think to be bold againſt ſome, which think of us as if we walked according to the fleſh.]

3. For though I am an infirm perſon, obnoxious my ſelf to many afflictions and diſtreſſes, for which your are apt to deſpiſe me, yet do I not exerciſe my Apoſtleſhip in a weak manner, or by weak weapons.

6. And truly thus I am reſolved, when you have made good your obedience, reduced your ſelves to good order, and demonſtrated that, to puniſh thoſe that remain refractory with ſeverity enough. For when the whole Church lies in diſobedience, thoſe acts of ſeverity are not ſo fit to be uſed; but when the reformation of the greater part is ſo conſpicuous, that it may be prudent to proceed againſt the refractory, then I ſhall not fail in my duty, but inflict theſe cenſures as ſhall be fit.

Annotations on Chap. X.

a. Ἐπιείκεια

V. 1. Gentleneſs] Ἐπιείκεια is the ordinary word of the philoſopher, taken from him by the Lawyers to ſignifie mitigation of exact or ſtrict juſtice, when that is not ſo agreeable to rules of charity, and ſo it notes in general the fit, proper temper, which is to be obſerved in all things. Ἐπιεικὲς, ſaith Heſychius, καθῆκον, πρέπον, πρόσφορον, ἁρμόδιον, that which is fit, decent, due, &c. And according to the diverſity of matter about which it is converſant, ſo it hath ſeveral notions in the New Teſtament. In this place being ſpoken of Chriſt, and join'd with that meekneſs which was ſo imitable in him, Mat. 11. 29. it ſignifies gentleneſs, or clemency, as that is oppos'd to ſeverity in puniſhing, which is here expreſs'd by θαῤῥῆσαι, and τολμῆσαι, and πεποίθησις, daring, boldneſs, and confidence. But Phil. 4. 5. τὸ ἐπιεικὲς ſeems to belong to another ſort of gentleneſs, that of the lamb, which before or under the the ſhearer is dumb, and opens not the mouth, viz, a cheerful endurance of all the perſecutions that were upon the Chriſtians at that time. To this the Context there inclines, which uſhered it in with a repeated exhortation to rejoice in the Lord always, in adverſity as well as proſperity (and ſo 1 Theſſ. 5. 16.) which being contrary to the joy of the world, moſt fitly denotes that χαρὰ καὶ ἀγαλλίασις Mat. 5. 12. (rejoicing and being exceeding glad, rejoicing and leaping for joy, and thinking it all joy, Jam. 1. 2.) which is upon their being perſecuted for Chriſt, and ſo likewiſe enforced with a reaſon agreeable to this matter, for the Lord is at hand, the time of your redemption from your preſſures draws near, Heb. 10. 37. And accordingly 'tis attended, (as Chriſt's inſtructions to the Apoſtles are in this caſe, Mat. 10. 19.) with μὴ μεριμνᾶτε, a prohibition of all ſollicitous thoughts, referring the whole matter to prayer, and ſupplication to God, ver. 6. This word is again uſed Jam. 3. 17. the wiſdom from above is ἐπιεικὴς gentle, which following peaceable, and being attended with other words of that nature, muſt be rendred in order to that, ſo as to ſignifie a receding from his own ſtrict right, in order to peace, as ἐυπειθὴς that follows immediately, notes an eaſineſs to be perſwaded of that which belongs to the excuſe of another, or mitigating of his faule, as 'tis ſaid of charity, that it believes all things 1 Cor. 13. 7. and accordingly theſe qualities of the wiſdom from above are ſhut up ver. 18. under the title of peace to them that love or make peace, So 1 Tim. 3. 3. and Tit. 3. 2. ἐπιεικεῖς are join'd with ἀμάχους in both places, and ſo note the contrary to μάχαι, all kind of contentions, and are attended in the latter place with ſhewing all meekneſs to all men. Ἐυπειθὴς

b. "Οπλα τῆς στρατείας

V. 4. Weapons of our warfare] That the ὅπλα τ στρατείας ἡμῶν, weapons of our warfare, which are here ſaid not to be weak, but mighty to God, ſignifie the cenſures of the Church, may thus appear probable, firſt, by the Context, where the Apoſtle ſpeaks of proceeding againſt offenders, which he calls θαρρεῖν εἰς ὑμᾶς, being bold toward them, v. 1, 2. and ἐκδικεῖν παρακοὴν to avenge diſobedience, v. 6. and this according to the ἐξουσία or authority, which the Lord had given for edification (building them up farther in the faith and all Chriſtian virtue) and not for deſtruction; and then he adds a caution to remove a calumny or prejudice that ſome had againſt him, that his Letters are ſevere, and ſo he, when abſent; but far from all ſeverity when he came among them, χ᾽ πρόσωπον ταπεινὸς ἐν ὑμῖν, vile, or tame, or unconſiderable, when he was among them: that is, that in his abſence he threatned cenſures, but when he came, would not inflict them, which he calls ἐκφοβεῖν δι᾽ ἐπιστολῶν, terrifying by Letters, ver. 9. and ἐπιστολαὶ βαρεῖαι and ἰσχυραὶ, weighty and powerful letters, ver. 10. that is, ſevere, and terrifying, which yet he threatens ſhall be equal'd by his actions, when he comes among them ver. 11. And ſo all along, the buſineſs is of the cenſures of the Church, and ſo in all reaſon in this verſe alſo. Secondly, this will appear by the words themſelves: for as στρατία ἡμῶν ſignifies confeſs'dly the Apoſtles miniſtery (ſee Note on 1 Tim. 1. f.) according to the importance of the Hebrew צבא, which is ſomtimes rendred στρατία warfare, ſometimes λειτουργία miniſtery; ſo ὅπλα τ στρατείας, weapons of warfare, are the means to diſcharge their duty in the miniſtery. Of which nature though there be more, Prayer, Preaching, Catechizing, adminiſtration of Sacraments, Confirmation, &c. yet the antecedents and conſequents here, belonging to the buſineſs of cenſures, muſt needs incline it to that notion peculiarly. Then that theſe are not σαρκικὰ carnal, ſignifies that they are not weak, for ſo σὰρξ fleſh frequently ſignifies, as here v. 3. though we walk in the fleſh, that is, are weak, as men, and have no power over you, yet as officers of Chriſt we are not, our miniſtry is with power, and therefore follows ἀλλὰ δυνατὰ τῷ Θεῷ, but mighty, or powerful, through or to God, or perhaps exceeding powerful, and that εἰς καθαίρεσιν τ ὀχυρωμάτων to the pulling down of ſtrong holds, that is, either the pulling down all fortreſſes that maintain or ſecure a man in ſin, or more critically, as καθαίρεσις ſignifies excommunication it ſelf, v. 8. and c. 13. 10. and generally in the Canons of the Councils; and then ὀχυρώματα ſtrong holds will ſignifie all impenitent, obdurate, impregnable ſinners, called v. 15. every high thing that exalts it ſelf againſt the knowledge of God, that is, againſt piety and Chriſtianity. And ſo the plain meaning of the verſe will be, that the Apoſtles cenſures were exceeding powerful, and that power exerciſed in excommunicating, and delivering up to Satan, ἵνα παιδευθῶσι, that they may be diſciplined, 1 Tim. 1. 20. and thereby ſubduing contumacious offenders. According to that of the writer of the Anſwers ad Orthodoxos, Ὅτι διὰ τ μακροθυμίας τ ὑβριζούσαν ὁ τινες) διόρθωσις, τότε ἡ ἀποτομία τ μακροθυμίας τοῖς ἀδιορθώτοις ἴσως χρησιμωτέρα, when by clemency offenders are not reformed, then exciſion to the incorrigible is more uſeful then clemency. Agreeable to which is that of Pletho in his ſcholia on Zoroaſter, Αἱ ποιναὶ, ἤτοι αἱ κολαστικαὶ δαίμονες, ἀγκτῆρες τ ἀνθρώπων εἰσὶ, ἤτοι ζυνεκτικαὶ τ ἀπάγειν τ ψυχὰς αὐτὰς, τῇ ἀρετῇ ἐγκαταδοῦσαι, The revengeful furies, or devils, or puniſhments do gripe men to bring them off from ſin, and ſet them on virtue.

V. 12. Make our ſelves of the number] What ἐγκεῖναι ſignifies properly is ſet down by Budæus, ἐνατάγειν, ἐγκαταλέγειν, to chuſe, or admit any into any order, as in Ariſtides τὰς ἐπιλυσὰς θεοὺς μετὰ τ ἄλλων ἐνίκειναν, they admitted the foreign Gods with the others; and in Demoſthenes, εἰς γερουσίαν ἐγκρίνεσθαι to be choſen, or admitted, into the Senate. Thus ἐγκρίνειν and ἀνακρίνειν are uſed, as in Plato de leg. 12. ἀνακρίνοντας νεότητι, τοὺς δὲ ἄλλους ἐγκειναντες rejecting ſome, and chuſing others. Hence Heſychius, Ἔγκριτος, ἐκλελεγμένος, ἐξειλεγμένος, the participle ſignifies ſelect, or choſen, and ſo here ἐγκρῖναι ἑαυτὸν to give ſuffrage to himſelf, to take upon him to be ſome eminent perſon.

V. 13. Our meaſure] Of the agones among the Grecians, particularly among the Corinthians, and of δρόμος racing, one of them, we have formerly ſpoken (Notes on 1 Cor. 9. c. d. e.) and ſo again diſtinctly of κανὼν (Note g.) the white line, which bounded or marked out the path, or race. To this the Apoſtle here refers, making his Apoſtleſhip or preaching of the Goſpel to be his ſpiritual exerciſe, or running as it were in a race, his ἐν τῷ δρόμος, and then the province or dioceſe to which he is by God deſign'd and ſent to preach, is his μέτρον τ κανόνος ἐμέρισεν αὐτῷ ὁ Θεὸς, the compaſs, or ſtage of ground, which by that white line in the race, as 'twere, God hath mark'd out to him, to run in, and contend, and obtain his prize. Beyond or out of which line he that runs, or pretends to have to do, he doth καυχήσασθαι εἰς τὰ ἄμετρα boaſt without his meaſure, and ὑπερεκτείνεσθαι overextend himſelf, v. 14.

V. 14. Come as far] That the word φθάνειν is Agoniſtical alſo, ſee Note on Rom. 9. l. and ſo conſtantly it ſignifies coming foremoſt to the goal, or being foremoſt in the running toward it; and ſo it ſignifies here, preaching the Goſpel among the Corinthians, before any body alſe had been there, for as it is ſaid, 1 Cor. 3 6. Paul planted, that is, firſt brought the Goſpel among them.

e. Φθάσειν

V. 16. Another mans line] The ἀλλότριος κανὼν is that province which ſome body elſe hath undertaken; the κανὼν, as before, denoting the line by which his race was terminated, and the ἀλλότριος referring to the cuſtom in the ſtadia forementioned, that each of the racers had his path, where he was to run, chalk'd out to him, and if one did ſtep over into the others path, he did ὑπερεκτείνεσθαι, extend himſelf (or run) over his line. In reference to this the Apoſtle here ſaith, that he had ſome hope that he might μεγαλύνεσθαι εἰς περισσείαν, enlarge his courſe in length, as it were, by running farther then the goal that was firſt ſet him, that is, go farther in preaching the Goſpel, and yet not go over his line, that is, not run over into the other mans path or race, but χ᾽ κανόνα ἡμῶν, keep within his own white, or line, which divided his province from other mens on the other ſide of him.

Paraphraſe. CHAP. XI.

1. The fear that I have that you ſhould be ſeduced, tempts me to do that which you will be apt to count boaſting, and think me to be a fool for doing ſo, viz. to praiſe my ſelf, and magnifie the pains that I have taken among you: This piece of folly you may do well to pardon in me:

2. For 'tis cauſed by nothing but my kindneſs to you, my zeal to your good, and jealouſie that other men may get away your love and eſteem from me; which is a jealouſie not ſo much for my ſelf, as for God, that he ſhould loſe a Church beloved by him. For I have been to you as that officer among the Grecians was to their virgins, I have taken upon me the educating and forming of you, the cultivating and fitting of you, the taking care and watching over you, that ſo I might preſent you a fit and a pure ſpouſe to Chriſt.

Annotations on Chap. XI.

a. Ἡρμοσάμην ἑνὶ ἀνδρὶ

V. 2. Eſpouſed you to one husband] The Vulgar ſeems to have read theſe words ἡρμοσάμην ὑμᾶς ἑνὶ ἀνδρὶ, with a comma after them, and accordingly render them deſponsi vos uni viro, I have eſpouſed you to one husband, according to that of * Julius Pollux, ὁ δὲ πατὴρ ἐγγυᾷ, ἁρμόζει, ὅταν πρὸς τὴν πολλῶν ἁρμοσθῇ ἢ μνηστῆρα ἐκάλεσε, making ἐγγυᾶν eſpouſe all one with ἁρμόζειν. So in Cinnamus l. 4. p. 228. γάμοις ἁρμόζεται, he married her. But the more probable punctation is by reading it without any comma, till after ἁγνὴν παρθένον, and then the notion of the word ἁρμόζειν muſt be taken from that uſe of the word which is agreeable to the office of the ἁρμοσταὶ, or ἁρμόσυνοι, among the Lacedæmonians. Among the magiſtrates of that city thoſe were two prime names, and between them ſome ſlight difference. The ἁρμοσταὶ were a kind of provincial Rulers (placed by * Nic. Cragius among the μέγιστα ἀρχαὶ the prime magiſtrates of that city) ſent to govern the provinces, or confederate cities, and preſerve them in their fidelity, and were, ſaith † Ulpian, ſo called διὰ τὸ ἁρμόζειν τὰ ἔθη τῶν πολιτῶν τοῖς τῶν Λακεδαιμονίων, becauſe they conformed the manners of the citizens to thoſe of the Lacedæmonians, for ſo ἁρμόζειν ſignifies to adapt, or conform. So ſaith Phavorinus out of Eratoſthenes, ἁρμοσταὶ, οἱ ὑπὸ Λακεδαιμονίων εἰς τὰς ὑπηκόους πόλεις ἄρχοντες ἀποπεμπόμενοι, the governours that are ſent by the Lacedæmonians to the cities under them. Theſe are by Heſychius call'd ἁρμοστῆρες, by * Plutarch σωφρονισταὶ, in the ſame ſenſe that the Athenians Ἐπίσκοποι and Φύλακες, Overſeers and Guardians. From whence it is that † Theophraſtus obſerves that the Lacedæmonians ſending magiſtrates to the provinces, ſtyle them much more commodiouſly ἁρμοστὰς, then the Athenians do Ἐπισκόπους and Φύλακας. From whence alſo it is that in the Chriſtian Church the ancient author that goes under the name of Dionyſius Areopagita, calls Biſhops ἁρμοστὰς. But then the Ἁρμόσαιοι (which ſeem more peculiarly to belong to the uſe of the word in this place) were a peculiar ſort of governours, which had to do with the education of women, eſpecially for the forming of their lives and manners, and breeding of them (as among the Athenians γυναικονόμοι,) from the verb ἁρμόζεσθαι, becauſe they were ſet over them to fit and order their manners, and make them regular and harmonical, a kind of Cenſors of manners among them. So ſaith Heſychius and Phavorinus in the ſame words, Ἁρμόσυνος ἀρχή τις ἐν Λακεδαίμονι διὰ τῆς εὐνομίας τῶν γυναικῶν, 'twas an office in Lacedæmon to bring up and breed women. And this is the notion of ἡρμοσάμην here, I am your ἁρμόσυνος (ſee Tit. 2. a) ſet over your congregation, as he over a ſingle virgin, to breed and fit you, that I may preſent you to Chriſt a pure virgin, &c.

b. Καταναρκῆσαι * Qu. 10.

V. 9. I was chargeable] Καταναρκῆσαι, ſaith S. Jerome * ad Algaſiam, is a Cilician word; the full meaning of it here will be judged by that which Ælian ſaith of the fiſh called νάρκη, the torpedo, Ὁ ἰχθὺς ἡ νάρκη, ὅτι ἂν περιπέσῃ, τὸ ἐξ αὐτῆς ὄνομα ἔδωκέ τι, καὶ ναρκᾶν ἐποίησεν, the torpedo fiſh whatſoever it toucheth, it gives its own name, makes it to be benumm'd. Now they which ask any thing of another, are proverbially ſaid to do that which the torpedo doth, to give a chilneſs or numneſs. Moleſtum verbum eſt & onerosum, Rogo, ſaith Seneca, asking, or begging, is very troubleſome and burthenſome; and therefore καταναρκᾶν, which literally ſignifies to chill or benumm (and ſo in Theocritus, Idyll. 7.

doth in reſpect of this conſequence ſignifie to ask, or intreat; and ſo here, οὐ καταναρκήσω ἔδωκα, I begged, or asked, of no man, I importuned no man.

c. Τετραπλοῦν παρὰ τὰ πέντε

V. 24. Forty ſtripes ſave one] Of this puniſhment of S. Paul's theſe four things are to be obſerved: 1st, that S. Paul, as a Roman, was not to be whipp'd Ex Lege Portia, and therefore Act. 22. 24. when the Tribune had commanded him to be beaten thus, underſtanding he was a Roman, he diſmiſs'd him, and was afraid, ſaith S. Luke, becauſe he had bound him; 2dly, that he was yet ſubject, as a Jew, to the laws of the Jews, which were yet in force, and ſo was ſubjected to this Jewiſh puniſhment, as a Jew; 3dly, that he was dealt with as a robuſtious offender, in ſuffering ſo oft the utmoſt extremity of the Jewiſh law, when they that were weak, or which upon any other ſcore had any mitigation, were not uſed ſo ſeverely; according to that of Maimonides Hil. Sanhedrim, c. 17. They inflict, ſaith he, no more then forty ſtripes, though he be as ſtrong as Samſon, but if he be weak, they abate of that number; 4thly, that that ſum of thirty nine was the ſolelm proportion in the Jewiſh puniſhments, when they were moſt ſeverely inflicted. So in Joſephus, of one that had accuſed his wife falſly of the loſs of her virginity before marriage, ἐκπυέτω πληγὰς τεσσαράκοντα μιᾶς λειπούσης λαμβάνων, let him extend himſelf and receive thirty nine ſtripes. For when the number which might not be exceeded was by the Law defined to be forty. Deut. 25. 3. and when the cuſtom was taken up of executing this puniſhment with a rod of three branches, and ſo of giving three ſtrokes at one blow (or, as it is in Maccoth, c. 3. §. 12. with one twiſted cord, unto which two more were faſtened) every ſtroke conſequently going for three, (as Maimonides affirms in Sanhedr. c. 17. §. 2.) it was conſequently impoſſible to inflict more ſtripes then thirty nine, unleſs they exceed to two and forty, and ſo that of thirty nine was the laſt among thoſe that were lawful. See Talmud Babyl. in Maccoth, cap. 3. As for the beating with rods which follows, ver. 25. that differs from this of the ſcourging, the ῥάβδοι rods being wands or cudgels, a bundle of which was carried before the Roman Conſul, and he that carried them call'd ῥαβδοῦχος, which makes it probable that this was a Roman ſort of puniſhment, and ſo here differenced from the ſcourging with twiſted cords, which was ὑπὸ Ἰουδαίων inflicted by the Jews (ſee Note on Lu. 23. b.) howſoever ſo much diſtinguiſh'd from the other, as rods and ſcourges differ. ῥαβδίζω

d. Βυθῷ

V. 25. In the deep] To what paſſage of S. Paul's ſtory this of his being a day and a night ἐν τῷ βυθῷ in the deep doth belong, cannot be ſhewed out of Scripture. 'Tis not altogether improbable what Beda l. quæſt. qu. 3. tit. 8. ſaith out of Theodorus Tarſenſis, that in Cyzicum (which is in the Propontis, a famous city) there is a priſon, which for the depth of it under ground is called βυθὸς, or the bottom of the ſea, a moſt noiſome filthy priſon, as in Athens there was one called βάραθρον hell, at Syracuſe Λατομία the mineral, and many the like in other places; ſee Suidas in the word Βάραθρον. Into this as a moſt infamous priſon S. Paul might well be caſt, paſſing from Troas to that city, though S. Luke, who reports not things particularly, ſave when he himſelf was preſent, make no mention of it. And indeed whatſoever elſe may be meant by the word βυθὸς, S. Luke ſeems not to have made mention of this paſſage, there being no reaſon to apply that of Act. 27. to it, the Epiſtle being written before that time, in the compaſs of the Macedonian progreſs, Act. 20. 1. and if it might be conceived to be written after it, that would more reaſonably be defined to be one of his three ſhipwracks foregoing here. Theophylact ſpeaks of ſome that interpreted it of a well, called βυθὸς, profundity, becauſe of the the great depth of it, wherein after his danger at Lystra he hid himself.

V. 32. Aretæ] The Gassanii reigned in Syria, some say 400, others 600 years; many of them were called Harethi, or Aretæ, which is the name of the King here. See Mr. Pocock's notes on Gregorius Abul Faraiius his story of the Arabians, p. 77, 78.

CHAP. XII.

Paraphrase.

1. *But it is not expedient for me, doubtless, to glory; † I will come to visions and revelations of the Lord.]

1. But I shall give over these things, for if I should go on in it, I should then come to mention the visions and revelations which I have had from God.

2. * I knew [a] a man in Christ above fourteen years ago, (whether in the body I cannot tell, or whether out of the body, I cannot tell; God knoweth: such a one) † caught up to the third heaven.]

2. I know one that was transported in a vision by the Spirit of Christ; that is, I my self about fourteen years past was in an ecstasie, Acts 22. 18. such an one that I am not able to say whether I were bodily removed, and carried to the third heaven, the place of Gods glorious residence, or whether only in a vision such representations were made to me remaining upon the earth.

3. And I knew such a man (whether in the body, or out of the body, I cannot tell, God knoweth)]

3. I say, I know not which of these it was, God only knows.

4. How that he was caught up into paradise, and heard unspeakable words, which is not lawful for a man to utter.]

4. But whether bodily, or in vision, me thought I was in the highest heaven ver. 2. here called paradise in respect of the joys that dwell there, and had such revelations made to me by an Angel from God, as were wonderful to consider, but which I was forbidden to declare to others.

5. Of such a one will I glory, yet of my self I will not glory, but in mine infirmities.]

5. And though I have this abundant matter of glorying, yet shall I not make use of it any farther, or more plainly, but boast only of my sufferings for Christ.

6. For though I would desire to glory, I shall not be a fool; for I will say the truth: but now I forbear, lest any man should think of me above * that which he seeth me to be, or that he heareth of me.]

6. For if I would speak of this, I justly might, for it is most certainly true: but I will say no more of this subject, for I desire not to put men into any other opinion of me, then what they have from those more visible evidences, my ordinary constant actions, or words.

7. And lest I should be exalted above measure through the † abundance of revelations, there was given to me [b] a thorn * in the flesh, the messenger of Satan to buffet me, lest I should be exalted above measure.]

7. And indeed after I had these high transcendent revelations, that I might not be elevated with them, a sharp affliction was sent me in mercy by God, but inflicted on me by Satan and some instruments of his, who dealt very roughly with me, beat me, imprisoned me, scourged me (see Chrysost. Epist. 15. to. 7. p. 101. lin. 40.) and this was by God designed to keep me humble.

8. For this thing I besought the Lord thrice, that it might depart from me.]

8. And I earnestly prayed to God to be delivered from it.

9. And he said unto me, My † grace is sufficient for thee; for my strength is made perfect in weakness. Most gladly therefore will I rather glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may * rest upon me.]

9. And the only answer I received was this, It is enough for thee that what I do is for thy good; afflictions are the means to do the Christian most good, the greater the pressures are, the more visible is the perfection of the divine assistance, or, the more thy persecutions are, the more is the Gospel propagated by thee (Theophylact) nay afflictions therefore are the things I rejoice in (see Heb. 3. a.) more then any thing, even then revelations themselves, as the means by which the power of Christ and his presence may appear more visible upon me (see note on Rom. 9. b.) then by any other means it could, even in as glorious a manner as that wherein God exhibited himself in the Ark.

10. Therefore I take pleasure in infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses for Christs sake: for when I am weak, then am I strong.]

10. This therefore of diseases, and afflictions, and reproaches, and persecutions for Christ, is a thing with which I am perfectly pleased, I have nothing of exception against them; for in time of afflictions the strength of Christ is more eminently visible in me, the heavier the pressures are, the greater supports I have from him; or, the more I suffer for, the more Proselytes I gain to, it (Theophylact.)

11. I am become a fool in glorying, ye have compelled me: for I ought to have been commended of you: for in nothing am I behind the very chiefest Apostles, though I be nothing.]

11. You see how vain I am in boasting; yet your calumnies have made it necessary for me to do so: For sure I have done and suffered as much as any the most valued Apostle, though indeed I have no reason to have any opinion of my self for all this.

12. Truly the signs of an Apostle were wrought among you in all patience, in signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds.]

12. If patience of whatsoever sufferings for the Gospels sake, if working of miracles of all kinds be able to testifie a man to be sent and authorized by Christ, (as beyond all other things that is most proper to do it) then sure it doth appear that I am an Apostle, in despite of my calumniators.

13. For what is it * wherein ye were inferior to other Churches, except it be that I my self † was not burdensome to you? forgive me this wrong.]

13. For there is no Church that hath had more pains taken among them, more gifts bestowed for the building them up, more of any thing that is needful, then ye have had from me: the only thing wherein ye differ from others is, that all hath been done without any charge of yours, without my asking or receiving any thing from you: and if this be a wrong, you will easily, I suppose, forgive it me.

14. Behold the third time I am ready to come to you, and I will not be burdensome to you, for I seek not yours, but you; for the children ought not to lay up for the parents, but the parents for the children.]

14. I have now made a third resolution (see c. 1. 16.) to come shortly among you, and I will do it without putting you to any charge, for I covet not your possessions, but your salvation, and as a parent I desire to do all manner of good to you, and to receive none from you.

15. And I will very gladly spend and be spent for you, though the more abundantly I love you, the less I be loved.]

15. And I will offer up my self most chearfully for the good of your souls, exhaust all the small goods I have, and venture even my life for you, and never be discouraged, though as my love and the effects thereof encrease toward you, so yours lessen toward me.

16. But be it so, I did not burden you: nevertheless being crafty, I caught you with guile.]

16. But it is by some among you suggested against me, that although I never received any pay from you for the preaching the Gospel, yet I have cunningly and underhand gotten a great deal from you.

17. Did I make a gain of you by any of them whom I sent unto you?]

17. If this have any truth in it, let it appear, have I done this by any of those whom I have sent to you?

18. † I desired Titus, and with him I sent * a brother; did Titus make † a gain of you? walked we not in the same spirit? walked we not in the same steps?]

18. I perswaded Titus to come to you (see c. 9. 5.) and sent Luke along with him; did Titus or the other make any kind of gain of you? did he defraud you of ought? did not he behave himself just after the same manner as I had done before?

Annotations on Chap. XII.

a. Ἀνθρωπ☉ ἐν Χριστῷ ἐν ἑαυτῷ ἐν πνεύματι

V. 2. A man in Chriſt] What ἀνθρώπ☉ ἐν Χριστῷ a man in Chriſt, here ſignifies, may poſſibly be gueſs'd by other phraſes of the ſame making; ſuch is that of Saint Luke, Act. 12. 11. where 'tis ſaid of Peter, γενόμεν☉ ἐν ἑαυτῷ being in himſelf, that is, having been formerly in a trance, and now return'd out of it; and that is call'd being in himſelf: ſuch that Revel. 1. 10. ἐγενόμην ἐν πνεύματι, I was in the ſpirit, that is, I was in a trance or ecſtaſie, and there received a viſion or revelation from God: ſuch Mar. 1. 23. ἄνθρωπ☉ ἐν πνεύματι ἀκαθάρτῳ, and the ſame again c. 5. 2. A man in an unclean ſpirit, that is one agitated with a diabolical ſpirit, rapt and carried to do things which of himſelf he would never do. And accordingly here a man in Chriſt may be one that by the ſpirit of Chriſt was thus tranſported, received Revelations from Chriſt, and therefore v. 1. there is mention of viſions and revelations, of which this is here an inſtance, and ſo v. 7. And all the circumſtances of the Context incline to this Interpretation. And this is the importance of the ἔκστασις ecſtaſie (ſee note on Mark 3. c.) being out of himſelf, tranſported either by a good or evil ſpirit; when by a good, it ſignifies a Prophetick viſion, when by a bad, a kind of madneſs, as in the Dæmoniacks, (though the word is no where in the New Teſtament uſed of them) and both contrary to the being ἐν ἑαυτῷ in himſelf, moved only by that humane principle of reaſon, &c. which he hath within him, neither διαφορούμεν☉, nor δαιμονιοφορούμεν☉, carried by God, nor the devil.

b. Σκόλοψ τῇ σαρκὶ

V. 7. A thorn in the fleſh] What this σκόλοψ τῇ σαρκὶ thorn to the fleſh here ſignifies, will be beſt gueſs'd from Ezech. 28. 24. where the pricking brier and grieving thorn is ſet to ſignifie a ſore affliction, to wound and torment, from the deſpiſers, as it there follows, or perſecuters of Iſrael. And ſo it will here ſignifie no more but a ſad and ſharp affliction, inflicted on Saint Paul (ſaith Irenæus l. 4. the laſt ch. and Theodoret and Theophylact on the place) by ſome followers of Simon Magus, that is, the Gnoſticks.

Paraphraſe. CHAP. XIII.

1. I am now this third time about to come among you, (ſee c. 12. 14.) and this is my ſolemn ſecond admonition by Epiſtle, which if it be not obeyed, will certainly bring cenſures upon you at my coming.

I gave you a ſolemn warning in my former Epiſtle, which was of the ſame force as if I had been perſonally with you, and behold now I do ſo again; and though I am ſtill abſent, yet this Epiſtle is to ſupply the place of my perſonal preſence, and therefore I do now ſolemnly write, and denounce, both to thoſe that had then ſinn'd, and have not wrought any full reformation, and to all others that have ſince been drawn into ſuch irregular courſes, that with all ſuch I will proceed ſeverely at my coming among you.

2. I told you before, and foretel you as if I were preſent the ſecond time, and being abſent now I write to them which heretofore have ſinned, and to all other, that if I come again, I will not ſpare:]

*foretel you the ſecond time, as if I were preſent προλέγω ὡς παρὼν τὸ δεύτερον

3. And this I ſhal do the rather, becauſe you are ſo high, as to call my commiſſion for Apoſtleſhip into queſtion, and to require me to prove that what I ſpeak or do is from Chriſt; when by that which hath been done already, by miracles and other evidences, it is moſt manifeſt, that Chriſt hath expreſs'd himſelf to ſpeak to you by me, and ſo to own the doctrine I teach, and the authority I pretend to among you.

3. Since ye ſeek a proof of Chriſt ſpeaking in me, which to you-ward is not weak, but is mighty †in you.]

†among εἰς

4. For as Chriſt appeared to be a weak and frail man in being crucified, but was evidenced to be omnipotent God by his reſurrection; ſo I alſo may appear weak and a meer ordinary man, fit to be deſpiſed and contemned by you, (as you look upon me in my ſelf, and in reſpect of the afflictions which have been, and are upon me) but yet I ſhall ſhew that I am an Apoſtle of Chriſt, armed with commiſſion and power from God, which I have already both by preaching and miracles, and ſhall farther by cenſures upon the contumacious, evidence unto and among you.

4. For though he was crucified through weakneſs, yet he liveth by the power of God: for we alſo are weak in him, but we ſhall live with him by the power of God toward you.]

*or with him for the Kings MS. reads σὺν

5. Make trial by what you pleaſe, whether I am not an Apoſtle of Chriſt, and have planted Chriſt among you, taught you the true faith. Have there not been ſuch evidences of my Apoſtleſhip c. 12. 12. ſuch aſſurances of Chriſts giving me authority of his preſence among you in my miniſtery, that you your ſelves cannot chuſe but acknowledge it? yes certainly there are, if you are not the moſt ſenſleſs wretched perſons in the world, the moſt unfit for God to approve, or wink at.

5. Examine your ſelves whether ye be in the faith, prove your own ſelves: †know ye not your own ſelves, how that [b] Jeſus Chriſt is in you, †except ye be reprobates?]

†truly if in ſome meaſure ye do not, ye are reprobates, εἰ μήτι ἀδόκιμοί ἐστε

6. But whatever you are your ſelves, or whatever ye think of me, ye ſhall find, I doubt not, I am not diſapproved by Chriſt, but abundantly owned by him.

6. But I truſt that ye ſhall know that we are not reprobates.]

7. Now I pray God to preſerve you from every evil way, from all corruption or ſeduction, not that I may have occaſion to approve my Apoſtolical power among you, by puniſhing offenders, but that you may live like Chriſtians, whatſoever opinion you have of me.

7. Now I pray to God that ye do no evil, not that we ſhould appear approved, but that ye ſhould do that which is honeſt, though we be as reprobates.]

8. For though we have no ability to do any thing, in caſe we ſhould ſet our ſelves againſt Chriſt and his Goſpel, yet in defence of it we are able to do ſomewhat by his aſſiſtance and bleſſing; or, we have no power or authority to puniſh thoſe who do not offend, or if we do, God co-operates not with us in that act. (Theophylact.)

8. For we can do nothing againſt the truth, but for the truth.]

9. And in this ſenſe the weaker we are, that is, the leſs ſevere, the leſs proofs we give of our Apoſtolical power, the better we are pleaſed, and the ſtronger, that is, the more innocent and blameleſs, ye keep your ſelves; having no delight in inflicting cenſures on offenders, but much rejoiced to ſee your innocence: and there is nothing that we more deſire, then that you be made up into ſuch a form or frame which ſhall be acceptable in Gods ſight, or that ye live together in communion, undivided, ſee note c. no one of you being broken off by excommunication.

9. For we are glad when we are weak, and ye are ſtrong; and this alſo we wiſh, *even your perfection.]

10. There-

10. Therefore I write theſe things being abſent, leſt being preſent I ſhould uſe ſharpneſs, according to the power which the Lord hath given me to edification, and not to deſtruction]

10. And this is the reaſon of my giving you theſe wholſome warnings before I come, that when I come I may not proceed to exciſion (according to the authority given me by Chriſt) but deal with you according to that milder way of inſtruction, not of excommunication, which is to take place among contumacious offenders, ſuch as I deſire not to find you at my coming.

11. Finally, brethren, farewell: * [c] be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace, and the God of love and peace ſhall be with you.]

* be knit together

11. And now I take my leave of you, beſeeching God's bleſſing upon you, and I pray, be ye careful to keep together in the united profeſſion of the ſame faith, and if there fall out any thing croſs among you, ſupport it chearfully, be all mutually kind and peaceable without any diviſions or ſchiſms among you: And that is the way to have that God, who ſo much values, and ſo ſtrictly commands love and peace among all, to be for ever among you by his grace. c.

Annotations on Chap. XIII.

a. V. 1. This is the third time] In the method preſcribed by Chriſt to prepare for the cenſures of the Church, Mat. 18. 15. there is a threefold admonition; the firſt by one man alone, the injured perſon (if it be a matter of that nature) going and reproving him: And if that do not ſucceed, then take with thee ἔτι farther (or over and above) one or two, that in the mouth of one or two witneſſes every word may be eſtabliſhed) that is, that the thing which thou layeſt to his charge, be ſo confirmed (according to that of Joh. 8. 17. The teſtimony of two men is true, that is, (ἀληθὴς, true in the ſenſe of πιστὸς) fit to be credited, of ſufficient authority in law to be heeded, and proceeded upon) that by the teſtimony of theſe, as of witneſſes, he may be convinced, and no longer able to deny the fact, as Heb. 6. 16. an oath is ſaid to be εἰς βεβαίωσιν, for eſtabliſhing, or confirmation, as being ἀντιλογίας πέρας, an end of contradicting, that is, of affirming and denying. The thing ſo eſtabliſhed (βεβαιωθὲν or πιστὸν) by oath, cannot longer be denied, or the parties denial will not ſtand him in any ſtead. Or ſecondly, that the offendor may by authority of theſe be induced (as the judge is on the accuſed perſon, Deut. 19. 15. Heb. 10. 28.) to give ſentence on himſelf, and ſo think fit to reform what he is admoniſhed of. Now that this place diſtinctly refers to this part of diſcipline, this ſecond admonition appears moſt probable by his reciting of the very words in the inſtitution, In the mouth of two or three witneſſes every word ſhall be eſtabliſhed; and proportionable to that, προείρηκα καὶ προλέγω, I foretold and foretel, which notes the firſt and ſecond admonition. And though there precede a τρίτον ἔρχομαι, I come to you this third time, yet that refers evidently to this his third reſolution perſonally to appear among them, c. 12. v. 14. having reſolved it twice already, and before that time comes, this ſecond Epiſtle is to ſupply the place of a ſecond admonition, as his firſt had been a firſt. And ſo the words will be rendred thus, προείρηκα καὶ προλέγω δεύτερον, I have foretold, or admoniſhed, you once in my firſt Epiſtle, and do now ſo again the ſecond time, and both thoſe ὡς παρὼν, as preſent; theſe Epiſtolary warnings being to have the ſame force with them, as if he were preſent among them. And if this method, anſwerable to the firſt and ſecond admonition inſtituted by Chriſt, do not prevail with you, then that which remains is, that he proceed to cenſures, and that he is reſolved to do, οὐ φείσομαι, I will not ſpare. Where the Apoſtolical power which he had over them, maketh it improper for him to proceed to any third admonition, that of telling it to the Church, in S. Matthew. So Biſhop Titus is appointed to deal with an heretick, After the firſt and ſecond admonition reject him, Tit. 3. 10. without any third degree intervening, immediately to proceed to cenſures.

b. V. 5. Jeſus Chriſt is in you] That Chriſt's being among them ſignifies the preſence and power of the Goſpel among the Corinthians, or in their Church through S. Paul's Apoſtleſhip, may appear, not only by the Context, which wholly looks that way, but by that place Exod. 17. 7. to which theſe words ſeem to refer; where the tempting contumacious Iſraelites, after all the ſigns and miracles ſhewed among them, do ſtill remain infidel, and ask in theſe very words, εἰ Θεὸς ἐν ἡμῖν, is the Lord among us, or no? So that the meaning of the Apoſtle's queſtion here is, Many Miracles of Chriſt and his Spirit have been wrought among you by me, ſo that if you do not yet believe that I am an Apoſtle of Chriſt, and ſo that Chriſt is among you, you are ſure of the number of thoſe Iſraelites, who after ſo many miracles, ſtill required more ſigns, or of the Phariſees, who did the ſame, Mar. 18. 11. which being put in form of a queſtion, Diſcern you not that Chriſt Jeſus is among you? the anſwer is in the next words, εἰ μή τι ἄρα ἀδόκιμοί ἐστε, which cannot be more diſtinctly and literally rendred then thus, Εἰ μή τι (referring to the ἐπιγινώσκετε precedent) if ye do not, that is, if ye do not diſcern it, in ſome degree, ἄρα ἀδόκιμοί ἐστε, doubtleſs ye are reprobates, ſenſeleſs, obdurate perſons, moſt impious, and uncapable of faith, or any thing that is good. What the notion of ἀδόκιμοι is, hath been formerly mentioned. See Note on Rom. 1. g.

c. V. 11. Be perfect] The proper original notion of the word καταρτίζειν is to compact or knit together, either members in a body, or parts in a building. Thus it is applied to a building, Exod. 15. 17. κατοικητήριον ὃ κατηρτίσω the place which thou haſt made for thee to dwell in; and to walls, Ezra 4. 13, 16. to a body, Pſal. 40. 6. σῶμα κατηρτίσω μοι a body thou haſt framed, or compacted, for me. From hence it doth more largely ſignifie to prepare, or make ready, in the ſame kind as builders do fit one part to another, and make it ready for uſe; and ſo again to corroborate and ſtrengthen, as that which is well compacted and knit together is made ſtrong by that means; and laſtly to perfect, as the building of an houſe is the perfecting of it, eſpecially in the paſſive voice, becauſe that which is compacted and built is perfected and compleated by that means. Anſwerable to theſe ſeveral notions is the Gloſſarie of Heſychius, Καταρτίσαι (not, as it is corruptly read, Καταρτίσαι) κατασκευάσαι, τελειῶσαι, στερεῶσαι, the word ſignifies to prepare, to perfect, to ſtrengthen or corroborate. In the New Teſtament the word is variouſly uſed, but ſo as will by the circumſtances of the Context be appliable to one or more of theſe three notions. Mat. 4. 21. and Mar. 1. 19. it is applied to the mending of the fiſhers nets, knitting them together, and ſo either ſtrengthning, or preparing them for uſe; Mat. 21. 16. κατηρτίσω αἶνον (in reference to the childrens Hoſannahs or teſtimonies of Chriſt) Thou haſt out of their mouths compacted, or made up, or made ready, a ſong of praiſe, or confeſſion, or teſtimony; Lu. 6. 40. Every ſervant ſhall be κατηρτισμένος, made up, perfected, fitted for his crown, after the ſame manner as his maſter Chriſt is. So 1 Theſſ. 3. 10. κατηρτίσαι ὑστερήματα, to make up, or perfect, or repair, defects, and Heb. 13. 21. κατηρτίσαι ὑμᾶς, perfect you, build you up, and ſo perhaps v. 9. of this chap. τὴν ὑμῶν κατάρτισιν, I pray for your being perfect in all goodneſs, as v. 7. I beſeech God that you do no evil: So Rom. 9. 22. veſſels of wrath κατηρτισμένα εἰς ἀπώλειαν: c.

it signifies formed, or framed, or made fit. So Heb. 10. 5. out of the Septuagint of the Psalm, σῶμα κατηρτίσω μοι, a body thou hast framed me, and Heb. 11. 3. by faith we conceive κατηρτίσθαι τοὺς αἰῶνας, that the ages of the world were framed, that is, the world created. But besides all these places, one sort more there is, wherein, by reason of the affinity between the Church of Christ, and a building or body, the word hath a peculiar signification to compact Christian people (the stones in the building, or the members in the body of the Church) together into a society, where they may live and publickly serve God together: and that either, 1st, by first forming those societies, uniting men in the profession of the same truths, and performance of the same services; or 2dly, by recovering or restoring any that hath been broken off from the Church by any fault, or criminous commission, especially if he have been for that cause cut off by the Governours of the Church, that is, cast out by Ecclesiastical Censures; or 3dly, by reducing him that hath voluntarily broken himself off by schism, &c. or 4thly, by God's restoring peace and tranquillity to the Church, that they may thus freely meet together. In the first sense we have it, Ephes. 4. 12. where he speaks of the several offices ordained in the Church, and the first end which he assigns of so doing, is, πρὸς τὸ καταρτισμὸν τῶν ἁγίων, for the compacting of the saints, that is, for the holding the body of the Church together to frequent publick assemblies, &c. In the second sense 'tis clearly used, Gal. 6. 1. where the spiritual, or Governours of the Church, are advised to indulgence and tenderness, not too much sharpness or severity toward offenders, or lapsed persons, and accordingly are appointed καταρτίζειν, to restore such an one in the spirit of meekness; that is, either by mild reprehension, and exhortation, to recover him to a sense and reformation of his fault, without proceeding to any sharper course, or else, in case of greater severity, to be soon mollified again toward him, to take off the censures of the Church from him. Which there appears not only by the evidence of the words themselves, but by the subsequent precept of bearing one another's burthens, ver. 2. as that may be explained by a parallel place in Ignatius's Epistle to Polycarpus, where he bids him as a Bishop, τὴν ἑνώσιν φροντίζειν, καὶ πάντας βαστάζειν, καὶ πάντων ἀνέχεσθαι ἐν ἀγάπῃ, take care of the unity, (that is, the καταρτισμὸς here, the keeping whole Christ's body, the Church) bear all, and suffer, or bear, with all in love. And so perhaps in this chapter κατάρτισις, ver. 9. may be the restoring of the lapsed offenders upon their sincerity of reformation, or rather the continuing them in the communion of the Church, without need of having the censures inflicted upon them; for so it there follows, as the consequent of his praying for their κατάρτισις, for which cause I write these things being absent, that being present I may not ἀποτόμως χρῆσθαι, deal sharply, or use excision: where κατάρτισις, making up, restoring, or keeping whole, may very fitly be rendred, as opposite to ἀποτομία, excision, the word set to denote the censures. Thus in Hippodamus the Pythagorean, in his book De Republ. prescribing society or meeting together of old and young, in order to preservation of peace, and moderating all sorts of affections, he adds, ἐπειδήπερ τὶ μὲν νέον δέονται σωφρονισμοῦ καὶ καταρτύσεως, because young men need to be taught sobriety, or moderation, and to have their excesses corrected and allayed, καταρτύσεως, correction, saith the interpreter in Stobæus, p. 250. but that sure not by way of punishment, for the φειδιτίαι and συσσίτια, the friendly meetings and feasts were no places of judicature, nor instituted to any such like design but by way of exhortation or friendly advice, the elder to the younger, who might have such an authority with them καταρτύειν (which is all one with καταρτίζειν) to settle, or accomplish them, bring them to a stayedness and stability of temper. In the third sense 'tis used 1 Cor. 1. 10. where ἦτε κατηρτισμένοι, their being knit, or compacted together, in the same mind, or opinion, is set opposite to having schisms among them, and contentions, v. 11. and so here καταρτίζεσθε, be ye knit together, is preparative to their being of the same mind, and having peace among them. In the fourth or last sense it seems to be taken 1 Pet. 5. 10. where he prays to God for the dispersed Jew Christians, that after that short time of sufferings, God will αὐτὸς καταρτίσαι ὑμᾶς, himself, by his special providence, take care for them, and restore them halcyonian days of peace, to serve him in the publick assemblies. Thus S. Ignatius (in his Epistle to the Smyrnæans, making a motion to them to send a congratulation into Syria, διὰ τὸ καὶ τὴν Θεὸν αὐτοῖς γινομένην εὐδίαν, that they had a fair sunshine in respect of the service of God) doth thus express it, ὅτι εἰρηνεύουσι, καὶ ἀπέλαβον τὸ ἴδιον μέγεθος, καὶ ἀπηκατεστάθη αὐτοῖς τὸ ἴδιον σωμάτιον, or σωματεῖον, because they have peace, and have received their own magnitude, and their own body is restored to them; where the ἴδιον μέγεθος, and the σωμάτιον, are the body of the Church meeting together in assemblies, which is there said ἀποκατασταθῆναι to be restored, as here καταρτίζεσθαι to be repaired, or made up, that is, restored to them. See Jude Note c.

V. 14. Communion] What is the notion of κοινωνία for charity, or liberality, hath been formerly observed, Note on Act. 2. d. and 2 Cor. 8. 4. And agreeably, though in a spiritual sense, is κοινωνία πνεύματος, the communication of the Spirit here, the liberality of the holy Ghost in the plentiful effusion of his gifts, so as it will be all one with δωρεὰ τοῦ ἁγίου πνεύματος, the gift of the holy Spirit, Act. 2. 38. and so as will be most fit to joyn with χάρις Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, the grace, or charity, or liberality, of Christ, and the love of God, (as in Cicero de Nat. Deor. l. 3. Dei gratia & charitas, God's grace or favour, and charity or love, are put together) For thus is χάρις Χριστοῦ, the grace of Christ, used 2 Cor. 8. 9. and thus κοινωνία πνεύματος, the communion of the Spirit, Phil. 2. 1. being joined with σπλάγχνα and οἰκτιρμοί, bowels and mercies, that is, the evidences of the highest liberality.

THE EPISTLE of PAUL the APOSTLE TO THE [a]GALATIANS.

THE time of the Apoſtles writing this Epiſtle to the Galatians, is generally concieved to be near the time of that to the Romans, An. Chr. 55. above 20 years after his converſion. Chryſoſtom and Theophylact ſet it before that: And then there can be no poſſibility of believing the ſubſcription of the Epiſtle, which affirms it to be written from Rome, where we know the Apoſtle had not been when he wrote his Epiſtle to the Romans. But although of the time of writing this Epiſtle we have no ſure evidence, yet two things we diſcern of it: Firſt, That the chief deſign of it was to vindicate the liberty of the Goſpel from the Judaical yoke, which by being by them impoſed upon all Gentiles which ſhould receive the faith, was likely to prove a great hindrance to the progreſs of the Goſpel among the heathens, or uncircumciſion, of whom S. Paul profeſs'd to be the Apoſtle. Secondly, That they which in this Church preſs'd this yoke moſt eagerly, were thoſe (which did not themſelves obſerve it,) heretical Chriſtians, the Gnoſticks, which were not themſelves circumciſed, as being many of them neither native Jews, nor Proſelytes of their Covenant, yet, to avoid perſecution from the Jews, did thus far comply with them, in preſſing circumciſion upon the converted Gentiles; to which end, they vehemently oppoſed S. Paul's doctrine and practice, affirming that what he had, he had received from the other Apoſtles, and conſequently was to be rectified by them, S. Peter, &c. and indeed that he varied from himſelf. From which calumnies he ſeverally vindicates himſelf in this Epiſtle, ſhewing that he received his doctrine from none but Chriſt himſelf, that thoſe other Apoſtles profeſs'd the ſame doctrine that he did, and that though he himſelf uſed a greater liberty at ſome times than at other, in reſpect of the advantages of the Church, yet his doctrine was always the ſame, the truth of which he therefore confirms by many arguments. That theſe hereticks were, ſoon after the planting the Faith here, crept in among them, appears by his words, c. 1. 6. he marvels they were ſo ſoon removed, &c. The Goſpel having, ſome three years before, been there if not planted, yet confirmed by his preaching, Act. 18. 23. about the time of Apollos being at Corinth (that is, about An. Chr. 51, or 52.) as it is affirmed Act. 19. 1. Galatia and Phrygia being in the number of thoſe upper coaſts (of Aſia, or Natolia) which there he is ſaid to have paſs'd through. By which, it appears how cloſe at the heels of the Apoſtles, that ſowed the good corn, the Gnoſticks, the Officers of the envious Man, follow'd, to ſow their darnel, as in Samaria firſt, ſo in other Cities and Regions, where the Faith was planted by the Apoſtles, and oppoſed by the Jews, and perſecuted.

Paraphraſe.

* from ἀπ'

1. PAUL an Apoſtle not * of men, neither by man, but by Jeſus Chriſt, and God the Father, who raiſed him from the dead.]

1. Paul an Apoſtle, (that had not my commiſſion from any meer man (as ſome others, the ſecondary Apoſtles, had) but from God in heaven, and was not called by any other Apoſtle of Chriſt, or aſſiſted by any, but firſt called to the faith by the immediate voice of Jeſus Chriſt ſpeaking to me out of heaven, then by revelation from him, Act. 9. 15. authorized to preach among the Gentiles, and after, Act. 13. 2. by ſpecial direction of the holy Ghoſt ſeparated to the Apoſtleſhip, who alſo received all my inſtructions from him by viſion to Ananias, and ſo in effect from God the Father, which by his power raiſed him from the dead, and gave all power unto him,)

2. And all the [a]brethren which are with me, unto the Churches of Galatia.]

2. And all thoſe that are conſtantly with me (ſee Phil. 4. 22.) my fellow-labourers in the Goſpel, ſend greeting to all the ſeveral Churches in the cities and regions of Galatia.

3. Grace be to you, and peace from God the Father, and from our Lord Jeſus Chriſt,]

4. Who gave himſelf for our ſins, that he might deliver us from this † preſent evil world, according to the will of * God, and our Father:]

4. Whoſe dying for us was purpoſely deſigned to work a reformation, and mortification of ſin in us, and to take us off from the corrupt practices of the men of this age, both idolatrous Gentiles, and corrupt hypocritical Jews, which, with a zeal to circumciſion, and the like Moſaical rites, live in all the impurity and impiety in the world; and wherein Chriſt hath done nothing but what is exactly according to the will and appointment of the eternal God, and father of us all, the God of Iſrael, whom the Jews acknowledge, and profeſs to worſhip.

* our God and father, τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ πατρὸς ἡμῶν

5. To whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

6. I marvel that you are ſo ſoon removed from him that called you * into the grace of Chriſt, unto another Goſpel.]

6. Having ſo lately preached the Goſpel of Chriſt among you, Act. 18. 23. and thereby either confirmed, or firſt converted you to the faith, I wonder you ſhould ſo ſuddenly forſake thoſe infuſions you received from me, and remove quite from the truth of the Goſpel to a new ſtrange doctrine.

7. Which is not another, but there be ſome that trouble you, and would pervert the Goſpel of Chriſt.]

7. Which indeed is far from being another Goſpel, or doctrine of Chriſt, fit to come in competition with what I preached to you, far from being taught, as is pretended, by other Apoſtles; Only there are ſome Gentiles that had lived in Judæa, of the ſect of the Gnoſticks, ſuch as were at Philippi, ch. 3. 3. teaching the Gentile converts that they muſt be circumciſed, not out of any principle of piety, or true zeal to the Moſaical Law, but that they might curry favour with the Jews, and avoid the preſſures that lay upon the Chriſtians, whoſe perſecutions were generally cauſed by them, and theſe do quite pervert and change that doctrine that I delivered you from Chriſt.

8. And if any attempt to do that, though it were I my ſelf, or even an Angel from heaven, I proclaim unto you mine opinion and Apoſtolical ſentence, that you are to diſclaim and renounce all communion with him, to look on him, as on an excommunicated perſon, under the ſecond degree of excommunication, that none is to have any commerce with in ſacred matters.

9. As we ſaid before, ſo ſay I now again, If any man preach any other Goſpel unto you than that ye have received, let him be * accurſed.]

9. And that ye may take more heed to what I ſay, I repeat it again, Whoſoever teaches you any new doctrine contrary to what I at firſt preach'd to you, let him be caſt out of the Church by you.

10. For do I now [b]perſwade men, or God? or do I ſeek to pleaſe men? for if I yet pleaſed men, I † ſhould not be the ſervant of Chriſt.]

10. By this you may gueſs whoſe doctrine is moſt to be heeded; theirs ſure that deſire not to get the favour of men, to avert the diſpleaſure of men, but to ſecure the favour of God, to approve themſelves to him: and I hope 'tis clear, that is my only deſign, and not theirs, who labour to propitiate the perſecuting Jews, as by their new infuſions 'tis manifeſt your Gnoſtick teachers do. This if I did, I muſt profeſs, I ſhould not faithfully diſcharge the truſt repoſed in me by Chriſt; or, If I had had a mind to this, I had never turned Chriſtian, loſing thereby all my intereſts among the Jews.

(which if it were, there were reaſon that now their verdict ſhould be taken in it,) ſo it is evident that I had it not from thoſe that were Chriſtians and Apoſtles before me, but by call from heaven, and by immediate revelation from Chriſt, in oppoſition to that way that had been taught me among the Jews.

Annotations on Chap. I.

1. Ἀδελφοὶ σὺν ἐμοὶ

V. 2. Brethren which are with me] The word ἀδελφοὶ brethren doth oft ſignifie no more than believers, Chriſtians; but here being joyned with Paul in the writing of the Epiſtle οἱ σὺν ἐμοὶ πάντες ἀδελφοὶ, all the brethren with me, it ſeems to denote thoſe that accompanied S. Paul in his travails, and aſſiſted him in the preaching of the Goſpel, ſuch as Timothy and Clemens Phil. 4. 3. and the reſt, who are there called his fellow-labourers. Thus Phil. 4. 21. The brethren that are with me ſeem to ſignifie, being diſtinguiſh'd from πάντες ἅγιοι all the Saints, v. 22. And thus in the Epiſtles to the Philippians and Coloſſians, Timothy is joyned with him in the Inſcription, and Silvanus and Timotheus both in the Epiſtles to the Theſſalonians (and ſo the ſame probably here, or the like, though they be not named.) And ſo ὁ ἀδελφὸς the brother, 2. Cor. 8. 18. and c. 12. 18. is thought to be either Silvanus or S. Luke, the conſtant companion of S. Paul for ſome time: And ſo our brethren, 2 Cor. 8. 23.

b. Πείθειν

V. 10. Perſuade] What πείθειν ἀνθρώπους, and Θεὸν, to perſuade Men and God ſignifies, muſt be taken from the like phraſe in the Old Teſtament, 1 Sam. 24. 7. where the Greek hath theſe words, Ἔπεισε Δαβὶδ τοὺς ἄνδρας αὐτοῦ ἐν λόγοις, David perſuaded his Men with words, where we read, David ſtay'd his ſervants with theſe words. The men that were with David were very eager to have him take the advantage againſt Saul, and kill him, v. 4. and were ready to riſe up againſt him to kill him, v. 7. and David's ſpeech to them took them off from this bloody purpoſe, and that is expreſs'd by Ἔπεισε, perſuading them, appeaſing, pacifying them. Thus is it the office of a Rhetor, or advocate, πείθειν to perſuade, that is, to appeaſe the judge to the client whoſe cauſe is pleaded, to propitiate him. So Mat. 28. 14. If the Governour hear of it, that is, of the ſouldiers being ſo negligent, as to let Chriſt be ſtollen out of the Grave which they were ſet to watch, πείσομεν αὐτὸν, we will perſuade him, that is, appeaſe him, obtain his pardon for you, and, as it follows, ὑμᾶς ἀμερίμνους ποιήσομεν, we will free you from all ſollicitude of ſecuring your ſelves from that heavy puniſhment that by the Roman Laws Martial was due to the watch-man that fell aſleep. By which it is clear that πείθειν is to propitiate, or gain ones favour, to appeaſe wrath, or Puniſhment, to avert diſpleaſure; and ſo it is here, to perſuade men, that is, to ſay, or teach thoſe doctrines which will avert the diſpleaſure of the perſecuting Jews, which the Gnoſtick teachers did; and to perſuade God is to endeavour to ſay and preach that which may avert God's Wrath, be acceptable to him, obtain and ſecure his favour. And this is in the next words explained by ἀρέσκειν to pleaſe men, as that is contrary to, and unreconcileable with, the ſervice, or approving himſelf to God.

Πείσομεν αὐτὸν

c. Ἀφορίζειν

V. 15. Separated me from my mothers womb] Ἀφορίζειν to ſeparate in this place ſignifies in the ſame manner as Act. 13. 2. (ſpoken of this Apoſtle) a conſecration to the Apoſtolical office, only with this difference, that there it is ſpoken of it as inſtantly to be performed by the miniſtry of men, here only in the deſignation or decree of God, which is therefore ſaid to be ἐκ κοιλίας, from the womb, to denote the no-contribution made by him toward this decree of giving him a commiſſion to be an Apoſtle, or the no-merit conſider'd in him by God, when he deſigned him to this office. This farther includes a purpoſe of God's to call him from heaven, in the midſt of his madneſs againſt Chriſtians, ſtians, (which mercy of God's to him was founded in his doing it ignorantly, 1 Tim. 1. 13.) and his foreſight that he would immediately convert upon that call; which two being firſt ſuppoſed (in God's eternal purpoſe and preſcience) it muſt needs follow to be an act of his unmerited free choice from all eternity, that God purpoſed to make uſe of him for the converting of others, who had himſelf been wonderfully changed from ſo profeſſed an enmity to the faith, to ſo perfect an obedience to it. But this being a deſignation only to the dignity of the Apoſtolical office, (as Jeremy c. 1. 4. and John Baptiſt, and others appear to have been deſigned to the prophetick) can with no reaſon be ſo applied as to infer any irreſpective decree or deſtination of his perſon to heaven and bliſs; that being laid up for him as a crown of righteouſneſs, a reward of the finiſhing his courſe and perſeverance, 2 Tim. 4. 8.

CHAP. II.

Paraphraſe.

* Afterward † about fourteen years

1. *Then [a] † fourteen years after I went up again to Jeruſalem with Barnabas, and took Titus with me alſo.]

1. After this, ſome fourteen years after my converſion, (mentioned ch. 1. 16.) I went a ſecond time to Jeruſalem, Barnabas and I together, and Titus alſo attended me. a.

2. And by God's appointment, either firſt ſignified, or after confirmed to me by viſion (ſuch as Paul often had about ſeveral matters) I went up at this time to Jeruſalem, and gave the Church there an account of my preaching (and the ſucceſs of that) among the Gentiles. This I thought fit to do, and yet firſt to do it to thoſe that were the principal men among them, James the Biſhop of Jeruſalem, and Peter, and John, v. 9. who were all Apoſtles of the circumciſion, or Jewiſh converts: and my reaſon of doing ſo was, leſt I ſhould miſcarry on one ſide or other, loſe either my preſent or my paſt labour, my preſent among the Jews, my paſt among the Gentiles; that is, leſt by the Jews I ſhould be thought to preach a different doctrine from thoſe who had been called before me, or by the Gentiles (if I ſhould to their prejudice comply with the Jews) I ſhould be thought inconſtant, and be deemed not to count it lawful to converſe with them, which would utterly obſtruct their way to receiving the faith, and ſhut it up from them. b. for the the of

And by what I then did, they did all to fully conſent to my doctrine (that Gentile Chriſtians were not bound to the Jewiſh obſervances) that, as I would not yield, ſo they did not force Titus to be circumciſed, though he were known to be a Greek, and familiarly converſed with me, and was employed by me. c. was

4. This I thus did, becauſe of the falſe Jews, that making as if they were Chriſtians, came to obſerve what liberty I took in omitting the obſervances of the Law, that by ſome means or other they might accuſe me, and either by the verdict of the Councel of Jeruſalem, or by ſome other means (by bringing perſecution, &c. upon me,) inforce me to the obſervation of the Jewiſh ceremonies. c

To theſe men (though at other times I was content to comply with the weak,) I could not think fit to do it never ſo little while, though but for that ſpace of my ſtaying at Jeruſalem, or to yield by any kind of acknowledgment or condeſcenſion, that the Gentiles ſhould be obnoxious to that yoke, and this, that we might not betray the Goſpel of Chriſt, but preſerve it entire to you.

6. As for thoſe prime men, intimated ver. 2. and named ver. 9. (James, and Peter, and John, I need not give any other Character of them, God is not moved in this matter with the perſonal excellencies of any, but can make uſe of any the meaneſt, as well as moſt excellent inſtruments,) for theſe, I ſay, though they were perſons of great knowledge, and dignity, and authority, and that moſt juſtly, yet when they underſtood what I had done, they gave me no advice to alter any thing, nor ſaid any more to me than what I knew before. d. e.

7. But contrariwiſe, [f] when they ſaw that the Goſpel of the uncircumciſion was committed unto me, as the Goſpel of the circumciſion was unto Peter,]

8. (For the ſame God that had enabled Peter, and given him gifts and miraculous Powers to diſcharge that office of an Apoſtle to the Jews, gave me alſo the like commiſſion and abilities to be an Apoſtle to the Gentiles.)

9. And when James, Cephas, and John, who * ſeemed to be pillars, perceived the grace that was given unto me, they gave to me and Barnabas the right hands of † fellowſhip, that we ſhould go unto the heathen, and they unto the circumciſion.]

9. Theſe three, I ſay, James the Biſhop of Jeruſalem, and Peter, and John the ſon of Zebedee, two prime Apoſtles, who were looked on as the pillars of the Church, approved and commended all that we did, or had done, acknowledged us as their companions, joined with us, and did by conſent make an agreement, that they and we ſhould betake our ſelves ſeverally (into what city ſoever either of us entred) we to the Gentiles, and they to the Jews of the city, and ſo conſtitute ſeveral congregations in each city, of Jews and Gentiles, (ſee Note on Rev. 11. b.)

10. Only they would that we ſhould remember the poor, the ſame which I alſo was forward to do.]

10. And all that they inſiſted on to us, was that we ſhould take into our care the wants of the poor Chriſtians in Judæa, who were ſadly ſpoiled and waſted by their unbelieving countrymen, 1 Theſſ. 11. 14. Heb. 10. 34. (ſee Chryſoſtom) and get collections for them among the Gentiles, which I was as forward to do as they to have me.

* face to face, because he had been blamed, κατὰ πρόσωπον

11. But when Peter was come to Antioch I withſtood him * to the face, becauſe he was to be blamed.]

11. But when, after this, Peter came and preach'd to the Jews at Antioch, I who was there alſo at the ſame time preaching to the Gentiles of that city, reſiſted him, becauſe they that had taken notice of his former actions, and the change that was obſervable in him, did look upon him as a diſſembler, and laid that to his charge, not knowing the true ground of what he did. g.

12. For before that certain came from James, he did eat with the Gentiles; but when they were come, he withdrew, and ſeparated himſelf, fearing them which were of the circumciſion.]

12. For before the time that ſome believing Jews of Jeruſalem, (James's See) who were generally zealous for the Moſaical performances, Act. 21. 20. came from thence to Antioch (in like manner as thoſe, Act. 15. 1.) he freely converſed with the Gentile Chriſtians, and eat with them; but while they were preſent, out of fear of diſpleaſing and ſcandalizing thoſe Jewiſh Chriſtians, and occaſioning their falling off, or forſaking the faith (ſee Theophylact and Chryſoſtom interpreting it by a like phraſe, c. 4. 11. I am afraid of you, leſt I have beſtowed on you labour in vain) he abſtained from uſing that liberty, and did not uſe any converſation with them for a time. ate

13. And the other Jews diſſembled likewiſe with him, inſomuch that Barnabas alſo was carried away with their diſſimulation.]

13. And the whole number of the Jewiſh converts of Antiochia followed his example, and abſtained from converſing freely with the Gentiles, making as if they were ſuch zealots of the Moſaical law, as that they would not uſe this illegal liberty; and this was ſo univerſally done by all, that Barnabas, that came with me, began to be wrought on by it, and to make ſcruple to converſe familiarly with the Gentiles, as if it were not lawful to do ſo. was

* the ſtraight path to the truth, ὀρθοποδοῦσι πρὸς τὴν ἀλήθειαν

14. But when I ſaw that they walked not * uprightly according to the truth of the Goſpel, I ſaid unto Peter before them all, If thou, being a Jew, liveſt after the manner of the Gentiles, and not as do the Jews, why compelleſt thou the Gentiles to live as do the Jews?]

14. Whereupon conſidering the inconvenience that would come on this, and that it would be a way to ſhut out all the Gentiles from the faith, if by Peter's fear of ſcandalizing the Jews, men were brought to believe that the Gentiles might not freely be accompanied with, (and

(and conſequently could not be preached to by us) and ſo that this was not the way which was moſt conducible to the propagating of Chriſtian religion, which was like to conſiſt more of Gentiles than of Jews, I thus ſpake publickly to Peter, Thou haſt hitherto lived like (and converſed with) the Gentile Chriſtians, and not obſerved the Jewiſh rules; why doſt thou now by thy practice, bring the Gentiles to think it neceſſary for them to obſerve the Jewiſh law?

13. Certainly that which these men learn and think to be implied by this practice of thine, is far from being true doctrine: For we that indeed were, before our Chriſtianity, Jews born, and ſo far more obliged in any reaſon to obſerve the Moſaical Law, than the idolatrous ignorant heathens, whom the Jews themſelves never thought obliged to the Moſaical performances, and therefore looked upon them with ſuch contempt, as impure, and not fit to be converſed with,

15. We who are Jews by † nature, and not ſinners of the Gentiles,] † birth φύσει

16. We, I ſay, being taught by Chriſtianity, that by the obſervation of the Law (ſee Note on Mat. 5. g.) by performance of the Moſaical rites, juſtification is not to be expected, but only by the faith of Jeſus Chriſt, without that we, I ſay, do thus our ſelves receive the Chriſtian Religion, and ought in any reaſon to teach it others, ſo as not to depend on the Moſaical performances for juſtification, but on the faith of Chriſt, without them, and that upon this grand principle, that neither Jew nor Gentile can be juſtified by legal obedience, and therefore muſt ſeek to Chriſt for it, who not now requiring of us theſe outward rites, but the inward purity ſignified by them, is conſequently to be obeyed in what he requires, and the liberty that he alſo gives to be vindicated by us againſt all contrary pretenders, who indeed will be far from changing their minds by our yielding to, or complying with them.

16. Knowing that a man is not juſtified by the works of the Law, but by the faith of Jeſus Chriſt, even we have believed in Jeſus Chriſt, that we might be juſtified by the faith of Chriſt, and not by the works of the Law; for by the works of the Law ſhall no fleſh be juſtified.]

17. But then it is objected by thoſe that ſtand ſo for the Jewiſh law, that if, ſeeking to be juſtified by faith in Chriſt, we neglect the Moſaical Law, and live like Gentiles, we make by this means, or ſuppoſe Chriſt to be an enemy to the Law, and a favourer of Gentiliſm, (one that aſſiſts that againſt Judaiſm, makes proviſion for it.) To which we anſwer, that whatſoever be ſaid of his favouring thoſe that do not bind themſelves to the Judaical Law, he is yet ſure no favourer of Gentiliſm or heathen life.

17. But if while we ſeek to be juſtified by Chriſt, we our ſelves alſo are found h ſinners, is therefore Chriſt the miniſter of ſin? God forbid.] h

18. But on the other ſide rather, when a man hath renounced juſtification by the Moſaical Law, and depended only on Chriſt for it, if he ſhall again return to that which he hath renounced, and aſſert juſtification by that Law, affirm that the obſervance of Moſaical rites is neceſſary to juſtification, what doth he then but apoſtatize in ſome meaſure, depart from his former profeſſion, in returning to Judaiſm again?

18. For if I build again the things which I deſtroyed, I make my ſelf a tranſgreſſour.]

19. We are all taught by the very Old Teſtament, the Law and Prophets, that we muſt ſeek farther than the Law, viz. to Chriſt, and ſo I have done, and learned by the Law it ſelf not to value it too much, but to give over hope of juſtification or life by thoſe legal performances, that ſo I may find it in God, through Chriſt, in the New Covenant.

19. For I * through the Law am dead to the Law, that I might live unto God.] * by the law did die Διὰ νόμου ἀπέθανον

20. Chriſt by his death hath aboliſhed the Moſaical Law, Epheſ. 2. 14. that is, hath taken away the diſcrimination betwixt Jew and Gentile, brought juſtification into the world for thoſe that obſerve not the Moſaical Law, and I by being a Chriſtian, have been made partaker of this fruit of Chriſt's death, and ſo am alſo dead to the Law, v. 9. and Rom. 7. 4. and now I am no longer the man I was, that is, a Jew, but a Chriſtian, and am now bound to no other obſervations but thoſe which Chriſt requireth of me, to whom I am obliged by all the bands of love and duty, having given his own life for me to free me from the Moſaical Law, among other things.

20. † I am crucified with Chriſt: *nevertheleſs I live, yet not I, but Chriſt liveth in me, and † the life which I now live in the fleſh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himſelf for me.] † I have been crucified Συνεσταύρωμαι * but, or, and I live, not any longer I, ζῶ δὲ οὐκέτι ἐγώ † what I now live ὃ νυνὶ ζῶ

21. This freedom therefore I make uſe of, and do not depend on the Law for juſtification, nor think the Moſaical obſervances ſtill neceſſary; for that were to evacuate the Goſpel of Chriſt, (ſee Note on Heb. 13. c.) for if ſtill the Moſaical performances are neceſſary and ſufficient to our juſtification, then Chriſt needed not to have died, it would be matter of no advantage to us, that he thus came into the world, and laid down his life for us.

21. I do not fruſtrate the grace of God; for if righteouſneſs come by the Law, then Chriſt is dead in vain.]

Annotations on Chap. II.

V. 1. Fourteen years after] What διὰ δεκατεσσάρων ἐτῶν here ſignifies is by learned men made a matter of ſome queſtion. The time to which S. Paul refers muſt be that of his going (with Barnabas here mention'd) from Antioch to Jeruſalem, on the queſtion here diſcourſed of, about the neceſſity of the gentile Chriſtians being circumciſed; that ſo firſt it may connect with the ſpaces mention'd c. 1. 18, 21. (ſo as the word πάλιν again ſeems to import) to denote the next time of his going to Jeruſalem after that mentioned v. 18. and 2dly, ſo as to denote a time wherein Peter may be ſuppoſed ſtill to reſide at Jeruſalem, and wherein Titus may be ſuppoſed to be with S. Paul as a neophytus, and a companion, (and ſo in danger of being preſſed to be circumciſed) not yet employed, or ſent out by him on any ſervice in the Churches. Now this is thought ſo unlikely to be fourteen years after the ſpace laſt mention'd c. 1. 21. (his going to Syria and Cilicia, Act. 9. 30.) that it hath been thought probable, that (as in numeral Letters it oft happens) fourteen ſhould be here ſet inſtead of four. For which emendation ſeeing there appears not any ground in the antient Manuſcripts, it will ſurely be more reaſonable to obſerve, 1. that διὰ doth not diſtinctly ſignifie after (as μετὰ c. 1. 18. had done) but by, or about, that is near that ſpace, though not preciſely fourteen years: 2dly, that the Ἔπειτα Afterward, or then, refers not to that which was mention'd immediately before, his paſſing through Syria and Cilicia, ſo as to affirm this to have been fourteen years after that; no, nor to the former Epocha's, either his going up to Jeruſalem, v. 18. or departing into Arabia, v. 17. but to that great Epocha, ſo conſiderable to him, the time of his converſion, which immediately ſucceeding the death of S. Steven may reaſonably be placed (in the firſt year after Chriſt's aſſumption,) An. Ch. 34. From whence to the time of that Councel, which is ordinarily placed, An. Chr. 47. it was about thirteen or fourteen years. And then there will be no more need of an emendation, than there is authority for the imagining any.

V. 2. To them which were of reputation] For the notion of δοκοῦντες here, and δοκοῦντες εἶναί τι, v. 6. it muſt be obſerved, that it ſignifies not the mens own opinion of themſelves, or their aſſuming any great authority over others (as of Simon Magus it is ſaid, Act. 8. 9. that he did λέγων εἶναί τινα ἑαυτὸν μέγαν, ſay, or take upon him, that he was ſome great one) but that they were ſo in the reputation and eſteem of others, and that the great opinion that at that time all Chriſtians had of them, above the reſt of the Apoſtles, was it that moved Paul to go up, and addreſs himſelf particularly to them. This is fitly expreſs'd by οἱ δοκοῦντες, as from that Verb the Noun δόξα, reputation or glory, comes, thoſe that are in eſteem in an eminent manner, and more ſo by δοκοῦντες εἶναί τι, thoſe that are eſteemed to be ſomething, that is, ſomething above other their ὁμότιμοι or fellow-Apoſtles; not ſeemed, ſo as that is equivocal either to ſeeming falſely, bare ſeeming, or ſeeming in their own eyes, but ſeeming ſo in truth, and to the generality of the beſt and wiſeſt Chriſtians. In proportion to this, οὐδέν μοι διαφέρει, it maketh no matter to me, ver. 6. is far from any thing of ſcorn or deſpiſing in S. Paul, that ſpeaks it: it is a ſolemn form only of inſiſting on his own commiſſion from Chriſt, which could no way be prejudiced by the real excellency of their perſons, how great ſoever they were. God, who accepts no perſons, and attends not to perſonal excellencies, may give his Commiſſion to an ἄνθρωπος, to the meaneſt and unworthieſt as well as to thoſe which are really of the greateſt eminence. All this paſſage therefore is rather an expreſſion of great reverence to Peter, &c. than of ſcorn. Only for his miſſion and revelations, Paul hath them from Chriſt, not from any man, cap. 1. 16. and 2. 6.

V. 3. Com-

c. ἰκ Ἠναγκάσθη

V. 3. Compelled] What ἰκ ἠναγκάσθη, was not constrained, signifies here, is a matter of some difficulty, which being explained will make the next verse perspicuous, which otherwise seems not intelligible. That some pretended Christians looked very jealously on S. Paul, as one averse from the Mosaical Law, is sufficiently known. These, when Paul came to Jerusalem, laid it to his charge that he preached to the Gentiles that were not circumcised, conversed freely with them, and Titus (being a Grecian, and at that time with him) they specified to be one of them, and him they would have constrained to be circumcised. But, saith S. Paul, ἰκ ἠναγκάσθη, though he were such as was pretended, and though this were thus pressed by them, and though I was by this means likely to aliene the Jews minds from the Gospel, as it was preach'd by me, (this being an act of confession that I was guilty of what was laid to my charge) and so matter of some scandal to the Jews of Jerusalem; yet I that was willing to yield at some times (to avoid the scandal of the Jews) to perform some ceremonies of the Law, Act. 21. 26. and so circumcised Timothy, was resolved not to do it now, because if I did, it must appear that those false brethren, pretended Christians, had overcome me at Jerusalem, and that the Church there judged on their side against me, and so that Titus had been by order of the Church or Councel of Jerusalem forced to be circumcised: Which thing must needs have been matter of so much greater scandal and discouragement to the Gentiles, in aliening their minds from the Christian faith, and that scandal have been more considerable to the hindrance of the progress of the Gospel, which was to be hoped for more plentifully among the Gentiles than the Jews, that I was very resolute, and took special care that Titus should not be circumcised. And this v. 3. διὰ τοὺς παρεισάκτους ψευδαδέλφους, because of the false brethren, that came in to watch what I would do, and to carry it against me in the Councel at Jerusalem, which is expressed by καταδουλώσωνται bringing under in the end of the verse. By these Paul resolved he would not be worsted, and therefore though at other times he was content to comply πρὸς ὥραν for some short time, yet now he would not do so, that the truth of the Gospel might abide toward you, that is, that the Galatians, that is, Gentile Christians, might not be scandalized at this compliance, which is before meant by μήπως εἰς κενὸν δράμωμεν, v. 2. lest I should have run in vain, that is, lest I should discourage and lose the Gentiles, which I had brought to the faith; as on the other side he went and gave an account at Jerusalem to the δοκοῦσι eminent persons there, of his preaching the Gospel to the uncircumcised Gentiles, and the reasons of it, μή πως εἰς κενὸν τρέχω, lest he should now scandalize the Jews that were Christians, and aliene them (at Jerusalem and elsewhere) from hearkning to him.

V. 6. But of these——] What hath often been observed of the usuage of Greek words, in these sacred writers, otherwise than in the propriety of the Greek language belongs to them, must also from words be extended to syntaxis, which is oft such as the rules of Grammar and use of authors doth not admit of. And this for the most part falls out by the interposing of some parenthesis, of greater or lesser length, and then prosecuting what was begun before it in another form of construction, than that in which it had been begun. Some examples of this in an inferior degree are observable Col. 1. 10. where after περιπατῆσαι ὑμᾶς, some words interposing, the construction is altered, and goes on with καρποφοροῦντες καὶ αὐξανόμενοι——And c. 3. 16. where after ὁ λόγος ἐνοικείτω ἐν ὑμῖν——Let the word of God inhabit in you, the construction is soon alter'd into διδάσκοντες καὶ νουθετοῦντες ἑαυτοὺς——So Eph. 3. 17. where after κατοικῆσαι τὸν Χριστὸν διὰ τῆς πίστεως ἐν ταῖς καρδίαις ὑμῶν follows v. 18. ἐῤῥιζωμένοι, καὶ τεθεμελιωμένοι· and so chap. 4. 1. where after ἀξίως περιπατῆσαι, &c. (after a few words follows ἀνεχόμενοι, and ἀποδίδοσθε, which doth not regularly cohere with it. But this is more eminently observable in the beginning of the second and third Chapters of that Epistle. In the second after Ὑμᾶς ὄντας νεκροὺς τοῖς παραπτώμασι καὶ τῇ ἀκροβυστίᾳ, there follows a long parenthesis to ver. 4. by which means the Verb that should govern ὑμᾶς is omitted, and the period again begun, with Ὁ δὲ Θεὸς——ἠγάπησεν ἡμᾶς, καὶ ὄντας ἡμᾶς νεκροὺς τοῖς παραπτώμασι συνεζωοποίησε τῷ Χριστῷ, which συνεζωοποίησε hath quickned together with Christ was sure the Verb omitted in the first verse. So c. 3. 1. after Τούτου χάριν ἐγὼ Παῦλος ὁ δέσμιος—— For this cause I Paul a prisoner of Christ Jesus for you Gentiles, comes in a long parenthesis, εἴγε ἠκούσατε, &c. and another involved in that, ver. 3. καθὼς προέγραψα, &c. to the end of the fourth verse, and then the former parenthesis resumed again either unto the end of verse 7. and then the form of the construction is changed from ἐγὼ to ἐμοὶ, or perhaps to the end of v. 12th. or possibly the 13th. and then the period begins anew, Διὸ αἰτοῦμαι, that is, For which cause I (that Paul, the prisoner of Jesus Christ, ver. 1.) beseech you that ye be not discouraged at my tribulations, or for this cause I bow my knees, &c. or yet more probably, it concludes not 'till the the end of that chapter, the fourth chapter beginning, I therefore the prisoner in the Lord beseech you——And by this means the ἐγὼ Παῦλος hath no Verb following it, whersoever the parenthesis be concluded. 'Tis true indeed some have endeavoured to avoid this by acknowledging an ellipsis in that first verse, and supplying it thus, For this cause I Paul am the prisoner——But there be many inconveniences consequent to that rendring. And the many other examples of the like, shew that there is no reason to flie to that refuge. And to omit other instances, thus it is twice in this place; First, v. 4. where having begun the period with Διὰ δὲ τοὺς παρεισάκτους——some words intervening by way of parenthesis to the end of the verse, the sense begun is not finish'd, but instead of it, οἷς οὐδὲ πρὸς ὥραν εἴξαμεν, ver. 5. And then in like manner here v. 6. the period being begun, Ἀπὸ δὲ τῶν δοκούντων εἶναί τι, but from these prime men, or that appeared to be somewhat, (by which it appears that οὐδὲν ἔλαβον I received nothing, or somewhat like, was designed to be joyned to it) after the interposing of a parenthesis, ὁποῖοί ποτε ἦσαν, &c. Whatsoever they were it maketh no matter to me, &c. the sense is begun again in another form, Ἐμοὶ γὰρ οἱ δοκοῦντες οὐδὲν προσανέθεντο, For these prime men added nothing to me. So Theophylact on occasion of a reading in his Copy Heb. 10. 1. οὐκ ἐπόησαν), in the plural, they could not, which we read ἐποίησα) in the singular, acknowledgeth that so it must be read as we read, ὅσον γε τὸ τῆς γραμματικῆς ἀκριβείας ἀκόλουθον, as far as concerns the consequence of Grammatical exactness, that is, in respect of the Syntaxis, ἵνα μὴ σολοικισμὸς ἀνακύψῃ that there may be no solœcism in it (for such it must be, in an high manner, if with his Copy we read δυνάμεθα) ἐποίησα) in the plural, and understand προσφέροντες, as he doth, for the Nominative case to govern it) ἐπειδὴ δὲ, saith he, τῇ γραφῇ τεχνολογιῶν οὐδεὶς λόγος, but because the Scripture style takes no care of technical, that is, Grammatical, exactness, κἂν οὕτως αὐτὸ νοήσωμεν, ὡς τὰ ἀντίγραφα ἔχουσι, we may so understand it as the copies have it, that is, so as the words will yield a very good sense, if only the Grammatical exactness be dispensed with, viz. that the offerers, that is, the Levitical priests, cannot perfect those that come (that is, bring their sacrifices) unto them. In which words his opinion and testimony is clear, viz. that the sacred writers stood not upon such niceties as other authors do, bound not themselves to the observation of Grammatical rules. And so frequently in S. Hierom, On the Ephes. cap. 3. Quotiescumque solœcismos aut tale quid annotamus, speaking of the Apostles writings, and so Eph. cap. 1. qu. 10. 2dly. That copies were not to be disturbed, or any change attempted in them upon this one score, the avoiding of a solœcism in the period. So the learned Mr. Bois on Act. 27. 10. Laudandi mihi videntur, quibus in sacris Literis vel solœcismos manifestos, modo veritari nihil detraherent, religio esset emendare, they are to be commended that would not in the Scripture mend manifest solœcisms, so they do not hurt the truth of the matter. And the same was the account of Dr. Reynolds, a very learned man among us, when he was by Sir Henry Savile consulted in a like matter. For when in preparing the Edition of S. Chrysostom, there were some expressions observed, unvaried in all copies, which

yet were not allowable by any rules of Greek Syntaxis, and from thence a neceſſity appeared of either receding from all copies, or elſe admitting of falſe Greek, the queſtion was propoſed to that Doctor, whether it would be derogatory to that divine writer and learned Orator S. Chryſoſtom, to acknowledge that he wrote falſe Greek; and his anſwer was, that ſuch writers were more careful of the ſenſe than of the Syntaxis, and ſo the former were perſpicuous, oft neglected the latter, eſpecially when the falſe Greek was moſt promptly intelligible* (as in the inſtances produced it generally was) adding, that indeed S. Paul himſelf was guilty of the like, out of whom he ſet down two places (for a λέξις) which were not reconcilable with the rules of Grammatical Syntaxis. The places have already been taken notice of in the Epiſtles to the Coloſſians, c. 3. 16. and Epheſians, c. 4. 2. To this I add the obſervation of Maimonides, More Nev. l. 2. c. 29. Unumquemque prophetam eâ linguâ, eâque loquendi ratione, quæ ipſi eſt familiaris & conſueta, impelli à prophetia ſua ad loquendum ei qui ipſum intelligit, That every Prophet is by his prophecy impelled to ſpeak in that language and manner of ſpeaking which is familiar and cuſtomary to him; that is, (ſaith Buxtorfe out of the Rabbins Commentaries) ſi propheta eſt Hebræus, impellit eum prophetia ut loquatur Hebraicè; ſi purum & ornatum ſermonem habet, eodem modo prophetiam ſuam eloquitur; ſi minùs ornatum, minùs ornatè quoque prophetiam ſuam profert; ſi Ephraimita, Ephraimiticè, ſi Galilæus, Galilaicè; If the prophet be an Hebrew, his prophecy impels him to ſpeak Hebrew, &c. if he have pure language, he delivers his prophecy after that manner; if his language be leſs pure or eloquent, he doth deliver his prophecy leſs eloquently; if he be an Ephraimite, Ephraimitically, if a Galilean, he ſpeaks in that dialect.

* Viros magnos τῷ νομοθέτῃ intentos emendatam verborum ſtructuram ſæpe negligere. See Note in Gen. p. 5. & 27. where after mention of the many ἀνακόλουθα and ἀναπόδοτα he adds, nè quis ſperet hæc omnia ad Grammaticæ normam dirigi.

Ib. In conference added nothing to me] What is the full meaning of οὐδὲν ἐμοὶ προσανέθεντο, they added nothing to me, is, I think, exactly ſet down by S. Chryſoſtom, in οὐκ ἀνατιθέμενοι, ἀλλὰ καὶ συνιστάντες καὶ συνεφώνουν, they oppoſed me not, but conſpired and accorded with me, οὐ πλέον τι προσέθηκαν ὧν ἤδειν, they added no more to me than I knew before, μαθόντες ἐμὰ, οὐδὲν προσέθηκαν, οὐδὲν διώρθωσε, when they had knowledge of my affairs, they neither added nor altered any thing in my courſe: and this as a farther explication of what went before, that they gave no appointment for the circumciſing of Titus, that went along with Paul, and never had been circumciſed. And ſo in proportion to this ſenſe follows his notion, ἀλλὰ τἐναντίον, but contrariwiſe; not that they were taught by Paul, for they needed not that, but that they were ſo far from blaming or altering any thing in his practice, that they not only approved, but commended his whole courſe.

V. 7. When they ſaw] the three names that lie in the Greek, v. 9. will in the conſtruction be beſt placed here, v. 7. as the Nominative caſe to which ἰδόντες, ſeeing, agrees. Now who theſe three were that are here called pillars, and who are by S. Paul found at Jeruſalem, may appear by what hath been ſaid (Note on 1 Cor. 15. a.) out of antient writers, of James the brother of the Lord. Him, ſaith Clemens Ἀλεξ. l. 5. Peter, James, and John choſe Biſhop of Jeruſalem (ἐπίσκοπον Ἱεροσολύμων, not Apoſtolorum, Biſhop of the Apoſtles, as Ruffinus miſreads, or miſrenders it) and though they were the three by Chriſt preferred, and more honoured than all the reſt of the twelve, yet did they not contend one with another for this dignity, but after our Saviour's reſurrection (the next year, ſaith Euſebius in Chronico, or the 19. of Tiberius) unanimouſly conferred it on James the Juſt. So before Clemens, Hegeſippus, James, ſaith he, the brother of the Lord, called by all James the Juſt, received, or undertook, the Church of Jeruſalem with, (not as S. Hierom reads, poſt, after, as if it were μετ' Ἀποστόλους, not Ἀποστόλων) the Apoſtles. So ſaith Athanaſius in Συνοψ. Epiphan. Hær. 78. Greg. Nyſſ. de Reſurrect. Or. 2. Hierom in Catal. and in Gal. 1. Now 'tis clear, that at this time of which S. Paul ſpeaks, one of theſe three Apoſtles who made him Biſhop, James the ſon of Zebedee (one of the πρωτόκλητοι preferred before the other Apoſtles) was dead, and ſo only Peter and John left, who therefore are the latter two here named, and James the Juſt ſet foremoſt before either of them, as being now Biſhop of Jeruſalem; A dignity, ſaith Clemens, even in reſpect of the Apoſtles themſelves. In reſpect of which dignity placed on him, it is alſo that he is called an Apoſtle c. 1. 19. and Act. 15. 6. and 22. and by S. Hierom, Apoſtolus decimus tertius, the thirteenth Apoſtle.

V. 11. Was to be blamed] The Hebrew חקר, which ſignifies to find out, to detect, and is ſometimes render'd ἰχνεύειν, ἐξιχνιάζειν, δοκιμάζειν, ἐλέγχειν, is alſo rendred κατακρινόσκειν to condemn; ſo Prov. 28. 11. σοφὸς παρ' αὐτῷ πλούσιος, ὁ δὲ νοήμων πένης κατακρινόσκει αὐτόν, The rich man is wiſe in his own conceit, but the poor man that hath underſtanding ſhall detect him. So Eccluſ. 5. 17. κατάκρισις πονηρὰ ἐπὶ διλώσῳ, Detection is very grievous, or troubleſome, to a man that is double-tongued. Accordingly the word properly belongs to that charge or blame that falls on an hypocrite when his diſſimulation ſeems to be detected: and that this is the meaning of κατεγνωσμένος here, appears by that which follows v. 13. Συνυπεκρίθη, &c. the reſt of the Jews diſſembled with him. As for the præter-tenſe, wherein here 'tis ſet, that ordinarily ſignifies in the ſenſe of the præteritum pluſquam perfectum; and ſo Theophylact here interprets it, he had been found fault with, or charged of hypocriſie (viz. that ſpecified v. 12.) not by Paul, but ὑπὸ ἄλλων, by others that ſaw the fact, but knew not why he did it, and ſo thought it hypocriſie in him to eat with the Gentiles, when they of Jeruſalem were abſent, and to withdraw from the Gentiles, when they of Jeruſalem were preſent.

V. 17. Sinners] What ἁμαρτωλοὶ ſignifies in this place, will beſt be reſolved by the Context, which enforceth the ſenſe (which I have given it) of Gentiles, in oppoſition to the Jews; ſo v. 15. ἐξ ἐθνῶν ἁμαρτωλοὶ ſinners of the Gentiles, oppoſite to φύσει Ἰουδαῖοι Jews by birth. (See Note on Lu. 7. b.) It is known that the Jews look'd on all Gentiles with an odium, as on thoſe which were of a contrary religion to them, and ſo they did conſequently on all thoſe that convers'd with them, and it was that, (and not ſo much their other ſins) that made the Publicans ſo odious to them in Chriſt's time; and as Chriſt's eating with ſuch, and not obſerving (as they thought) the Judaical Law, made them look upon him as an ἁμαρτωλὸς, a ſinner, Joh. 9. 24. ſo S. Paul's teaching liberty to lay aſide the Moſaical performances, is here look'd on by them as Gentiliſm, and ſo is objected to him in this phraſe, that he being a Jew born is found ἁμαρτωλὸς a ſinner, that is, guilty of Gentiliſm under the name of ἁμαρτία ſin, and that by teaching this to be the Doctrine of Chriſt, he makes Chriſt διάκονον ἁμαρτίας one that came to aſſiſt and contribute to the ſetting up of Gentiliſm againſt Judaiſm. This S. Paul, that knew what Judaiſm truly ſignified, (the doctrine of good life in the Old Teſtament, which was by God thought fit to be fenced in by thoſe Ceremonies, not placing Religion in the bare obſervance of the Ceremonies, without heeding the ſubſtance of them) doth with deteſtation deny, μὴ γένοιτο God forbid, taking the words of the objection as by them that made it they were meant, that he taught Chriſt to be a favourer of Idolaters, and the worſhip of the heathen falſe Gods, in oppoſition to the way of worſhipping the true God by himſelf preſcribed to Moſes. This Paul denies knowing that thoſe Moſaical ceremonies were not the thing wherein (abſtracted from the inward purity ſignified, and deſired by God to be ſecured by them) the worſhip of the true God conſiſted; as on the other ſide he neither favoured any part of heathen worſhip, or wicked life, nor by any thing he preach'd, taught Chriſt to be a favourer of it, but directly the contrary. All this being thus implied in this form of averſation, and diſclaiming, and deteſting the calumny in the objection, he proceeds v. 18. to a farther anſwer, by retorting the objection on ſuch as did as S. Peter had done, (whoſe action ſet down v. 11, 12. occaſion'd this diſcourſe, which brought in this objection) firſt converſing with the Gentiles, and then teaching by his example v. 12. that they were not ſo freely to be converſed with; which he juſtly calls the building again what he had deſtroyed, teaching the unlawfulneſs of a Jews converſing with Gentiles, tiles, which from a divine vision, Act. 10. he had both by his doctrine and practice formerly asserted. And this, saith Saint Paul, is the making himself a transgressor, παραβάτης, the word that is elsewhere used for an Apostate, one that forsakes and disclaims that true doctrine which he had formerly taught, and is by way of eminence since applyed to Julian ὁ παραβάτης the Apostate, that forsook the Christian faith which he had once embraced. And it can be no more strange that this should be applyed to this action of Saint Peter's, than that ὑπέστειλεν ἑαυτὸν, he withdrew himself, should be used of him, ver. 12. when Heb. 10. 38. the same word ὑποστείλεται is evidently used of the Gnosticks falling off for fear of persecution, which is c. 3. 12. ἀποστῆναι departing, or apostatizing, from the living God. ὑποστέλλεσθαι ὑποστολὴν

CHAP. III. Paraphrase.

1. O Foolish Galatians, [who hath bewitched you, that you should not obey the truth, * before whose eyes Jesus Christ hath been evidently set forth, b crucified among you?]

1. What heretick with his sorceries hath brought you off from Christianity to Judaism again, (see c. 4. 10.) you, I say, to whom Christ crucified hath been formerly as convincingly declared by our preaching, as if he had been set before your eyes, nailed to the cross among you.

2. This only would I learn of you, Received ye the spirit by the works of the Law, or by the hearing of faith?]

2. I pray let me dispute it a while with you, and demand this one thing, which may reasonably set an end to the whole controversie, The gifts of the Spirit that are in your Church, were they there 'till the Gospel was preach'd to you? (1 Cor. 12. 28.) was the Mosaical Law able to give you any such privileges, to work such miracles among you? undoubtedly it was not.

3. Are ye so foolish? having begun in the Spirit, † are ye now made perfect by the flesh?]

3. And then is there any reason, that having by the Gospel receiv'd the gifts of the Spirit, and so begun to be a Christian Church, thriven and prospered well in that plain way, you should now think it necessary to take in the Law as a suppletory; to make your selves up with the external, Mosaical, carnal rites and ceremonies?

4. Have ye suffered so many things in vain? * if it be yet in vain.]

4. You have suffered many persecutions and hardships for Christianity, which, if you would have Judaized, you might have avoided (your persecutions generally proceeding from that fountain;) and if this doctrine be true, then what are ye the better for all these sufferings? Nay, 'twere well if this were all, that you should only lose the benefits of your sufferings; 'tis to be feared this change will bring worse effects on you, the loss of that Evangelical spirit, if you mend not.

5. He therefore that ministreth to you the Spirit, and worketh miracles among you, doth he it by the works of the Law, or by the hearing of faith?]

5. God therefore that hath furnish'd your Church with so many extraordinary gifts of the Spirit, and wrought so many miracles among you, did he any such thing under the Mosaical Law? is there any thing in that fit to draw you back to it again from the profession of the Gospel? v. 2. Is not faith it that all the great privileges and advantages have still belonged to?

6. Even as Abraham believed God; and it was accounted to him for righteousness.]

6. As 'twas believing upon which Abraham was justified.

7. Know ye therefore, that they which are of faith, the same are the children of Abraham.]

7. From whence it follows, that those which are justified as Abraham was, are not the Mosaical observers, but believers only, those that receive and obey that doctrine which is taught and required by Christ, the Gentiles as well as Jews.

8. And the Scripture foreseeing that God would justifie the heathen through faith, preached before the Gospel unto Abraham, saying, c In thee shall all nations be blessed.]

8. And the words of the promise made to Abraham, which was an Evangelical not legal promise; did in effect contain this in them, that all nations of the world, and not only the Jews, should be justified by faith, and so the Gentiles now, and that without legal Mosaical performances, for thus the words of the promise ran, In thee shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; [All the nations] and so the heathens, and not only the Jews, who lived according to the Law, [shall be blessed in thee] that is, the form of benediction used among the Gentiles, and not only the Jews, shall be with mention of Abraham's name, viz. that God will bless them as he blessed Abraham, justifie them as he did him, make the whole Gentile world partakers of that promise made personally to Abraham, on condition they believe and obey as he did: All looking on Abraham's obedience and justification, as the example of all Christians, that all that believe and obey, as he did, shall be blest as he was.

9. So then they which be of faith, are blessed with faithful Abraham.]

9. From all which 'tis clear, that believers or Christian livers, without Mosaical performances, have their part of that blessing that was promised to Abraham; and those that sprang from him (from his faith, as well as from his loins) are blest on the same terms as he was.

10. For as many as are of the works of the Law are under the curse, for it is written, Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the Law to do them.]

10. For all that expect to be justified by the Law without the faith of Christ, (which if it be acknowledg'd, takes away the wall of partition betwixt Jew and Gentile, and consequently the Law, which in the external part of it establish'd that partition and non-communion between them) or without accepting those reformations, and changes of shadow for substance, brought in by Christ, do set up Moses, not only absolutely, but comparatively and exclusively to Christ; and they that do thus, are still involved under the curse for every sin they are ever guilty of, and consequently being guilty of some breach or other, can never have any thing but curse by this means, and so are far from being justified.

11. But that no man is justified by the Law in the sight of God, it is evident; for, * The just shall live by faith.]

11. And the same is proved by that known testimony, Heb. 2. 4. (see Rom. 1. 17. Heb. 10. 38.) They to whom life is promised are the believers, or they that are justified after the Evangelical manner.

12. And the Law is not of faith; but the man that doth † them, shall live in them.]

12. Whereas the Law makes no account of faith, allows no justification but on condition of legal obedience, performance of all that is required.

13. Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the Law, being made a curse for us; for it is written, Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree.]

13. In which case, there being no means in the Law to justifie any, but rather to bring curses on all, because all have sinned, v. 10. Christ hath been seasonably pleased to interpose, to make satisfaction for sin, to bear that curse which belonged to us (and that he did by being crucified, which being a Roman punishment was yet near kin to that of hanging on a tree, that is, a gibbet of wood, Deut. 19. 23. which is said there to be an accursed death.)

14. That the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ: that we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith.]

14. That the favour bestowed on Abraham, of being justified by faith, and not by ceremonial observances, may be communicated to the Gentiles who believe in God as Abraham, and all those pretious consequents thereof, the gifts of the Spirit useful to the building up of a Church, v. 5. as well as that single promise of justification.

15. Brethren, I speak after the manner of men; Though it be but a man's covenant, yet if it be confirmed, no man disannulleth or addeth thereto.]

15. Brethren, 'tis ordinarily acknowledged among men, that a covenant, though it be but of a man, being once firmly made, cannot be voided.

16. Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made; he saith not, And to seeds, as of many, but as of one, And to thy seed, which is d Christ.]

16. And much less can the promises of God miscarry, which were made to Abraham and to his seed; not to seeds in the plural, which might make a difference betwixt Jews and Gentiles, but in the singular, To thy seed, viz. as to Isaac (who was therein a type of Christ) so distinctly to Christ, as he is the head of a Family, a spiritual father of children, all believers coming from him as a spiritual progeny, and consequently to all Christians without discrimination, Jews or Gentiles, circumcised or uncircumcised.

17. And this I say, that the covenant that was confirmed before of God * in Christ, the Law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul, that it should make the promise of none effect.

17. To the same purpose again it is observable, that the Law, that was delivered by Moses above four hundred and thirty years after the time that that promise was made to Abraham, Gen. 12. 3. cannot in any reason be thought * to whom before your eyes Jesus Christ hath been set forth among you, having been crucified, or (leaving out, among you, for the Kings MS. omits ἐν ὑμῖν) to whom Jesus Christ that was crucified, hath been set forth before your eyes.

thought to diſannul, or fruſtrate, or invalidate the covenant made by God to Abraham, and in him to all believers or Chriſtians, his ſpiritual as well as carnal progeny, ſo as to leave believers now under obligation to obſerve the Moſaical Law, or to propoſe juſtification to them upon no other terms but thoſe; when in the promiſe to Abraham, ſo long before, it was made over to them upon theſe other cheaper and better terms of fidelity, and ſincerity, and purity of the heart.

18. For if the bleſſing that is promiſed to Abraham's ſeed, whether carnal or ſpiritual, that is, to believing Gentiles as well as circumciſed Jews, came by the performance of the Moſaical Law, then comes it not by the promiſe made to Abraham; which is directly contrary to the Scripture, wnich affirms it to come, as to Abraham, ſo to all others, by promiſe only.

18. For if the inheritance be of the Law, it is no more of promiſe; but God gave it to Abraham by promiſe.]

19. You will ask then if the promiſe made to Abraham be the only thing by which now and ever ſince juſtification hath been to be had, to what purpoſe the Law was given. I anſwer, It was given to reſtrain men from ſin, and to ſhew them their guilt, and to make them ſeek out for a remedy, which is to be found only in the doctrine of the Goſpel; and in this reſpect it was uſeful for the while, till Chriſt and his Members, diſciples and believers, ſhould come; and that the Law might be the more effectual to that end to reſtrain us from ſin, it was given in a glorious formidable manner, by Angels delivering the ten Commandments in thunder, ſo terribly, that the people durſt not approach the mountain, and therefore was Moſes called up to be a Mediatour, ſtanding betwixt God and the people to ſhew them the word of the Lord, Deut. 5. 5. and by his hand it was delivered to them.

19. † Wherefore then ſerveth the Law? it was added becauſe of tranſgreſſion, till the ſeed ſhould come to whom the promiſe was made: and it was * ordained by Angels in the hand of a mediatour.]

† What then is Τί ὃν

* delivered διαταγεὶς

20. Here again it may be objected, that if in the delivery of the Law Moſes were a mediatour, he muſt then needs be ſo between God and the Iſraelites, and then it muſt be ſuppoſed that as in a covenant, ſo in that giving of the Law, there muſt be a contract between God and the people, and then the ſubject matter of this contract will in all probability be juſtification upon performance of legal obedience, and then God will by pact be obliged to obſerve this truth ſtill, and juſtifie ſuch, and none elſe.

20. Now a mediatour is not a mediatour of one, but God is one.]

21. To this I anſwer, that if this were concluſive, it would then make void thoſe promiſes made to Abraham, which muſt be as carefully preſerved as the objecter ſeems careful to make good God's pact by the Law. And indeed the true way of ſtating the difficulty muſt be, by preſerving both as far as the matter will bear. But there is one thing ſuppoſed in this objection which is utterly falſe, and the cauſe of all the miſtake, viz. that 'tis poſſible to perform the Law (for that muſt be preſuppoſed before we can talk of juſtification by that contract betwixt God and man) or that the Law furniſhes with ſtrength ſufficient to do it. If that indeed were true, there would be no reaſon to expect the performance of the promiſes made to Abraham, and conſequently of juſtification, but only by the Law; but when the Law doth no ſuch matter, 'tis clear that that cannot be a valid contract, but void as ſoon as made, and ſo that it ſuperſedes not that other of promiſe to Abraham, or that which is now by me inſiſted on in Chriſt, which is purpoſely to ſupply the defects and defailances of the Law.

21. Is the Law then againſt the promiſes of God? God forbid: for if there had been a law given which could have given life, verily righteouſneſs ſhould have been by the Law.]

22. But 'tis clear by Scripture, that all men of all nations, Jews and others, are guilty of ſin, Rom. 3. 19. and ſo uncapable of Juſtification by the Law, which requires perfect obedience, or elſe cannot juſtifie, and ſo ſtill there is no juſtification to be had upon other terms but thoſe of Grace and promiſe, upon condition of performing ſincere Evangelical faithful obedience.

22. But the Scripture hath concluded all under ſin, that the promiſe by faith of Jeſus Chriſt might be given to them that believe.]

23. All that can be ſaid of the Law is, that before Chriſt and the Goſpel came, we were by God put under that œconomy, kept under and diſciplin'd by it, as in a ſtate of candidates or expectants, until the time ſhould come for the revelation of the Goſpel.

23. But before faith came we were kept under the Law, ſhut up unto the faith, which ſhould afterward be revealed.]

24. And ſo the Law was only a guardian or inſtitutor of us, in time of minority, as it were, an imperfect rule proportion'd to an imperfect ſtate, not to juſtifie, but only to keep us in order, and to leave and deliver us up to the Goſpel only for juſtification.

24. Wherefore the Law was our ſchool-maſter to bring us unto Chriſt, that we might be juſtified by faith.]

25. Now therefore the Goſpel being come, the ſchool-maſter, or guardian in minority, is quite out-dated.

25. But after that faith is come, we are no longer under a ſchool-maſter,]

26. For all that are true believers are adopted by God, and conſequently juſtified without legal obſervances only by faith.

26. For ye are all the children of God by faith in Chriſt Jeſus.]

27. According to that known rule, that All of what ſort ſoever that have received the faith, and are accordingly baptized into it, are made members of Chriſt.

27. For as many of you as have been baptized into Chriſt have put on Chriſt.]

28. And there is no diſcrimination from any outward accidents of country, relation, ſex, but circumciſed or uncircumciſed, ye are all equally accepted in Chriſt, if ſincere believers, or being members of Chriſt, v. 27. ye are all accepted by God.

28. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for ye are * all one in Chriſt Jeſus.]

* or, all Jeſus Chriſt's, for the King's MS. reads ἅπαντες γὰρ ὑμεῖς ἐστε Χριστοῦ Ἰησοῦ

29. And if received and accepted by God, as members of Chriſt, then are you that ſpiritual ſeed of Abraham, to whom the promiſes of juſtification made by him do belong by way of inheritance, without any neceſſity of legal performances or any other ſuppletory claim or tenure.

29. And if ye be Chriſts, then are ye Abrahams ſeed, and heirs according to the promiſe.]

Annotations on Chap. III.

V. 1. Bewitched you] Theſe two words ἀνόητοι and ἐβάσκανε, fooliſh and bewitched, being applyed by the Apoſtle to theſe Galatians, refer to the prevailing of the Gnoſticks infuſions upon them, the ſorceries uſed by the Leaders of that Sect, and the follies of thoſe that were ſeduced by them: or, if the time would agree, 'tis not improbable that the former of theſe, ἀνόητοι, ſhould refer to ſome beginnings of the hereſie of the Ebionites, the ſpreading of which not long after this (in Trajan's time) is ſet down by Euſebius at large, l. 3. c. κζ', but ſo as it is uncertain whether the original of it were not more antient, as early as might be taken notice of by this Apoſtle. Of them it is Euſebius's obſervation, that their name was given them from the Hebrew אביון poor, διὰ τὴν πτωχείαν διανοίας αὐτῶν, becauſe of the poverty of their underſtandings, the men being very filly men, and their hereſie accordingly a ſenſeleſs one. They did πτωχὰς καὶ ταπεινὰς περὶ Χριστοῦ δοξάζειν, ſaith he, entertain very mean and poor thoughts and opinions of Chriſt, and that he was ψιλὸς καὶ κοινὸς ἄνθρωπος, a meer and common man, καὶ προκοπῇ πόνων δεδικαιωμένος, by proficiency in vertue juſtified, but yet not more than a man; and moreover, δεῖν καὶ τοῖς ἀπὸ τοῦ νόμου τὴν ἀρχὴν ἔχειν, &c. that Chriſtians had need of legal obſervations, and not only of Faith and Chriſtian life, to ſalvation. In reference to which their doctrine, (and perhaps by this time, known title,) it is not ſtrange that when the Apoſtle looks upon any ſeeds of this hereſie among the Galatians, he ſhould, to awake and reproach them out of it, in an unaccuſtomed ſtyle of ſome contumely call them ἀνόητοι Γαλάται fooliſh Galatians: It being ſuch a ſcandalous piece of folly in them to leave the Apoſtles to follow ſuch filly teachers as theſe. To this agrees the ſtyle which he gives theſe legal obſervances, calling them ἀσθενῆ καὶ πτωχὰ στοιχεῖα c. 4. 9. weak and poor elements, in relation, as it ſeems probable, to that name of Ebion ſignifying poor. And becauſe Simon Magus, and after him Menander, had uſed Magick and Sorcery, done ſome feigned miracles to gain them followers and diſciples (as appears by Euſebius l. 3. c. κε'. and therefore among the ſins of the fleſh, which the Gnoſticks, a great ſpawn of them, had brought into the Church, he puts Φαρμακεῖαι in the ſecond place; ſee Note on c. 5. 20. but theſe poor fools did not pretend to any ſuch, as Euſebius there ſaith,) therefore it may well be (if the times will permit) that he here adds τῇ ἀληθείᾳ μὴ πείθεσθαι; who hath bewitch'd you not to obey the truth? intimating, that they have not had any ſuch excuſe for their being ſeduced, the fathers of this hereſie, which now he is about to ſpeak of, being no ſuch witches, having not ſo much ſubtlety or or cunning, and consequently not able to seduce any but meer sots and fools. Now among the doctrines of these Ebionites we find in Eusebius, in the places forecited (beside that so much to the diminution of Christ) that they taught the observation of the Jewish Law, δεῖν πάντως αὐτοὺς τὴν νομικὴν θρησκείαν, ὡς μὴ διὰ μόνης τῆς εἰς τὸν Χριστὸν πίστεως καὶ τοῦ κατ' αὐτὸν βίου σωθησομένους, that they were altogether bound to retain the legal service or Judaical religion, and that the faith in Christ, and living according to it, would not prove sufficient to save them. And speaking of a second brood of them, differing from the first in the point of the conception of Christ, yet, saith he, they agreed with them in this, ὁμοίως ἐκείνοις τὸν σωματικὸν ἔτι τὸν νόμον λατρείαν διέπειν, that they were obliged to observe the bodily legal religion, as the former did; and thereupon, saith he, they rejected the Epistles of St. Paul, ἀποστάτην αὐτὸν καλοῦντες τοῦ νόμου, calling him an apostate from the Law, and using the Gospel, which is called the Gospel according to the Hebrews, and no other, observing the Sabbath, καὶ τὰ Ἰουδαϊκὰ ἄλλα ἀφυλῶ, and all their other observances, and on the Lord's days joining with the Christians in commemorating the resurrection of Christ, and doing ἀφομοίωσιν ἡμῖν, like to us Christians. Agreeably to this we here find these so many things which possibly refer to them or some seeds of them. First, the vindicating of the doctrine of Christ crucified, v. 1. (which in other places contains the whole ground of our Christian profession, and particularly that of the abolition of the Mosaical rites; see c. 2. 20. and Eph. 2. 14.) by the clear undeniable evidences of it set forth and testified among them, before these silly teachers came among them, so that 'tis a prodigy to see them seduced by such men, against such conviction and evidence to the contrary. Secondly, the phrase ἐν σαρκὶ, in the flesh, v. 3. to denote their σωματικὴν λατρείαν, bodily religion, circumcision, &c. asserted by them. Thirdly, the whole discourse following, concerning the necessity of the Mosaical Law, and the ἔτως ἀνόητοι; are ye so foolish? (Again, v. 3.) to introduce it. Mean while it must be remembred, that at that time, the heresie of the Gnosticks being the great pest of the Church, into which all other lesser Sects like diseases were converted, the common sewer or sink into which they were poured, this of the Ebionites, if it were now sprung, was in conjunction with that of the Gnosticks also, and not separated from it.

b. ἐν ὑμῖν ἐσταυρωμένος

Ib. Crucified among you] That it should be here said to the Galatians, that Christ Jesus was ἐν ὑμῖν ἐσταυρωμένος, crucified among them, is not well to be imagined, neither is there any reason to understand the words so, which are otherwise interpretable, either by removing the comma after προεγράφη, or by setting it after ὑμῖν, thus, To whom Jesus Christ having been crucified, hath been set forth among you, before your eyes, that is, with evidence and conviction. Another way of construction might also be pitch'd on, by joining οἷς and ἐν ὑμῖν (as 1 Pet. 2. 24. ᾧ τῷ μώλωπι αὐτοῦ, by whose stripes of him, that is, by whose stripes) among whom, that is, you. But that which removes all difficulty, is, that the King's MS. leaves out ἐν ὑμῖν among you, and then the sense will be obvious, and the construction clear, οἷς κατ' ὀφθαλμοὺς Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς προεγράφη, to whom before your eyes (that is, evidently) Christ Jesus hath been set forth, or exposed to publick view, (so προγράφειν signifies; see Note on Jude a.) ἐσταυρωμένος having been crucified, that is, made known and evidenced in his sufferings, whereby he took away the partition betwixt Jew and Gentile, abolished the ceremonies of the Mosaical Law, and so also in the power of his resurrection, the consequent of these sufferings of his.

c. ἐν σοὶ εὐλογηθήσονται

V. 8. In thee shall all nations be blessed] The likeliest way of interpreting this phrase ἐν σοὶ εὐλογηθήσονται, will be by observing first, what is meant by εὐλογητός, and then by ἐν σοί. For the first, it refers clearly to the form of benedictions among the Jews, Lev. 9. 23. used solemnly by the priests, who did bless the people in set forms, Num. 6. 24. (as well as bless God for them, as Gen. 14. 19. Melchisedek blessed Abraham, and said, Blessed be Abraham of the most high God, as well as, Blessed be the most high God, v. 20.) Thus also did parents bless their children, Isaac, Jacob, Gen. 28. 3. and Jacob his sons, Gen. 49. Then for the ἐν σοὶ, that will be interpreted by the use of the phrase Gen. 48. 20. where Jacob speaking to, and blessing Ephraim and Manasseh, saith, In thee shall Israel bless, (the very same phrase as here) saying, God make thee as Ephraim and as Manasseh. By which it may be reasonable to conclude, that to bless others in this form, God make you as Ephraim, &c. to make use of his ensample in blessing any, is to bless them ἐν Ἐφραὶμ in Ephraim. And so proportionably this will be the meaning here of ἐν σοὶ, In thee shall all the nations of the earth be blessed. They among all the nations or Gentiles, and not only the Jews, that bless themselves or others, shall use this proverbial form of benedictions, by mentioning the blessings that God bestowed upon Abraham, God make thee as Abraham, &c. or as the form is set down Gen. 28. 4. God give to thee the blessing of Abraham. Thus Rabbi Solomon interprets it on Gen. 12. 3. that men shall say to their children, Be thou as Abraham, adding, that the phrase is used in Scripture always in this sense. And so sure it hath been used according to that prediction; ever since, this form hath been retained among the Gentile part of the world, The God of Abraham, &c. bless thee. And the full importance of that blessing is, that God's mercy to Abraham, his blessing him and his seed in this world with those blessings of prosperity, but especially his looking upon him as on a friend, (upon his faith in God's promises, and obedience to his commands) his justifying him by faith without the deeds of the Law, is and shall be recited as an example of God's dealing not only with the rest of the Jews, but also with the Gentile world; and the form of the Gentiles blessing or praying for themselves, or of the priests for them, shall be this, that God will deal with them as he did with Abraham: which is here used by the Apostle as a proof that the Gentiles are now to be justified by faith, without the Mosaical performances, which was the thing to be proved, v. 7. Thus was the phrase used in the places of Genesis, to which this here refers, Gen. 12. 3. where v. 2. these other phrases are used to the same purpose, I will make thy name great, or illustrious, and thou shalt be a blessing, that is, thy name shall be proverbially used in benedictions. So c. 18. 18. so c. 22. 18. the form is a little changed, In thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed, that is, I will give thee so numerous, and potent, and victorious a progeny, and make good the promises made to thee, so visibly to them also, to Isaac and Jacob, &c. Eccl. 44. 22. justifie them as I have justified thee, (and that the progeny of Esau as well as Jacob, those that shall obey me of the Gentiles as well as Jews,) by faith without Judaical observances, that all the Gentiles shall take notice of them, and when they would bless themselves or others, or pray for God's acceptation or justification, they shall use the mention of thy progeny or posterity, that God would deal with them whom they bless as he dealt with Abraham's seed, exceedingly prosper them, and multiply them, bless, and accept, and justifie them. So Act. 3. 25. where these words are cited again of God's telling Abraham τῷ σπέρματί σου εὐλογηθήσονται πᾶσαι αἱ πατριαὶ τῆς γῆς, in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed, the meaning is clearly this, that God hath so blessed Abraham's seed, the Jews, in giving Christ to them, and to them first or primarily, v. 26. that all the families or nations of the earth, when they shall bless themselves (as the Greek passive is oft in the sense of the Hebrew Hithpael) or when they shall be blessed by their parents, or priests, or friends, this shall be the form, God bless thee as he did the Jews, or Abraham's seed. To this matter it may perhaps be farther observable, that the phrase, It was counted unto him for righteousness, so often applied to Abraham, Rom. 4. may seem to signifie in this same sense also, that his faith and ready obedience in going out of his country, &c. were by God looked on as such heroick acts, in one brought up among examples of idolatry and villany, that it took off that entail of curse that lay upon that nation and family, and entailed a signal blessing on him and his seed, viz. upon that part of it that imitated him, Isaac and Jacob, and the obedient Jews (though the rebellious were cut off in the wilderneſs, and after by captivities, and at laſt the crucifiers of Chriſt by the Roman Eagles) accordingly as it is ſaid of Phinees upon that heroical fact of his, It was counted to him for righteouſneſs among all poſterities for evermore; that is, that act of his zeal to God brought a bleſſing not only upon his perſon, but upon his poſterity, as it is ſaid, Num. 25. 12. Behold I give unto him my covenant of peace, and he ſhall have it, and his ſeed after him, the covenant of an everlaſting prieſthood. And why may not (in Analogy to this uſe of the phraſe in the Pſalmiſt) that of imputing Abraham's faith to him for righteouſneſs, be this bleſſing his ſeed, thoſe of his ſtock, and all others that imitated his obedience, for his ſake, or in the like manner as God had bleſſed him.

d. Χριστὸς

V. 16. Chriſt] The word Χριστὸς ſometimes ſignifies Chriſt, conſidered as head of the Church, together with the body annex'd to it, that is, Chriſt and all believers, or Chriſtians. So 1 Cor. 12. 12. As the body is one, and hath many members; and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body, ſo alſo is Chriſt. Where anſwerable to the body with many members in the firſt part, is ὁ Χριστὸς Chriſt in the ſecond, which muſt therefore ſignifie the whole ſociety of Chriſtians. So 1 Pet. 1. 11. when he ſpeaks of the ſpirit of Chriſt, that is, of prophecy, foretelling the ſufferings which ſhould befall Chriſt, and the glories after them, it ſignifies not perſonally to Chriſt, but in this greater latitude, the crucifixion of Chriſt, and the perſecuting of Chriſtians, and proportionably the reſurrection of Chriſt, and the deliverance of the perſecuted Chriſtians by the deſtruction of their enemies. And ſo here the Context makes it clear, that by Chriſt all Chriſtians are to be underſtood, circumciſed or not, Jews or Gentiles: So if ver. 17. the words εἰ Χριστὸν be to be retained, it muſt be underſtood of the whole body joined with the head, the Chriſtians or all faithful people, with Abraham the father of all ſuch, for to them was that covenant eſtabliſhed, and thoſe promiſes made. But thoſe words are left out in the King's MS. and ſo it ſeems moſt probable they ſhould be, and then the ſenſe will be clear, that the covenant was eſtabliſhed by God to Abraham.

Paraphraſe. CHAP. IV.

1, 2. Now as it is of heirs to eſtates among men, when though their fathers are dead they are in their minority, they are governed by guardians, and their eſtates ordered for receits and expences by ſtewards, till the time come, after which either their father in his will, or elſe the laws of the land put them in their own power, and free them from guardians, though all this while they are owners of their whole eſtates:

1. NOw I ſay that the heir, as long as he is a child, differeth nothing from a ſervant, though he be lord of all:
2. But is under * tutors and governours, until the time appointed by the father.]

* guardians and ſtewards ἐπιτρόπους καὶ οἰκονόμους

3. So was it with us children of Abraham and of God, we were obliged to obſerve thoſe firſt rudiments of the worſhip of God in the Jews religion, (ſee Note on Col. 2. b.) with which God would have men brought up, and exerciſed to the more ſublime pure way of ſerving him:

3. Even ſo we, when we were children, were in bondage under the elements of the world:]

4, 5. But when that time was come, v. 2. wherein God ſaw it fit to remove the guardian of the heir, that is, to lay the Moſaical Law aſide, then God ſent his own Son in humane fleſh, who ſubmitted to, and performed the whole Law, to redeem us out of that ſlavery of Moſaical performances, and to receive us into participation of the promiſes made to Abraham, that is, to juſtification, without thoſe legal obſervances; and he, at his parting from the world, finally removed all thoſe obligations from the Chriſtians ſhoulders, nailed thoſe ordinances to his croſs, aboliſhed them by his death, Epheſ. 2. 14, &c.

4. But when the fulneſs of the time was come, God ſent forth his Son made of a woman, made under the Law,
5. To redeem them that were under the Law, that we might receive the adoption of ſons.]

6. And that you are ſons appears by this, that God hath ſent his Spirit into your hearts, giving you power and authority to call upon God, and make your addreſſes to him, not only as your God, but your father, the Goſpel aſſuring you that ye are no longer in that ſervile condition, bound to legal obediences, but that God will deal with you according to the promiſes made to Abraham and his ſeed, juſtifie you upon the Goſpel-terms of faith, without the deeds of the Law.

6. And † becauſe ye are ſons, God hath ſent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, father.]

† that ὅτι

7. So that you are no longer enſlaved to thoſe Moſaical performances, but are put into the ſtate of ſons, and conſequently through faith in Chriſt you are ſure of juſtification, according to the promiſes made to Abraham.

7. Wherefore thou art no more a ſervant, but a ſon; and if a ſon, then an heir of God through Chriſt.]

8. In time of your heatheniſm, before your converſion to Chriſtianity, ye ſerved idols, and were far from thinking your ſelves obliged to the Moſaical Law, knowing and conſequently heeding nothing of it:

8. Howbeit then when ye knew not God, ye did ſervice unto them which by nature are no gods:]

9. But now that you have converted to Chriſt, or rather are prevented by God, and called to this ſonſhip, when you were not a looking after it, but lay immerſed in idolatry, what reaſon is there, or how comes it to paſs, that now being Chriſtians, and ſo obliged to no part of the Jewiſh Law, whoſe Proſelytes ye are not, ye ſhould make another change ſo extremely to the worſe for your ſelves, in falling to the Moſaical performances, from which Chriſtian religion hath freed thoſe which were before obliged to them, that is, the Jews themſelves, (and which, now Chriſt is come, the ſubſtance of thoſe ſhadows have nothing in them for which they ſhould be valued) and reſolving to be ſervants ſtill, in deſpight of that liberty of ſons that Chriſt hath given you?

9. But now after that ye have known God, or rather are known of God, how turn ye again to the weak and beggerly elements, whereunto ye deſire again to be in bondage?]

10. Ye obſerve the Moſaical ceremonies, (ſee Note on ch. 3. a.) ſabbaths, and new moons, and ſolemn feaſts, and anniverſary feaſts, or thoſe that return every ſeventh and every fiftieth year, ſabbatical years, or Jubilees, after the ſame manner that the Jews before Chriſt thought themſelves obliged to obſerve them.

10. Ye obſerve days, and months, and times, and years.]

11. Theſe practices of yours make me fear that the Goſpel by me preached will ſoon be loſt among you.

11. I am afraid of you, leſt I have beſtowed upon you labour in vain.]

12. I pray follow my example, for I did once place my truſt in the Law for juſtification: And I beſeech you, do not think that 'tis out of any ill affection that I write this; I have not been at all provoked by you, nor conſequently is it imaginable that I ſhould mean you malice, or deſire to bring on you perſecutions to no purpoſe, (the avoiding of which is the only bait which the Gnoſticks make uſe of to ſeduce you.)

12. Brethren, I beſeech you, be as I am, for * I am as ye are: ye have not injured † me at all.]

* I was alſo as ye, κἀγὼ ὡς ὑμεῖς

† formerly τὸ πρότερον

13. Nay, why ſhould this fear ſo trouble you now, more than formerly it did? You know, and cannot but remember, that when I formerly preached unto you, I was perſecuted for my doctrine.

13. Ye know how through [a] infirmity of the fleſh I preached the Goſpel unto you † at the firſt.]

14. And you then were not at all moved by that diſcouragement to deſpiſe me or my preaching, but received me with all the reſpect, and belief, and chearfulneſs imaginable.

14. And my temptation which was in my fleſh ye deſpiſed not, nor rejected, but received me as an Angel of God, even as Chriſt Jeſus.]

15. And then how happy did you think your ſelves, that you had ſuch an Apoſtle? What would you not have parted with for our ſakes, were it never ſo dear to you, though now you are ſo ſhie and afraid of a little perſecution? or what is now become of all that for which you were ſo taken notice of, and magnified among men, as the kindeſt and lovingeſt of any to your teachers, ſo kind, that I am able to bear you witneſs, that nothing was ſo precious to you, but you would have parted with it for my ſake? (Theophylact.)

15. * Where is then the bleſſedneſs that you ſpake of? for I bear you record, that if it had been poſſible you would have plucked out your own eyes, and have given them to me.]

16. Am I therefore become your enemy becauſe I tell you the truth?]
16. Am I then, who was at firſt ſo pretious to you, now taken for an enemy of yours, for one that means you miſchief, and am likely to bring perſecution and preſſures among you, (of which your now teachers, the Gnoſtick compliers, undertake to rid you) for no other crime but only telling you my conſcience, and revealing the truth of the Goſpel unto you? This is a little unhappy.

21. Certainly ye that ſtand for the neceſſity of legal performances to juſtification, may in the very Law it ſelf ſee your ſelves confuted.

22. For it is written that Abraham had two ſons, the one by a bond-maid, the other by a free-woman.]
22. For of the two children that Abraham had, the one of Hagar, which denotes the Law, the other of Sarah, which denotes the Goſpel, without legal performances;

23. But he who was of the bond-woman, was born after the fleſh: but he of the free-woman was by promiſe.]
23. 'Tis apparent that one, viz. Hagar's child, was born after an ordinary manner; but Sarah's child was not by the ordinary courſe of nature, but above it, by the power of God, and by virtue of the promiſe made to Abraham.

* are allegorical, or do expreſs one thing by another 24. Which things * are [b] an allegory; for theſe are the two Covenants; the one from the mount Sinai, which gendreth to bondage, which is Agar.]
24. And theſe two mothers are figurative expreſſions, and allegorically denote the firſt and ſecond Covenant, (ſee Note on the Title of theſe books) the Law and the Goſpel; Hagar denotes the Law given from Sinai, and that brings nothing with it but ſervitude, and ſtrict obſervances, and yet thereby helps no man to the condition of ſons, to juſtification.

† the word, or name Hagar Τὸ Ἀσὰρ * but is anſwerable συστοιχεῖ δὲ
25. For † this Hagar is mount Sinai in Arabia, * and [c] anſwereth to Jeruſalem which now is, and † is in bondage with her children.]
25. For the name of Hagar ſignifies the mount where the Law was given; and this is anſwerable to the preſent ſtate of the Jews, theſe Hagarens and all that ſpring from Iſmael being by their own laws bound to be circumciſed, and obſerve the Moſaical Law, like the Jews, and ſo they, like Hagar their mother, are in a ſervile condition ſtill.

† ſhe is in bondage, or ſerves, δουλεύει * the ſupernal Jeruſalem ἡ ἄνω Ἰερουσαλὴμ
26. But * Jeruſalem which is above is free, which is the mother of us all.]
26. But Sarah, which denotes the ſtate of the Goſpel, that new city which Chriſt hath brought from heaven with him, (ſee Rev. 21. b.) of which all we Chriſtians are free-men or citizens, ſhe is a free-woman, and ſignifies that we Chriſtians, Gentiles as well as Jews, are free from the Moſaical rites, &c. and that we may be juſtified without them.

27. For it is written, Rejoice thou barren that beareſt not, break forth and cry thou that travaileſt not, for the deſolate hath many more children then ſhe which hath an huſband.]
27. According to that prophecy, Iſa. 54. 1. Rejoice, &c. the meaning of which is, that the Goſpel-covenant, which when Chriſt was here on earth, had few children, few that were brought forth by it, after his death, upon the preaching of the Goſpel by the Apoſtles to the Gentiles, had many more than among the Jews in his life-time.

28. Now we, brethren, as Iſaac was, are the children of promiſe.]
28. But, my brethren, as Iſaac was born only by ſtrength of God's promiſe, not by any ordinary means, Abraham and Sarah being beyond age, ſo are the children of God received to be ſuch, and juſtified only by the promiſe of God (that is, through the ſtrength of that promiſe to Abraham and covenant in Chriſt, that all faithful, obedient, perſevering believers ſhould be juſtified) without any Moſaical performances.

29. But as then he that was born after the fleſh perſecuted him that was born after the ſpirit, even ſo is it now.]
29. But as Iſmael then, who was born by the ſtrength of nature, perſecuted him that was born by the ſtrength of God's promiſe only, viz. Iſaac, ſo now it comes to paſs; they that depend on the Law for juſtification, perſecute them that depend only on God's promiſe, that are perſuaded that through faith, without legal performances, they ſhall be juſtified.

30. Nevertheleſs, what ſaith the ſcripture? Caſt out the bond-woman and her ſon; for the ſon of the bond-woman ſhall not [d] be heir with the ſon of the free-woman.]
30. To theſe therefore is applyable that which follows in the ſtory, that Iſmael is to be caſt out, and none but Iſaac to inherit: they that depend on the Law for juſtification never attain to it, but they that depend on the ſole promiſe of God, and accordingly expect to be juſtified upon performance of ſincere Evangelical obedience, without neceſſity of legal performances, they only ſhall be heirs of this mercy.

31. So then, brethren, we are not children of the bond-woman, but of the free.]
31. And ſo all this belongs to us who are Chriſtians, and conſequently are not obliged to the Moſaical performances, but juſtified by the Goſpel-way without them.

Annotations on Chap. IV.

a ἀδύνεια
V. 13. Infirmity of the fleſh] What ἀδύνεια σαρκὸς infirmity of the fleſh here ſignifies, will appear by the ordinary uſe of ἀδύνεια for afflictions. So 2 Cor. 12. εὐδοκῶ ἐν ἀσθενείαις I take pleaſure in infirmities, that is, afflictions, of which the ſeveral ſorts follow, contumelies, neceſſities, perſecutions, diſtreſſes for Chriſt. The ſame as before v. 6. I will not rejoice but in mine infirmities, that is, afflictions, (as elſewhere he reſolves not to rejoice but in the croſs of Chriſt;) and ſo v. 9. when he prays for deliverance from the thorn in the fleſh, that is, afflictions; (ſee Note on that place:) he ſaith God's anſwer was, My ſtrength is perfected ἐν ἀσθενείᾳ in weakneſs; that is in the afflictions that befall my ſervants, the giving them ſtrength to bear thoſe is an act of the greateſt power and mercy. So 1 Cor. 11. 30. πολλοὶ ἀσθενεῖς many weak, may ſignifie afflicted, as that notes preſſures on their eſtates, becauſe for diſeaſes on the body, they follow in the ἄῤῥωστοι ſick; though elſewhere 'tis manifeſt that ἀδύνεια is uſed particularly for diſeaſe, as Jam. 6. 14, and 15. (ſee Note on Rom. 8. m.) So 1 Cor. 2. 3. I was among you ἐν ἀσθενείᾳ in weakneſs, that is, perſecution, as it follows, and in fear, and much trembling. So 2 Cor. 11. 29. Τὶς ἀσθενεῖ, καὶ οὐκ ἀσθενῶ; who is weak, and I am not weak, that is, afflicted? for it follows v. 30. If I muſt glory, I will glory of my ἀσθενείας weakneſſes, the afflictions that I ſuffer for Chriſt, as he inſtances thereupon c. 9. And ſo here, as appears by v. 14. where it is expreſs'd by another phraſe of the ſame importance in the Scripture-dialect, ὁ πειρασμὸς ἐν τῇ σαρκὶ, temptation in the fleſh, that is, affliction, as when 'tis ſaid that God will not ſuffer us to be tempted above what we are able, but will with the temptation give us ἔκβασιν, a paſſage out; and ſo πειρασμὸς ἀνθρώπινος temptation or affliction that ordinarily this humane ſtate is ſubject to, 1 Cor. 10. 12, 13.

b. ἀλληγορούμενα

V. 24. An Allegory] The word ἀλληγορία ſignifies a figure, expreſſing one thing by another, from ἄλλος, and ἀγορεύω enuntio; and here the Verb medium muſt be in the Active ſenſe, ſo ἅτινά ἐστιν ἀλληγορούμενα will be beſt rendred which things do expreſs, enuntiate, one thing ſi ἄλλῳ by another; for as it follows, these are two Covenants, that is, signifie two Covenants.

c. Συστοιχεῖν

V. 25. Answereth to] Συστοιχεῖ is by Theophylact interpreted γειτνιάζει, ἄπλετ), mount Sinai being not far from Jerusalem, but, as he acknowledgeth also, it signifies originally to walk along with, and being Metaphorically used of things compared one to another, it signifies to be parallel, answerable, or proportionable to another; and accordingly here in the comparison begun v. 22. Hagar is made parallel to Jerusalem, the then present state of the Jews: and the parallel consisted in two things; First, that as the people of the Hagarens bound themselves to Circumcision, and the observation of the Mosaical Law in many particulars, so the present Judaizers did; and Secondly, that as in this respect, these Hagarens were just as their mother had been, in a servile estate, so these Judaizers kept themselves and all their disciples in a meer servile condition, opposite to the liberty of the Gospel. Of the Hagarens or Ismaelites being circumcised, Josephus gives clear testimony, l. 1. c. 12. Ἄραβες περιτέμνονται μὲν ἐπὶ τεισκαιδεκάτῳ. Ἰσμαὴλ γὰρ ὁ ἡγεμὼν αὐτῶν τῇ ἔθνους, Ἀβραάμου γεγονὼς ἐκ τῆς παλλακῆς, ἐν τούτῳ περιτέμνετ) τῷ χρόνῳ, The Arabians are circumcised at thirteen years old. For Ismael the founder of that nation, being the son of Abraham by the handmaid, was circumcised at that time. So Origen in Φιλοκαλία, shewing the ridiculousness of them that ascribe all to the χημαϊσμὸς ἐπὶ τ γενέσεως, the position of the stars at their birth, professes not to imagine how they can assign the Circumcision of all the Jews (and so the wounding, and want of a Physician's help) on the eighth day (constantly) after they are born, to any such position: ἢ ἵν ἐν Ἰσμαηλίταις τοῖς χρ τ Ἀραβίαν τοιόνδε, ὡς πάντας περιτέμνεσθ τεισκαιδεκαετεῖς· τοῦτο γὰρ ἰσόρροπον περὶ αὐτῶν, and on the other side, that the position of the stars at the nativity of all the Ismaelites in Arabia shall be such as shall cause them to be circumcised when they are thirteen years old, for so, saith he, 'tis storied of them.

V. 30. Be heir with the son of] The explication of this depends on the Jewish matrimonial laws, or the nature of concubinate, viz. when a servant, or a Gentile woman was taken in by a Jew to be (his wife she was not to be by law, but) his concubine, upon agreement first made concerning her dowry. For such a person as this is among them improperly called a wife, though far from any ill character of a whore, or any unlawful copulation, any farther than will be affirmed of Poligamy, which yet we know was allowed among the Jews, and practised by the Patriarchs. Now the sons of these concubines were excluded from succession to the inheritance, and instead thereof the father gave them gifts or portions (and that was agreed upon by pact with the wife at first) Gen. 25. 6. Thus was Jephthe ejected from the inheritance by his brethren, because his mother was a strange woman, Jud. 11. 2. Agreeable to this is that custom of matrimonium morgengabicum in some countries, as Denmark, &c. at this day, where the second wife, and her children that shall come from her, are not taken in to a right to the husband's estate, she to have any part of it for her jointure, or they for their inheritance, but only some gifts or portions assigned them by compact,, which are called Morgengab, or Marriage-gift, with which they are to content themselves without any part of the inheritance.

CHAP. V.

1. From all this the conclusion is of exhortation to you and all Christians, that ye retain the freedom from being obliged to the Mosaical Law, which Christ hath bestowed on all, and not return to your former yoak, or weight of observances again, which are a servility perfectly unprofitable, and nothing else.

1. STand fast therefore in the liberty * wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not intangled again with the yoke of bondage.] * to which ἧ

2. I your known Apostle, that have been, and taught the faith among you, pronounce to you positively, that if you depend on circumcision and legal observances for justification, Christ will stand you in no stead.

2. Behold I Paul say unto you, that if ye be circumcised, Christ shall profit you nothing.]

3. For by laying upon himself a necessity of circumcision, and expecting justification by that, he absolutely obliges himself to perfect obedience, without which the Law cannot justifie any, chap. 3. 10.

3. For I testifie again to every man that is circumcised, that he is a debtor to do the whole Law.]

a. 4. All that run this way of the Judaizers, must know that Christ is become uneffectual to them: If you expect to be justified by legal performances, ye have disclaimed all title to the Gospel. See Heb. 13. a.

4. † Christ is [a] become of no effect unto you: whosoever of you are justified by the Law, ye are fallen from grace.] † ye are discharged from Christ.

5. For we, according to the Gospel, and the promise made to Abraham, expect to be justified without legal performances, only by faith or Evangelical obedience.

5. For we * through the Spirit wait for the hope of righteousness by faith.] * by the Spirit through faith πίστ. μᾶλι ἐκ πίστεως.

b. 6. For now under the Gospel 'tis not material whether a man be circumcised or no, all that is required to our justification is faith; not all that is called by that name, but such as is made perfect by addition of those duties which we owe to God and our brethren.

6. For in Jesus Christ neither circumcision availeth any thing, nor uncircumcision, but faith which † [b] worketh by love.] † is consummate by charity.

7. Ye began well in receiving the Gospel, as I preach'd it to you; who hath caused you not to continue in that course?

7. Ye did run well; who did hinder you, that ye should not obey the truth?]

8. This new doctrine of the necessity of Judaical observances is not taught you by God, or by him (whether my self, or any others) who brought you to the faith.

8. This perswasion cometh not of him that * calleth you.] *called you καλέσ)

9. It comes from a few false teachers among you, that have infected you with this sour false doctrine of Judaizing, which will spoil all your Christianity, v. 2, 4.

9. A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump.]

10. And I hope it will not extend far, for I am confident of you in respect of the faith planted among you, that you will not be carried away with these errors; but the teachers of this doctrine, whosoever they are, or of what quality soever, shall suffer and be censured for it.

10. I have confidence † in you through the Lord, that you * will be none otherwise minded: but he that troubleth you shall bear † his judgment, whosoever he be.] † toward εἰς * will not mind any other thing, οὐδὲν ἄλλο φρονήσετε † the condemnation τὸ κρίμα

11. Some of your teachers, it seems, have told you, that I am for the urging of circumcision upon Christians, and that I have done so in some places: But I pray do you guess of the truth of this suggestion, by the persecutions which I suffer, which generally fall upon me among the Jews, for my affirming the Mosaical Law to be abolished, and would not fall upon me if I pressed the observation of the Mosaical Law in this particular of so great importance. The great exception that the Jews have against my preaching, and others believing me, is the abolition of the Mosaical Law, and the removing of that one exception would be the appeasing of the wrath of the Jews, who probably would oppose it no longer; but this, you see, is not done, for the Jews are still as great opposers of Christianity (where it is preached by me) and of me for preaching it, and of others that so receive it from me, as ever they were.

11. * And I, brethren, if I yet preach circumcision, why do I yet suffer persecution? † then is the offence of the cross ceased.] * But I ἐγὼ δ † Is the offence of the cross (the King's MS. adds τῦ Χριστῦ) of Christ ἄρα.

c. 12. Thus unreasonable are their pretensions that would seduce you from your constancy, and are content to say any thing, though never so false and improbable, to that purpose; all that I have to say of them is, I wish they were excommunicated, turned out from among you, that thus endeavour to pervert you.

12. I would they were even [c] cut off which * trouble you.] * unsettle you ἀνα-σαίνοντες

13. Christ hath freed you believers from the rigour of the Law, that is, both from the necessity of Mosaical observances, and of perfect exact obedience under the penalty of the curse: only do not you make an uncharitable or a carnal use of this liberty, either to contemn and scandalize those that dare not use this liberty, Rom. 14. 1. or to fall into acts of sin, and to think your Christian liberty will excuse you; but by charity behave your selves toward all your brethren in this matter of legal ceremonies, as may be most for their advantages.

13. For, brethren, ye have been called unto liberty; only use not liberty for an occasion to the flesh, but by love serve one another.]

14. For

14. For all the Law is fulfilled in one word, even in this, Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour as thy ſelf.

14. For this is indeed the ſum of that Law which ye pretend ſo much to vindicate, endeavouring the good of all others as much as ye can, or as you would your own, and not permitting your zeal to ſet you on deſigns of malice, and defaming of others.

15. But if ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not conſumed one of another.]

15. But if you be ſo uncharitable as to calumniate and defame one another, this will break out in a while, as in other places it doth already, to open feuds, perſecuting and miſchieving your fellow-Chriſtians.

* fulfill not μὴ τελέσητε

16. This I ſay, Walk in the Spirit, and * ye ſhall not fulfil the luſts of the fleſh.]

16. My advice therefore is, that you order your actions according to the Goſpel rule, and do not thoſe things which are moſt acceptable to the ſenſes, moſt agreeable to your carnal or worldly ends.

† do not μὴ ποιῆτε

17. For the fleſh luſteth againſt the Spirit, and the Spirit againſt the fleſh, and theſe are contrary one to the other: ſo that ye † cannot do the things ye would.]

17. For this is certain, that he that will ſerve God muſt do many things contrary to his ſenſual or ſecular ends: For there being two deſires in you, the one proceeding from the carnal, the other from the rational ſpiritual faculty or reaſon inſtructed by the Goſpel, and theſe being ſo oppoſite one to the other, that whatſoever one liketh, the other diſliketh, it follows that whatſoever you do in compliance with the one, you do in oppoſition to the other, and ſo that you do not will or chuſe with both wills, rational and ſenſual, whatſoever you will or chuſe, but one of theſe ſtill reſiſteth the other.

18. But if ye be led by the Spirit, ye are not under the Law.]

18. That then which is your duty, is, to follow the duct of the Spirit; and if ſo, if you follow the Goſpel rule in deſpight of all the temptations of the fleſh, whether luſts of the fleſh, or fear of perſecution for the Goſpel, to the contrary, then you are neither obliged to the Moſaical performances, nor to the perfect exact obedience, without which the Law allows no juſtification.

19. Now the works of the fleſh are manifeſt, which are theſe, Adultery, fornication, uncleanneſs, laſciviouſneſs,]

19. Whereas on the other ſide, the actions that the fleſh is moſt apt to betray one to, and which you have moſt need to be admoniſhed of, are ſuch as every man knows to be ſuch, and which yet your preſent falſe-teachers do induſtriouſly infuſe into you: ſuch are, breaking the bands of wedlock, nay making marriage abſolutely a work of the devil, that that perſuaſion may bring after it all manner of unlawful luſts (ſee note on 1 Cor. 5. a.) which marriage might prevent,

20. Idolatry, [d] witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, ſtrife, ſeditions, hereſies,]

20. The ſenſual villanies committed in the idol-worſhips (ſee note on 1 Cor. 5. 1.) to which the Gnoſticks would bring you back, and ſo likewiſe ſorceries, and then all the ſorts of uncharitableneſs, hating or maligning of others, &c.

21. Envyings, murthers, drunkenneſs, revellings, and ſuch like; of the which I tell you before, as I have alſo told you in time paſt, that they which do ſuch things ſhall not inherit the kingdom of God.]

21. And at length envying either the quiet, or the innocence of all that will not do as they do, and ſo falling into all acts of riotous and bloody malice againſt them, together with drunkenneſs and night-revels, &c. all which are of a moſt dangerous and deſperate nature, and will certainly deprive and exclude all that are guilty of them from the kingdom of God.

* kindneſs χρηστότης

22. But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-ſuffering, * gentleneſs, goodneſs, faith,]

22. On the contrary, the duties that the Goſpel requires of us, are 1. love to our brethren; 2. joy in doing them any good, (ſee note on Rom. 14. c.) 3. ſtudy to preſerve peace among all men, (ſee Note on Phil. 4. b.) 4. a patient bearing with the provocations and injuries of other men; 5. a kindneſs in diſpoſition and actions, actual performance of all kindneſs to others; and 6. fidelity, in oppoſition to betraying others, or inconſtancy to our courſe, † continence, ἐγκράτεια * the Law is not againſt ſuch, κατὰ τῶν τοιούτων οὐκ ἔστι νόμος

23. Meekneſs, † temperance; * againſt ſuch there is no Law.]

23. Meekneſs and quietneſs of ſpirit, in oppoſition to unquietneſs and ſedition; and laſtly, perfect charity either in the ſingle or conjugal ſtate: And be you never ſo ſtrict and zealous obſervers of the Law, that can never engage any of you to neglect theſe Chriſtian vertues (as many of you, that pretend to be all for the Law, that maintain the neceſſity of the Moſaical performances, are yet found to do, behaving your ſelves ſo carnally in your religion, and oppoſing all other Chriſtians ſo bitterly, v. 19, 20, 21. as if you thought that the Law did as much countenance your filthineſs, and your perſecuting others, as it doth countenance or oblige, in your opinion, to thoſe ceremonies.)

24. And they that are Chriſts have crucified the fleſh, with the affections and luſts.]

24. And however ye may be deceived in thus judging of the law, yet 'tis certain that Chriſtianity is directly contrary to all this; the true believers, or Chriſtians, have in their baptiſms renounced all the deſires of the fleſh, and accordingly muſt perform.

† by the Spirit πνεύματι * by

25. If we live † in the Spirit, let us alſo walk * in the Spirit.]

25. And they that are ſpiritual, as the Gnoſticks pretend to be, let them behave themſelves in all their actions Chriſtianly and ſpiritually, in oppoſition to all theſe carnal ſins, or elſe know that they have no right to that title.

26. Let us not be deſirous of vain-glory, provoking one another, envying one another.]

26. And not be puffed up with an opinion of themſelves, and the vanity of appearing to the Jews to be great zealots, and thereupon inciting the Jews to the perſecuting of the orthodox, and vehemently maligning of them.

Annotations on Chap. V.

a. Καταργέω, ἐκπίπτω

V. 4. Become of no effect] Καταργέω, ἐκπίπτω, ſaith Phavorinus; the word ſignifies according to the notion of ἀργός, whence 'tis compounded, fruſtration, annullation, evacuation, abolition; and ſo 'tis applied to the Law, νόμος καταργεῖται, the Law is annulled. In a ſenſe not far from thence 'tis uſed Rom. 7. 2. when 'tis ſaid, that the husband being dead, the wife κατήργηται ἀπὸ νόμου τοῦ ἀνδρός, is diſcharged from the law of the husband, that is, receives no benefit from, nor owes any obedience or obſervance to the matrimonial contract. So here κατηργήθητε ἀπὸ τοῦ Χριστοῦ, ye are diſcharged from Chriſt, as when a ſervant is from the maſter, or as a wife from the husband, diſcharged from the advantages as well as burthens, ye receive no benefit or virtue from Chriſt, or the ſecond Covenant (all one with Chriſt) ſhall profit ὠφελήσει you nothing, ver. 2. and ἐξεπέσατε, in the end of this verſe, ye have fallen from, diſclaimed all right or title to the Goſpel, or ſecond Covenant, that of Grace.

b. ἐνεργούμενος

V. 6. Worketh] 'Tis not amiſs in this place to ſet down the particular notion of ἐνεργούμενος in the New Teſtament. And to that purpoſe the firſt thing to be obſerved, will be, that there is no kind of neceſſity or reaſon to render it in an Active ſenſe, but rather in a Paſſive, throughout theſe books. So Rom. 7. 5. the motions of ſin ἐνηργεῖτο ἐν μέλεσιν, were wrought, or conſummate, or perfected, in our members, that is, the motions and inclinations were brought to act and habit. So 2 Cor. 1. 6. σωτηρίας τῆς ἐνεργουμένης ἐν ὑπομονῇ, ſalvation which is perfected, or conſummate, by patient enduring. So 2 Cor. 4. 12. θάνατος ἐν ἡμῖν ἐνεργεῖται, &c. death is wrought in us, as it appears by the Context εἰς θάνατον παραδιδόμεθα, we are delivered to death, v. 11. So Epheſ. 3. 20. κατὰ τὴν δύναμιν ἐνεργουμένην ἐν ὑμῖν, according to the power which is wrought in, or among, you, parallel to Col. 1. 29. κατὰ τὴν ἐνέργειαν αὐτοῦ ἐνεργουμένην ἐν ἐμοὶ, according to the force, or act, or virtue which is wrought in me. So 2 Theſſ. 2. 13. of the word of God, ὃς καὶ ἐνεργεῖται ἐν ὑμῖν which is wrought in you, preached unto you, and obtained its end (or perfection) to which it was deſigned, among you believers. So 2 Theſſ. 2. 7. the myſtery of iniquity ἤδη ἐνεργεῖται is made, or wrought, or (as in the Preſent tenſe) is in fieri, agitur, ſaith Caſtellio, agreeably to that of Heſychius, Ἐνεργεῖται, καταπαλαίεται, is prepared to enter, to diſcloſe it ſelf to the world. And ſo here πίστις δι' ἀγάπης ἐνεργουμένη, faith perfected by charity; ſo the Syriack reads it, and ſo Tertullian, Perficitur per charitatem fides, contra Marcion. l. 5. directly parallel to that of S. James ch. 2. 22. ἐκ τῶν ἔργων πίστις ἐτελειώθη faith is made perfect by works, as an habit by the effects of fruits. To which purpoſe it is obſervable that in Clemens Alexandrinus Strom. l. 4. ἀγάπη τελεῖται, and δι' ἀγάπης τελεῖσθαι, and ἐνεργούμενον, are put as phraſes of the ſame importance. There is one only place behind, where this word is uſed, that of Jam. 5. 16. of the righteous man's prayer, δέησις δικαίου ἐνεργουμένη, of which what is the direct importance will not perhaps haps be eaſily reſolved, but yet there is little reaſon to doubt but that it is in the Paſſive ſignification alſo. To which purpoſe it will be obſervable, that one other notion of the word there is, which is ordinary among Eccleſiaſtical writers, for one that hath received afflation from ſome Spirit, evil or good. Thus (among many other examples,) in the Author of the Eccleſical Hierarchy, when there are repelled from the Sacrament καθηχέμενοι, ἐνεργέμενοι, &c. there ſaith Maximus the Scholiaſt, ἐνεργέμενοι, τυγχάνουσιν ὑπὸ πνευμάτων ἀκαθάρτων, they that are acted by unclean ſpirits. Why it ſhould not be taken alſo in a good ſenſe, for thoſe that are acted by good ſpirits or the Spirit of God, there is no reaſon imaginable from the natute of the word, only 'tis true the moſt frequent uſe is of thoſe that are poſſeſſed by the Devil (οἱ ἐνεργέμενοι, δηλονότι δαιμονιῶντες, ſaith Pachymerius the Paraphraſt of that Author of the Eccleſiaſtick Hierarchy p. 136.) but yet in the Apoſtle 1 Cor. 12. 6, 10. ἐνεργήματα is uſed of the chariſmata or extraordinary gifts of the Spirit of God: and ſo ſaith Phavorinus, ἐνεργημάτων, ἀντὶ τῶν χαρισμάτων, of which the gift of healing (and doing that only by praying and anointing,) being one, in thoſe times, 'tis poſſible enough that δέησις ἐνεργουμένη may be that prayer of him that hath that gift of healing, and conſequently that which is thus formed by afflation of the Spirit (for that the word belongs not only to perſons ſo acted by any ſpirit, but to actions that are ſo produced, appears by the uſe of the word in Juſtin Martyr, in Dial. cum Tryph. p. 87. where ſpeaking of Magicians, he ſaith, they were πρὸς πάσας κακὰς πράξεις τὰς ἐνεργουμένας ὑπὸ τῦ δαιμονίυ ἐσχυλισμένοι, carried captive by the devil to all wicked diabolical actions) which is here accordingly joined with the gift of healing, and therefore called εὐχὴ πίστεως v. 15. the prayer of faith, viz. of that faith which is mentioned 1 Cor. 12. 9. which enabled them to work cures, σώζειν κάμνοντα to recover the ſick, as there it follows, or which πολὺ ἰσχύει here, availeth much, that is, miraculouſly, or as much as Elia's prayer for rain or fair weather did, in the next words. To that which hath been thus looſly ſaid of this word, may be added by way of appendage the words of Heſychius in his Gloſſary, ἡ ἐνεργουμένη, αἱ μὴ ἀρσαὶ, εἰσαχουομένη, τελουμένη. In which 'tis clear, as in the greateſt part of that Book, that there is ſome corruption in the copy, I ſuppoſe from ſome decays in the MS. from whence 'twas printed. 'Tis poſſible there might be ſome Lacuna in the parchment which might take away part of the words in the midſt of this, which he that printed it was fain to repair by conjecture, and therein might miſtake. And then this other form of words I ſhall only propoſe (inſtead of that which we now read in the printed book,) Ἡ ἐνεργουμένη δαιμονῶσα καὶεχομένη, τελουμένη or τελειουμένη, ſuppoſing that the word δαιμονῶσα and καὶεχομένη were ſo either blotted or eaten out, that there remained nothing of them but thus much ——— αιμ ——— ομένη. If this conjecture be not too wide, then this Gloſſary will clearly afford the ſeveral notions of this word ἐνεργουμένη in the latitude, viz. that it ſignifie two things among ſacred authors, firſt δαιμονῶσα as Pachymerius rendred it, (and καὶεχομένη, which is all one) a perſon poſſeſſed with the Devil, or that had ſome afflation, and ſecondly, τελουμένη, or τελειουμένη, wrought, or conſummate. One thing only more will be obſervable in this verſe here to the Galatians, that by compating it with other parallel places ch. 6. 15. 1 Cor. 7. 19. it appears that πίστις ἐνεργουμένη δι' ἀγάπης, faith conſummate by charity, is all one with καινὴ κτίσις, the new creature, in one place, and τήρησις ἐντολῶν the keeping of the commandments of God, in the other, as indeed charity is the fulfilling the whole law, of all the moral law, together with the ſuperſtructions of Chriſt. Agreeable to which is that of Marcus Eremita περὶ πνευμ. νόμ. Πᾶσα χάρις δίδοται ἐν βαπτισμῷ, πληροφορεῖται δὲ λοιπὸν διὰ τῆς ἐρασίαν τῶν ἐντολῶν, Every grace is given in baptiſm, but 'tis perfected (as πληροφορεῖσθαι and πληροῦσθαι is all one) by performing of the commandments.

V. 12. Cut off] ἀποκόπτεσθαι here, and in the Canons of the ancient Councils ἐκκόπτεσθαι, καθαιρεῖσθαι, ἀφορίζεσθαι, are all expreſſions of Excommunication of the higheſt degree, anſwerable to the ſhamatha among the Jews (ſee Note on 1 Cor. 16. d.) and conſequently here the ὄφελον γὰρ ἀποκόψονται, I would they were cut off, is an expreſſion of a menace or threatning of Excommunication, an Apoſtolical denunciation, that they that do not mend this ſeditious, ſchiſmatical humour, ſhall be cut off: or if the ὄφελον be but a wiſh, it is then becauſe he diſcerned ſo much of the obſtinacy of the evil humour, that he thought this would not be likely to cure, but exaſperate it, or becauſe he ſaw his authority contemn'd among them. As for that other notion of ἀποκόπτεσθαι, which S. Hierom and others ſeem to refer to, in relation to the matter of theſe men's diſturbance, viz. that about Circumciſion, which they would impoſe upon all Chriſtians, Si putant ſibi hoc prodeſſe, non ſolùm circumcidantur, ſed etiam abſcindantur, 'tis ſomewhat too light to be affixed to the words of the Apoſtle.

V. 20. Witchcraft] Among the practices of the Gnoſticks φαρμακεῖαι ſorceries are here juſtly reckoned (ſee Note on c. 3. a. and Rev. 9. 21. and c. 21. 8. and 22. 15.) And the grounds of that are clear, not only by the founder of them Simon, who was a Magician, but alſo by Menander his ſucceſſor, who was ſuch alſo; ſee Euſeb. l. 3. c. 26. Εἰς ἄκρον τε γοητείας ἦλθεν οὐδενὸς ἧττον τοῦ διδασκάλου προβεβηκὼς, μείζοσιν ὑπερβαλλομένῃ τερατολογίαις, He was not inferiour to his maſter in magick, but more vainly profuſe in his portentous undertakings, and aſſuming to himſelf to be ſent for the ſaving or delivering of men from the inviſible ἄνωθεν or angels, ἄγγελοι κοσμοποιοὶ, as he calls them, taught that no man could eſcape out of their power but he that was brought up in the μαγικὴ ἐμπειρία magical skill, and by the Baptiſm by him delivered to them, of which they that were vouchſafed to partake, he promiſed them eternal life here in this world, without any danger of death or old age. Of this Irenæus hath ſpoken at large, and Juſtin Martyr hath given this account of it. See 2 Tim. 3. 7, 8.

1. When any Chriſtian falls into a fault, you that are the governours in the Churches ſhall do well not to exerciſe too great ſeverity on him, but either to regain him by friendly advice, or elſe upon ſight of his contrition reſtore him to the peace of the Church again, conſidering how poſſible it is, that thou alſo thy ſelf may'ſt fall into the like ſin in time of temptation. Annotations on Chap. VI.

V. 1. Spiritual] What is meant by οἱ πνευματικοὶ the Spiritual here, may appear by what hath been ſaid of the word πνεῦμα Spirit, Luke 9. d. which ſignifies not only the Spirit of God, whereby men are reformed, and the deeds of the fleſh (in the precedent chapter) mortified, but alſo the χαρίσματα, the powers and gifts, which were beſtowed on men in the Church, in order to Miniſterial functions or offices there. And that πνευματικοὶ Spiritual, are here thus to be underſtood in proportion to, and by Analogy with, theſe, may be gueſs'd by the ſeverals which here follow: firſt, the πνεῦμα πραότητος, Spirit of meekneſs, which theſe Spiritual men are to uſe. This clearly belongs to the power of the keys, veſted in the Governours of the Church, and is therefore ſet oppoſite to ῥάβδος the rod, 1 Cor. 4. 21. where as coming with the rod, evidently ſignifies proceeding to diſcipline, to Cenſures of Excommunication, ſo coming in the Spirit of meekneſs, (and ἐν πραότητι παιδεύων, diſciplining in meekneſs, 2 Tim. 2. 24.) is admoniſhing thoſe meekly that have offended, (and to whom that method of fraternal reprehenſion is firſt neceſſary) as perhaps alſo admitting to repentance and abſolution thoſe that have reformed upon the infliction of the Cenſures. And accordingly this Spirit of meekneſs here is this milder part of the Apoſtolical office, which is to precede the more ſevere; (and to prevent it, if it be poſſible,) firſt, Admonitions and Reprehenſion, which if they prevail, there is no need of proceeding any farther; and ſecondly, an eaſie admiſſion to penitence, (in caſe the Cenſures have paſs'd upon him) without proceeding to any higher degree of Cenſures, as in caſe of obſtinacy might be ſeaſonable. To this ſecond the word καταρτίζειν may incline, which we render reſtore, but ſignifies properly to put in joint any member of a body which is diſlocated, and ſo it fitly belongs to the reſtoring an Excommunicate perſon to the ſociety and peace of the Church; but yet not only ſo, but ſignifies alſo to recover the offender to a ſenſe and reformation, be it by admonition, reprehenſion, or any ſuch milder means; ſee Note on 2 Cor. 13. c. And the doing of this being proper to the Governours of the Church, it follows, that theſe be here meant by the Spiritual.

V. 11. How large a letter] What πηλίκοις γράμμασι ſignifies, Theophylact hath expreſs'd his opinion. S. Paul, ſaith he, was accuſed to preach in other places for the obſervation of the Moſaical Law, contrary to what this Epiſtle contains. This forced him to teſtifie, what here he ſaith, under his own hand, that he did no where preach for the Law, c. 5. 2. and c. 6. 14. And therefore, whereas his other Epiſtles were oft written by an Amanuenſis, and only the ſalutation with his own hand, yet here, ſaith he, he was forced to write all himſelf, and that, as he will conjecture, though he was not very well ſkilled in writing, μὴ εἰδὼς δεινὰ γράφειν, ſaith he: And this, as he thinks, is noted by πηλίκοις γράμμασιν.

γεγράμμασιν. πηλίκος is by Heſychius rendred οἷος, ὁποῖος, πόσος, not how long, or how great, but of what manner, what ſort, noting the quality rather than quantity. γράμματα And γράμματα are letters, meaning the letters of the Alphabet, and not ſo properly an Epiſtle. And accordingly, ſaith Theophylact, πηλίκοις, ὁ μεγέθους ἀλλὰ δηλωτικὸν, ἀλλὰ τῆς ἀμορφίας τῶν γραμμάτων, it is not to denote the length or magnitude, but the deformity of the letters, or characters, in which this Epiſtle was written, S. Paul being neceſſitated to write it all with his own hand. But now granting, as we have reaſon, this to be the right notion of the ſingle words, yet there is no neceſſity either this ſhould be thus applyed to the illneſs of the character, or inlarged to the writing the whole Epiſtle with his own hand: that is not ſo much as intimated in any other place, or in any antient record, and this one place cannot conclude it; for πηλίκοις notes the ſort or kind of the hand indefinitely, not defining what it was, ſave only that it was ſuch as was known to be his. For ſo 2 Theſſ. 3. 17. the writing the ſalutation (ſome few words in the cloſe) with his own hand, was, ſaith he, σημεῖον ἐν πάσῃ ἐπιστολῇ, the token in every Epiſtle, that by which it was known to be his. And ſo if here it be ſuppoſed, that the whole Epiſtle were written by an Amanuenſis, as far as to c. 6. v. [illegible] and then the pen taken into the Apoſtles own hand, and uſed by him to the end of the Epiſtle, he may well begin thus, Ἴδετε πηλίκοις γράμμασιν ἔγραψα, you ſee and know with what kind of letters I have written, you know the character, that it is my own hand, under which it is that I teſtifie all that is before written in the Epiſtle, particularly that which is in anſwer to the calumny againſt me, as if I preached circumciſion, &c. in other places, which I have aſſured you, and demonſtrated by my perſecutions from the Jews, that I do not; and to this purpoſe I here add again, under my own hand, a character of your Gnoſtick ſeducers, v. 12, 13. and the profeſſion of my own opinion and practice, v. 16, 18. and again an evidence of my doctrine and practice from my ſufferings, v. 17. And thus the whole difficulty is ſufficiently explicated without imagining any more. Or if the ἔγραψα I have written, ἔγραψα be thought to conclude, that he had written that which went before, and ſo the whole Epiſtle; I anſwer that it is poſſible he might, but not neceſſarily to be concluded by that form of that word; becauſe if we ſtill reſtrain it to theſe laſt verſes, this will have perfect truth in it. For when he ſaith, Ἴδετε ye ſee, he Ἴδετε. muſt needs refer to that point of time wherein his Epiſtle ſhould be received and read by the Galatians, and then 'tis certain that ἔγραψα I have written will be as true of the laſt verſes, as of the former part of the Epiſtle. And ſo that difficulty is removed alſo.

THE

THE EPISTLE of PAUL the APOSTLE TO THE [a]EPHESIANS.

THAT Epheſus was the prime Metropolis of the Lydian or Proconſular Aſia, hath been elſewhere ſhew'd, (ſee Note on Col. 4. a.) And therefore this Epiſtle inſcrib'd to the Epheſians, muſt not yet be ſo confined to them, but that it belong alſo to the other cities of this Province, even to all Aſia. Here S. Paul was, and diſputed with the Jews, Act. 18. 19. (which ſeems to be about An. Ch. 51.) at which time he ſtayed not ſo long among them as to convert many, but left Aquila and Priſcilla there, v. 19. And to them Apollos came, v. 24. And by theſe the Chriſtian faith ſeems to be planted there, Act. 18. 25, 26. And accordingly at Paul's return thither Act. 19. it is ſaid that he found diſciples there, v. 2. but thoſe only baptized with the baptiſm of John, which ſeems to conclude them to be of Apollo's converting, who when he firſt preached, knew only the baptiſm of John, c. 18. 25. Soon after Paul returned thither again, according to his promiſe, Act. 19. 1. There he is oppoſed by the Jews, and by their inſtigation by the Gentiles alſo, yet continues preaching the Goſpel among them near three years, Act. 20. 31. ſo that all Aſia, both Jews and Gentiles, had it preach'd to them, and that with a mighty ſucceſs, c. 19. v. 20, and 26. At his departure from thence, going to Macedonia, Act. 20. 1. he gave Timothy commiſſion to be Biſhop there, 1 Tim. 1. 3. there being already ſome hereticks, ἑτεροδιδασκαλοῦντες teaching other, that is, falſe Doctrines, infuſing the leaven of the Gnoſticks among them, againſt whoſe poiſon Timothy was to watch, and ſo alſo the Elders, or Biſhops of the other cities in Aſia, ordained by the Apoſtle at his planting the Goſpel there, and all together, at a meeting at Miletus, are ſolemnly warned to watch over their flocks, and defend them againſt the grievous wolves, and Gnoſtick hereticks, which he foreſaw would ſpeedily break in among them. And accordingly here in this Epiſtle (as afterwards in Chriſt's Epiſtle to them Rev. 2.) the doctrines, but eſpecially the practices of theſe men are inveighed againſt, which if permitted would ſoon bring them all back to heatheniſm again. In which reſpect it is, that he labours ſo magnificently to ſet out the mercies of God in receiving the Gentiles to the faith, and their huge advantages thereby, which therefore they are not to betray or loſe for all the flattering ſhews of either the Jewiſh ceremonies, or the Gentile philoſophy, of which two the Gnoſticks divinity was compounded, and their lives filled with all villany. This Epiſtle was written and ſent to them from Rome, after his carrying thither, about the year 58. ſome ſix years after his firſt preaching at Epheſus. And it was ſent them by Tychicus, to which he ſeems to refer 2 Tim. 4. 12. And Tychicus have I ſent to Epheſus.

CHAP. I.

Paraphraſe.

1. PAUL an Apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt by the will of God, [to the ſaints which are at Epheſus, and to the faithful in Chriſt Jeſus;]

1. to the ſociety of Chriſtians which are under the chief Metropolis of Aſia, Epheſus, and which do ſtill adhere faithful and conſtant to Chriſt, in deſpight of all the temptations to the contrary.

2. Grace be to you, and peace from God our father, and from the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

3. Bleſſed be the God and father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, [who hath bleſſed us with all ſpiritual * bleſſings in heavenly places in Chriſt;]

3. who hath called us to Chriſtianity, and thereby afforded us, as many as have received the faith, and live in obedience thereto, all things in great abundance which may tend to our ſpiritual and eternal good:

* benediction in the things that belong to heaven through Chriſt, εὐλογίᾳ ἐν τοῖς ἐπουρανίοις ἐν Χριστῷ

4. According as he hath [a] choſen us in him, before the foundation of the world, that we ſhould be holy and without blame before him in love;]

4. Agreeably to what before the creation of the world he had determined in his decree of giving of Chriſt, viz. to call men from vicious living to Chriſtianity, and ſanctity, and purity of life, ſuch as he will accept of, coming from the ſincere love of him, and of our brethren;

5. Having predeſtinated us unto the adoption of children by Jeſus Chriſt to himſelf, according to the good pleaſure of † his will,]

† his own αὐτοῦ

5. Having in his eternal purpoſe of mercy appointed his Son to be preach'd unto the world, and that as many as received his meſſage, obeyed his commands, ſhould be received by way of adoption into the number of his children, and live lives of obedience, of holineſs and purity unto him; a mercy attended with very rich advantages, all which have accrued to us, not from any merit or deſert of ours, being ſuppoſed ſinners and enemies unto him, but only from his free goodneſs toward us, which was pleaſed ſo to determine it.

6. To the praiſe of the glory of his grace, * wherein he hath made us accepted in the beloved:]

* with which he hath favoured us ἐν ᾗ ἐχαρίτωσεν ἡμᾶς, or, which he hath afforded us, for the King's MS. reads ἧς ἐχαρίτωσεν

6. And this tends eminently to the ſetting forth the exceeding luſtre of his mercy towards us, or of the Goſpel, revealed to ſuch unworthy wretches, (ſee Note on Heb. 13. c.) whom in Chriſt, the ſon of his love, he hath received graciouſly, as many as perform obedience unto him:

7. In whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveneſs of ſins according to the riches of his ‖ grace,]

‖ or bounty, for the K.'s MS. reads χρηστότητος

7. Having by that precious ranſom paid for us, the blood of that dear Son of his, afforded us captives to ſin a way of freedom, viz. a free pardon for all our paſt ſins, upon our preſent repentance and renovation; a work of the abundant favour and bounty of almighty God,

8. * Wherein he hath abounded toward us in all wiſdom and prudence,]

* which he hath made to abound, or abundantly poured out εἰς ὑπερεύσευσε

8. Wherein alſo his infinitely wiſe diſpoſal hath eminently appeared in this (of all others) moſt probable and powerful means of bringing home ſinners to new life and bliſs.

9. Having made known unto us the myſtery of ‖ his will, according to * his good pleaſure, which he hath purpoſed in himſelf,

10. † That in the diſpenſation of the fulneſs of times, * he might [b] gather together in one all things in Chriſt, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth, † even in him:]

9, 10. Annotations on Chap. I.

a. V. 4. Choſen us in him] What is the notion of ἐξελέξατο choſing, in this and all other places, will be found ſet down at large, Note on 1 Pet. 2. c. All that muſt here fitly be enquired is, what is meant by ἐν αὐτῷ ἐξελέξατο God's choſing in Chriſt. And that will beſt be diſcerned by comparing it with the phraſe εὐλογήσας ἐν Χριστῷ, bleſſing us in Chriſt ver. 3. For that the bleſſing and the electing belong to the ſame matter, appears by the καθὼς according as, a term of proportion or ſimilitude in the front of this verſe, which makes the connexion betwixt them thus, that God hath bleſſed us in Chriſt, according as he hath choſen us in Chriſt, that is, that his actual, preſent bleſſing them, at that point of time, was correſpondent to what God had decreed before the foundation of the world. Now what the bleſſing there ſpoken of is, appears in general by the addition of πνευματικῇ, and ἐν τοῖς ἐπουρανίοις, a ſpiritual bleſſing, or bleſſing in things which belong unto heaven; and again by the predeſtination (in order of nature precedent to it) which is ſpecified to be εἰς υἱοθεσίαν to adoption; and laſtly, by what is here added, ἵνα ἡμᾶς ἁγίους καὶ ἀμώμους, for us to be, or that we ſhould be holy, and unblemiſh'd before him in love: all which ſpecifie the matter of the election here ſpoken of to be the ſame as of his bleſſing of us, viz. our holy blameleſs converſation, ſuch as becomes ſons of God, a ſpiritual, Chriſtian obedience in all manner of piety and charity, ſuch as Chriſt came to plant in the world, and in which reſpect he is ſaid to bleſs us in turning every one from his iniquities, Act. 3. 26. and ſo 'tis here diſtinctly added c. 2. 10. that good works are the things to which God hath before prepared (that is, elected) us, that we ſhould walk in them. This then being the general matter of the election here ſpoken of, (not ſalvation, or bliſs in another world, but) holineſs, or piety here, is yet farther determined, or limited, by the ἐν αὐτῷ, or

ἐν αὐτῷ ἐξελέξατο

ἐν Χριστῷ or ἐν Χριστῷ, in him, or in Chriſt, ſpecifying Chriſt to be the means of bringing all, particularly the Gentiles, to this holy life, from all eternity predetermined by God to do ſo; as in that place of the Acts, God ſent him thus to bleſs us. And this Chriſt hath done by revealing God's Will both in the precepts which contain this holy and blameleſs life in them, and by his promiſes, which ſo ſtrongly and powerfully invite and oblige, and by his terrors, or threats, which engage us to the performance of his precepts; and ſo again by the miracles, &c. which ſignifie him to be ſent by God, but eſpecially by his death and reſurrection; the firſt to teſtifie the truth of what he preach'd, and withal to expiate for our ſins, and ſtrike, and ſeal in his blood a covenant of mercy with all, Gentiles as well as Jews, of pardon of foregoing ſins, upon condition of reformation and amendment, and of giving ſtrength and grace to perform what God now under this covenant requires of us (without which as we ſhould have had no encouragement to amend, ſo we had been utterly unable to have performed that work of reformation:) and the ſecond to confirm from heaven that he died an innocent perſon, in the teſtimony of that truth thus owned by his father, and by enſtating him in that power and dominion at God's right hand, to enſtate on him alſo the power of actual giving that grace to Gentiles as well as Jews, which by his death he purchaſed for all. This then is the plain meaning of God's electing in Chriſt, &c. God's free, undeſerved mercy in decreeing to beſtow Chriſt upon all, as the means (of all other moſt effectual) to engage and bring men to holineſs and purity of life, that is, by what Chriſt hath done and ſuffered for Gentiles as well as Jews, to call and bring home ſinners of all ſorts to repentance. And this farther appears, v. 9, 10. where the myſtery of his Will (Μυστήριον τῦ θελήματος) according to his own good pleaſure (which is all one with his election here) is ſpecified to be the (τὰ Πάντα) the gathering all things, that is, Jews and Gentiles, together in Chriſt, that is, making Chriſt the means of calling and bringing in the moſt Idolatrous Gentiles, as well as Jews, to receive the faith, and obey the commands of God in Chriſt. And this is the ſubject of a great part (ſee ch. 2.) of this enſuing Epiſtle. All which as it makes the vocation of the Gentiles as well as Jews to be the matter wherein God's election here is terminated (and is very far from denoting any irreſpective Decree, of beſtowing eternal ſalvation on ſome few, which includes the abſolute rejection or dereliction of all others) ſo it no way infers their faith or repentance to be irreſiſtibly wrought in them by this Decree of election, or by the means determined therein, but only that God hath in Chriſt pitch'd on moſt wiſe, moſt powerful, moſt efficacious means of calling, and melting even the Gentiles, the worſt of men, which he likewiſe foreſaw would be effectual on many by the power of his grace, though many others through their own obſtinacy would contemn, and not make uſe of it.

b. (Ἀνακεφαλαιώσασθαι) V. 10. Gather together in one] Κεφάλαιον in Arithmetick ſignifies a ſum, συναθροισμὸς the putting many members together into one; hence ἀνακεφαλαιοῦν to put many ſeverals together, and when 'tis uſed of ſpeech, then 'tis to ſpeak briefly and ſummarily, Eccleſ. 32. 8. and ſo ſaith Chryſoſtom, ἐν τύπῳ τὰ ἐπὶ μακρὸν λεγόμενα, &c. to contract a long diſcourſe into few words. It is uſed in military affairs for the contracting or putting together ſcattered ſoldiers into one troop. In Rhetorick it is the repeating and gathering the head of the former diſcourſe or oration. In all, it is the bringing into one thoſe that were ſeveral, and ſo it is here the uniting and joining together of thoſe that were diſparate and ſevered before; the ſame that in the parallel place Col. 1. 20. is ἀποκαταλλάξαι and εἰρηνοποιῆσαι, bringing all to an agreement or pacification.

c. (Κληρωθέντες) V. 11. Obtained an inheritance] Κληρωθέντες (if ἐκληρώθημεν be the right reading) ſignifies, to be taken as a κλῆρος, lot or patrimony, in the paſſive voice and ſenſe. Now the κλῆροι among the Hebrews were thoſe portions of land that fell by lot to any in the diviſion of a land or eſtate, as in the firſt diviſion of Canaan, Judah had his lot, or portion, or diviſion, Reuben his, and God was Levi's lot, or inheritance, or poſſeſſion, as we call it. So in like manner, when in the diviſion of the world into Jews and Gentiles, God choſe the Jews, they were ſaid to be his κλῆρος or portion, Deut. 4. 20. and ſo believers or Chriſtians are now ſtyled 1 Pet. 5. 3. and in a more peculiar manner they that preached the Goſpel, the Apoſtles, who ſeem to be here noted by the ἡμεῖς (raiſing it ſomewhat higher than thoſe had had the knowledge of his Will, v. 9.) and ſurely are the ἡμᾶς we v. 12. and προηλπικότες the firſt that hoped, or believed in Chriſt, and who, as ſuch, were before others preferred to that dignity. And ſo accordingly have all that have ſerved God in the miniſtery been called God's κλῆρος or clergy, by whom therefore they are here ſaid κληρωθῆναι, to become God's peculiar poſſeſſion, or portion. But the King's MS. hath not this word, but only ἐκλήθημεν, we were called. προηλπικότες

d. (ἀρραβῶνα) V. 14. Earneſt] The Greek ἀρραβῶν is a Syriack word, ערבון from ערב contraxit, mercatus eſt, fidejuſſit, to make any bargain, as it ſignifies Gen. 38. 17. a pledge or firſt part of a payment, which is an aſſurance, or ſecurity, that the reſt of the whole price ſhall not fail to follow. This is it which in Engliſh is peculiarly called the Earneſt, that which confirms and aſſures the bargain. And ſo the Spirit and gifts thereof after the Aſcenſion of Chriſt poured out not only upon Jews but Gentiles, is the pledge or earneſt paid by God, the firſt part of the price which he hath agreed to give for the bringing in and redeeming the Gentiles out of the hands of Satan and ſin, to be the ſervants of the living God: Thoſe many other graces and rich treaſures conſequent to that gift, pardon of ſin, increaſe of grace, and at laſt ſalvation it ſelf, being the reſidue of the price, and here called κληρονομία ἡμῶν, our portion, or that which we receive in the bargain, in this great purchaſe of God's, his work of redeeming of ſouls. κληρονομία ἡμῶν

Ib. Redemption] What περιποίησις ſignifies will be ſeen Note on Heb. 10. d. and on 1 Pet. 2. e. Here it muſt be taken not for the action of acquiring or poſſeſſing, but the perſons that are ſo acquired, all one with λαὸς εἰς περιποίησιν, a people for a poſſeſſion, or, which is all one, λαὸς περιούσιος, a peculiar people, Tit. 2. 14. that is, a Church of pure Chriſtian livers, which are here ſaid to be to the praiſe of his glory, as in the place of S. Peter, That they may ſhew forth the power, or virtues, of him that hath called them out of darkneſs into his marvellous light. As for ἀπολύτρωσις ranſoming or redeeming, that is uſed ſometimes for temporal deliverance, ἀπολύτρωσις σώματος redeeming, or reſcuing the body out of perſecutions and calamities, (ſee Rom. 8. Note l.) but here for ſpiritual deliverance from the power of reigning ſin, as Tit. 2. 14. λυτρώσηται ἀπὸ πάσης ἀνομίας, redeeming from all iniquity, reſcuing from all wicked life. And ſo ἀπολύτρωσις περιποιήσεως is no more than that which is mentioned of Chriſt, Luke 1. delivering men from their ſpiritual enemies, ranſoming them from thoſe ſervile habits of ſin wherein they lived, that they may ſerve him in holineſs, &c. Hereby may alſo appear what is meant by the ἡμέρᾳ ἀπολυτρώσεως day of redemption, cap. 4. 30. that redemption which had here been mentioned, the redeeming them out of their courſe of ſin to the ſervice of God (every one that is redeemed being his goods, poſſeſſion, ſervant, that bought him) and ſo the ſealing them by the Spirit to the day of redemption there, is perfectly agreeable to the ſealing them here, by the ſame Spirit, v. 13. to this redemption of God's peculiar people; God's ſending his Spirit and the gifts thereof among the Gentiles (which was done at the firſt preaching the Goſpel to them) being the marking them out as God's purchaſe, ſuch as are to be ſervants of his, and being ſo, ſhall be accompliſh'd and crown'd by him. e. περιποίησις ἀπολύτρωσις

V. 15. After I heard] The word ἀκούω to hear, is anſwerable to the Hebrew שמע, and that ſignifies to know, as well as to hear, and is ſometimes rendred εἰδέναι and γινώσκειν to know: And ſo it ſeems to be uſed in this Epiſtle, ch. 3. 2. εἴγε ἠκούσατε, If indeed ye have known, not heard, for the Apoſtolick Commiſſion to the Gentiles, which is the thing there ſpoken of, was that which they to whom he had preach'd f. ἀκούσαντες εἴγε ἠκούσατε must needs know immediately, and not by hearſay only. And ſo here their faith was a thing known by him alſo, and not only heard; though it is alſo true, that their growth in the faith ſince he was there, and the evidences of their charity might be brought to him by the advertiſement of others. Thus ch. 4. 21. If ye have heard him is, if ye have known.

CHAP. II.

Paraphraſe.

1. And you heathens lying like ſo many carcaſſes, deſparately gone in all kind of ſins (ſee Note on Luke 15. c.) hath God quickned and raiſed to new life, v. 5. (all between being to be read as in a parentheſis)

1. AND you hath he quickened, who were dead in treſpaſſes and ſins,]

2. You, I ſay, that for ſo many years together lived formerly, and ſecurely went on in the Epidemical ſins of the nations, the cuſtoms of the Gentile world, following the direction of your Idol falſe Gods, (who preſcribed all villany in their worſhips) that is, of Satan, that hath ſuch power here below, and doth ſtill exerciſe his power among all that have not received the Goſpel of Chriſt,

2. Wherein in time paſt ye walked according to the courſe of this world, according to the Prince of the power of the air, the ſpirit that now worketh in the children of diſobedience,]

3. Among whom we of the Gentile Church of Rome from whence I write, formerly lived, and yielded our ſelves to thoſe ſenſual ſins and idol-worſhips which our luſts and our phanſies were pleaſed with, and ſo went on in thoſe heathen cuſtoms, which did univerſally overſpread them, and were born, and lived, and continued in a damning condition (ſee Note on 1 Cor. 11. f.) as all other heathens did.

3. Among whom alſo we all had our converſation in times paſt, in the luſts of our fleſh, fulfilling the deſires of the fleſh, and of * the mind, and were by † nature the children of wrath, even as others.]

* imaginations, διανοιῶν † birth φύσει

4. But God, who is infinitely merciful, beyond what we can ask or think, without any thing in us to invite him to it, meerly out of that kindneſs of his which he bare to us, as we were in that ſad deſolate condition of ſin and miſery,

4. But God who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us,]

5. Hath by that power by which he raiſed Chriſt from the grave, raiſed us out of this heathen ſtate of all kind of impieties, a ſtate ſo far from meriting any ſuch dealing, that it deſerved nothing but utter deſertion (and therefore 'tis as wonderful an act of goodneſs and mercy in God, that we are thus reſcued, and eſcaped out of that condition by the preaching of the Goſpel to us, (ſee Heb. 13. c.) as it was for Lot, when he was by the Angel led out of Sodom, and commanded to eſcape for his life, &c.)

5. Even when we were dead in ſins, hath quickned us together with Chriſt, (by grace ye are * ſaved)]

* delivered, σεσωσμένοι

6. And as he hath quickned us out of this ſpiritual death, ſo in Chriſt our head he hath alſo in aſſured hope raiſed us up from the dead, and ſet us with him in heaven: For he ſitting there, which is our head, we are at preſent not unfitly ſaid to ſit there alſo, and ſhall infallibly come thither in due time,

6. And hath raiſed us up together, and made us ſit together in heavenly places in Chriſt Jeſus,]

7. By which means he hath given an eminent teſtimony to all ages that ſhall follow this of the Apoſtles, how exceedingly gracious he is to thoſe that live under Chriſtianity (which is called The age to come, ſee Mat. 11. Note a.) by thoſe undeſerved mercies ſhewn unto us, by giving us Chriſt and his Goſpel to be revealed to us.

7. That † in the ages to come he might ſhew the exceeding riches of his grace, in his kindneſs towards us, through Chriſt Jeſus.]

† on the enſuing ages ἐν τοῖς αἰῶσι τοῖς ἐπερχομένοις

8. For you are delivered out of that heathen ſtate by the meer undeſerved mercy of God, who might juſtly have left you in it without ever calling you (who had ſo ſinned againſt nature) out of it; and the preaching of the Goſpel, which hath been the means of reſcuing you thus, is a meer free, undeſerved gift of God, the matter of the Goſpel being no way to be known, but by divine revelation, and God having ſent Chriſt, and Chriſt his Apoſtles, to make that known unto you, without which you had never heard, as without hearing you could never have believed, ſuch ſupernatural truths, (ſee Rom. 10. 17. and Note on Heb. 13. c.) and all this an act of God's free will and merciful pleaſure;

8. For by grace are ye * ſaved through faith, and † that not of your ſelves; it is the gift of God:]

* delivered σεσωσμένοι
† this is not from you, τοῦτο οὐκ ἐξ ὑμῶν

9. Not from any merits of yours to move God to it, that ſo all may be imputed to him, nothing at all unto your ſelves.

9. Not of works, leſt any man ſhould boaſt.]

10. For we are formed anew by God, and as it were out of a ſtate of nothing (the heathen idolatry, in which we were) raiſed by the preaching of the Goſpel to a being, and a life, and ſo are as ſo many new creatures of his creating, on purpoſe that we ſhould bring forth fruit, live Chriſtianly, and that we might do ſo, he hath accommodated us with all things which may be any way uſeful to that end.

10. For we are his workmanſhip, created in Chriſt Jeſus unto good works; * which God hath before ordained that we ſhould walk in them.]

* to which God hath before prepared us, οἷς προητοίμασεν

11. And this conſideration and remembrance may be uſeful to you, viz. that by birth or natural generation ye were originally Gentiles, called the uncircumciſed by the Jews, who had that circumciſion in their fleſh wrought by the hands of men,

11. Wherefore remember that ye being in time paſſed Gentiles in the fleſh, who are called uncircumciſion by that which is called the circumciſion in the fleſh made by hands,]

12. That being then without Chriſt, ye lived in a very diſtant manner from the Iſraelites, both in reſpect of cuſtoms and laws, but eſpecially of the worſhip of God, were juſtly deteſted, and not permitted to live among them; and for the promiſes made to Abraham, ye were utterly ſtrangers from them; and ſo in the firſt reſpect you had no God, nothing but Idols to worſhip, and in the latter, no kind of hope of good to entertain your ſelves with.

12. That at that time ye were without Chriſt, † being aliens from the commonwealth of Iſrael, and ſtrangers from the covenants of promiſe, having no hope, and * without God in the world.]

* Atheiſts ἄθεοι

13. But now, inſtead of that great diſtance formerly kept, an affinity and league hath been made between you (ſee Act. 20. 39.) Gentiles and Jews, and Chriſt's blood hath been the ſolemn rite by which that league (after the manner of the Eaſtern nations, which uſe that ceremony of blood in making leagues) hath been ſtruck.

13. But now in Chriſt Jeſus ye, who ſometime were afar off, are made nigh by the blood of Chriſt.]

14. For he is our peacemaker, and hath joined thoſe two diſtant people into one, having, as it were, broke down or removed that little ſept or wall in the Temple, that ſeparated the court of the Jews from that of the Gentiles, and ſo hath laid all common, brought them both into his Church to live without any diſcrimination of ceremonies, &c.

14. For he is our peace, who hath made both one, and hath broken down the [a] middle wall of partition between us:]

15. Having by his ſufferings brought the Gentiles that believe to that condition, that the people of God ought not to look upon them as enemies, and perſecute them, as now the Judaizers do, for neglecting the Ceremonies of the Moſaical Law, and by the doctrine of the Goſpel taken away the obligingneſs of the Moſaical precepts, which made the converſing with the Gentiles, eating their meats, &c. unlawful alſo, that ſo he might form them both together into one new man, making an agreement or peace between them,

15. Having aboliſhed * in his fleſh the enmity, even the Law of commandments, contained in ordinances, † for to make in himſelf, of twain, one new man, ſo making peace,]

* the enmity by his own fleſh, the Law of commandments by doctrines, τὴν ἔχθραν ἐν τῇ σαρκὶ αὐτοῦ, τὸν νόμον τῶν ἐντολῶν ἐν δόγμασιν
† that he might form the two by himſelf (or, together; for the King's MS. reads ἐν αὐτῷ, not ἑαυτῷ) into one new man, ἵνα τοὺς δύο κτίσῃ εἰς ἕνα καινὸν

16. And having united them one to another, might alſo reconcile them to God, having by his ſufferings taken away all quarrel or falling out, whether betwixt God and them, or (eſpecially here) betwixt Jew and Gentile, having died for both indifferently, and thereby ſealed his covenant of mercies to both.

V. 14. Middle wall of partition] We have oft ſpoken of the Gentile Proſelytes, the ſecond ſort of which, thoſe of the Gates, which were not circumciſed, were by the Jews ſo far accounted unclean according to the Law, that they were not permitted to come into that court of the Temple, called holy, where the Jews were. So it is charged upon them as a fault, Ezek. 44. 7. that they had brought into God's ſanctuary ſtrangers, &c. and Act. 21. 28. on Paul, that he brought Greeks into the Temple. The Proſelytes of righteouſneſs indeed, thoſe that had undertaken the whole Law, which were circumciſed, &c. they were admitted with the Jews into the inner court : but theſe other only into the outer court, called the court of the Gentiles, and the unclean, in which reſpect it is that the Temple is called the houſe of prayer to, or for, all nations, Mar. 11. 17. becauſe in that court the Gentiles were admitted to pray. In the ſecond Temple theſe courts were divided one from the other by a little ſept of ſtone, three cubits high, called, ſaith Joſephus, by the Hebrews γάζος, and by the Greeks δειγὸς, by the author of the book of Maccabees (1 Mac. 9. 54.) τὸ τεῖχος τῆς αὐλῆς τῆς ἁγίων ἐσωτέρας, the wall of the inner court of the ſanctuary, which Alcimus there commanded to be taken down. On this wall was written in many places μὴ δεῖν ἀλλόφυλον ἐντὸς ἰέναι, that no alien might go within. The firſt mention of this law in Joſephus is Ant. l. 12. c. 3. where he ſets it down as a ſanction of Antiochus, Μηδενὶ εἶναι ἀλλοφύλῳ εἰς τὸ περίβολον εἰσιέναι τοῦ ἱεροῦ, that no alien might enter into that court of the ſanctuary, which was incloſed with the ſept, (ſo περίβολος ſignifies a court incloſed.) So again l. 15. c. ult. in the deſcription of the Temple built by Herod, there is mention of ἔρκιον a ſept, which incompaſſed the περίβολος or court, whereon there was a prohibition εἰσιέναι ἀλλοεθνῆ, that any of another nation ſhould enter. This is called by him δρυφακτὸς λίθινος, and ἔρκιον λίθινον δρυφακτὸς, a partition of ſtone, or a ſept of a ſtone-partition, the word δρυφακτὸς from δρῦς (an oak primarily, then any kind of tree) being ὅτι δρυῶν φραγμὸς a partition (the word that is here uſed) made of timber, and vulgarly uſed for any kind of partition, though here of ſtone (as a leaden ink-horn or a ſilver box among us.) This doth Gorionides affirm to have been a ſilver wall, betwixt the Sanctuary and the porch, with a golden door in it, (but this I ſuppoſe not that the maſs of the wall was ſilver, or of the door gold, but that they were ſilver'd and gilt over) on the upper poſt of which, ſaith he, there was a golden ſword of twelve pounds of gold, on which were written theſe words, הגר הקרב יומת, A ſtranger that comes near ſhall die. That this is it which is here called moſt expreſly τὸ μεσότοιχον τοῦ φραγμοῦ, the middle-wall of partition, there is no queſtion; and this Chriſt is ſaid to take down, by making the Jews and Gentiles for the future, without any diſcrimination, one ſheepfold under one Chriſt. To this ſept and prohibition of entring, as it ſtood among the Jews, that of Eccleſiaſticus 19. 29. ſeemeth to refer, where the man of the houſe is ſaid to turn the ſtranger out of doors, as out of the Sanctuary or inner court, ἔξιθι, παρεγίνε, ἀπὸ παρεμβάτου τῆς δόξης, Go out, ſtranger, from the preſence of glory, that is, as ſtrangers were commanded to go out of the Temple, where was the ſchechina or appearing of God, which is ordinarily called δόξα glory.

b. ἅγιοι ξένοι

V. 19. Saints] That ἅγιοι ſaints here ſignifie the Jews, will appear by the oppoſition to ξένοι ſtrangers before, for in reſpect of the Jews it was that they were called ſtrangers, they being the only people of God before, and now the Gentiles, that were but גרי ſtrangers (vulgarly known by that name) being received in to be συμπολίται fellow-citizens; with whom? why, with the ſame to whom they were ſtrangers, that is, the Jews. Thus doth Procopius interpret it in Iſa. p. 683. who accordingly calls the Jews τὸ ὂν παρὰ πάντων ἁγίων ἔθνος the nation made up of the holy fathers: which ſaying of his gives the reaſon of this phraſe, why the Jews are called ἅγιοι holy, viz. in reſpect to the Patriarchs, Abraham, &c. who were truly ἅγιοι ſaints, to whom the promiſes were made, to the participation of which the Gentiles are now called.

CHAP. III. Paraphraſe.

1. FOR this cauſe I Paul, the priſoner of Jeſus Chriſt for you Gentiles,]

1. Hereupon I Paul, as an Apoſtle, ſo at this time a priſoner alſo of Jeſus Chriſt, who am perſecuted for this one thing, becauſe I preach to the Gentiles, and according to the doctrine of Chriſt vindicate the liberty of the Gentile converts, and the no-neceſſity of circumciſion to them, (ſee Note on Gal. 2. c.)

2. If ye have heard of the diſpenſation of the grace of God, which is given me to youward ;]

6. Viz. That the Gentiles were to be taken in with the Jews into the ſame inheritance, and have part in all the pardon and grace, acceptation and reward, which is now made over to believers in Chriſt, that they were to be members of Chriſt, and ſo receive influences from the head, (as well as the Jews) that they were to partake of all the promiſes made in Chriſt, and that the preaching of the Goſpel to them was to be a means of all this;

6. That the Gentiles ſhould be fellow-heirs, and of the ſame body, and partakers of his promiſe in Chriſt by the Goſpel,]

7. In which work I have been made uſe of as an inſtrument, God out of his free grace to me, that was a perſecutor, being thus pleaſed to employ me, and by the gift of tongues and miracles, &c. fitting me for the diſcharge of it.

7. Whereof I was made a miniſter, according to the gift of the grace of God given unto me, by the effectual working of his power:]

a. 8. I, I ſay, who am the unworthieſt perſon, and moſt unfit for ſuch an office, have yet had this dignity, this favour, this commiſſion vouchſafed to me, to make known to the Gentiles this bounty of Chriſt's towards them, in receiving them freely into covenant, without thoſe impoſitions of circumciſion, &c. which were required of the Jews: A thing which could not by any clue or ſearch have been found in the Jewiſh Law, if Chriſt had not commanded, and I and other Apoſtles received revelation to do it;

8. Unto me, who am leſs then the leaſt of all ſaints, is this [a] grace given, that I ſhould preach among the Gentiles the unſearchable riches of Chriſt,]

9. And to let all men ſee what this myſtery is which hath ſo long lain hid in God (who, as he created all things at firſt by Jeſus Chriſt, ſo hath now wrought this great work of new creation, of regenerating the Gentiles, calling them out of their heathen idolatries by Chriſt alſo) but is now communicated to the world; (ſee Note on Acts 2. d.)

9. And to make all men ſee what is the † fellowſhip of the myſtery which * from the beginning of the world hath been hid in God, who created all things by Jeſus Chriſt:]

10. That by what is now done in the Church, the very Angels may now come to know that which before they knew not, the great variety of God's wiſe diſpenſing of things, as in his dealing formerly with the Jews, ſo now in calling the Gentiles to the light of the truth, and knowledge, and practice of all Chriſtian vertue,

10. † To the intent that now unto the principalities and powers in heavenly places might be known by the Church the manifold wiſdom of God,]

† That now ἵνα νῦν

12. In whom we have boldneſs, and acceſs with confidence by the faith of him.]

13. And therefore I that am perſecuted for this reaſon peculiarly, becauſe I preach to the Gentiles (which the Jews think to be unlawful, and 'tis not ſtrange they ſhould, when it was a myſtery not formerly revealed to the very Angels, v. 10.) do deſire and pray firſt for my ſelf (as after he prays for them, v. 16.) that I be not amated at any thing that befalls me in this cauſe; or I do beſeech you and pray for you that you be not diſcouraged, or ſtopt, or amated (ſee Note on Luke 18. a.) in your courſe, upon conſideration of the ſufferings that have fallen on me for your ſakes, (that is, becauſe I converſe with and preach to you, or aſſert this dealing of God toward the Gentiles) which ſhould be rather matter of glorying or rejoicing to you.

13. Wherefore I * deſire that you faint not at my tribulation for you, which is your glory.]

* intreat you not to be diſheartned αἰτοῦμαι μὴ ἐκκακεῖν, or, I deſire or pray not to be, or that I be not troubled; ſo the Syriack, that my ſpirit be not troubled.

16. That according to the abundance of that power by which he hath called you to the faith, and wrought in you obedience to it, he will alſo by his Spirit give you to grow in all inward ſtrength and abilities of the ſoul, to perform all holy duties,

Annotations on Chap. III.

V. 8. Grace] The word χάρις here, and χάρισμα in other places 1 Tim. 4. 14. ſignifies ſome ſpecial favour of Gods in order to ſome charge or office, that eſpecially of the miniſtery. So when Levi is called God's holy one, Deut. 33. 8. the word there uſed in the Hebrew is חסידך, not thy ἅγιος ſo properly, (that would be קדוש) as thy κεχαριτωμένος, חסד ſignifying χάρις favour here; and ſo the perſon to whom the חסד belongs, is he that is favoured by God in a ſpecial manner, preferred to ſuch a dignity (an office) before others, without conſideration of any dignity in the perſon, only upon the free mercy and good pleaſure of God.

V. 9. Know] The meaning of this verſe will not eaſily be pitch'd on, becauſe it is not certain whether the reading be ὑπερβάλλουσαν τῆς γνώσεως ἀγάπην τοῦ Χριστοῦ, or as the King's MS. reads, ὑπερβάλλουσαν ἀγάπην τῆς γνώσεως τοῦ Χριστοῦ. If the firſt be the right reading, it muſt then be rendred rendred the love of Chriſt which exceedeth knowledge; where the compariſon being laid betwixt the love of Chriſt and knowledge, and the love of Chriſt being by ver. 18. determined to ſignifie Chriſt's love of us, the knowledge muſt probably ſignifie thoſe things which the Gnoſticks pretend to know, and boaſt ſo much in that knowledge; and ſo to know the love of Chriſt, which paſſeth knowledge, is to ſtudy and contemplate that one ſubject, Chriſt's infinite love to us, which is infinitely more worth our ſtudying than what they boaſt of: and ſo this is no improbable ſenſe of the place, that the Apoſtle having prayed that they may comprehend the immenſe love of Chriſt toward them, v. 18. ſhould add alſo, that they may know that love of Chriſt's, which excelleth knowledge, that is, (as the Gnoſticks are very proud of their deep and ſecret knowledge, and place great perfection therein, ſo they on the other ſide ſhould) look upon the huge love of Chriſt toward them, ſuch as being conſidered, will by way of gratitude incline them to ſuffer any thing for his ſake, in oppoſition to being diſcouraged at tribulations, v. 13. and to poſſeſs their hearts of that, as that which is far more worth their thinking of and ſtudying, than the higheſt knowledge or skill of myſtical interpretations, which the Gnoſticks ſo pretended to. As for the notion of γνώσεως for knowledge ſimply taken, ſo as to exceed knowledge ſhould ſignifie unſearchable, unintelligible, that cannot probably be the meaning of it, when at the ſame time he prays they may know it, and beſides the Genitive caſe γνώσεως, being the note of compariſon, ſeems rather to refer to the former notion, to compare love and knowledge together, and prefer the former. But if the other be the right reading, then the rendring will be plain, the exceeding love of the knowledge of Chriſt: and though that be capable of ſeveral interpretations, whether firſt, the love of God in revealing, and of Chriſt in vouchſafing to be known to us, or ſecondly, our love of Chriſtian knowledge; yet the former will be more commodious, becauſe more agreeable to v. 18. where it is God's love toward us that they are to comprehend, and this is one ſpecial branch of that, his revealing his Son unto us; to which alſo it is conſequent, that we ſhould (which is the point in hand v. 13.) adhere conſtantly to him, endure perſecutions, and not ſuffer our love to be cooled by them. And to this interpretation the words which follow will well connect, ἵνα πληρωθῆτε, &c. that ye may be filled to all the fulneſs of God, (ſee Note c.) as an effect in us of this knowledge, or conſideration of God's infinite love toward us.

Ἀγάπη Χριστοῦ ὑπερβάλλουσα γνώσεως

Ib. Filled with all the fulneſs of God] Πληρόω to fulfill ſignifies to fill up vacuities, to perfect, to complete; ſee Note on Mat. 5. h. ſo here having recommended to them the βάλλος ἀγάπης exceeding love, or charity, of God toward them, viz. rich love, and promiſes of God in Chriſt, he adds that they may be fulfilled, that is, (as an effect of their conſideration of God's love towards them) filled up and perfected to the higheſt pitch that God now in Chriſt requires of us, and that is properly called πᾶν πλήρωμα Θεοῦ, all the fulneſs of God, that is, all that perfection of charity to which God in Chriſt hath deſigned to elevate the Chriſtian, and wherein in a manner all Chriſtianity doth conſiſt, and to which we are engaged by his love to us.

πλήρωμα Θεοῦ

V. 21. In the Church] The variety of reading, either with, or without καὶ and, makes it doubtful how this verſe ſhould be rendred. If it be without καὶ and, then it muſt firſt be obſerved, that the prepoſition ἐν, ἐν ſignifying ſometimes in, as in a place (and ſo it may poſſibly be here, in the aſſembly of Chriſtians for ever) ſignifies alſo through and by; and ſo it may moſt probably ſignifie here, and be all one with διὰ τῆς ἐκκλησίας by the Church, v. 10. that as there the various wiſdom of God was demonſtrated by the Church, that is, by God's dealing in it, ſo here that various wiſdom and mercy of his ſhould be acknowledged with thankſgiving. And then, though 'tis poſſible ἐν Χριστῷ may adhere to ἐκκλησίᾳ, and ſo be rendred, the Church in Chriſt Jeſus, that is, the Chriſtian Church; yet becauſe probably, if that were it, it would be expreſſed by repeating the article τῇ after ἐκκλησίᾳ, as it is 1 Cor. 1. 2. therefore it will be more reaſonable to render ἐν Χριστῷ through Chriſt, as the mediator through whom as we pray Rom. 1. 8. ſo we give thanks and praiſe to God alſo. And ſo the meaning will be, All honour and glory be unto God through Jeſus Chriſt (by whom theſe mercies are conveyed to us) for, or by, or through the Church, that is, through thoſe gracious and wiſe diſpoſals of his, that are now wrought by receiving the Gentiles into the Church, a thing which is likely to have main influence upon all poſterities of the world for ever. But if the καὶ be taken in, (as in that antient MS. it is) then as that muſt neceſſarily connect ἐκκλησίᾳ and Χριστῷ, Church and Chriſt, whether it be rendred and or even, ſo the ἐν cannot ſignifie in, as in a place, becauſe that cannot be applied to ἐν Χριστῷ in Chriſt, but muſt neceſſarily be rendred by, or through, and the Church and Chriſt muſt be the two means (though perhaps thoſe two knit into one, by rendring καὶ even) whereby this glory is to come in to God, and ſo is aſcribed to him, thus, All glory be to God the Father, the wiſe diſpoſer of all, through that which is now done in the Church, and, or even, through what hath been done by Chriſt, in reconciling the Gentiles, and bringing them into the ſame fold with the Jews, making up one Church of both.

principal member, the body of any living creature is ordinarily compacted, and by the ſupplies that the veins and arteries binding faſt the joints, afford to every part, proportionably to the power or efficacy of the one, and the wants of the other, doth daily increaſe and grow, till it come to perfect maturity, and all this through the mutual amity that is preſerved in the body, ſo) the whole body of the Church being held together in frequent aſſemblies ver. 12. by every man's doing his beſt in the capacity he is in, towards the ſervice of the Church, (or by means of the rich men's contributing to the maintainance of the poor, accordingly as one wants, and the other is able to ſupply) grows into a complete ſpiritual body fit for the ſervice of Chriſt, and all this by the means of mutual love and charity.

V. 8. Gave gifts] It hath been the manner of many nations, in their triumphs after victories, to go up to the city in pomp and ſplendor, to bring in captives bound, all people coming forth to the ſpectacle, and then to give ſolemn gifts or largeſſes to their friends and country-men, or kindred, as part of the ſolemnity: So M. Aurelius gave eight pound apiece to the poor people in the time of triumph. And this is here accommodated to Chriſt in his victory and triumph over hell, accompliſhed by his death and reſurrection. For to increaſe the ſolemnity of that, he went up to the heavenly Jeruſalem, his own city, from which he came forth, carried the Devil, and ſin, and death, captives, ſhew'd them openly, ſhackled and unarmed, the Devil gagg'd and ſilenc'd in his oracles, death's ſting pulled out, and ſin left unable to hurt any that had truly repented of it; and, for a complement of all, he ſent his largeſſes to his Diſciples and clients, the gifts of the Holy Ghoſt. That which is here ἔδωκε gave, is in the Greek of the Pſalm 78. 19. ἔλαβες received, probably from the nature of the Hebrew לקח, which as it ſignifies to give, ſo 'tis to receive alſo, as in Engliſh to take ſometimes ſignifies to give, and in Greek λῆμμα and δόσις are all one.

b. Εὐαγγελιστὰς

V. 11. Evangeliſts] The reſt of theſe offices of the Church have been explained in the Notes on 1 Cor. 12. a. b. c. And this of Evangeliſt, by the way, Note on Mat. 9. l. and Joh. 20. a. To which ſomewhat may here be added, for the giving the full notion of it. As firſt, that the word εὐαγγέλιον, good news, or meſſage, being common to that which is written, and which is delivered by word of mouth, two notions there are of Evangeliſt, one for the writer, another for the preacher of the Goſpel. In the firſt notion we have the four Evangeliſts, of which two were Apoſtles of the twelve, Matthew and John, and yet thoſe as ordinarily called Evangeliſts as the other two. But this is not the notion which belongs to this place (where Evangeliſt is a diſtinct office from Apoſtle) but the ſecond, which denotes an office then known in the Church, when any that was taken notice of for ſome eminent degree of proficiency in the Goſpel, and ſpecial abilities of utterance and diligence, &c. was upon recommendation of the Church (as it is ſaid of Timotheus, Act. 16. 2.) choſen by any of the Apoſtles to aſſiſt them in their work, and ſent out with power of preaching the Goſpel (and of doing miracles, and with gifts of healing, to that purpoſe) and of baptizing thoſe that ſhould receive the Goſpel, and with other powers alſo of ordaining Biſhops, when the Apoſtle thought fit to allow it him. For as the office of Evangeliſt, being to preach to unbelievers, requires not the donation of all the Epiſcopal power, viz. of ruling, nor the power of Ordination neceſſarily, becauſe when the Evangeliſt hath planted the faith, the Apoſtle himſelf may come and confirm, and ordain Biſhops, as we ſee in Samaria, Act. 8. 17. (and therefore the Author of the Commentaries on the Epiſtles under S. Ambroſe's name, ſaith on this place, Quamvis non ſint ſacerdotes, Evangelizare tamen poſſunt ſine cathedra, quemadmodum Stephanus & Philippus, Though they be not Prieſts (that is, Biſhops) yet they may Evangelize without a chair) ſo the donation of that ſuperior power doth not yet make them ceaſe to be Evangeliſts. And accordingly as Philip, which was but a Deacon (and therefore only preached and baptized the Samaritans, Act. 8. 12. Peter and John the Apoſtles being ſent to lay hands on them v. 17.) was yet an Evangeliſt, and is ſo ſtyled Act. 21. 8. So others that were Evangeliſts had alſo power given them by the Apoſtles that ſent them out to conſtitute Churches, and ſo to ordain rulers over them, as of Mark it is ſaid that being ſent into Ægypt by S. Peter, he conſtituted Anianus Biſhop of Alexandria; and ſo when Timothy was conſtituted Biſhop of Epheſus, 1 Tim. 1. 3. he is yet commanded by S. Paul to do the work of an Evangeliſt, 2 Tim. 4. 5. that is, as he was Biſhop of thoſe that believed under that Metropolis, and of thoſe alſo that ſhould come in to the faith in all Aſia, ſo he had alſo authority to make known the Goſpel to them that knew it not, to call them to the faith, which is the peculiar notion of εὐαγγελίζεσθαι and κηρύσσειν, to Evangelize and to preach, and μαθητεύειν, Matth. 28. 29. to gather diſciples, as thoſe words are oppoſed to teaching, Act. 15. 35. and c. 5. 44. and as ὁ λόγος the word differs from doctrine, 1 Tim. 5. 17. Now as he that from a Deacon is made a Biſhop hath all the powers that belonged to a Deacon ſtill continued to him, and the addition of ſo much more; ſo he that is an Evangeliſt, if he be farther inveſted with power of Ordination, may ſtill remain an Evangeliſt, the power of conſtituting Biſhops over them that believe and are baptized being reconcilable with the power of preaching to them that believed not. Only the word Evangeliſt denoting no more than that of being ſent by an Apoſtle to preach, is indifferently uſed, whether he have the power of Deacon only, as Philip, or more, as of Timothy and Mark hath been affirmed, and ſo is here ſet after the Apoſtles and Prophets, and diſtinguiſh'd from Paſtors and Doctors, that come after, by which the ruling Elder or Biſhop is underſtood.

c. Κυβεία

V. 14. Sleight] The word κυβεία from κύβος a dye, might poſſibly ſignifie inconſtancy and mutability, becauſe nothing is more variable than that. And ſo in Antoninus l. 1 ἀναμφιβόλως ἀκλινοῦς is ſet to ſignifie the firmeſt conſtancy of mind. In this ſenſe it might well enough agree with the περιφερόμενοι here, being carried about with the wind, &c. and ſo Xylander upon that place hath taken confidence to interpret it, that S. Paul adviſes us to avoid κυβείας ἀνθρώπων, that is, ſaith he, ne omni vento doctrinæ circumagi nos & in errores abripi patiamur, that we do not permit our ſelves to be driven about, and ſnatch'd into errors by every wind of doctrine. But the Gloſs of Phavorinus is more to be heeded, who renders it πανουργία, craft, ſubtilty, dexterity to deceive; and agreeably the very word πανουργία is here ſet with it, in the ſenſe wherein we proverbially ſay of a cunning cheat, that he ſets the dice upon us. And ſo Euſebius out of Irenæus ſpeaking of Marcus, ſaith he was μαγικῆς κυβείας ὑποκριτής, by κυβεία ſignifying deceitful artifice, ſuch as Conjurers uſe, Eccleſ. Hiſt. l. 4. c. 11. See Theophylact, who comparing the falſe teachers to κυβευταὶ Dicers, ſaith of them, that they do μεταθεῖναι ἀφῃρεμένους, ὥσπερ πεττοὺς, ὡς βούλονται, remove the ſimple as they pleaſe, as at dice they can caſt what throw they have a mind to; and this, ſaith he, is the κυβεία here ſpoken of, and the μεθοδεία πλάνης, ὅπερ ἡ πλάνη αὐτῇ μεθοδείαν βάλλεται, whatſoever their deceitful artifices have a mind to.

d. Ib. Lye in wait to deceive] What μέθοδεία ſignifies in this place may thus be collected. Heſychius ſeems to render it τέχναι arts, for ſo I ſuppoſe the words in his Gloſſary muſt be mended, inſtead of μέθοδίτας τέχνας reading μεθοδείας, τέχνας· for as to μέθοδίτας, that follows after, and is rendred τεχνίτας. Thus μεθοδεύειν in Suidas is τεχνάζεσθαι, ἀπατᾶν, to uſe any artifice, and to deceive. The word, ſaith * S. Chryſoſtom, is uſed ἐν λόγοις, ἐν ἔργοις, ἐν παλαίσμασι, in ſpeeches, in works, in wreſtlings. In ſpeech it is ſet down by the Rhetoricians for one of the ἰδέαι λόγου· ſee Hermogenes περὶ Ἰδ. Τόμ. α'. p. 217. and becauſe theſe are all deſigned to the working on, and perſuading, the auditors, therefore μεθοδεύειν τὸν λόγον is thus to contrive the ſpeech, that it may probably be moſt perſuaſive: ſee Chryſoſt. Tom. 4. p. 416. l. 16. ἑτέρως δὲ αὐτὸ μεθώδευσε περισπείσειν, he otherwiſe dreſſed up the ſame thing and propoſed it more ſoftly, or calmly, and cunningly. So Tom. 3. p. 495. l. 20. and p. 880. l. 1. ἀδεῶς φανερὰ ποιοῦσι τὰ ἁμαρτήματα, ἀλλ' ἑτέρως αὐτὸ καλαπλάττει μεθοδεύων, τύπτει, πιθανὸν καλασκευάζων τὸν λόγον, ὑπαγόμενος κεχρημένῳ, he propoſes not ſins plainly, calling it idolatry, &c. but after another manner contrives and forms his ſpeech, ſo as it may beſt perſuade, by concealing what is likely to avert. So in Marcus Eremita in his περὶ συνεφ. ψυχῆς. p. 941. D. μέθοδον τινα ἐπιζητεῖς, καὶ λόγους παραινέσεως, you deſired ſome method, and exhortatory diſcourſes, that is ſome colours of perſuaſion. And the like arts of diſſimulation and diſguiſe as theſe, in all ſorts of actions, and particularly in combates, are in like manner expreſs'd by this word μεθοδεῖαι. So μεθοδεῖαι τοῦ διαβόλου, Eph. 6. 11. the crafts and ambuſhes, ἐπιβουλαὶ, ἐνέδραι, δόλοι, the treacheries, deceits, and cunning contrivances of the devil. Accordingly ἀμεθόδευτος is one that is not apt to be deceived by any ſubtilties, contrivances, concealments, as in Hermes Triſm. l. 13. p. 32. ἀμεθόδευτος κριτὴς, a moſt wiſe Judge, that cannot be impoſed upon by any artifices of the advocates or pleaders. And thus in this place, the craftineſs of men is deſigned εἰς μεθοδείαν τῆς πλάνης to the managing and contriving of their falſe doctrine, ſo as they may be moſt likely to perſuade and gain upon ſeducible auditors.

μεθοδεῖαι διαβόλου

c. Κεφαλὴ V. 16. From whom the whole body ——] This verſe hath much of difficulty in it, and the firſt part of that is, whether, Chriſt being called in the former verſe the head of the Church, the influences that here are ſaid to come from him, and are ſet down by analogy with the natural body, are thoſe that come from the head, and not rather from the heart. To this the ſolution may be eaſie, firſt, that it is very probable, that in a man's body the growth is from the head. For the animal ſpirits are by the nerves conveyed to the nouriſhing and encreaſing the ſeveral parts, through the whole body; and thoſe nerves deſcend from the brain by the ſpina dorſi, and are from the vertebræ there branch'd out over the whole body; from whence it comes to paſs in crooked perſons, where the vertebræ are diſplaced, that the growth is thereby hindred. And then the analogy will hold exactly to the Church, the body of Chriſt, that it receives its ſupply for increaſe, or growth, from Chriſt the head. Secondly, that if this be not ſo, but that the heart ſhould be found to be the fountain both of life and growth, yet the analogy here will ſtill hold, it being reaſonable to affirm that Chriſt ſupplies the place of both theſe parts in the Church, is the head to rule and direct, and the heart alſo to ſupply it with all it wants, with graces for the beginning and increaſe of life. In the next place therefore, it is not eaſie to give an account of that phraſe, συμβιβαζόμενον διὰ πάσης ἁφῆς τῆς ἐπιχορηγίας. Συμβιβάζειν is ſufficiently expounded by Heſychius, εἰς φιλίαν ἄγειν, to bring to friendſhip; and ſo συμβιβαζόμενον applyed to the body, ſignifies a cloſe conjunction, ſomewhat above that agreement of parts, or fitting together, noted by σωαρμολογούμενον precedent; that ſignifying the fitting one part to another by jointing, or putting together, but the latter, the faſtning them when they are ſo jointed, either as by cementing, or by pinning, or by clapping plates of iron upon them, which will keep them from falling (or being pluck'd) aſunder: and this is done διὰ τῆς ἁφῆς καὶ συνδέσμων, Col. 2. 19. Firſt, διὰ ἁφῆς, literally by touches, Ἁφαὶ or contiguous, but not continuous parts, that is, by joints, ſo called from ἅπτω tango, becauſe though the joints, like ſeveral pieces of timber fitted together, do touch one another, yet there is not that continuity, as in each part is diſcernible: and ſecondly διὰ συνδέσμων, by ligatures, and bands, and here διὰ πάσης ἁφῆς by every touch, that is, every joint, without mention of the bands. Where there being no matter of doubt but that the σύνδεσμοι bands denote the veins and arteries, σύνδεσμοι thoſe ligaments of the body, by which the blood and ſpirits are conveyed to every part, it muſt follow, that the ἁφαὶ joined with it muſt ſignifie the joints that are ſo cemented, and kept together with theſe bands, and ſo by both of them there, and by one here, (comprehending alſo the other under it) the body is ἐπιχορηγούμενον ἐπιχορηγούμενον and συμβιβαζόμενον, ſupplied by the one, and knit together by the other. And then it being evident that this place and that are parallel, it will follow, Firſt, that πᾶσα ἁφὴ here, every touch, or contiguity, or joint, will be all one with ἁφαὶ καὶ σύνδεσμοι touches and ligaments in the Plural there; and Secondly, that the Genitive τῆς ἐπιχορηγίας, that follows here, muſt be the latter of two Subſtantives, and denote the office or uſe of the ἁφαὶ the joints, and veins, and arteries, viz. ἐπιχορηγεῖν, to ſupply, or contribute to every part that which it wants, as in the place to the Coloſ. the body is ſaid ἐπιχορηγεῖσθαι in the Paſſive, to be thus ſupplied and provided for by them. The third difficulty is, what is the importance of κατ' ἐνέργειαν, and that will κατ' ἐνέργειαν now be more eaſily ſalved. For the ſupply being made by the veins and arteries (that knit the joints) to all the parts of the body, thoſe parts that receive the ſupply being after mentioned, and ἐν μέτρῳ, noting their ἐν μέτρῳ proportion of want, the degree or meaſure of their capacity of receiving it, ἐνέργεια muſt needs belong to the agent in this ſupply, the joints, and veins, and arteries, that thus contribute to the wants of each part; and ſo κατ' ἐνέργειαν will ſignifie by, or according to, their operation, or operative virtue, or efficiency, or power, ἐν μέτρῳ ἑνὸς ἑκάστου μέρους in the proportion of every member, that is, in proportion to what every member wants, not only for its preſent ſubſiſtence, to repair what is daily loſt, but for growth alſo, till it attain to the full dimenſions that belong to it. The laſt difficulty is, why when τὸ σῶμα the body is the Subject of the Propoſition, and conſequently ποιεῖται αὔξησιν cauſes increaſe is the Predicate that connects with it, here is yet added τοῦ σώματος of the body, thus, the body cauſeth encreaſe of the body. But that is anſwered alſo by the uſe of the word גוף in Hebrew, to which τὸ σῶμα body in Greek is anſwerable, which ſignifies not only body, but being, eſſence, and being joined with any thing elſe, ſignifies that to which it is joined, גופו his body, that is, himſelf; and ſo here 'tis taken, and ſo ſignifies no more but that the body by thoſe means ſpecified cauſeth increaſe of it ſelf, that is, is daily nouriſhed and increaſed, εἰς οἰκοδομὴν ἑαυτοῦ ἐν ἀγάπῃ, to the building up, or improving, it ſelf in love, which is, as it were, the reciting of the whole verſe, and applying of it to the buſineſs in hand, the Church, as it is the body of Chriſt; that as union and kindneſs, and the ſupply that is made by one part of the body to the other, is that that ſuſtains and gives growth to the body, ſo is amity and joining together in common aſſemblies, and the rich men's and the maturer and ſtronger Chriſtians contributing their ſupplies to the temporal, but eſpecially to the ſpiritual wants of the poorer and weaker, a means of increaſing and building up the Church of Chriſt, whereſoever it hath been planted. By what hath been here ſaid thus largely, that other parallel place Col. 2. 19. is ſufficiently explained alſo.

f. Ἀπαλγεῖν V. 19. Paſt feeling] Ἀπαλγεῖν is, ſaith Pauſanias, παύεσθαι ἀλγεῖν, to ceaſe to feel cold; as ἀλγεῖν is not πονεῖν, but but πάσχειν, not Actively to labour, but Paſſively to ſuffer pain. So ἀπηγχόνισες ὑπὸ τῦ πολλῦ ῥίγες, they that that through extreme cold are num'd, and can neither feel, nor do any thing.

g Ἀκαθαρσία Ib. Uncleanneſs] Ἀκαθαρσία περὶ ἀῤῥένων, καὶ θηλέων ἀῤῥητοποιΐαι, ſaith S. Baſil ad Diodorum, the word is uſed for thoſe abominable ſins not to be named, whether of men or women.

h. V. 26. Let not the ſun go ----] What is here adviſed by the Apoſtle, is parallel to the directions of the antient Philoſophers, known by the Epheſians to whom he wrote. Ariſtotle diſtinguiſheth in this matter, Eth. l. 7. c. 6. between ἀκρόχολοι thoſe that are highly enraged, and πικροὶ bitter, or contumelious in their anger, and χαλεποὶ hard to be reconciled, whom elſewhere he calls δυσδιάλυτοι thoſe that hardly are diſſolved, hardly put off their diſpleaſure, Eth. 4. 5. Theſe three ſorts are here referred to by the Apoſtle. The firſt (ἀκρόχολοι) ὀργίζεσθε is intimated in the ὀργίζεσθε be angry, whether by that be meant ſuddain anger and haſtineſs, or whether diſtemper and rage, conceived upon any the greateſt provocation. This firſt degree is here ſuppoſed, and the exhortation founded in the preſence of it, which yet concludeth not this, whether ſuddenneſs of paſſion, or inordinacy of rage, to be no ſin; for certainly the contrary to the ſlowneſs to anger is elſewhere commanded, βραδὺς εἰς ὀργὴν, Jam. 1. 19. and ſo of the charitable man it is ſaid 1 Cor. 13. 4. μακροθυμεῖ, he is ſlow to anger. And Pſalm 2. 4. whence theſe words are recited from the Septuagint, 'tis certain, thoſe that are there ſpoken to did ſin, in being diſpleaſed at God's ſetting up David; and their rebellion againſt him was but an higher degree of it, of which he forewarns them in the next words, ſin not, that is, fall not into that horrible ſin. The ſecond ſort, πικροὶ, is forbidden in the μὴ ἁμαρτάνετε, ſin not, this being the firſt aggravation of the fault of anger indulged to, that it becomes bitter, which is expreſs'd by παροξυσμὸς 1 Cor. 13. 5. an exaſperation, ar paroxiſm of this evil humor. And the third, χαλεποὶ or δυσδιάλυτοι is here expreſs'd by the very ſame colour, that the antient Philoſophers, the Pythagoreans; had thought fit to expreſs it by. For of them, ſaith Plutarch, de Fat. am. that when they fell into any λοιδορία ὑπ' ὀργῆς contumely through anger, πρὶν ἢ ἥλιον δῦναι—διήλλαττο, before the ſun went down, they ſhook hands, and were diſſolved, (directly contrary to the δυσδιάλυτοι) or made friends again. And ſo here ὁ ἥλιος μὴ ἐπιδυέτω ἐπὶ τῷ παροργισμῷ ὑμῶν, Let not the ſun go down upon your wrath, where παροργισμὸς being that παροξυσμὸς exaſperation of anger, which breaks out into bitter words, and ſo all one directly with the λοιδορία ὑπ' ὀργῆς, the contumelious behaviour produced by anger, the Apoſtles command is, that he that hath been guilty of it, muſt come to temper, and ſue for reconciliation, (as the ſame Pythagoreans did τὰς δεξιὰς ἐμβάλλοντες ἀλλήλοις, καὶ ἀπασπαζόμενοι, ſhaking hands and embracing one another) before the ſun go down, that is, either ſpeedily (as Chriſt adviſes, agree with thy adverſary quickly) or elſe before the time of ſolemn praying to God, which was conſtantly at evening, and ſo the exhortation here will bear proportion with that Mat. 5. 23, 24. If thou bringeſt thy gift unto the altar, and there remembreſt that thy brother hath ought againſt thee (as he that hath been reproached by thee in thy wrath hath,) leave there thy gift, and firſt be reconciled to thy brother (that is, obtain his reconciliation to thee) and then, and not till then, thou may'ſt offer thy gift.

V. 28. Working with his hands]. The reaſon of the conjoining of the prohibition of ſtealth, and the precept of labour, will be diſcerned by remembring the old verſe in Phocylides,

i. μηκέτι κλεπτέτω, μᾶλλον δὲ κοπιάτω

Πᾶς γὰρ ἀεργὸς ἀνὴρ ζωὴν κλοπιμὴν ἀπὸ χειρῶν,

There is no way for a ſluggard to live, but by ſtealing, and acts of that kind. And ſo ſaith Chryſoſtom, Τὸ γὰρ κλέπτειν ἀργίας ἔργον, ſtealing is an effect of idleneſs.

V. 30. Sealed] The ſpecial uſe of a Seal, and that which in this and other places of the Scripture is moſt commonly referr'd to, is that of a mark or Character ſet upon wares or commodities that are bought by any; and becauſe men were as ordinarily bought as any other commodity, nothing was more ordinary than to ſet a ſeal or mark upon them, either in their forehead or ſome other part, to diſtinguiſh them from all other men's ſervants. So ſaith Theophylact on Rom. 8. 10. Ὁ μὴ ἔχων σφραγῖδα, οὐκ ἔστι τῦ ἑαυτῦ τῆ διὰ τ σφραγῖδος ἐκείνης δηλυμένης, He that hath not the ſeal, is not the ſervant, or goods, of the Maſter, who is expreſs'd to be ſo by that ſeal. Thus Rev. 7. 3. the ſealing is there accommodated to the ſervants of God, who are there ſuppoſed to be bought, and are now farther to be reſcued out of the temporal enſuing danger, and as a token of that, ſealed in the forehead; as ſervi, ſervants, in reſpect of the original of the word, à ſervando, is all one with σωζόμενοι, who being ſpiritually reſcued and ſaved already from the pollutions of the world, are now to be delivered from the approaching deſtruction, when, without that mark of diſcrimination, the good and ill might all be involved in the ſame calamity. See Note on Rev. 7. c. Thus when Joh. 6. 27. 'tis ſaid that God the father hath ſealed Chriſt, the meaning is clear, that by the miracles which he did, and eſpecially by the Holy Ghoſt's deſcending upon him, with οὗτός ἐστι this is he, he had owned him his ſervant, Iſa. 42. 1. (ſee Note on Mat. 3. l.) and demonſtrated it as punctually, as if he had mark'd him in the forehead that this was his anointed ſpecial ſervant, ſent by commiſſion from him, diſcriminated from all others, and that whatſoever he ſaid, was the will and pleaſure of God. In reference to what was there ſaid of God's ſealing Chriſt, is that which is here ſaid to be underſtood alſo. For there the Spirits coming down upon Chriſt was the ſealing of him, the ſignifying that he was God's ſervant ſent on his meſſage to the world; and here in like manner the Epheſians are ſaid to be ſealed by the Spirit to the day of redemption, that is by the preaching of the Goſpel, and ſetling of a Church among them, which is an effect directly of the Holy Ghoſt's deſcending on the Apoſtles (as before upon Chriſt) and an act of the office of the Holy Ghoſt, by which the Epheſians that were believers were demonſtratively pointed out to be by God deſigned to his ſervice to a gracious Chriſtian life, and nothing ſo contrary ſo grievous to this Holy Spirit, as their neglecting and contradicting theſe deſigns of God, living unchriſtianly, v. 29. By this 'twill be eaſie to underſtand the like phraſe 2 Cor. 1. 22. where alſo, as here, to God's ſealing us is ſtraight added his giving his ſpirit as a pledge, &c. So Eph. 1. 13. ye were ſealed by the holy Spirit of promiſe, that is, by that holy Spirit promiſed by Chriſt, and in the Goſpel called, the promiſe of the father, Luke 24. 49. which whereſoever it is given (that is where a Church is ſetled and eſtabliſhed) is ἀῤῥαβὼν κληρονομίας, a pledge or firſt part of that inheritance or portion, which ſhall hereafter be beſtowed on thoſe which by this appear to be received and acknowledged as ſervants and ſons of God.

CHAP. V.

Paraphraſe.

* imitators μιμηταὶ 1. BE ye therefore * followers of God as dear children;]

1. Be ye therefore as diligent to render your ſelves the pictures and reſemblances of God, which hath thus vouchſafed to be your Father, as any children are by nature in the lineaments of the face, or by inſtitution in the qualities of the mind, like to their natural parents.

2. And walk in love, as Chriſt alſo hath loved us, and given himſelf for us, an a offering and ſacrifice to God for a ſweet ſmelling ſavour.]

2. And continue conſtant to death in the profeſſion of the Chriſtian faith, (ſee Note on Rev. 2. b.) thereby imitating the love of Chriſt to us, who that he might confirm and ſeal the truth of his preaching for which he was ſent by God, offered up his own life, was willingly content to die; which death of his, as it was for our ſakes, ſo was it moſt acceptable to God, and ſo cannot be better compared, than to a meat-offering or drink-offering, which being offered for our ſins unto God (and of the former a part burn'd upon the altar, and the reſt for the uſe of the Prieſt, Lev. 2. 3. but the latter wholly conſumed on the altar,) is ſaid to be of a ſweet ſavour unto the Lord, and Gen. 8. 20. to ſatisfie for us, and work our peace.

3. And for the Gnoſtick noiſom foul practices, unlawful, unnatural, riotous luſts, let them never get the leaſt admiſſion among you, but be utterly deteſted by you, according to that obligation that lyes on you as Chriſtians, in oppoſition to the heathens:

3. But fornication, and all uncleanneſs or † covetouſneſs, let it not be once named amongſt you, as becometh Saints:]

† inordinate deſire, ſee Note on Rom. 1. h.

b. c. 4. And ſo all unclean geſtures, and obſcene talking, or unſavory jeſts to cauſe laughter, which are all unbeſeeming a Chriſtian: but purity, chaſtneſs, graciouſneſs of language, oppoſite to the filthineſs before, or elſe bleſſing and praiſing of God, a far fitter ſubject for our rejoycing.

4. * Neither filthineſs, nor [b] fooliſh talking, nor jeſting, which are not convenient: but rather [c] giving of thanks.]

* And filthineſs, and fooliſh ſpeaking, or jeſting, which are things unſeemly, but rather graciouſneſs.

5. For by the Chriſtian doctrine ye are aſſured, that he that is guilty of any unlawful, eſpecially unnatural, inordinate luſt, (ſee Rom. 1. Note i.) thoſe ſins which were uſed in the myſteries of the heathens, is an abſolute Gentile perſon, hath no portion in the Church of God under Chriſt, nor inheritance in heaven. See Note on 1 Cor. 5. 1.

5. For this ye know, that no whoremonger, nor unclean perſon, nor covetous man, who is an idolater, hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Chriſt and of God.]

6. Let no man flatter you, that theſe are tolerable for a Chriſtian, for they are the very ſins for which God hath ſo plagued the heathens, as he did Sodom, &c.

6. Let no man deceive you with vain words: for becauſe of theſe things cometh the wrath of God upon the children of diſobedience.]

7. Do not ye then join in their ſins, that ye may not in their puniſhments.

7. Be not ye therefore partakers with them.]

8. For though ye were formerly heathens, yet now ye are become Chriſtians, and that lays an obligation on you, and all ſuch as you, to live like Chriſtians,

8. For ye were ſometimes darkneſs, but now are ye light in the Lord: walk as children of light,]

9. (For that Spirit that God hath ſent among us in the preaching of the Goſpel, being the Spirit of God, muſt bring forth all kindneſs, juſtice, fidelity, and ſuch like, (Gal. 5. 22.)

9. (For the fruit of * the Spirit is in all goodneſs, and righteouſneſs, and truth)]

* or light: for the King's MS reads φωτὸς, ſee v. 8, and 11.

10. Searching and approving, and accordingly practiſing,

10. † Proving what is acceptable unto the Lord,]

† Examining Δοκιμαζοντες

whatſoever you ſhall find acceptable to God: See Note on Rom. 2. f.

11. And go not ye to their heathen myſteries, comply not with their cloſe dark abominable practices, but oppoſe and help to bring them to light, that they may leave them, (the ſecrecy being the only thing that ſecures and continues them in them.)

11. And have no fellowſhip with the unfruitful works of darkneſs, but rather * reprove them.]

* diſcover them ἐλέγχετε

12. For thoſe ſecret practices are ſuch that they dare not appear in the light, and therefore are by the devil, who preſcribes them as parts of his worſhip, appointed to be uſed in cloſe receſſes, which are called their myſteries, as the higheſt, but indeed the vileſt part of their religion, (ſee Note on Rev. 17. c.

12. For it is a ſhame even to ſpeak of thoſe things which are done of them in ſecret.]

13. But Chriſtianity is a means to diſcover and diſplay theſe abominable cheats and villanies, as light is the direct means to diſcover what darkneſs hath hid, and to make them renounce and forſake it, when they ſee it is ſeen and abhorred by men.

13. But all things † that are approved are made manifeſt by the light; for whatſoever doth make manifeſt, is light.]

† being diſcovered by the light are made manifeſt, ἐλεγχόμενα ὑπὸ τοῦ φωτὸς, φανεροῦται

14. According to that ſaying of Iſaiah, c. 60. 1. Ariſe, be enlightned, for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is riſen upon thee; that is, this Chriſtian eſtate is a lightſom condition, and engages every man that expects to have his part in it, to get out of all theſe horrible dark ſecrecies, which are put to ſhame and diſcomfited by the light.

14. Wherefore he ſaith, Awake thou that ſleepeſt, and ariſe from the dead, and Chriſt ſhall * give thee light.]

* ſhine upon thee ἐπιφαύσει σοι

d. 15. See therefore and conſider how ye may walk moſt exactly and inoffenſively, to which end ye will need great circumſpection, as being placed in the midſt of ſuch temptations and dangers, by one or other ready to be inſnared on every ſide. If your circumſpection be not intenſe enough, ye will be inſnared as fools in their luſts and compliances, which bring ſuch carnal temptations along with them; and if ye be over earneſt in admoniſhing them, and vehement unſeaſonably, ye will exaſperate and incur the danger Mat. 7. 6. of being rent by the ſwine.

15. See then [d] † that ye walk circumſpectly, not as fools, but as wiſe,]

† how ye walk exactly, ὡς ἀκριβῶς περιπατεῖτε

e. 16. And therefore as you muſt be ſure to preſerve the innocence of the dove, ſo ye have need of prudence, and warineſs, and wiſdom of behaviour, becauſe the world is at this time full of corruption, and of contumacy, and perſecuting of all good and orthodox Chriſtians.

16. [e] Redeeming the time, becauſe the days are evil.]

17. And therefore ſee that ye be not corrupted by their inſinuations, but let the knowledge of your Chriſtian duty ſo fortifie you, that ye be not befooled or inſnared by them.

17. Wherefore be ye not unwiſe, but underſtand what the will of the Lord is.]

f. 18. And do not ye, like thoſe heathens in their Bacchanals, inflame your ſelves with wine, to which all manner of inordinate luſt is conſequent, (and then think ye are inſpired, and able to propheſie by that means) but let your hearts be filled with zeal and devotion (ſee Note on Luke 9. c.)

18. And be not drunk with wine wherein is [f] * exceſs; but be filled with the Spirit:]

* diſſoluteneſs

g. 19. And let all your mirth and jollity be expreſs'd in the ſeveral kinds of hymns, &c. that are uſed among Chriſtians, after a pious manner, ſinging, and inwardly in your hearts rendring praiſes to God, and not finding out ſuch groſs carnal ways of expreſſing your joys, as the heathens uſe;

19. Speaking to your ſelves in [g] Pſalms, and Hymns, and ſpiritual ſongs, † ſinging and making melody in your hearts to the Lord,]

† chanting (or with thankſgiving chanting, for the King's MS. reads ἐν χάριτι ᾄδοντες, as Col. 3. 16.) and ſinging ψάλλοντες

21. Yielding obedience to thoſe to whom 'tis due, in ſubordination to God, obeying their lawful commands upon God's command to honour them, but yet not doing any thing in obedience to them which is forbidden by that ſuperior Law of God.

† or, Chriſt, for the King's MS. reads Χριστῷ

22. All wives muſt be ſubject to their husbands by virtue of the Chriſtian law, which in this and other things doth no way diſannul, but rather confirm God's firſt inſtitution.

22. Wives, ſubmit your ſelves unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord.]

23. And the ſame obligation that lyes on the Church to obey Chriſt, viz. becauſe he is the head of it, lyes on the wife to obey the husband, who is the head of the wife, 1 Cor. 11. 13. by the law of creation, which is in force among all nations; and as Chriſt did for his Church, ſo it is the office of the husband, as of the head, to take care for, and ſecure, and defend the body which belongs to it, that is, to do all that he can for the good of the wife.

23. For the husband is the head of the wife, even as Chriſt is of the Church, and he is the Saviour of the body.]

24. And this ſubjection of the wife to the husband is not reſtrained to ſome ſorts of things, but extended unlimitedly to all, where there is not a prohibition of ſome ſuperiour law, (ſee v. 21.) as the Church is to be regulated by Chriſt, and thoſe whom he hath placed over it, in all things.

24. Therefore as the Church is ſubject unto Chriſt, ſo let the wives be to their own husbands in every thing.]

25. And, by the ſame rule of analogy with Chriſt, the husbands are obliged to expreſs that care of their wives, that love to their good, as Chriſt had to the good of his Church, which is his wife (for whom he laid down his life)

25. Husbands, love your wives, even as Chriſt alſo loved the Church, and gave himſelf for it,]

26. That he might purifie it from all ſin, and to that end appointed baptiſm, therein obliging us to forſake the devil, &c. and covenanting to give us grace to do ſo, and to that adding his word, the whole doctrine, commands, promiſes of the Goſpel, as a powerful means to oblige and enable us to do ſo, or baptizing us in the name of the Father, and the Son, and the holy Ghoſt. beauty and comelineſs, as a garment come new out of the fuller's hand, purged from ſpots, ſtretched from wrinkles, the former newly contracted, the latter by long time of cuſtom and habit; the former more eaſie, the latter hard to be removed; and ſo not having any of the baſe pollutions before mentioned v. 5. but that it may be perfectly clean without ever a blemiſh in it.

28. So ought † men to love their wives, as their own bodies: he that loveth his wife loveth himſelf.]

† husbands ἀνδρες

28. And this love of the husband to the wife muſt be as to a part of himſelf (for ſo Eve was taken out of Adam.)

29. For no man ever yet hated his own fleſh, but nouriſheth and cheriſheth it, even as the Lord the Church.]

29. And not to love a man's ſelf, and every part of that, is unnatural; and therefore every ſenſible man will love his wife as part of himſelf, and endeavour her good, as Chriſt doth the Churches, with all the zeal imaginable.

30. For we are h members of his body, of his fleſh, and of his bones.]

h.

30. (For he is the head of the Church, and we are members of him.)

31. For this cauſe ſhall a man leave his father and mother, and ſhall * be joined unto his wife, and they two ſhall be one fleſh.]

* cleave κολλησθησεται

31. And this is the reaſon of that precept in the firſt creation, that a man ſhall at marriage put off all other neareſt relations, ſo far as to prefer this newly contracted relation before them all, of two to make up one common perſon, Gen. 2. 24.

32. This is a great myſtery; but I ſpeak concerning Chriſt and the Church.]

32. This place of Geneſis is ſpoken literally of marriage, but it hath alſo a divine, ſecret, myſtical ſenſe in it, to denote firſt the forming of the Church, after the manner of Eve out of Adam's ſide. Adam was alone, God caſts him into a dead ſleep, then takes a bone out of his ſide, and makes a woman meet for him, and ſhe is the mother of all living. So Chriſt being the ſecond Adam, and alone alſo, he is caſt into a dead ſleep on the Croſs, and then out of his ſide the Church is formed; and ſhe becomes his ſpouſe, and ſo the mother of all living, in the ſpiritual ſenſe. See Proſper de prædiction. l. 1. c. 1.) Secondly, the conjunction conſequent to this marriage between Chriſt and his Church, who are literally one fleſh, by Chriſt's aſſuming our nature upon him, and myſtically one body, by the ſtrict union which he hath made, both by infuſing his graces, as the head to the members, and obliging us to continue in him, as members in union with, and ſubjection to, the head. And ſo the Jews themſelves ſay of the taking Eve out of Adam's ſide, that it was to ſignifie the marriage of the moſt higheſt, God bleſſed for ever, who left his father in heaven (ſaith Chryſoſtom) to cleave to this wife, this ſpouſe of his, the Church.

33. Nevertheleſs let every one of you in particular ſo love his wife even as himſelf, and the wife ſee that ſhe † reverence her husband.]

33. The ſhort is, that by the law of our creation confirm'd, and not diſannulled, by Chriſt, and exemplified to us in his dealings with his ſpouſe the Church, every Chriſtian husband is bound to account of his wife as of a great part of himſelf, and accordingly to love and care for her, and ſhe back again, as to the head, behave her ſelf reverently toward the husband.

Annotations on Chap. V.

a. περσφορὰ θυσία

V. 2. Offering] The difference of περσφορὰ offering and θυσία ſacrifice, is ordinarily obſervable: ſee Heb. 10. where inſtead of θυσία and περσφορὰ, ſacrifice and offering v. 5. is ὁλοκαύτωμα καὶ περὶ ἁμαρτίας, Burnt-offering and ſacrifice for ſin, v. 6. where, as θυσία ſacrifice is certainly expreſſed by ὁλοκαύτωμα, the bodies of beaſts wholly burnt upon the altar (of which therefore no part came to the prieſt, Heb. 13. 11.) ſo the περσφορὰ oblation is the מִנְחָה, or meat-offering, the flour and oil, Lev. 2. 2. of which part was burnt with fire, and the remnant was Aaron's and his ſons, v. 3. And as of the former of theſe, when it was offered by Noah, Gen. 8. 20. it is ſaid that the Lord ſmelled a ſweet ſavour, v. 21. and that as a token that his wrath was pacified, as it follows, the Lord ſaid in his heart, I will not again curſe the ground any more, &c. ſo Lev. 2. 2. the other is ſaid to be an offering made by fire, a ſweet ſavour unto the Lord. And accordingly here to the mention of offering and ſacrifice, meat-offering and burnt-offering, is added, εἰς ὀσμὴν εὐωδίας, for a ſmell of ſweet ſavour, which notes this death of Chriſt, which is expreſſed by it, to be a means appointed by God for the averting his wrath from us, for the appeaſing and reconciling him to us, as thoſe ſacrifices were wont to do, and an engagement to us to live ſuch lives as may be acceptable to God, contrary to the noiſom luſts, ver. 3.

εἰς ὀσμὴν εὐωδίας

b. μωρολογία εὐτραπελία

V. 4. Fooliſh talking] That μωρολογία ſignifies fooliſh ſpeaking, and that εὐτραπελία ſignifies the ſame, only with this addition of deſigning it as a jeſt, to move laughter (and therefore εὐτράπελος is ordinarily interpreted γελοῖος, and γελοιοποιὸς, a ridiculous perſon, or one that cauſeth laughter) there is no queſtion. But that the text may here reaſonably be thought to confine them both to obſcene and filthy diſcourſe, may alſo appear, not only by the company that they are ſet with, fornication, uncleanneſs, inordinate luſt, filthineſs, but eſpecially by the reaſon that is rendred for the abandoning of all theſe, v. 5. For this you know, that every fornicator, or unclean perſon, or inordinate luſter, which is an idolater, hath no inheritance in the kingdom of Chriſt or of God. Where if theſe two be not of the ſame ſort with the former, belonging all to uncleanneſs, that enumeration in the reaſon would not comprehend the ſeverals in the exhortation, which it muſt be ſuppoſed to do. To this purpoſe therefore it is firſt obſervable of the word μωρολογία fooliſh ſpeaking, that it is the Scripture elegance to expreſs uncleanneſs by folly; ſo folly in Iſrael is adultery; and ſo in Euripides Ἀφροδίσια, matters of Venery, are called μωρὰ fooliſh, and in Ariſtophanes ἀνόσια, which is the ſame, and ſo μωρολογία ſpeaking folly may be ſpeaking obſcenely: ſecondly, that εὐτραπελία, (which is joined with it by ἢ or, and ſo is but an explication of it) as it is by Heſychius rendred κυφότης levity, and μωρολογία fooliſh-ſpeaking, ſo it is alſo αἰσχρολογία filthy, unclean ſpeaking: thirdly, that after theſe here is added τὰ μὴ ἀνήκοντα, which being in the plural, belongs equally to all the foregoing words, and that ſignifying not barely that which is not convenient, but indecent, foul, unbecoming, doth by a kind of propriety belong to that of immodeſt, unclean behaviour: fourthly, by this way of rendring theſe words all manner of uncleanneſs will be comprehended in this prohibition; that in the members, acted through all the ſorts, will be comprehended in the three words ver. 3. that of unſeemly behaviour, geſtures, &c. under the word αἰσχρότης filthineſs v. 4. and that of the tongue in the other two words of fooliſh ſpeaking, or jeſting: fifthly, it is ordinarily known how much of the wit and jeſting of wicked prophane perſons conſiſts in this one ſubject of obſcene and ſcurrilous diſcourſe, and ſo how reaſonable it was, in the prohibiting all uncleanneſs, to name that of obſcene jeſting, which, I ſuppoſe, was meant by the σαπρὸς λόγος, putrid, rotten communication, c. 4. 29.

c. εὐχαριστία

Ib. Giving of thanks] What εὐχαριστία here ſignifies may be matter of ſome queſtion. It ſignifies ordinarily thankſgiving; and that belonging eſpecially to God (from whom all mercies are received, and to whom all thanks are due) may be meant here by the word, though no mention of God be added to it: and ſo the Context may well bear, Let there be no unclean ſcurrilous jeſts uſed among you, but rather giving of thanks, that is, Let the Chriſtian's way of mirth be far from that of obſcene wit; the recounting the mercies of God in Chriſt, calling you from darkneſs to his marvellous light, will far better become a Chriſtian, and to this purpoſe ſee ver. 20. But yet it may be obſerved what notion there is of χάρις (of which this word is compounded) ſeveral times in the Epiſtles, for piety, Chriſtian vertue in general. Thus c. 4. v. 29. where the corrupt communication is forbidden, and inſtead of it the good commanded, for profitable inſtruction, or edification, this is deſigned ἵνα δῷ χάριν τοῖς ἀκούσι, that it may give grace, that is, afford ſpiritual advantage in increaſe of piety in the hearers. So Col. 4. 6. Let your ſpeech be always ἐν χάριτι, with grace, that is, gracious, pious, ſeaſoned with ſalt, contrary to the putrid, corrupt, mentioned to the Epheſians. So ἐν χάρεσι. Col. 3. 16. ἐν χάρεσι ᾄδοντες, with grace ſinging, that is, after the manner of pious gracious perſons, in a Chriſtian manner: and ſo 'tis alſo Eph. 5. 19. in the reading of the King's MS. And agreeably to this notion of χάρεις we have γυνὴ εὐχάριτος, a gracious pious woman, Prov. 11. 16. And ſo perhaps εὐχαριστία may ſignifie in this place, gracious, pious, religious diſcourſe in general, being ſet oppoſite to the filthy, obſcene diſcourſe preceding, and not to be reſtrained to one ſpecies of it, recounting the mercies of God.

d. πῶς

V. 15. That] The word πῶς generally in the New Teſtament is not be rendred that, but how, eſpecially when it follows βλέπετε· ſo Luke 8. 18. βλέπετε πῶς ἀκούετε, take heed how you hear, and 1 Cor. 3. 10. βλεπέτω πῶς ἐποικοδομεῖ, Let him take heed how he ſuperſtructs. And ſo 'tis here to modifie the accurate walking, and accordingly 'tis anſwered with ὡς as, that they behave themſelves warily between the two dangers of being corrupted on one ſide, and devoured on the other; in the firſt not ὡς ἄσοφοι as eaſie, ſeducible people, in the ſecond ὡς σοφοὶ as wiſe, prudent men, that can manage their affairs to the beſt advantage, and not run hazards to no advantage.

c. Ἐξαγοραζόμενοι τὸν καιρὸν

V. 16. Redeeming the time] Ἐξαγοραζόμενοι τὸν καιρὸν, though it have a ſenſe very unlike the Engliſh words redeeming the time, yet cannot well be literally rendred otherwiſe, than either ſo, or buying out, or gaining the time. Theodotion uſeth it in the Active, Ἐξαγοράζοντες καιρὸν, Dan. 2. 8. by that rendring the Chaldee עדנא, אנתון זבנין, and there the Vulgar have, redimitis tempus, and we, gaining, or buying the ſeaſon, referring particularly to the delays that they ſought to make, thereby to ſave themſelves from danger. The full meaning of the phraſe in that place is, to uſe caution, and cunning, and dexterity, whether by delays, or any other means, for the ſaving of themſelves from that danger that was threatned them, v. 5. And it ſeems to be a proverbial ſpeech, which the uſe had made to ſignifie more than the very literal of the words imported; and you may find it uſed in Authors in the ſame or like words. So in Plutarch, who ſets it down for an Apophthegme of Scipio, Ὁρῶν γὰρ τὴν ἀπόνοιαν τῶν πολεμίων, ἔλεγεν ὠνεῖσθαι τὸν καιρὸν τῆς ἀσφαλείας, τὸ γὰρ ἀσφαλὲς σφάγιον, ὥσπερ ἰατρεῖον, ἐχάτης δεῖσθαι τὸ διὰ τὸ σιδήρου θεραπείας, Seeing the madneſs of the enemies, he bid them buy the ſafety of the time, that is, avoid fighting with them at that ſeaſon, for that it was with Commanders as with Phyſicians, who uſed not the ſword or lance, but in extreme cures. Thus S. Chryſoſtom interprets it by the contrariety to κινδύνοις ἀνωφελέσι ὑποπίπτειν, καὶ κέρδος ἐκ ἔχουσαις, undergoing ſuperfluous dangers, and ſuch as bring no gain: and again he explains this exhortation by paying tribute, &c. and never oppoſing them in any thing, but in preaching the Goſpel, Ἐν οἷς μὴ βλάπτουσι, μηδεμίαν αὐτοῖς δίδοτε λαβὴν, in things wherein they hurt not, give them no occaſion. Διὰ τὸ κήρυγμα μόνον ἔσαι σοὶ πόλεμος, μηδεμίαν ἑτέραν ἀρχὴν ὁ πόλεμος λαμβανέτω, The very preaching the Goſpel ſhall bring their rage upon you, let it not take other beginning. Thus in Nazianzen's

p. 146. l. 33.

p. 14. of Julian, ὁ μὲν ἐξωνούμενος τὸν καιρὸν, καὶ κερδῶν ἐν ὀπαίθρᾳ πλάσμασι τὸ κακοήθες, where buying out of time is a proverbial expreſſion for carrying himſelf cunningly, dextrouſly concealing (what he had not a mind to diſcover) his ill diſpoſition under a diſguiſe of gentleneſs. And proportionably 'tis ſo here, to uſe all prudent artificial deviſes, to preſerve them from the evil times then preſent, times of high corruption, and ſo of danger to their ſouls, wherein the carnal heathen ſenſualities (to which they had ſuch temptation, and which were uſed in their myſteries and devotions) were very frequent among them, and againſt which the warning is very particular in the former part of the chapter, v. 6, 7, &c. and to which he returns again, as far as concerns drunkenneſs (the expreſſion of the heathen's devotion in ſome of their worſhips, the Baechanalia) ver. 8. And that 'tis this wiſdom and dexterity which is here primarily meant, in reſpect of thoſe ſpiritual dangers, the ſnares that were near their ſouls, may be conjectured by the verſe immediately following, where διὰ τοῦτο for this cauſe, for this evilneſs of the days, they are adviſed not to be ἄφρονες fools (as v. 16. μὴ ὡς ἄσοφοι, ἀφρονες not as fools, and μηκέτι νήπιοι, no longer children, or fools, c. 4. 14.) but underſtanding (συνιέντες, noting that prudence, σύνεσις, that we ſpeak of) what the will of the Lord is, that is, how contrary Chriſtianity is to thoſe heathen courſes, which now by the cheats of the Gnoſticks are put off and commended to them, ver. 6. as things that are abſolutely indifferent. Beſides this it may be applied alſo to that other prudence for avoiding of perſecutions, as thoſe are expreſſed by evil days, Gen. 47. 9. and Pſal. 49. 5. not to throw our ſelves upon dangers unſeaſonably, where there is no probable advantage in our proſpect, but to ſpeak and exhort when 'tis likely to proſper, and at other times to refrain; and this may properly be ſtyled gaining the time, watching opportunities, and when interpoſing would prove gainleſs, then to hold the peace, and expect ſome fitter ſeaſon; ſee Rom. 12. 11.

f. ἀσωτία

V. 18. Exceſs] The word ἀσωτία ſignifies generally being given up to all wickedneſs, particularly luxury, meaning by that not only exceſs of drinking or eating, or waſting an eſtate, but eſpecially giving himſelf up to riotous enormous luſts: thus Heſychius renders Ἀσώτως by αἰσχρῶς, ἀπλήστως, filthineſs, inſatiableneſs; and ſo when of the prodigal Luke 15. it is ſaid, that the means of ſpending his patrimony was his living ἀσώτως ver 13. that is interpreted v. 30. by καταφαγὼν τὸν βίον μετὰ πορνῶν devouring his livelihood with harlots. And then we may diſcern the meaning of this phraſe ἐν ᾧ ἐστιν ἀσωτία, ſpeaking of drunkenneſs and filling themſelves with wine, in which, ſaith he, there is (not exceſs, as that ſignifies immoderate drinking, for that was contained before in drunkenneſs, or being filled with wine, and to ſay that in drukenneſs or in wine were immoderate drinking, would not be ſo commodious, but) unclean inordinate behaviour, all kind of Venery and enormous luſts: ſo Theophylact Ἀσωτίαν ἀκολασίαν φησὶν, ἐκ γὰρ τῆς μέθης ἀκολασία τίκτεται, It ſignifies incontinent luſt, for that is begotten by drukenneſs: and ſo it is true not only in common obſervation, that inflaming themſelves with wine betrays men to all uncleanneſs, but particularly in the heathen Bacchanals (to which he ſeems to refer, by oppoſing to them the being filled with the Spirit, and expreſſing that in Pſalms, &c. the Chriſtian way of rejoicing, contrary to their propheſying, Wiſd. 14. 28. or their mad howlings in their Orgia) where after their drinking, uncleanneſs was wont to ſucceed, as in the Iſraelites Idol-feaſts, after their ſitting down to eat and drink, 'tis added, they roſe up παίζειν, to ſport, or mock, which that it belongs to this of uncleanneſs, ſee Note on 1 Cor. 10. c. And ſo this is a ſeaſonable exhortation to the Chriſtians at Epheſus, living among the heathens, and in danger to be ſeduced by the Gnoſticks to the Idol-feaſts, that inſtead of the Bacchanals, and unclean conſequents of them, which were their way of worſhip to their idols or devils, they ſhould entertain themſelves after the Chriſtian manner of ſinging Pſalms, bleſſing and praiſing of God, which is the Chriſtian jollity, to be preferred before thoſe heathen beſtial practices.

V. 19. Pſalms and hymns and ——] The difference of theſe three ψαλμοὶ, ὕμνοι, ᾠδαὶ, Pſalms, hymns, ſongs, muſt be fetch'd from the Jews, who have three ſorts of Canticles, firſt, מזמור from זמר amputavit, a conciſe verſe, which is here called ψαλμὸς, a Pſalm; ſecondly, תהלה Praiſe, celebration, depredicating of any thing, which is here ὕμνος hymn; thirdly, שיר Canticum or cantio, whence is שיר השירים Canticum canticorum, the ſong of ſongs, and to this anſwers here the ᾠδαὶ, and the word πνευματικαὶ added to it, ſpiritual or Chriſtian, is both in oppoſition to the διὰ βάκχης, and the like drunken, ſenſual Songs and Ovations in their Bacchanalia, and perhaps in reſpect of the χάρισμα then among them, as of praying, ſo of ſinging alſo, by that extraordinary gift of the Spirit, 1 Cor. 14. 26. ſee Note on Jude f.

V. 30. Members of his ——] It is the manner of the Sacred writers to expreſs a complex body by the enumeration of the ſeveral parts of it, as the heaven and the earth for the world, evening and morning for the natural day, and many the like; ſee Note on Col. 1. c. and

Σάρξ ἡ ὀστέα and 2 Pet. 3. b. and ſo here his fleſh and his bones ſignifies no more than he: and ſo the whole importance of the verſe is, that we are members of Chriſt, and nothing elſe, (ſee Note on Joh. 6. d.)

CHAP. VI.

Paraphraſe.

* juſt Νικαιν

1. CHildren, obey your parents in the Lord: for this is * right.] 1. And ſo likewiſe all children and ſubjects muſt be obedient to their parents and princes, now under the Goſpel: for this is commanded by the law in the Old Teſtament, which Chriſt came not to evacuate, but to confirm.

2. Honour thy father and mother (which is the firſt commandment with promiſe,)] 2. For ſo are the words of the fifth commandment of the Decalogue, Honour thy father and mother, not only thy natural, but civil parents, and all other placed over thee by God, or the laws under which God hath placed thee. And this is the firſt commandment of the ſecond Table, and that with a promiſe annex'd to it,

† thou ſhalt have a long time on the land, ἔσῃ μακροχρόνιος ἐπὶ τῆς * diſcipline and nurture, παιδείᾳ καὶ νουθεσίᾳ

3. That it may be well with thee, and † thou mayſt live long on the earth.] 3. viz. of proſperity and long life in the land of Canaan, as it concern'd the Jews, and to all others of proſperous peaceable living upon earth, (toward which obedience to ſuperiours is ordinarily an eminent means of ſecurity, ſee Mat. 5. 5.) and of eternal bliſs in heaven by the promiſe of Chriſt.

4. And ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath: but bring them up in the * nurture and admonition of the Lord.] 4. And parents likewiſe are to behave themſelves lovingly and gently toward their children, and not to tempt them, by tyrannical uſage of their power, to diſobedience, but uſe all care to bring them up in the knowledge of their duty to Chriſt.

5. Servants, be obedient to them that are your maſters according to the fleſh, with fear and trembling in ſingleneſs of your heart, as unto Chriſt:] 5. And do not think that Chriſtianity hath ſet all ſervants at liberty, or given them any privilege of diſobeying thoſe whoſe ſervants they are according to the courſe of this world, be they heathens, &c. But let all ſuch know themſelves to be obliged to perform obedience unto their maſters, with all diligence and ſincerity (ſee Note on Phil. 2. c.) as unto Chriſt, who ſees their hearts, and lays this command on them.

† or, from the ſoul with good will doing them ſervice, for the King's MS points it thus, ὡς δοῦλοι Χριστοῦ ποιοῦντες τὸ θέλημα τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἐκ ψυχῆς μετ' εὐνοίας δουλεύοντες,

6. Not with eye-ſervice as men-pleaſers, but as the ſervants of Chriſt, doing the will of God † from the heart;] 6. And this not only to avoid the diſpleaſures of their maſters, (which will extend no farther than to thoſe things which they can ſee whether they be done or omitted, and conſequently puniſh in them) but upon ſenſe of obligation to the law of Chriſt, who can ſee the ſecrets of the hearts, and ſo muſt be ſerved accordingly;

7. With good will doing ſervice, as to the Lord, and not to men:] 7. viz. with uprightneſs and chearfulneſs, a voluntary obedience, which may approve it ſelf to Chriſt, and not a forced one, which ariſes from fear of man, and ſo extends no farther than the maſter can ſee and puniſh:

8. Knowing that whatſoever good thing any man doth, the ſame ſhall be received of the Lord, whether he be bond or free.] 8. Knowing that as all other performances of duty, ſo his faithful ſervice to his maſter, ſhall be rewarded in him by God.

* or, the Lord both of them and you, for the King's MS reads ὅτι καὶ αὐτῶν καὶ ὑμῶν

9. And ye maſters, do the ſame things to them, forbearing threatning: knowing that * your maſter alſo is in heaven, neither is there reſpect of perſons with him.] 9. And the maſters muſt uſe their ſervants, as fathers were appointed to uſe their children, ver. 4. not wrathfully and imperiouſly, but calmly and gently, either as knowing that they themſelves have a maſter to obey, who commands them to do thus; or knowing that you and they are but fellow-ſervants in reſpect of Chriſt, and indeed that if maſters do not their duty, they ſhall be as puniſhable before God as any others of the moſt inferiour degree, God favouring or ſparing none upon ſo ſlight conſiderations as theſe, of their being greater men in this world than others.

10. Finally, my brethren, be ſtrong in the Lord, and in the power of his might.] 10. Finally, brethren, conſider the all-ſufficience and omnipotence of his might, who is able to ſuſtain you againſt all oppoſition of men or devils, and confirm your ſelves in the faith, and chear up your ſelves with that conſideration.

11. Put on the † whole armour of God, that ye may be able to ſtand againſt the * wiles of the devil.] 11. And make uſe of all the defenſatives and weapons that Chriſt hath afforded you, to the repelling of all the temptations and ſtratagems of the devil, that ye may be able to hold out againſt all his aſſaults, both of force and cunning.

* contrivances, μεθοδείας † the worldly rulers of this age, κοσμοκράτορας — τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου read σκοτέους † in ² high places.] 12. For we wreſtle not againſt fleſh and blood, but againſt principalities, againſt powers, againſt † the rulers of the darkneſs of this world, againſt * ſpiritual wickedneſs 12. For the combat for which we are to be fortified, is not againſt any ordinary humane enemies, but againſt the ſeveral ranks of devils, the chieftains and gods of this preſent idolatrous heathen world, and againſt thoſe evil ſpirits that are in the air, all groſſer carnal, and all more ſpiritual dangerous ſins, of pride, hereſie, and malice, &c.

* ſpiritual parts, or ſpirits, for the Syriack appears to have † in heavenly places

13. Wherefore take unto you the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to withſtand in the evil day, and having done all to ſtand.] 13. The variety and greatneſs of the danger being thus conſidered, makes it reaſonable for you to arm your ſelves in every part, with all that the Chriſtian faith hath provided you with, that in time of temptation ye may be able to hold out againſt the contrary allurements of thoſe hereticks, and in concluſion to be ſo far victorious, as not to have been enſnared on any ſide.

14. Stand therefore, having your loins girt with truth, and having on the breaſt-plate of righteouſneſs, 14, 15. Let your military preparations againſt theſe aſſaults be theſe: firſt, Truth,

* in the readineſs

15. And your feet [b] ſhod * with the preparation of the Goſpel of peace;] the doctrine of the Goſpel in oppoſition to heathen errors and heretical inſinuations, and let that be your military girdle (ſee Note on Luke 12. b.) that keeps on all the other armour, and fits you to make uſe of it, and withal will reſtrain you from all libertiniſm and licentiouſneſs, as a girdle reſtrains and keeps in the body. Secondly, Righteouſneſs, ſincere faithful obedience to Chriſt, to guard the whole man from aſſaults of ſin, as the breſt-plate guards him, Iſa. 59. 17. Thirdly, The practice of Chriſtian charity and peaceableneſs, to ſupply the place of ſhoes, that ye may go on expeditely in the Chriſtian courſe, and not fall or miſcarry by the way, through the traps that hereticks and ſchiſmaticks lay to wound and gall you, and hinder your progreſs.

† Unto all ἐπὶ πᾶσιν * the wicked one, τοῦ πονηροῦ

16. † Above all taking the ſhield of faith, wherewith ye ſhall be able to quench all the fiery darts of * the wicked.] 16. Fourthly, Faith, or the believing both the promiſes of Chriſt to all reformed penitents, and the threats to all impenitent ſenſual perſons; which will keep temptations from entring, and be able to allay the pleaſures of thoſe ſenſual baits propoſed to you, either by Satan or any other tempter, which, like poiſoned darts (which are wont to inflame the parts that are wounded with them, and therefore are called fiery darts, as the ſerpents with poiſonous ſtings are called fiery ſerpents) will wound you to death, if the conſideration of your duty, the promiſes and terrors of Chriſt, received by your faith, do not help to quench them.

17. And take the helmet of ſalvation, and the ſword of the Spirit, which is the word of God:] 17. Fifthly, The hope of ſalvation, which may ſerve as an helmet, Iſa. 59. 17. to bear off any blow (at leaſt ſecure you from the hurt of it) that can light upon you. And ſixthly, The Spirit, that is, the word of God, which may ſerve as a ſword to aſſault the aſſailants, and deſtroy them, to ſlay all that is temptation in them, by propoſing to the Chriſtian much ſtronger motives to obedience, than the world can afford to the contrary.

18. Praying † always with all prayer and ſupplication in the Spirit, and * watching thereunto with all perſeverance and ſupplication for † all ſaints,] 18. Praying heartily and fervently (ſee Note on Luke 9. e.) upon every opportunity and time of need, for God's aſſiſtance to enable you to perſevere, and for the removal or averting of temptations; not ſo much for ſecular, as ſpiritual things (which Theophylact ſets as the meaning of the phraſe in the ſpirit) and then adding adding vigilancy to prayer, and ſo continuing and perſevering in a conſtant performance of that office of prayer, for all vertues and graces that are needful for you, and all means that may tend to the ſecuring or increaſing holineſs in you.

19. And let not theſe your prayers be wholly confined to your ſelves, but let me have my part in them, that I may be enlarged from my preſent reſtraint, and ſo have liberty to propagate the faith of Chriſt (ſee Note on 1 Cor. 1. b.) and publickly, or freely, or with authority (ſee Note on Joh. 7. a.) to preach to the Gentiles, and inſtead of the heathen myſteries, wherein all their impieties are acted, to reveal to them the nature of the Goſpel, to which they are initiated, the purity and holineſs which are there required:

23. I beſeech God the Father, and our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, to beſtow upon your whole Church the grace of peaceableneſs, and charity, and true faith.

a. ἐπουράνια

V. 12. High places] What ἐπουράνια ſignifies here will be ſoon diſcerned, firſt, by remembring that the ſeveral regions of the air, and all above the globe of the earth, is in the Hebrew ſtiled שמים, and in the Greek of theſe books, οὐρανοὶ heavens, and ſo ἐπουράνια will ſignifie thoſe places, the ſeveral regions of the air: ſecondly, that the Syriack reading for πνευματικὰ ſpiritual parts πνεύματα ſpirits, and the phraſe ſpirits of wickedneſs readily ſignifying wicked ſpirits, and thoſe oft uſed to denote Devils, the ſpirits of wickedneſs in heavenly places will be no more than the powers of the air under their ἄρχων or prince, c. 2. 2. that is, devils under Beelzebub the prince of the devils. Theſe are here diſtinguiſh'd from the κοσμοκράτορες τῦ σκότους τῦ αἰῶνος τύτε, the worldly rulers of the darkneſs of this age. Noting ſeveral ſorts of devils, either in reſpect of their manſions, ἀερίων καὶ ἐπουρανίων πνευμάτων, ſaith Ignatius ad Epheſ. aerial or earthy ſpirits; or elſe of the inclinations which they ſuggeſt. The earthy devils ſuggeſting groſſer carnal appetites, filthineſs of the fleſh, &c. the aerial, pride, vain-glory, malice, &c. the filthineſs of the ſpirit. And the Gnoſtick hereticks by power of ſorcery ſeducing men to both ſorts of theſe filthineſſes, all fleſhy abominable luſts, and all malice and rancour againſt the Orthodox Chriſtians, it is here truly ſaid, that they were to contend with both ſorts of evil ſpirits, terreſtrial and aerial, the terreſtrial that ruled among the heathen dark parts of the age, and the aerial wicked ſpirits.

V. 15. Shod] The uſe of ſhoes in the celebration of the Paſſeover hath been formerly obſerved: For ſo the Iſraelites were commanded at their eating of it, that they might be ready for their journey, to have each of them their ſhoes on their feet; ſo when the Apoſtles, Mar. 6. 8. were commanded to be ſhod with ſandals, the meaning is, that they ſhould be ready to take their journey. So in * Plautus, calceati dentes, ſhod teeth, that is, ready to devour the feaſt. So the Ægyptian virgins were not permitted to wear ſhoes, that is, to be ready to go abroad. All this belongs to the explication of this phraſe, as it is joined with ἐν ἑτοιμασίᾳ in readineſs, denoting the preparation or readineſs for the journey, the whole Chriſtian courſe, for which the doctrine of peace and charity doth provide and furniſh them. But then this is not all, for the ſhoes are here mention'd among the armour (and ſo * Strabo lib. 10. ſpeaking of the Cretian youths, ſaith of them, that they did ἐῶσῑ τῇ ὑποδήσει πολεμικῇ χρῆσθαι, uſe military attire and ſhoes) and ſo they clearly were, and were ordinarily made of braſs. A mention we have of them in the ſtory of Goliah, his greaves of braſs; and ſo among the Grecians they were ſo ordinary, that they are known in Homer by that title of Χαλκοκνήμιδες Ἀχαιοὶ, the brazen-ſhoed Grecians, οἷς σιδηρεᾶ ἦεν ἔπι χαλκὸν αἰὲν ἀκόντα, ſaith Phavorinus, who had greaves of braſs or iron, as alſo of ſilver, in Virgil, l. 7.

THE EPISTLE of PAUL the APOSTLE TO THE [a]PHILIPPIANS.

THE converſion of the Macedonians, and among them firſt of the Philippians, to the faith by the labours of of Paul and Timothy, is ſet down Act. 16. 12. and Act. 20. 3. where having had very good ſucceſs among them, and after his departure having received many teſtimonies of their kindneſs and conſtancy, and now being priſoner at Rome, Epaphroditus their Biſhop being ſent from them to him with a ſupply of money, about the year of Chriſt 59. he returns them this Epiſtle by Epaphroditus, full of kind acknowledgments and chearfulneſs; and Timothy, who had been with S. Paul at Philippi, being now at this time at Rome with him, he is joined with Paul in the front of the Epiſtle. One thing is farther obſervable in this Epiſtle, that upon the News of S. Paul's impriſonment at Rome, (certainly his firſt impriſonment there, ſee c. 1. 25, 26. and c. 2. 23, 24. and not that immediately preceding his Martyrdom) the Gnoſticks, the known enemies of the Croſs of Chriſt, c. 3. 18. (which are not for confeſſing a crucified Saviour, or a perſecuted faith) joining with the Judaizing Chriſtians, were very ready to infuſe their diſcouragements, perſuading to Judaize, c. 3. 2. as among the Galatians they had done. And by way of neceſſary antidote againſt theſe ſeducers, he oppoſeth the benefit which Chriſtianity had received by his ſufferings, c. 1. 12. and the no loſs, but advantage which ſhould come to him by it, v. 19. and then conjures them to unity and perſeverance, c. 2. warns them againſt the Gnoſticks, c. 3. and again encourages them to conſtancy, c. 4.

15. Some indeed envying the dignity which God hath beſtowed on me, by giving ſuch ſucceſs to my preaching, now that they ſee me under reſtraint, preach the Goſpel of Chriſt by way of emulation, hoping and endeavouring to get that glory to themſelves; and ſome do it out of good liking of what I have done, and out of a pious intent, deſiring ſincerely to maintain what I have preached.

16. The former ſort of theſe do it out of unkindneſs to me, not out of deſign ſeriouſly to advance the ſervice of Chriſt, but eſteeming of me by their own affections, they ſuppoſe they ſhall gall and grieve me thereby, and ſo add to my preſent ſufferings:

17. But the other of love, knowing that I am ſet for the defence of the Goſpel.]

18. And ſo by one means or other, ſome to vex me, others out of reſpect to the words preached by me, do farther propagate it: and though this is by the former ſort done maliciouſly, and the good that comes from it be only accidental, not intended, but only occaſioned by them, yet 'tis matter of rejoicing to me that the Goſpel of Chriſt is preached and publiſhed by this means.

As I verily perſuade my ſelf, and hope that God will ſo aſſiſt me, that I ſhall expreſs no puſillanimity in any thing, but continue as conſtant as ever, and as bold (Joh. 7. a) to confeſs Chriſt and preach the Goſpel, and ſo, whether by life or death, advance the kingdom of Chriſt, by preaching it, if I live, by ſigning the truth with my blood, if I die.

20. According to my earneſt expectation and my hope, that in nothing I ſhall be aſhamed, but that with all boldneſs, as always, ſo now alſo, Chriſt ſhall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life or by death.]

21. For as for my ſelf, thus it ſtands with me, if I live, my life ſhall be ſpent in Chriſt's ſervice; and if I die, my death tends to mine own unſpeakable advantage and joy, and to the ſervice of Chriſt alſo, whoſe glory may be advanced by my dying his martyr, (ſee ver. 20.)

† living is Chriſt, and dying gain, τὸ ζῆν Χριστὸς, καὶ τὸ ἀποθανεῖν κέρδος

22. On the other ſide, my living in the fleſh is matter of ſome advantage alſo: life is in it ſelf, and for the advantages of ſerving God and encreaſing our crown, a deſirable thing, and ſo the ſcales being in a manner even, I know not what to chooſe.

23. But I am in a great difficulty, equally inclined on both ſides, on one ſide having before me the benefit of death, as of a return into my country, which is the viſion and ſociety of Chriſt, and that very much more deſirable both in reſpect of the glory that will redound to Chriſt by my martyrdom, and the benefit that will redound to me:

23. For I am in a ſtreight betwixt two, having a deſire ‖ to [h] depart, and to be with Chriſt, * which is far better.]

Annotations on Chap. I.

a. Φιλιππήσιοι

V. 1. Philippi] The Philippians here named muſt (by Analogy with the Corinthians, and the reſt to whom the other Epiſtles are addreſs'd) be interpreted to be of a larger extent than the inhabitants of that one city, and either to contain all the Chriſtians throughout all Macedonia, or at leaſt all that were under that Metropolis. For that Philippi was ſuch, is the diſtinct affirmation of S. Luke, Act. 16. 12. ἐκεῖθεν εἰς Φιλίππους, ἥτις ἐστὶ πρώτη τῆς μερίδος τῆς Μακεδονίας πόλις, Philippi is the prime, or firſt, city in the province of Macedonia; that is, either of all Macedania, as one wider Province, or at leaſt of one Province of it. And it is there added that it was then a colony, that is, inhabited by Romans (from whence it is that v. 21. they ſpeak of themſelves as Romans:) and ſuch colony-cities that were ſo inhabited by Romans, were generally (though not only they) pitched on by the Roman Pretors or Preſidents to be the cities whither the neighbouring regions ſhould come for juſtice, the places of aſſizes, &c. and ſo became the chief cities. So * Photius, Ἡ Φιλίππων πόλις τῆς Μακεδόνων ἐπαρχίας μητρόπολις ἔτα, The city of Philippi being a metropolis of the Province of the Macedonians, and this expreſly ſpeaking of it as it was in S. Paul's time, Act. 16. 21. where the inhabitants of it, as of a Roman Colony, call themſelves Romans. So S. Chryſoſtom on Act. 16. λέγει καὶ ποῦ τόπους, ἅτε ἱστορίαν ἐξηγούμενος, καὶ δεικνὺς ᾧ ἐνεχείρησε, καὶ ἐδείκνυσε ὅτι ἐν τοῖς μείζοσι, τὰς δ' ἄλλας παρῆκε, S. Luke ſets down the places, as writing an hiſtory, and ſhewing where the Apoſtle ſpent any time, he names only the greater cities, (ſuch are Metropoles) and paſſeth by the reſt, making Philippi, thus named, one of thoſe greater. And this is ſuppoſed by the antient writer under Ignatius's name, in Epiſt. ad Tarſenſ. when he tells them to whom he writes, Ἀσπάζονται ὑμᾶς αἱ Ἐκκλησίαι Φιλιππησίων, the Churches of the Philippians, in the plural, ſalute you, that is, the Churches under that Metropolis. And therefore when Philippi is by the Geographers (and out of them by the author of the argument of this Epiſtle) affirmed to be μικρὰ πόλις ὑπὸ Μητρόπολιν Θεσσαλονίκης τυγχάνα, a little city under the Metropolis Theſſalonica, it muſt be remembred that that definition belongs to ſome other time, probably long before πρώτη πόλις τῆς μερίδος

Κολωνία

* Epiſt. 247.

before that of S. Paul's writing here, or, in the Acts, his preaching to them. For ſo 'tis certain that this city built and thus named by Philip King of Macedon, had formerly been called Κρηνῖδες, and then Δάτος (whence was the proverb, Δάτου ἀϕαβῶν, becauſe of a golden mine which Appian ſaith was near it) and was then a ſmall city; which hinders not but that now under the Roman Empire it might be improved and advanced, eſpecially being now a Colony of Romans; (and being ſo, 'tis not imaginable it ſhould be ſubject to Theſſalonica, a city in another Region, * an hundred and ten miles off from it, which was no Colony.) As when in Paleſtine, Cæſarea Stratonis became a Colony of the Romans, called Colonia Prima Flavia, by † Pliny, à Veſpaſiano deducta, the Prime Colony called Flavia, as being brought thither by Flavius Veſpaſianus, it became alſo, in reſpect of the Eccleſiaſtical Government, a Metropolis, under which Jeruſalem it ſelf was. For that many cities became Metropoles, which formerly were not, there is no doubt, and is affirmed in the 12th Can. of the Council of Chalcedon, πόλεις διὰ γραμμάτων βασιλικῶν τῷ τῆς μητροπόλεως ὀνόματι τιμηθῆναι, Cities are honoured with the names of Metropoles by the Emperour's letters. So alſo Strabo, Geog. l. 17. p. 840. Αἱ ἐπαρχίαι μὲ διῄρηνται ἄλλοτε μὲ ἄλλως, Provinces have been at ſeveral times variouſly divided; which concludes the Metropoles to be changed alſo: and l. 13. p. 629. giving an account of the confuſion of Provinces by him obſerved, he ſaith it was cauſed διὰ τὸ τοὺς Ῥωμαίους μὴ κατ' ἔθνη διελεῖν αὐτὰς, ἀλλ' ἕτερον τρόπον διαιρῆσαι διοικήσεις, ἐν αἷς τὰς δίκας ποιεῖν καὶ τὰς δικαιοδοσίας, becauſe the Romans diſtributed them not according to the diviſions of tribes, but another way, according to the keeping of courts and aſſizes. And thus doth * Pliny ſet down for Metropoles of Aſia, Laodicea, Sardis, Smyrna and Epheſus, upon this only account, that the courts were kept there to which other cities reſorted. The truth is Κρηνῖδες, or Δάτος, which was now changed and advanced into Philippi, and a Metropolis of Macedonia, by being a Colony of the Romans, was originally a city of Thrace, and ſo is affirmed to be by Stephanus περὶ Πόλ. And ſo * Scylax Caryandeus among the cities of Thrace hath Δάτον πόλις ἑλλὼις, next after Neapolis. And † Euſtathius on Dionyſii Περιήγ. to the ſame effect, Δάτον, πόλιν ἐνδοξον περὶ τὸ Στρυμόνος ϕάραγγα, ſeating it on the bank of Strymon, where * Pomponius Mela in his deſcription of Thrace placeth Philippi, and ſo doth Pliny Nat. Hiſt. † l. 4. in his Survey of Thrace, A Strymone — intus Philippi Colonia: and ſo Dio deſcribing Pangæum Montem in Thrace, ſaith 'tis cloſe by Philippi. But granting all this of the former times, 'tis yet certain that at the time of S. Paul's converting this city, it was changed from the antient form, firſt it was a Roman Colony, and the inhabitants thereof Ῥωμαῖοι Romans, Act. 16. 21. and in that ſtate made a Metropolis of the adjoining part of Macedonia, where the Roman Prefect kept his aſſizes for all that μέρος. According to this Diviſion ſaith * Ulpian, in provincia Macedonia Dyrracheni, Caſſandrenſes, Philippenſes Italici Juris ſunt. This may be illuſtrated à part. Nicopolis is by * S. Chryſoſtom affirmed to be a city of Thrace, Νικόπολις ἡ Θρᾴκης ἐστὶ, and ſo by Theodoret ἡ Θρᾴκης ἐστὶ Νικόπολις, τῇ τῆς Μακεδονίας πλησίαζει, Nicopolis is a city of Thrace, but borders on Macedonia, (in like manner as Philippi did;) and yet in the Subſcription of the Epiſtle to Titus we read, ἀπὸ Νικοπόλεως τῆς Μακεδονίας, from Nicopolis of Macedonia. This may ſerve to give account of the varieties which ſeem to be among writers about this city. And as in Civil, ſo in Eccleſiaſtical diviſions ſuch variety is obſervable. Thoſe cities were chief and Metropoles where the Goſpel was firſt planted, and thence communicated to the neighbouring regions. And ſuch was Philippi, as 'tis clear by the Story of S. Paul's preaching the Goſpel in Macedonia, Act. 16. 9, 10, &c. and 1 Theſſ. 2. 2. firſt at Philippi, then after at Theſſalonica. In which reſpect, of the πρωτοκλησία priority of converſion to the Faith, and being S. Paul's ἀπαρχαὶ firſt-fruits in that region, ſome privilege belongs to Philippi even before Theſſalonica, that chief Metropolis of Macedonia, viz. that Philippi was the elder ſiſter in the Faith, and ſo in that reſpect, though not in others, the prime Metropolis of Macedonia. Hence it is that the liberality of the brethren of Macedonia (in common) 2 Cor. 11. 9. is imputed to the Philippians peculiarly, Phil. 4. 16. by which it appears that all the Chriſtians of that region or μέρις of Macedonia are contained under that title. And ſo though there be but one Epiſtle written by S. Paul to theſe Philippians, yet S. Polycarp mentions Paul's Epiſtles (in the Plural) to them, by which learned men underſtand thoſe other inſcribed to the Theſſalonians, that other chief city of Macedonia, which might therefore belong to Philippi alſo. And to that the ſevere adjuration of the Apoſtle, 1 Theſſ. 5. 27. ſeems to belong, where he adjures them by the living God, that that Epiſtle be read πᾶσι to all the holy brethren indefinitely, that is, I conceive, to all the Chriſtians in each Church of Macedonia. And ſo it is evident that the Epiſtle inſcribed to the Corinthians belonged to all the Churches of Achaia, 2 Cor. 1. 1. and ſo that inſcribed to the Coloſſians was alſo to be read Col. 4. 6. by the Church of Laodicea, the chief Metropolis of Phrygia, to which Coloſſe is adjoin'd as a ſecundary, Col. 2. 2. By all this appears how in Philippi there may be more Biſhops than one, indeed as many as were in all Macedonia, at leaſt as in the cities under that Metropolis.

Ib. Biſhops] What the word ἐπίσκοποι and ἐπισκοπὴ notes, in the Old and New Teſtament, hath been ſaid already, Note on Act. 1. h. viz. præfecture or ruling power in the Church. But whether this belonged to ſingular perſons, one in each city and region adjoining, or to a number of ſuch, ruling together as collègues, hath been of late controverted by ſome, and this place, which mentions in Philippi Biſhops in the Plural, hath been a principal teſtimony to conclude that in one Church there were many Biſhops. This, if it were granted, and conſequently, that Biſhops here denote no other than thoſe whom we now call Presbyters, would be of no force to confer this concluſion, That Churches in the Apoſtle's times were ruled not by ſingle Biſhops, but many Presbyters; becauſe 1. it were poſſible that the Apoſtle himſelf might at this time retain that ſupreme Epiſcopal power in his own hands, and though abſent in body yet by letters (being preſent in ſpirit) exerciſe that power over them: Or 2dly, if the Apoſtle had conſtituted a Biſhop over them, yet 'tis poſſible that at the writing this Epiſtle the Chair might be vacant, or that the Biſhop might be abſent. And indeed Epaphroditus, who is by Theodoret and others affirmed to be Biſhop of Philippi, by * Theophylact, διδάσκαλος Doctor, which that it is the title of Biſhop, we have formerly ſhewed, (Note on 1 Cor. 12. d.) appears c. 4. 18. to have been with Paul at this time, when he wrote the Epiſtle, (ſo ſaith Theophylact, that the Clergy are mentioned in this, and in no other Epiſtle, becauſe they had ſent Epaphroditus with neceſſaries for the Apoſtle's uſe) and to have carried the Epiſtle to them, which one thing might make it inconvenient to inſcribe the Epiſtle to him. And yet in the body of the Epiſtle c. 4. 3. there is an Apoſtrophe which in all probability belongs to him, under the name of his yoke-fellow, that is to look to the relief of the widows, ſuppoſing him preſent at the opening of the letter. But there is no need of ſuch anſwers as theſe to avoid the force of this argument. That which hath been ſaid Note a. will give a clear account of it, that Philippi being a Metropolis, under which were many other Churches, which had each of them a Biſhop, all thoſe Biſhops are here meant by ἐπίσκοποι in the Plural, as this Epiſtle was written to all thoſe cities or Churches, and not only to that of Philippi. Of this it is clear in Eccleſiaſtical writings, that there was a Biſhop conſtituted by the Apoſtles. For ſo * Tertullian diſtinctly mentions it for one of thoſe Churches which derived the pedigree of Biſhops from the Apoſtles as founders. And Ignatius, S. Paul's ſucceſſor at Antioch, in his Epiſtle to them, names Vitalis as their Biſhop, and the Latin old copy of Polycarp's Epiſtle to them mentions Vitus, which is ſurely the ſame. And though that Epiſtle mentions πρεσβυτέροις καὶ διακόνοις Elders and Deacons only, yet conſidering the notion of πρεσβυτέροι, ſet down Note on Act. 11. b. there will be little doubt but that Elders there and Biſhops here are all one, viz. all the Biſhops of the cities under that Metropolis, which may well be contained under the title there prefixed to it, Ἐκκλησίᾳ τῇ Θεῷ παροικούσῃ Φιλίπποις, to the Church of God adjoining, or belonging, to Philippi. And indeed as the word πρεσβύτεροι Elders is a note of Prefecture, and so may fitly belong to the Bishop in each city (see Note on Act. 11. b.) in all the places of the New Testament, so there is little reason to doubt of the word Ἐπίσκοποι Bishops. The first mention of it is Act. 20. 28. where those that had been called Elders of the Church, v. 17. are ἐπίσκοποι τῆς ποιμνίου, Bishops of the flock set over it by the Holy Ghost: where, if the flock were the Christians of any one city, there might be some pretence that the Elders or Bishops in the Plural, might be those which are now called Presbyters. But it is apparent that the flock is the Christians of all Asia, of which it is said c. 19. 10. that all that dwelt in Asia heard the word of the Lord, and almost all Asia were converted, saith Demetrius, v. 26. which Paul calls the opening of a great door to him in those parts, 1 Cor. 16. 9. And consequently the Elders or Bishops there, are the Bishops of all Asia, at least those that belonged to Ephesus as their * Metropolis. To which purpose is that of S. Irenæus, l. 3. c. 14. In Mileto convocatis Episcopis & Presbyteris ab Epheso & proximis civitatibus, the Bishops and Elders being assembled at Miletus, from Ephesus and the next of the cities. And therefore S. Paul in his oration to them tells them, they had known how he had been with them all the time from the first day that he came into Asia, c. 20. 18. noting those to whom his speech was addressed to be the Bishops of Asia, and not of that city only. The next mention of Bishops (beside that in this place) is that 1 Tim. 3. 2. He that desires the office of a Bishop, &c. A Bishop therefore must be blameless, &c. and in the same words Tit. 1. 7. In both which places, as it is agreeable to the affirmations of the Antients (see Note on Act. 11. b.) that there should be constituted Bishops only and Deacons in the several Churches, (there being no middle order yet in use) so that Ἐπίσκοποι distinctly notes those Bishops, and not those whom we now call Presbyters, is the joint affirmation of Chrysostom, and Theophylact, and Oecumenius. † Ἐπισκόπων ἐδεῖ πολλῶν, καὶ κατ' ἐκάστην πόλιν πρεσβυτερίων, there was need of more Bishops, and of those which preside in every city. And again, * Κατὰ πόλιν πρεσβυτέρους] Ἐπισκόπους οὕτως ἐκάλεσθά φησι, ὡς καὶ ἐν τῇ πρὸς Τιμόθεον· κατ' πόλεις δέ φησιν, ἃ μὲν ἐδύνατο πᾶς ἐπιτελεῖσθαι ἑνί, ἀλλ' ἑκάστῃ πόλει ἴδιον ἔχειν ποιμένα, Elders in every city] he there means Bishops, as also in the Epistle to Timothy: And when he saith in every city, it is because he would not have the whole Island intrusted to one, but that every city should have their own Pastor. And so saith † Eusebius of Titus, that there being an hundred cities in Crete converted to the faith by S. Paul, Titus had the bishoprick of them all, that is the Metropolitical power; that he might ordain Bishops under him, saith * Theodoret; that he might exercise judicature and ordination, saith Chrysostom and Theophylact. There are no more mentions of this word Ἐπίσκοπος in the New Testament, and in all these it is fairly appliable to the Bishops, or single Præfects or Governours of Churches: And so though it be generally resolved that the word Bishop and Elder are equivalent in the Scripture, yet is not this to be understood so, that either, and both of them, signifies indifferently those whom we now call Presbyters, but that they both signifie Bishops, one setled in each Church by the Apostles, there being no use of that second order in the Church, till the number of believers increased.

* Arg. Ep. ad Tit.

Ib. Deacons] Of the word διακονεῖν we have spoken at large, Note on Luke 8. a. both as that signifies indefinitely to serve, and as to wait at the table, and give every man his dimensum from the δεξιλειχιον, and from thence to distribute to the poor, to all that want. And thus the seven Deacon's institution, Act. 6. may be thought to confine their name and office in the Church of Christ to that (especially and principally) of διακονεῖν τραπέζαις serving tables, distributing to the poor, v. 2. called the καθημερινὴ διακονία, daily ministration, v. 1. But (beside that those seven were not wholly imployed in those inferiour imployments, but Stephen and Philip made use of for the preaching of the Gospel, cap. 7. 8. and Samaria converted and baptized by the latter of them, and he therefore called Philip the Evangelist, Act. 21. 8.) it is every where clear, that the word διάκονος is not to be restrained to that notion, but taken in a more general, for any officer or servant, or minister, without particular notation of the kind wherein the service or ministery consists, and being taken in an Eccleiastical notion, shall signifie any inferiour Church-officer, however imployed by the Bishop or Apostle to whom he belongeth. The original of this word and office is to be taken from the Jews, among whom the ministers and officers that attended the Judges in every city, Deut. 16. 18. are in the Scriptures called שטרים, by the Rabbines, חזנים ministers, and with the addition of הכנסורת ministers of the synagogue, or Consistory, and juniores, the younger, saith Maimonides, such as had not attained to the age of Doctor; and these sure are the νεώτεροι that buried Ananias, Act. 5. 6. These † Epiphanius calls διάκονοι (a word lightly varied from the Hebrew חזנים) and saith the Deacons in the Christian Church are directly parallel to them: For as they were the ταμιοφύλακες, keepers of the treasure, so did they also διακονικὰς χρείας ἐπιτελεῖν, perform all ministerial offices indifferently. And of them the Jews have a saying, that about the time of the destruction of Jerusalem the learning of the wise men, that is, Doctors, was degenerated into that of the Azanitæ, and the learning of the Azanitæ into that which was competible to the Notaries, noting the subordination of the Azanitæ to the Doctors, and of the Notaries to the Azanitæ. From hence appears the notion and office of these Deacons in the Christian Church, those that attended and waited on the Bishop, and did whatsoever he appointed them, preach, baptize, &c. read the Gospel, attend the Bishop in ministring the Sacrament of the Lord's supper, receive the oblations from the subdeacon, and bring them to the Bishop, mind the people in performing the several parts of the divine office, call on them to pray, to sing, to hear, to kneel, &c. And as these were first trained up for these ministeries in the family of the Bishop, so were they after in Religious houses and Colleges, or Monasteries (which appear by the antients to have been seminaries of the Church, and not instituted only for prayer and devotion:) and such, when they have used the office of a Deacon well, καλῶς διακονήσαντες 1 Tim. 3. 13. purchase to themselves a good degree, that is, ταχέως ἐπὶ τὰ ἀνωτέρω ἐλεύσονται, say the Scholiasts, shall soon ascend higher, as Clemens being Peter's Deacon at Rome, succeeded him in the Episcopal chair. Proportionable to which it was, that afterwards the Bishops were chosen out of Monasteries, Gregory Nazianzen, Basil, Chrysostom, &c. Thus is the word Deacons to be understood in this place, being joined to Bishops, as those that attend on them in every Church, and were then next to them, there being not then (as far as appears) any middle sort of Church officers instituted betwixt the Bishops and them. And the same is certainly the notion of it in that other place, 1 Tim. 3. 8, 12. where the rules are given for the qualifying them that are ordained to that office (as before had been given for the Bishops) instead of which are the πρεσβύται antient men, Tit. 2. 2. all one with διάκονοι Deacons, in this more comprehensive notion, as it contains the διαιρέσεις διακονιῶν diversities of ministrations, 1 Cor. 12. 5. And these are elsewhere called διάκονοι Θεοῦ ministers of God 1 Thess. 3. 2. the title that was then bestowed on Timothy, as the fellow-labourer of Paul in the Gospel, and ἐν Χριστῷ, in Christ, as of Epaphras 'tis said, Col. 1. 7. our fellow-servant (all one with his fellow-labourer before) who is for you a faithful minister in Christ, and ἐν Κυρίῳ in the Lord, as of Tychicus, Ephes. 6. 21. our beloved brother and πιστὸς διάκονος faithful minister in the Lord. In all which places διάκονος with those adjuncts is applied to those assistants and attendants on the Apostles, that were, as they pleased, employed by them in the Gospel. Besides these, other places there are wherein 'tis applied to the Apostles themselves, διάκονοι deacons or ministers simply, 1 Cor. 3. 5. Θεοῦ of God, 2 Cor. 6. 4. of Christ, 2 Cor. 11. 23.

Ephes.

Epheſ. 3. 7. 1 Tim. 4. 6. of the Church, Col. 1. 25. of the Goſpel, ver. 23. of the New Teſtament, 2 Cor. 3. 6. And this ſtill in a more general notion, as it denotes ſervants, officers, of what kind ſoever.

d. χάριτος

V. 7. My grace] That the word χάρις, which ſignifies any favour or mercy of God, ſhould here peculiarly be uſed for the ſufferings which had befallen S. Paul in the diſcharge of his office, will not appear ſtrange, if firſt it be conſidered, how often this ſtate of ſuffering is mention'd by Chriſt, and by S. Paul, S. Peter, and S. James, as an eminent mercy of God's to them who are thus honoured by him, and accordingly that it is to be look'd on as matter of all joy (in their account) whenſoever it befalls any: ſecondly, if it be compared with ver. 29. where the Philippians ſuffering for Chriſt, as eminently as their believing in him, is mention'd as that which ἐχαρίσθη ὑμῖν was granted them by way of χάρις grace or mercy, or ſpecial favour of God. As for that which is affirmed in both theſe verſes, that this Church of Philippi was thus perſecuted for Chriſtianity, and ſo participated with him in his bands or ſufferings, though it be not mention'd in the ſtory of the Acts, yet it is in it ſelf eaſie to be believed, (and by theſe teſtimonies put beyond all queſtion) the Jewiſh unbelievers every-where ſtirring up the Roman magiſtrates to perſecute the believers in their Provinces.

e. Πραιτώριον

V. 13. Palace] Πραιτώριον ſignifies in the Latin (and ſo in the Greek the ſame) the common hall, or court, where judgment uſed to be had, the Prætor being a Roman officer in their judicatures; τόπος ἔνθα συνάγεται ὁ λαὸς, the place where the people meet, ſaith Phavorinus: and ſo ſure it ſignifies here, and S. Paul's being impriſoned, and brought before the judges, might be a means to make Chriſtianity known to the bench and the whole court. Thus one of his Judges had told him that he had perſuaded him, ἐν ὀλίγῳ a little way, to be a Chriſtian, which is the thing that here ſeems to be related to, or ſome other of the ſame nature.

f. πρόφασις

V. 18. Pretence] The word πρόφασις ſignifies not only a pretext or pretence (and ſo is oppoſed to ἀλήθεια a true cauſe) but alſo an occaſion, as πρόφασιν ζητεῖ, he ſeeks occaſions, Prov. 18. 1. and ſo it ſeems to be taken here, (and ſo more fitly to connect with παντὶ τρόπῳ, by all means, than it could do if it were rendred in pretence,) thus, by all means εἴτε προφάσει, whether by occaſion only, that is, accidentally, and not by a deſigned cauſality, εἴτε ἀληθείᾳ, or whether by truth, that is, by a direct real way of efficiency.

g. Καρπὸς ἔργου

V. 22. Fruit of my labour] Καρπὸς ἔργου ſeems to be a Latiniſm, operæ pretium, and ſo to ſignifie accordingly worth my labour, worth doing, as we ſay a deſirable thing. So Theophylact renders it οὐκ ἄκαρπον not fruitleſs, καρποφορῶ γάρ, ſaith he, for I bring forth fruit by this means.

h. ἀναλῦσαι

V. 23. To depart] Of the many acceptions of the word ἀναλῦσαι none ſeems more proper to this place than that which is in its ſelf moſt ſimple and plain, that it ſignifies to depart this world, or retire, remove out of this life, migrare, abire, diſcedere, reverti; every of which is uſually taken for an expreſſion of death, and are anſwerable to the Hebrew מטר, which the Syriack here makes uſe of, the ſame which is by the Chaldee uſed of Moſes on Cant. c. 1. when Moſes's time came למפטר מן עלמא to depart, or, that he ſhould depart, out of the world: and ſo 2 Tim. 4. 6. ὁ καιρὸς τῆς ἐμῆς ἀναλύσεως, is ordinarily rendred, the time, or ſeaſon of my departure, or deceaſe. Ἀναλύειν ἐν τεύθεν in Palladius (Hiſt. Lauſiac. p. 506. A) to looſe from thence, or moſt properly to return, alluding to Eccleſ. 12. 7. where the body returns to the earth as it was, to the place from whence originally it came out, and ſo the ſpirit unto God that gave, or firſt breathed, it into the firſt man. And ſo ordinarily in Chriſtian Authors ἀναλύειν, and ἀνάλυσις πρὸς Χριστὸν, and the like. And for the original of this uſe and acception of the word, nothing can be more probable than that it is a phraſe of the Mariners, who are ſaid λύειν to looſe from the haven, when they go out, oram ſolvere, and abſolutely ſolvere, to looſe; and when they do this by way of return homewards, then 'tis properly ἀναλύειν. So Luke 12. 6. ἀναλύσαι ἐκ τῶν γάμων, is coming home, returning from the marriage feaſt. So 2 Mac. 8. 1. ἀνεπιτηδείως ἀκόσμως retiring diſorderly. So the method of reducing concluſions to their principles is by Ariſtotle ſtyled ἀναλυτικὴ, ἡ ἐν γνωστῇ εἰς τὰς ἀρχὰς ἐπάνοδος, * ſaith Philoponus; and again ἡ ἐν τῇ αἰτιατικῇ ἀναδρομὴ ἐπὶ τὰς ἀρχὰς, a returning, or running back, from the concluſions, or effects, to their Principles; adding that it is a metaphor ἀπὸ τῶν ἀποδημούντων, καὶ ἐπανερχομένων εἰς τὰ οἰκεῖα, from travellers returning to their homes, and εἰς τὰ οἰκεῖα ἀπὸ τῶν ξένων ἐπάνοδος, ἀνάλυσις λέγεται, a return from ſtrangers to ones own home is thus ſtyled.

* In 2 Poſt.

i. Πεποιθὼς οἶδα

V. 25. Having this confidence] Τοῦτο πεποιθὼς οἶδα is ſomewhat an obſcure phraſe, and may beſt be explicated by two conſiderations. Firſt, that πεποιθὼς ſignifies hoping with ſome confidence, anſwerable to the Heb. בטח which is ordinarily rendred ἐλπὶς hope, but 2 Kin. 18. 20. πεποίθησις perſuaſion, confidence. So v. 6. πεποιθὼς αὐτὸ τοῦτο hoping confidently this very thing. So 2 Cor. 1. that which is expreſs'd by ἐλπίζω I hope, v. 13. is ταύτῃ τῇ πεποιθήσει in this perſuaſion v. 15. Then for the phraſe πεποιθὼς οἶδα, that is in ordinary conſtruction all one with οἶδά με πεποιθέναι I know that I hope, or am perſuaded, or, of this I am ſure, (ſo οἶδα τοῦτο is ordinarily uſed) that I hope, or am perſuaded. And this is very agreeable to the matter in hand, where to comfort them in their ſadneſs for his afflictions, he minds them that, in order to their good, he foreſees it very probable that he may be permitted to live, and though he knows not by any certain revelation whether he ſhall or no, yet this he knows that he hopes, and conſidering God's diſpenſations of providence, is verily perſuaded (which alſo includes his deſire) of it.

CHAP. II.

Paraphraſe.

*communication of ſpirit vel ſocietas

1. IF there be therefore any conſolation in Chriſt, if any comfort of love, if any * fellowſhip of the Spirit, if any bowels and mercies;

1, 2. I therefore conjure you by all thoſe benefits which are afforded us in Chriſt, by the great joy and pleaſure there is in loving one another, by that liberal effuſion of graces from the Spirit of God (ſee Note on Act. 2. d.) and by your affection and compaſſion toward men in calamity, and particularly toward me, at this time a priſoner for Chriſt, that to all the other matter of rejoicing that I have concerning you, you will add this alſo, (and ſo make my joy complete) that you live in unity, loving one another mutually, having as it were the ſame ſoul, and ſo affections and deſigns, all ſtudying and taking care for this ſame thing.

2. Fulfil ye my joy, that ye † be like minded, having the ſame love, being of one accord, of one mind.]

† mind the ſame thing

3. Let nothing be done through ſtrife or vain-glory, but in lowlineſs of mind let each eſteem other better than themſelves.]

3. That ye do nothing out of oppoſition and contention, but with quietneſs and humbleneſs, as if ye had every one a better opinion of the others wiſdom and piety than his own.

4. Look not every man on his own things, but every man alſo on the things of others.]

4. And to this end let not men look ſo intently on thoſe gifts and abilities which they diſcern in themſelves, but let them withal, and much rather, conſider the gifts and abilities of other men more eminent than they. And this will be an expedient toward the performing of that which is required, v. 3.

* For let this τοῦτο γάρ —

5. * Let this mind be in you, which was alſo in Chriſt Jeſus,]

5. According to the example of Chriſt,

7. And yet being thus, (the eternal word of God) he ſet himſelf at nought, leſſened and humbled himſelf from the condition of being Lord of all, to that of a ſubject and ordinary man:

8. And

8. And being by his incarnation thus low, in the nature, and all the outward deportment and guiſe of a man, he yet humbled himſelf lower, to death, even the vileſt and moſt cruel death, that in uſe among the Romans for their ſlaves, crucifixion.

8. And being found in faſhion as a man, he humbled himſelf, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the croſs.]

9. And for this great act of humility and the divine work of eternal redemption of our ſouls wrought by him in this ſtate of humiliation, God hath advanced his humane nature to the higheſt degree of glory, and made this God-man the ſupreme prince of his Church, given him all power in heaven and earth, and to ſignifie that, hath appropriated to him the title of Jeſus, the Saviour, by way of excellence, that, though other men may have been thus ſtyled from other ſalvations or deliverances, for which they have been imployed by God, as Joſhua long before, and after Joſhua the Judges were called Saviours, for reſcuing the people of Iſrael from dangers, and delivering them from enemies, yet the eternal ſalvation Heb. 5. 9. eternal redemption Heb. 9. 12. being wrought only by him, the name which ſignifies this ſhould belong to him, and to him only.

9. Wherefore God alſo hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name ;]

10. A title, or name, which includes in it ſuch a ſingular dignity above all other titles (as concerning man's eternal, and not only ſome temporal deliverance and ſalvation) that it, together with the ſignification of it, is worthy of the moſt eminent and ſuperlative reſpect, the lowlieſt reverence that can be paid by all rational creatures, Angels, men and devils, Luke 4. 36.

10. That at the name of Jeſus every knee ſhould bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth,]

11. And his doctrine, and faith, and ſovereignty be received and embraced by all nations of the world, to the honour of God the Father, who hath thus ſent him, and thus ordered his humility and exaltation.

11. And that every tongue ſhould confeſs that Jeſus Chriſt is Lord, to the glory of God the Father.]

c. 12. And therefore, my dear brethren, as ye have hitherto done all that I have commanded you, ſo I ſtill beſeech you, that now in time of my abſence ye will be much more diligent than when I was preſent with you ye were, to perfect the good work which ye have begun, viz. a pious Chriſtian courſe, (ſee Note on Rom. 10. a.) making your performances agreeable to your reſolutions, and never giving over till ye are landed ſafe at eternal bliſs, and to that end uſing all poſſible diligence, and ſolicitude, and care that ye be not wanting to your ſelves ;

12. Wherefore, my beloved, as ye have always obeyed, not as in my preſence only, but now much more in my abſence ; work out your own ſalvation with c fear and trembling.]

d. 13. Upon this very conſideration, on which ſome are ſecure and negligent, becauſe both to that good reſolution and to every good performance you are enabled by God, who doth what he doth of his free undeſerved mercy to you, by his preventing and aſſiſting grace, without any merit of yours to deſerve it from him, and conſequently may juſtly be expected to withdraw all from them that walk negligently before him.

17. Yea, and if I be e † offered upon the ſacrifice and ſervice of your faith, I joy and rejoice with you all.]

18. * For the ſame cauſe alſo do ye joy and rejoice with me.

19. But † I truſt in the Lord Jeſus to ſend Timotheus ſhortly unto you, that I alſo may be of good comfort when I know your ſtate.

22. But for Timothy you know what experience I have had of him, how in the preaching the Goſpel he aſſiſted me, taking all the pains of a ſervant, and paying me all the obedience and willingneſs, and love of a ſon to a father.

22. But ye know the proof of him, that as a ſon with the father he hath ſerved me in the Goſpel.]

23. Him therefore I mean to diſpatch to you, as ſoon as I diſcern what is now likely to befall me, how I ſhall preſently be diſpoſed of here.

23. Him therefore I hope to ſend † preſently, ſo ſoon as I ſhall ſee how it will go with me.]

24. And through God's mercy I verily hope and perſuade my ſelf that I ſhall ſoon be ſet at liberty, and ſo come to you perſonally within a while.

24. But I * truſt in the Lord that I alſo my ſelf ſhall come ſhortly.]

25. In the mean time I thought it neceſſary to return to you Epaphroditus, one that hath been my partner of labour and danger alſo, and is your Biſhop, ſet over your Church (ſee Note on Rom. 16. b.) and he which by you hath been enabled to relieve me in my neceſſities.

25. Yet I ſuppoſed it neceſſary to ſend to you Epaphroditus, my brother and companion in labour, and fellow-ſouldier, but your † meſſenger, and he that miniſtred to my wants.]

Annotations

Annotations on Chap. II.

a. Μορφὴ

V. 6. Form of God] Μορφὴ signifies not only an external and accidental form, as Mar. 16. 12. nor at all an image or picture (as μόρφωσις seems to do, Rom. 2. 20. 2 Tim. 3. 5. and is rendred by Hesychius χαραξισμὸς, εἰκὼν, a personation or image) but it is taken also in good authors for an internal essential form or being. Thus in Æschylus, speaking of Θέμις ἡ γαῖα, they are, saith he, one form, that is, thing, under divers names. The words of Phavorinus are most observable for the explication of this place, Μορφὴ τὸ καθ' ἑαυτὸ ὄν, ἢ κοινωνίας ἐτέρου εἰς τὸ εἶναι ἢ ἀνθύφωον, the word signifies that which hath a being of it self, and needs not the assistance of another to its being; and again, Μορφὴ κυρίως ἡ οὐσία, it properly signifies essence, and then cites these very words ὃς ἐν μορφῇ Θεοῦ ὑπάρχων, which is, saith he, ἐν οὐσίᾳ Θεοῦ γινωσκόμενος, known in the essence of God, being God, and by the rays and beams of his Divinity (shining even in his first conception and birth) discerned and known to be so. This here appears to be the notion of the word by μορφὴν δούλου, the form of a servant, that follows ver. 7. for that was not only an external, but also a real form; he was really a servant of God's, in his humane nature undertaking an office design'd him by God, and most strictly obeying him in all things; and ἠλάττωσας αὐτὸν βραχύ τι παρ' ἀγγέλους, Heb. 2. 7. he was a little lower, or for a little while (the time that he spent here on earth) lower than the Angels, who we know are the servants of God: and so the words ὁμοίωμα and σχῆμα ver. 8. (which frequently signifie likeness, and external habit, and forms) do here signifie that outward appearance, which doth not exclude but include the inward being and reality; for it is certain, and by all acknowledged, that he was really a man, and not only in likeness and appearance so. Thus doth Theophylact interpret it, Μορφὴ γὰρ Θεοῦ ἡ οὐσία λέγεται, the form of God signifies his essence, ὥσπερ μορφὴ δούλου ἡ φύσις, as the form of a servant is the nature of a servant. This being thus evident of this first phrase ἐν μορφῇ Θεοῦ ὑπάρχων, where Christ's Divinity is asserted, and that precedaneous to his humiliation, and as the terminus à quo, the term of elevation, from which his exinanition and humiliation takes the rise, and is much encreased thereby, there would now be little gained to the cause of the Photinians, or Arrians, in case the phrase that follows, οὐχ ἁρπαγμὸν ἡγήσατο τὸ εἶναι ἴσα τῷ Θεῷ, which we render, thought it no robbery to be equal with God, should appear to be mistaken. For when it is once acknowledged that Christ was God before his assumption of our humane nature, and that being really God, or ὑπάρχων subsisting in the real form of God, he took our humanity upon him, it is by necessary consequence concluded that he was equal with God, which is all that is pretended by any from this second phrase. For as to them that affirm Christ a Deus factus, a God that had a beginning of being so, and from thence deny his equality with the Father, it is evident that they date his Divinity from his resurrection and exaltation, (which is manifestly confuted by his being God before his humiliation) and they that affirm him ὁμοιούσιον of like, (but not ὁμούσιον, of the same) being with the Father, are sufficiently confuted by the notion of μορφὴ here set down, as it signifies the real being of God, wherein he was ὑπάρχων subsisting, for that includes Equality, and not likeness only. Now for the phrase οὐχ ἁρπαγμὸν ἡγήσατο τὸ εἶναι ἴσα τῷ Θεῷ, that it should signifie Christ's not assuming to appear like God, or spectari tanquam Deum, to be look'd on as God, and so belong to his forbidding many times to have his power and divine greatness proclaimed, there is but one argument which to me makes it any thing probable, (and that not taken notice of by them that defend that sense) and that taken from the ἀλλὰ but which follows v. 7. For in this notion of the phrase it would most commodiously agree with that he would not assume, or own, so much greatness, but humbled, or emptied, himself, &c. where that assuming and that humbling are directly opposite, and so most agreeable to the importance of ἀλλὰ but, a note of opposition. And indeed this notion of the phrase would very well connect it to the antecedents, thus, he being in form, &c. that is, really and eternally God, when he came down on earth, would not thus assume and magnifie this power, but ἐκένωσε, diminish'd or lessen'd and humbled himself, asked at one time, Why callest thou me good? none is good save God; and at another, commanded that his miracles, which demonstrated him to be God, should not be divulged. And this notion consists very well with the Context, and the assertion of Christ's Divinity, for being God he might yet chuse to conceal his being so. But yet after all this, there is no reason to adhere to this interpretation. For first, ἁρπαγμὸν ἡγεῖσθαι doth no where appear to signifie jactare, or ostentare, or venditare, to assume, or take upon one. And though ἁρπαγμὸς may signifie prey, or prize, in war, yet ἡγεῖσθαι to esteem or account being joined with it, no way inclines it to this notion, but to that which the ordinary interpretation affixes to it, that he counted it no prey, prize, acquisition, or (which is all one) robbery, to be equal with God. And whereas it is pretended that it is a Syriack phrase, and that proved by a passage in the Syriack Liturgy, where upon Christ's asking Baptism of John, John answers לא אלבוך נולחא I will not assume rapine, that is no proof of this notion. For first, that which John thus expressed, was, that he would not do so injurious a thing as to pretend to have greater authority than Christ, and consequently to admit him to his Baptism; and so it seems, to assume rapine, in Syriack, is to do an injurious thing. And secondly, there is some difference between assuming and thinking, and consequently ἡγεῖσθαι to think being join'd with ἁρπαγμὸν rapine, must signifie to think or count it a rapine, or an injury, (which is very distant from boasting of it as a prize, triumphing or assuming) and that is the notion that the ordinary interpretation gives of it. As for the phrase τὸ εἶναι ἴσα Θεῷ, there is as little reason to render that, spectari tanquam Deum, to be look'd on as God, for neither is τὸ εἶναι to be look'd on, but to be, nor ἴσα tanquam, as, but equal, or as great as another. It is true in the verse cited out of Homer, that εἰσορᾶν ἴσα Θεῷ is to look on him as equal to God, and that proves that ἴσα Θεῷ signifies either a God, or one equal to God; but then τὸ εἶναι and εἰσορᾶσθαι, to be and to be look'd on, are not the same, and so τὸ εἶναι ἴσα is to be equal, and not only to be look'd on as such. The true notion of ἴσα may be discerned by Luke 6. 34. where they that lend to the rich are said to do it ἵνα ἀπολάβωσι τὰ ἴσα, that they may receive from them loans, or benefits, of as great a value; where τὰ ἴσα in the plural, (just as here) signifies that which is equally valuable: and as there ἀπολαβεῖν τὰ ἴσα is to receive that which is equal, or equivalent, so τὸ εἶναι ἴσα is to be equal, and ἴσα Θεῷ equal to God, of the same value and real power and Divinity with God the Father. And then follows ἀλλὰ ἐκένωσε, either in the notion of ἀλλὰ for yet, though he were thus great, yet he vilified, submitted himself; or as ἀλλὰ signifies but, He was God, and without any injury, equal to his Father, but for all this, or notwithstanding this, he vilified himself, &c. And this is the clear rendring of this whole place.

Πολλῶν ὀνομάτων μορφὴ μία,

b. Κενόω

V. 7. Made himself of no reputation] Κενόω signifies to lessen, diminish; so Phavorinus, Κενωθῆναι ἐλαττῶσαι ὑπομεῖναι, to suffer or undergo diminution: so the Hebrew אמר, which Jer. 14. 4. and 15. 9. is rendred κενόω to empty, is Joel 1. 10, 12. Nehem. 1. 4. ὀλιγόω to diminish, and Hos. 4. 3. σμικρύνω, to make little.

c. Φόβος καὶ τρόμος

V. 12. Fear and trembling] That the phrase μετὰ φόβου καὶ τρόμου, with fear and trembling, signifies μετὰ ταπεινοφροσύνης with humility, is ordinarily said from the Antients, and is confirmed by * S. Chrysostom, using it of the Angels, Ἀγγελικαὶ δυνάμεις παρεστήκασι μετὰ φόβου καὶ τρόμου, οἱ Χερουβὶμ καλαχθύπτοντες τὰ πρόσωπα οἱ Σεραφὶμ κεκράζοντες τρισάγιον, ἅγιος, ἅγιος, ἅγιος Κύριος, the Angelical powers assist with fear and trembling, the Cherubims hide their faces, the Seraphims cry with trembling, holy, holy, holy Lord, &c.

* Hom. 31. de natali Dom. ε

And

And thus it may here have a very commodious ſenſe, ſo as to be anſwerable to thoſe words in the ſecond part of this ſpeech, v. 13. for God worketh in you to will and to do of his good pleaſure, which is a foundation of all humility. But the notion of the phraſe in other places of theſe books ſeems to imply ſomething more, not only lowlineſs of mind, but diligence and caution, and ſolicitude, and fear of diſpleaſing, as a qualification of obedience (and ſo fearing the Lord with all the heart and ſoul, Deut. 10. 12. conſiſts in keeping his commandments, &c.) ſuch as will be required to render it acceptable to God. Thus Epheſ. 6. 5. Servants obey your maſters with fear and trembling, that is, a very great fear of offending, terror, or trembling, leſt they ſhould do any thing amiſs. So 2 Cor. 7. 15. upon St. Paul's orders of ſeverity, v. 9. either delivered by Titus, or made known to him by St. Paul, v. 14. (and ſo he an officer of St. Paul's, ſent to ſee how they behaved themſelves under it) Titus tells him of the Corinthians obedience (ὑπακολῶ again) ὡς μὲτ φόβυ κὴ τρόμυ ἐδέξασθε αὐτὸν, how with fear and trembling ye received him, that is, entertained him and his meſſage from Paul with all readineſs of obedience, all diligence, and fear, and zeal, v. 11. to approve your ſelves unto him. Thus ἐν φόβῳ in fear ſignifies, 1 Pet. 1. 17. with all diligence and care to approve themſelves to God; and ſo 2 Cor. 7. 1. in the fear of God is the qualification of their cleanſing from all filthineſs, and perfecting holineſs: and Heb. 12. 28. as the qualification of ſerving God acceptably, is added μὲτ αἰδῦς κὴ εὐλαβείας with reverence and fear, and that back'd with the conſideration of, Our God is a conſuming fire: And accordingly the worſhippers of God, the pious among the Gentiles, are called εὐλαβεῖς and φοβέμενοι φοβέμψοι, men of reverence and fear, their fear ſignifying their ſolicitude and diligence to pleaſe God, wherein their piety conſiſted: And ſo 1 Pet. 3. 15. ἕτοιμοι ready (as ſervants are to be at every call) to give anſwer to every one that asks you an account of the hope in you, (that is, to confeſs Chriſt even in perſecutions and dangers) with meekneſs and fear, as with all meekneſs to men, ſo with all care to approve your ſelves to God. And thus it is here ſet as the qualification of godly obedience, As, ſaith he, you have always obeyed--ſo, &c. work out--with fear and trembling, χωεὶς γογσυσμῶν κὴ διαλοισμῶν, v. 14. without murmuring and diſputings, which are the worſt evidences of an untoward obedience, and ſo moſt contrary to the ſincere diligence and zeal to God's ſervice, meant by the fear and trembling.

μὲτ αἰδῦς. εὐλαβεῖς φοβέμενοι

d. ὁ ἐνεργῶν τὸ θέλειν

V. 13. Worketh in you both to will——] The word ὁ ἐνεργῶν that worketh being joined with ἐν ὑμῖν in you on one ſide, and with ὑπὲρ τ εὐδοκίας of his good pleaſure on the other ſide, muſt in reaſon ſo be interpreted, as ſhall be moſt directly anſwerable to the exhortation given to them, v. 12. of working out their own ſalvation with fear and trembling. To which it will be conſequent, that as this which is done by God is done of his own free mercy, without any merit of ours which may claim it from him, and therefore requires not only our humility, but our diligence, and caution, and ſolicitude, and fear of diſpleaſing ſo gracious a father, who may, if he be provoked by our unworthineſs, withdraw it from us; ſo it is not to be conceived to be wrought by God in ſuch an irreſiſtible manner, as that it ſhall be impoſſible for thoſe in whom God thus works to contradict or reſiſt his working: For if it were ſo, there could be no place for the exhortation to do that, which could not be otherwiſe, to work out their own ſalvation, &c. To work then in us the τὸ θέλειν κὴ τὸ ἐνεργεῖν the willing and the acting, or operating, is the giving us that ſtrength, working in us thoſe abilities which are required to our willing, or working, as neceſſary to prepare and aſſiſt us to do either. So (God's χαείσμαῖα and ἐνεργήματα, gifts and operations, being all one) δῶναι λατρδίειν, to give to ſerve him, Luk. 1. 74. ſignifies his affording that grace which enable us to ſerve him, not which forceth or neceſſitateth us to do ſo. The King's MS. here adds the word δωνάμι by his power, which as it agrees well in this ſenſe, ſo hath it a farther energy in it to encourage our diligence, which is wont to be diſheartned by the difficulty and impoſſibility of the task. Be we never ſo weak and inſufficient of our ſelves, God hath all-ſufficient ſtrength, and by that ſtrength of his he worketh in us the willing and the doing: and ſo if we be not wanting to our ſelves, but work, and work out our own ſalvation with all diligence, we ſhall have no reaſon to complain of want of ſtrength, we are able to do what he requires of us, διὰ τ ἐνδυναμῶντός, through him that ſtrengtheneth us.

c. Σπένδ. μαι

V. 17. Offered upon the ſacrifice] The word σπένδομαι denotes the pouring out of wine upon the ſacrifice; ἡ τ οἴνυ ἔκχυσις εἰς τὰ ἱερυργήματα, the effuſion of wine on the ſacrifices, ſaith Ammonius of σπονδὴ, and ὁ ἐπιχεόμψος ὑμ θυσίαις οἶνος, ſaith Heſychius, wine poured out on the ſacrifice. This wine being thus offered up to God is ſaid to chear the heart of God, Jud. 9. 13. And to this St. Paul here compares the effuſion of his own blood, which is moſt fitly reſembled by wine. And the words that follow, make the reſemblance complete. For the bringing in of men to the faith of Chriſt, to the embracing and receiving the Goſpel, is elſewhere compared to a Sacrifice, Rom. 12. 1. your bodies a living ſacrifice, and 15. 16. an offering of the Gentiles acceptable, &c. And a Sacrifice being firſt kill'd, then dreſs'd and prepared by the Prieſts and Levites, the former of theſe is called θυσία, the latter λειτυργία, and both are made uſe of here, the ſacrifice, and the ſervice of their faith: where their faith ſignifying their receiving of the Goſpel, the converting them is this θυσία τ πίσεως, ſacrifice of their faith; and the farther labour beſtowed upon them (in the confirming and fitting them for this honourable employment of being offered up to God a living ſacrifice) is the λειτυργία the ſervice, and Paul's ſpending his life, ſhedding his blood in the employment, is the pouring out the wine on the ſacrifice, Thus 2 Tim. 4. 6. ſpeaking of his ſufferings and danger under Nero, ἤδη σπένδομαι, ſaith he, I am already poured out.

V. 20. No man like-minded] The notion of ἰσόψυχος among Greek authors is clear all one with ἴσος ἐμῇ ψυχῇ, equal to my ſoul, a ſecond ſelf, moſt dear to me, ſuch as Patroclus to Achilles in Homer, whom, ſaith he, I love ἴσον ἐμῇ κεφαλῇ equal to my head, or life. Thus alſo the Greek Interpreters of the Pſalms uſe it, Pſal. 55. 14. σὺ δὲ ἄνθρωπε ἰσόψυχε, ἡγεμών μυ κὴ γνωσέ μυ, thou my companion, my guide, and my known friend. This therefore in all reaſon is to be the meaning of it here alſo, not to expreſs what care Timothy had of the Philippians (for that is ſaid in the next words, ὅστις γνησίως τὰ ὑμῶν μεριμνήσῃ, who will ſincerely take care of your affairs) but how dearly valued he was by Paul, ſo that when he came to them, they ſhould think a ſecond Paul was come to them. If there were any difficulty in this rendring, or place for conjecture, a man might gueſs St. Paul to have written either σύζυσον or ἰσόζυσον, the firſt uſed by this Apoſtle in this Epiſtle, c. 4. 3. γνήσιε σύζυγε, true yoke-fellow, and the latter of the ſame ſignification, he that draws in another yoke. So I ſuppoſe the Gloſs in Heſychius muſt be read, not ἰσοζύσιον, ἴσον, ζυγῷ ἀντίσηκον, but ἰσόζυσον, ἴσον ζυγῷ, ἀντίζυσον, and ſo in Phavorinus alſo. But there is no reaſon to doubt the reading ἰσόψυχον, nor to fly to this or any other uncertain conjecture.

g. ὑβριλαδόμψος

V. 30. Not regarding] The word ὑβριλαδόμψος is not ordinarily to be met with unleſs in Heſychius and Phavorinus and other Gloſſaries, which ſeem not only to have taken it from hence, but alſo to have read the word ὑβριολαδόμψος (though the impreſſions have it otherwiſe for they place it betwixt ὑβριολὴ and ὑβρόλιον, which would not be done according to the order of the letters, if it had been ὑβριλ. It is therefore very probable that the reading here ſhould be ὑβριολαδόμψος τῇ ψυχῇ· ſo ὑβριολος in Ariſtophanes is ῥιψοκίνδυνος he that caſts himſelf into danger (in which ſenſe we have ὑβριεθλημμένος, 2 Mac. 14. 38.) which is the very notion of this word in Heſychius, εἰς θάνατον αὑτὸν ἐκδιδές, one that gives himſelf up to death, for ſo ſaith Phavorinus the phraſes are uſual, ὑβριάλλομαι τῇ ἐμαυτῇ κεφαλῇ I venture, or gage, my head, ὑβριάλλομαι ἀργυρίῳ I lay any money. Thus in * Plutarch, ὑβριολότερον ἀγωνίζεσθαι, * in Galba. to be more venturous in fighting than ordinary, and in Pliny's Epiſtles, parabola, that is periculoſa. So doth Chryſoſtom expound this place, ὑπέδωκεν ἑαυτὸν, ὡς κἂν ὁτιοῦν δεῖν παθεῖν, he gave himſelf up to ſuffer whatſoever ſhould should be neceſſary, and again, καταφρονήσας θανάτου, contemning death. So Theophylact, πᾶσι κινδύνοις καταφρονήσας, deſpiſing all danger, and ἐπιῤῥίψειν ἑαυτὸν τῷ θανάτῳ, he threw himſelf upon death, and at length βιβλοχινδυνῶν, the very expreſſions that are ſet by the Gloſſaries to explain παραβολῶν. For the explaining of this the learned Iſaac Caſaubon in Epiſt. 438. ſaith that he found in Putean's copy, this Reading, with this Interpretation to it, Parabolanus fuit de anima ſua, in the ſame manner as in Juſtinian's Code, they that go to them that are ſick of the plague are called parabolani and parabolarii.

CHAP. III.

Paraphraſe.

1. FInally, my brethren, rejoice in the Lord. To write * the ſame things to you † to me is not [a] grievous, but for you it is ſafe.]

1. To conclude, my brethren, I ſalute you in the Lord; ſomewhat I have to write to you, which flows not from any cowardiſe in me, though I have taſted of the ſharpneſs of it, but from my great care to preſerve you from the great dangers into which I have fallen my ſelf. a.

2. Beware of dogs, beware of evil workers, beware of the [b] concision.]

2. There are a ſort of men I would have you take ſpecial heed of, very malicious perſons, that bark at and bite every orthodox profeſſor, and that live themſelves in all villany; I mean the heretical Gnoſticks, v. 18. Others alſo there are to beware of, as with whom the Gnoſticks combine, viz. the Jewiſh Believers, which ſtill obſerve the Moſaical Law, and require all to Judaize and perſecute them that do not. Theſe take upon them to be the circumciſion, but are only the concision, thoſe that tear the Church in pieces, condemn and ſeparate from their Brethren, Rom. 14. b.

3. For we are the circumciſion, which worſhip God in the ſpirit, and rejoice in Chriſt Jeſus, and have no confidence in the fleſh:]

3. For ſure we are the true children of Abraham, and the circumciſion indeed, who live piouſly, and confeſs Chriſt crucified, and depend upon God's mercy only through that promiſe ſealed to us in Chriſt's blood, and ſo place no confidence in circumciſion, nor any ſuch outward performance.

4. Though I might alſo have confidence in the fleſh. If any other man thinketh that he hath whereof he might truſt in the fleſh, I more:]

4. Though, if you ſpeak of confidence upon priviledges and advantages of a Jew, no man hath more reaſon for it, more right unto it, than I:

5. * Circumciſed the eighth day, of the ſtock of Iſrael, of the tribe of Benjamin, an Hebrew of the Hebrews; as touching the Law, a Phriſee;]

5. Having been circumciſed at eight days old, as the Law preſcribes the native Jews, and ſo no proſelyte, my parents and anteceſſors Iſraelites, of an eminent tribe, the tribe of Bejamin, ſo dearly beloved by Jacob, both my parents of Abraham's, not of a Proſelyte's race, and in reſpect of my zeal to the Moſaical law, of the ſtricteſt ſect among the Jews;

6. Concerning zeal, perſecuting the Church; touching righteouſneſs which is * in the Law, blameleſs.]

6. And ſo zealous for the Law, that I perſecuted the Chriſtians with great rage and fury, as thinking them enemies to the Law; and for all legal obſervances, I never neglected any as long as I lived in that courſe.

7. But what things were gain to me, thoſe I accounted loſs for Chriſt.]

7. But whatever advantages I enjoyed as a Jew, I may part with well for Chriſt; and if they would keep me in the leaſt manner from embracing the Chriſtian Doctrine, they would be very far from being advantages to me, but loſſes rather.

8. Yea doubtleſs, and I count all things but loſs, for the excellency of the knowledg of Chriſt Jeſus my Lord, for whom I have ſuffered the loſs of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Chriſt,]

8. Yea and whatſoever I ſhould place any confidence in, I ſhould be a great loſer by it, in compariſon to the huge advantages of being a Chriſtian, for which I am content to be ſtript of all, and count them nothing worth, deſpiſe them all,, that I may have the favour of Chriſt, the higheſt of all privileges,

9. And be found in him not having mine own righteouſneſs, which is of the Law, but that which is of the faith of Chriſt, the righteouſneſs which is of God by faith:]

9. And be ingrafted into him, become a member of the Chriſtian Church, not pretending to juſtification by any performance of mine own, by the way of the Law, but by that other Evangelical courſe that is ſet down in the Goſpel, that from God's pardoning of ſins to all penitent believers.

10. That I may know him, and the power of his reſurrection, and the † fellowſhip of his ſufferings, being made conformable unto his death:]

10. The condition of which, or terms whereon we are juſtified, are theſe, to acknowledg Chriſt, and the virtue which his reſurrection hath toward raiſing me out of ſin, and the participation of his ſufferings (ſee note on Act. 2. e.) in my conforming my ſelf to his death, dying to ſin as he died to the world.

11. If by any means I might attain unto the reſurrection of the dead.

11. That ſo dying with him, or after his example, I may conſequently obtain to riſe with him to everlaſting life.

12. Not as though I had already † [c] attained, either were already [d] * perfect, but I [e] † follow after, if * that I may apprehend that for which alſo I [f] am apprehended of Chriſt Jeſus.]

12. Not as if I had already gotten my crown or reward, but I am, as the racer, in my purſuit on the way, running as hard as I can, in ſome hope that I may at length poſſibly catch or receive that prize; to which very end it is that Chriſt himſelf hath contended for me as for a prize of his, ſuffered infinite agonies on the croſs, that he may purchaſe unto himſelf a peculiar pious people, make me and others ſuch, who were far from being ſo. c. d. e. f.

13. Brethren, I count not my ſelf to have † apprehended; but this one thing I do, [g] * forgetting thoſe things which are behind, and reaching forth unto thoſe things which are before,]

13. Beloved Chriſtians, I do not think that I have my crown, or am ſo ſure of it that I cannot miſs it; but this one thing I do, without marking or conſidering how much of my race I have overcome and got through, I ſtretch as hard as I can to get to the end of that which is ſtill behind unfiniſhed, and ſo g.

14. † I preſs toward [h] the mark for the prize of the * high calling of God in Chriſt Jeſus.]

14. Having in my eye the goal, and the way marked out for me to run to it, I make as much ſpeed as I can poſſibly, that ſo I may get the crown which is by God in heaven propoſed to me in Chriſt Jeſus. h.

15. Let us therefore, as many as be perfect, † be thus minded; and if in any thing ye be otherwiſe minded, God ſhall reveal even this unto you.]

15. As many therefore of us as are ſincere in our Chriſtian courſe, the orthodox, faithful, pure Chriſtians, let us take care of this: And if any body differs in underſtanding any particular thing, there is no reaſon that ſuch a difference ſhould breed any diviſion among you, diſturb or break the peace which is moſt precious to be preſerved; for though at preſent ye are not, yet hereafter ye may, no doubt, be inſtructed in all that is neceſſary to you.

16. * Nevertheleſs, whereto we have already [i] attained, let us walk by [k] the ſame rule, let us mind the ſame thing.]

16. But, or, In the mean time, though we are advanced ſome before others, yet let not that hinder our unity or peace; Let us obſerve our way, that we run not over the lines, and to that end, that we run not one one way, another another, but that all take the ſame courſe chalk'd out before us, ſee note on c. 4. b. i. k.

17. Brethren, be followers together of me, and mark them which walk ſo, as ye have us for an enſample.]

17. All of you together follow my ſteps, and conſider and emulate thoſe that do ſo, that follow our pattern, our example, that ye may do likewiſe.

18. (For many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you even weeping, that they are the enemies of the croſs of Chriſt:]

18. For many there are now-adays abroad in the Church, of a moſt unhappy, unchriſtian temper, that will not ſuffer any thing for Chriſt, or venture that that may bring any affliction or ſuffering upon them (ſee note on Apoc. 2. b.) and therefore comply with the Jews to avoid perſecutions from them,

19. Whoſe end is deſtruction, whoſe God is their belly, and whoſe glory is in their ſhame, who mind earthly things.)]

19. But ſhall in fine gain little by it, but be deſtroyed with the Jews in their approaching ruin, 2 Pet. 2. 1. the Gnoſticks I mean, who mind nothing but their ſenſual appetites, boaſt of all thoſe things which they ought to be aſhamed of, their baſe luſts, &c. and ſo can never look up toward heaven.

Annotations on Chap. III.

a. Ὀκνηρὸν

V. 1. Grievous] What ὀκνηρὸς here ſignifies will be clear enough out of Phavorinus. Ὀκνῶν, ſaith he, is uſed by Homer for ὀκνηρῶς ἔχειν, and is τὸ μὴ κονεῖν, or ἐνεργεῖν, not to work, or do any thing: thence ὄκνος, ſaith he, ῥᾳθυμία, cowardiſe or idleneſs, and φυγὴ πόνων avoiding of labours, and φόβος μελλήσεως ἐνεργείας, fear of approaching action: and again of ὀκνεῖν, 'tis ἀλόγῳ καὶ ἀναιτίῳ ῥᾳθυμίᾳ καθέχεσθαι, ὅθεν καὶ ὀκνηρὸς, to be held or poſſeſs'd with an irrational and cauſleſs ſluggiſhneſs, and from thence the word ὀκνηρὸς comes, which here we ſpeak of. So then it ſignifies avoiding of danger or labour, fear of action when 'tis near, an unreaſonable and cauſleſs cowardiſe: and from thence it comes in Homer, ſaith he, generally or for the moſt part (ἡ πλείων χρῆσις) to ſignifie φόβος fear, cowardiſe, and ſo 'tis often uſed in Sophocles, πολλὴ ἡ χρῆσις παρὰ Σοφοκλεῖ, ſaith he, in this ſenſe. And therefore this will be a proper rendring of it, ὀκνηρὸν cowardly, and ſo the Context beſt bears alſo; That to write what he is about to write next, viz. thoſe cautions againſt the dogs, the evil workers, the conciſion (βλέπετε take heed of them, thrice in a verſe) οὐκ ὀκνηρὸν ἐμοὶ is not cowardiſe in the Apoſtle (that is the notion of ῥᾳθυμία) but yet ſafe for them, viz. to be ſo warned and admoniſhed by him.

b. κατατομὴν

V. 2. Conciſion] That κατατέμνειν ſignifies to cut, or rend aſunder, there is no queſtion, but the reaſon why the word κατατομὴ, conciſion or cutting aſunder, is here uſed for a ſort of men called before dogs and evil workers, is the only thing to be conſidered. That the Jews are called περιτομὴ the circumciſion, meaning by it thoſe that are circumciſed, is clear from many places, Gal. 2. 8, 9. Now the Gnoſticks, which were not all of them Jews, nor themſelves circumciſed, did yet comply with, and take upon them to be very zealous Jews, and would conſtrain all others to be circumciſed, Gal. 6. 12. Hence it is that Rev. 2. 9. they are expreſſed by λέγοντας ἑαυτοὺς Ἰουδαίους εἶναι, καὶ οὐκ εἰσὶν, they that ſay they are Jews, but are not; ſee Note on Rev. 2. e. And hereupon, becauſe theſe Judaizers that pretend ſuch zeal to the Law, and particularly for Circumciſion, do neither perform any part of the Law (but are evil workers here, the ſynagogue of Satan, Rev. 2. 9.) nor are circumciſed themſelves (οὐδὲ περιτεμνόμενοι, Gal. 6. 13.) and all that they do is, as dogs, to tear and rend all they come near, and cut aſunder the unity of the Church, (which comes no nearer true Judaiſm than dogs and ſchiſmaticks do to circumciſion) therefore by an elegance and ſarcaſm the Apoſtle calls them κατατομὴ conciſion, or cutting aſunder, they that, inſtead of circumciſing themſelves, cut aſunder the Church of Chriſt. So ſaith Theophylact, τὴν ἐκκλησίαν ἐπειρῶντο κατατέμνειν, they endeavoured to cut aſunder the Church of Chriſt. In oppoſition to whom follows ἡμεῖς γάρ ἐσμεν ἡ περιτομὴ for we are the circumciſion: we that are the true orthodox believers are the true circumciſion, the true children of Abraham, that actually perform that to which Circumciſion was deſigned to engage his poſterity; and they that pretend thus to be Jews and Chriſtians, but are not, are κατατομὴ more truly than περιτομὴ, the conciſion, than the circumciſion.

c. λαμβάνειν

V. 12. Attained] What λαμβάνειν ſignifies among the agoniſtical writers, hath been formerly noted, the receiving the reward that is due to the conquerour; ſee Note on Rom. 9. l. and 1 Cor. 9. f. and accordingly it is uſed of him that hath finiſhed his race and courſe, conquered and gained the prize, although he have not yet received it; and ſo 'tis here taken, οὐχ ὅτι ἤδη ἔλαβον, not that I have finiſhed my courſe, or that my crown is ſo immutable and irreverſibly yet aſſigned me (for that he was not yet in heaven, he needed not have ſaid, 'twas ſufficiently known to all) as that I ſhould ſpeak confidently of it: That which is fitter for me to entertain my ſelf with, is, to uſe all diligence that I miſcarry not.

d. τετελείωμαι

Ib. Perfect] The word τετελείωμαι is an agoniſtical word, and ſignifies likewiſe the being crowned, or receiving the reward. So in Gregory Nyſſen, ſpeaking of the Martyrs, the phraſe uſed is τελείωσις ἀθλητῶν (in the ſame ſenſe that we had καθάιρεσις, 2 Cor. 13. 10.) agreeable to the uſe of τέλεια νικητήρια, perfect prizes in the Agones. For of their prizes there were ſome more valuable than others, the meaner, ſuch as the tripodes and ſhields and cups, but the more eſteemed, the crowns, which had nothing of mean profit in them, but only the glory and renown of victory, the crowns being made but of leaves only, as hath been formerly ſaid. Now the more illuſtrious were called τέλεια νικητήρια the perfect rewards or prizes; and to this, ſaith Peter Faber, refers that of S. James c. 1. 17. where πᾶσα δόσις ἀγαθὴ δόσις ἀγαθὴ is every good donative, parallel to thoſe of the meaner firſt kind of reward, and πᾶν δώρημα τέλειον, this more illuſtrious of a crown. And proportionably to this, τρέχειν will be to receive this crown. So Heb. 11. 40. ſpeaking of the Saints of the Old Teſtament, which, ſaith he, were afflicted in this life, and received not perſonally the completion of the promiſes that were made unto them, but received them by faith then, and we their poſterity now really; and that he there calls τελειωθῶσι, to be perfected, all one with κομίζεσθαι τὴν ἐπαγγελίαν, receiving the promiſe, ver. 39. for which Oecumenius puts, στεφανωθῶσι, καὶ πάντες ἀγαθῶν ἀπολαβεῖν, to be crowned, and receive the perfection of good things. So Heb. 2. 10. God was pleaſed τελειῶσαι τὸν ἀρχηγὸν σωτηρίας, to crown, or conſummate, the captain of our ſalvation (that hath reſcued us out of the ſins and hazards of this life) διὰ παθημάτων, by ſufferings. So Heb. 12. 23. δικαίων τετελειωμένων, the juſt that have received their reward. Thus the Hebrew word עקב ſignifies both τέλος an end, and βραβεῖον a reward. In the former ſenſe 'tis Pſal. 119. 33. I will keep it עקב (underſtanding ל) in finem, where the Chaldee paraphraſt reads עד גמירה even to the conſummation, and v. 112. עד סופה even to the end. In the ſecond ſenſe it is Pſal. 19. 11. in the keeping of them there is עקב reward, the Greek reads ἀνταπόδοσις, retribution. This is almoſt † S. Chryſoſtom's note, παρ' Ἑβραίοις τὸ τέλος καὶ ἡ νίκη διὰ μιᾶς σημαίνεται λέξεως, end and victory are by the Hebrews expreſs'd by the ſame word; and thence it is, ſaith he, that in ſome Pſalms inſtead of εἰς τέλος in finem, the inſcription is Νικοποιῷ τέλος to him that overcomes. Thus Rom. 6. 21. τέλος is put for reward, the ſame with ὀψώνια v. 23. and ſo 1 Pet. 1. 9. τέλος πίστεως, the reward of our faith, and Heb. 6. 8. τέλος εἰς καῦσιν, reward to be burnt. Of another notion of this word, ſee Heb. 5. c.

† on Job 23.

e. Διώκειν

Ib. Follow after] Διώκειν is the word that expreſſes the contention ἐν δρόμῳ in the race, and it ſignifies to endeavour to get before thoſe that are before us, to labour and ſtretch, ἵνα καταλάβω that he may get the prize by being foremoſt.

f. καταλήφθην

Ib. Am apprehended] The word καταλήφθην here is ſtill in the agoniſtical ſenſe, and being now applied to Chriſt, it ſignifies moſt elegantly, that Chriſt doth, as in a race, contend and ſtrive, and that for no other reward that he hath in his eye, but only the faithful diſciple, whom when he converts and brings to repentance, he conceives himſelf to have attained his reward or crown; and ſo we are, as it were, the crown that is caught and wore by him, as Epheſ. 1. 11. we are ſaid κληρωθῆναι, that is, to be the κλῆρος or portion which he hath for his patrimony, as it were, or as he is ſaid to purchaſe λαὸν, a people a people, Tit. 2. 14. and as the Church, 1 Pet. 2. 9. is ſaid to be λαὸς εἰς περιποίησιν, a people purchaſed, or acquired, by him, Act. 20. 23.

g. ἐπιλανθάνομαι τὰ ὀπίσω

V. 13. Forgetting thoſe things which are behind] This phraſe of ἐπιλανθανόμενος τὰ ὀπίσω, not looking at that which is behind, or paſs'd, refers likewiſe to the cuſtom of the racer, who doth not uſe to ſtand ſtill, and look behind him, to ſee either how much of his journey he is paſs'd, or how far the reſt are behind him, (for this is the ſluggard's trick) but ſets bodily to his buſineſs, to overtake and outrun all that are before, and to get through the remainder of his race, and that is ἐπεκτείνεσθαι τοῖς ἔμπροσθεν, to ſtretch himſelf as vigorouſly as he can (for ſo ſaith Heſychius, Ἐπέκτασις, ἡ σπουδὴ πολὺ τάσις) to get to the goal firſt. This hath Horace expreſſed diſtinctly in his deſcription of a racer in a chariot, Serm. l. 1. Satyr. 1.

Ut cùm carceribus miſſos rapit ungula currus,
Inſtat equis auriga ſuos vincentibus, illum
Præteritum temnens, extremos inter euntem.

The ruler of the chariot preſſeth to overtake thoſe horſes that are before his, but contemns and never looks after him that is behind, and out-run by him.

h. κατὰ σκοπὸν εἰς βραβεῖον

V. 14. The mark] That σκοπὸς ſignifies the goal, hath been ſaid already, Note on 1 Cor. 9. g. and that βραβεῖον is the prize, or crown, which either hung over the goal, or was given the conqueror by the Judges: and ſo the meaning of κατὰ σκοπὸν εἰς βραβεῖον is, that the racer takes the goal in the way to the crown, firſt conquers, and then is rewarded, the goal being the concluſion of the race, but the way to the crown.

i. φθάνειν

V. 16. Attained] That φθάνειν is an Agoniſtical word, and ſignifies to be foremoſt in the race, ſee Note on Rom. 9. d. and 2 Cor. 10. b. and ſo εἰς ὃ ἐφθάσαμεν will ſignifie, In as much as we are gotten before other men in the race, have attained ſome degree of ſpiritual proficiency.

k. κανὼν

Ib. The ſame rule] What κανὼν in the ſtadia ſignifies, ſee Note on 1 Cor. 9. g. and 2 Cor. 10. d. viz. the white line that marked out the path wherein they were to run, and ſo αὐτῷ στοιχεῖν κανόνι here is, to go or run by the ſame line, in that path, never ſtepping over, or out of it, leſt they loſe all. And thus are they moſt concerned to do that are before other men, and if they have but this one care, are not likely to miſcarry by any thing elſe. That which is moſt contradictory to this in our Chriſtian race, is, dividing into factions and ſides, peace, unity, and charity being the white within which they are commanded to walk; and therefore it follows that they ſhould τὸ αὐτὸ φρονεῖν mind the ſame thing, live in unity and amity, run all the ſame way to the ſame end, and be συμμιμηταὶ v. 17 all fellow-followers of the Apoſtle.

l. αὐτῷ κανόνι

V. 20. Converſation] Πολίτευμα from πολῖται citizens is literally citizenſhip, and denotes a municipium, which is the ſtate and condition of thoſe who dwelling out of the city have yet the jus civitatis Romanæ, the privileges of the city of Rome belonging to them. Thus ſaith Cicero de Legib. l. 2. Omnibus municipibus duas eſſe patrias, unam naturæ, alteram juris, Catonis exemplo, qui Tuſculi natus in populi Romani ſocietatem ſuſceptus eſt, All ſuch have two countries, one of nature, the other of law, after Cato's example, who being born at Tuſculum, was received into the ſociety of the people of Rome. And Tacitus, ibi municipes fiunt, ubi in civitatem recepti. But this ſo, that theſe ſhall differ from thoſe that had their habitation in the city, who alone might be choſen to offices in it. Thus it is πολιτεία Act. 22. 28. (by which Heſychius expounds πολίτευμα) the privilege of being a free-man of Rome, belonging to one that lived in Judæa, and that bought by the χιλιαρχὸς there, but by birth belonging to S. Paul. And thus is the Chriſtian here on earth, συμπολίτης τῶν ἁγίων, Epheſ. 2. 19. a fellow-citizen of the ſaints, not ξένος or πάροικος, a ſtranger or ſojourner, but a free man, or municeps of heaven; though while he dwells here, he be in an inferiour condition to them who have domicilium in urbe, the ſaints that are in heaven, who alone are capable of reigning with God. See Act. 22. d.

CHAP. IV.

Paraphraſe.

1. THerefore, my brethren, dearly beloved and longed for, my joy and crown, ſo ſtand faſt in the Lord, my dearly beloved.

1. Wherefore, my beloved brethren, ſo paſſionately affected by me, whoſe good is matter of all joy and felicity to me, according to theſe former directions of peace, chap. 3. 15. continue ſtedfaſt in the faith, I beſeech you.

* Syntyches Συντύχην

2. I beſeech Euodias, and beſeech * Syntyche, that they be of the ſame mind in the Lord.]

2. And particularly I beſeech Euodias and Syntyches to preſerve peace, and not to be contentious and unquiet.

† or, Yea I beſeech, for the King's MS. reads Ναὶ

3. † And I intreat thee alſo, true yoke-fellow, help thoſe women which * laboured with me in the Goſpel, with Clement alſo, and with other my fellow-labourers, whoſe names are in the [a] book of life.]

3. Yea I earneſtly beſeech thee, Epaphroditus, Biſhop of Philippi, (bearer of this Epiſtle) and ſo my fellow-labourer in the Goſpel, which haſt ſhewed thy ſelf to be ſincerely what thou oughteſt to be, take care of and relieve thoſe women which for their zeal in the Goſpel have ſuffered perſecutions (ſee Note on 1 Theſſ. 2. b.) with me, or in the ſame manner as I have done, and ſo likewiſe Clemens, and all that have undertaken the ſame task with me in preaching the Goſpel to the Gentiles, thoſe pious good men, faithful ſervants of Chriſt.

* combated or contended συνήθλησάν

4. Rejoice in the Lord alway, and again I ſay rejoice.]

4. Whatever afflictions befall you in your ſervice of Chriſt, they are matter of continual rejoicing to you, and not any way of grief.

† gentleneſs τὸ ἐπιεικὲς

5. Let your † moderation be known unto all men: The Lord is at hand.]

5. And therefore let your patient enduring of them (ſee Note on 2 Cor. 10. a.) be diſcernible to all; and to this you may receive encouragement, by conſidering that ye are not likely to expect long: The famous coming of Chriſt in judgment viſibly to puniſh his crucifiers, and to ſhorten the power of the perſecutors, and reſcue all faithful patient ſufferers out of their hands all the world over, in Greece as well as Judæa, is now near approaching: ſee Heb. 10. 37.

6. Be careful for nothing, but in every thing by prayer and ſupplication with thankſgiving let your requeſts be made known unto God.]

6. And for this your reſcue, it will not at all be uſeful, that ye be ſolicitous or anxious how to deliver your ſelves; do but recommend your eſtate to God in prayer ardently and importunately, rendring him your acknowledgments for all the mercies received from him, (even for your preſent afflictions, with Job, ſee v. 4.) and that is all that belongs to you.

7. And the [b] peace of God, which paſſeth all underſtanding, ſhall keep your hearts and * minds through Chriſt Jeſus.]

* thoughts νοήματα

7. And this Chriſtian unity and peaceable-mindedneſs bequeathed to all by Chriſt (and ſo recommended to you c. 3. 1, &c. and c. 3. 15, &c. and here v. 3.) which is to be preferred before all deep (eſpecially pretended) knowledge, ſhall be an excellent armature to keep you from all heretical practices and doctrines.

† venerable, σεμνὰ

8. Finally, brethren, whatſoever things are true, whatſoever things are † honeſt, whatſoever things are juſt, whatſoever things are pure, whatſoever things are lovely, whatſoever things are of good report; If there be any virtue, if there be any praiſe, think on theſe things]

8. And to conclude, I conjure you, as you have any care of what is vertuous or commendable, that ye ſo far remember and conſider what I have now ſaid to you, that ye adhere to the truth of doctrine, and in your practice do nothing but what is agreeable to gravity and ſobriety, to exact juſtice, and purity or chaſtity, and farther ſuperadd that care of abounding in all Chriſtian vertue, that whatſoever is moſt deſirable and amiable in the eyes of men, whatſoever moſt venerably thought and ſpoken of, that ye will propoſe to your ſelves as the pitch to be aſpired unto by you.

9. Thoſe things which ye have both learned and received, and heard and ſeen in me, do: and the God of peace ſhall be with you.]

9. What both by my doctrine and practice hath been inſtilled into you, ſee ye be careful to perform; meaning by my doctrine, 1. what I taught in the firſt preaching the Goſpel to you, 2. what I have farther revealed in the confirming you, and 3. what in familiar diſcourſes I have let fall to you. And if thus ye do, that God which is ſuch a lover of peace and amity, will abide with you and direct and proſper you in all things.

10. It was matter of great Chriſtian joy to me, and thankſgiving to God, that now after ſome decay ye have revived your liberality toward me, wherein I ſuppoſe formerly ye failed not, but only wanted ability of ſhewing it.

10. But I rejoiced in the Lord greatly that now at the laſt * your care of me hath [c] flouriſhed again, wherein ye were alſo careful, but ye † lacked [d] opportunity.]

11. Which I ſay, not in reſpect of any eminent want that I was in at the coming of Epaphroditus (ſee Note on Mar. 12. b.) for Chriſtianity hath taught me (and I thank God I am able to do it) to be very well ſatisfied with my condition, whatever it is.

11. Not that I ſpeak in reſpect of want: for I have learned in what ſtate ſoever I am therewith to be content.]

12. Nay, I can contentedly bear a yet lower condition than that which hitherto I have been in: And yet the abundance which now I have by your liberality, I can make uſe of to the glory of God. It is a ſpecial part of that learning with which Chriſtianity hath imbued me, to be unconcerned in theſe outward things of plenty and want, and that too, whatſoever the circumſtances are, at what time ſoever, and in what ſort of adverſity ſoever I am exerciſed.

12. I know both how to be abaſed, and I know how to abound: * every where, and in all things I am † inſtructed both to be full and to be hungry, both to abound and to ſuffer need.]

13. 'Tis the great mercy of Chriſt which hath thus enabled me; but thanks be to him, I am able to do all this (ſee 1 Cor. 13. Note i.) without much difficulty.

13. I can do all things through Chriſt which ſtrengtheneth me.]

14. Yet doth not this at all leſſen your kindneſs or charity in ſending me that ſupply by Epaphroditus, when I was in ſome ſtraights.

14. Notwithſtanding ye have well done that ye did communicate with my affliction.]

15. And indeed this was no new thing in you, for at my firſt preaching the Goſpel among you, when, after I had made an end, I was departing out of your region, you continued ſo mindful of me, as to ſend me contributions, and having received of me ſpiritual things, communicated to me your carnal things, which no other Church but you had then done.

15. Now ye Philippians know alſo that in the beginning of the Goſpel, when I departed from Macedonia, no Church * communicated with me, as concerning giving and receiving, but ye only.]

16. For firſt while I was at Theſſalonica, another eminent Chriſtian city of Macedonia, and ſince I came thence, more than once, you made a collection and ſent it to me.

16. For * even in Theſſalonica ye ſent once and again to my neceſſity.]

17. And that I thus commend you, v. 14. it is not by that means to draw any more from you, that I may have the more, but to give you occaſion of exerciſing your liberality, the more acts of which there are, the richer ſhall your reward be which it will bring you in from God.

17. Not † becauſe I * deſire a gift: but I deſire fruit that may abound to your account.]

18. What you ſent by Epaphroditus I received, and here ſign my acquittance for it, (ſee Note on Mar. 14. d.) and thereby I have all abundance and plenty, having received your alms and charity, which under the Goſpel is the prime kind of offering, which God accepts and receives, and which ſupplies the place both of incenſe and of ſacrifice.

18. But I have all, and abound, I am full, having received of Epaphroditus the things which were ſent from you, [e] an odour of a ſweet ſmell, a ſacrifice acceptable, well pleaſing to God.]

19. And you will have no reaſon to repent of your liberality, for God, that looks on it as given to him, is both able and willing to ſupply this and all other your wants (through Chriſt Jeſus, by whom he diſpenſes all his gifts to you) to make you the richer by having been ſo charitable, and to pour out all his other graces on you.

19. But my God ſhall ſupply all your need according to his riches in glory, by Chriſt Jeſus.]

20. Now to him who, as he is our God, ſo is he our Father alſo, be all glory aſcribed for ever and ever. Amen.

20. † Now unto God and our father be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

21. My love I preſent to every Chriſtian among you. All the believers that are conſtantly with me, Titus, Linus, Clemens, &c. ſalute you.

21. Salute every ſaint in Chriſt Jeſus: the brethren which are with me greet you.]

22. Nay all the Chriſtians in Rome, but eſpecially they that belong to the Emperor's family, the ſervants of his court, ſalute you.

22. All the ſaints ſalute you, chiefly they that are of Cæſar's houſhold.]

23. The grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt be with you all. Amen.

It was written to the Philippians from Rome by Epaphroditus.

Annotations on Chap. IV.

V. 3. Book of life] The Book of life refers to the cuſtom of well-ordered cities, which kept regiſters containing all the names of the citizens, out of which as Apoſtates and fugitives and infamous perſons were raſed (and agreeably there is mention of blotting out of names out of God's book, Rev. 3. 5.) ſo they that did continue obedient, orderly citizens, their names were ſtill continued in. Accordingly life ſignifying ſpiritual life here, (the ſtate of grace and favour of God, the inchoation of that future eternal life) the Book of this life is the regiſter of all ſincere Chriſtians, (as the book of the living in the Pſalmiſt is the number of men that live in this world) from which they are expunged that ceaſe to continue ſuch. (This is expreſſed in another like phraſe Rev. 3. 12. I will write on him the name of the city of my God, and new Jeruſalem.) And as this was ordinary in cities, ſo was it every where in armies, into which whoſoever entred, he had his name taken, and put into the muſter roll. And thus the life of every Chriſtian, but eſpecially of thoſe that labour in the word and doctrine, being a warfare, the phraſe is ordinarily uſed, in all authors, of all Chriſtians. Thus in Cyril's κεφαλ. p. 1. ſpeaking to thoſe that were baptized, ὀνομαλογεσία τέως ὑμῖν γέγονε, καὶ στρατείας κλῆσις, καὶ νυμφαγωγίας λαμπάδες, καὶ ἐφοδίου πολιτείας ἐπιθυμία, καὶ πεποίθησις ἀγαθὴ, καὶ ἐλπὶς ἐπακολουθοῦσα. Where the writing of their names, and, which is all one, the calling to the militia, are uſed to ſet down the ſtate of a Chriſtian; as alſo thoſe other expreſſions of the lamps, for fetching of the bridegroom, and deſire of the heavenly citizenſhip, the good purpoſe, and the conſequent hope. And as of all Chriſtians, ſo in a more eminent manner of the Apoſtles and their fellow-labourers here 'tis affirmed, that their names were written in the book of life, ἐν τῇ γνώσει καὶ κρίσει Θεοῦ, in the knowledge and judgment of God, ſaith Theophylact, (or elſe, ἤδη ἐκ ζωὴν αὐτοῖς ἐπεψηφίσατο ἐνθεῦθεν, that from thence God had already adjudged life to them, as when it is ſaid, he that believeth not is condemned already, and ſo inſcribed in the book of death,) either as actual ſoldiers in the Chriſtian camp or Church (as the Apoſtles called themſelves) or as thoſe that had right to that ſuperiour heavenly citizenſhip, to which all labourers had title, and conſequently all theſe συνεργοὶ or fellow-labourers of S. Paul. Which at that preſent was perfectly true of them, though afterward Demas one of them, Col. 4. 14. Philemon 24. forſook the imployment 2 Tim. 4. 10. And as of cities and armies, ſo in families the phraſe and cuſtom is uſed, to which that of Ulyſſes in Homer refers,

——— Τέκνα ἐν Διὸς αὐλῇ,
His Name was in Jupiter's court, that is, he was born of a Goddeſs; ſee Note on Rev. 3. b.

V. 7. Peace of God] That by peace is meant the ſtudy of preſerving peace among men, appears Gal. 5. 22. where εἰρήνη peace is ſet among the fruits of the Spirit, where conſequently it muſt not be that good of peace, which is a felicity but no vertue, (no effect or fruit of God's ſanctifying Spirit) but the peaceable-mindedneſs, deſire and purſuit of peace, called in other places διώκειν εἰρήνην, purſuing peace, and εἰρηνεύειν having peace, Rom. 13. 18. Accordingly the peace of God, Col. 3. 15. is (not God's peace or reconciliation toward us, but) that peaceableneſs which God hath commanded and bequeathed to us. And accordingly there it follows εἰς ἣν ἐκλήθητε, to which ye are called, which determins it to be a duty of ours. And then 'tis not improbable, but this may be the notion of εἰρήνη τοῦ Θεοῦ, the peace of God, or, as the King's MS. reads, Χριστοῦ of Chriſt, in this place alſo. That the Apoſtle is exhorting them to peace and

and unity, is apparent ch. 3. where the dogs that rend, the evil workers that defile, the concision, that (under pretence of kindneſs to the Moſaical Law) cut and tear all to pieces, and are to be look'd to, and avoided in that Church, are certainly the Gnoſtick hereticks v. 2. Againſt theſe he ſets himſelf in the remainder of that chapter, and concludes v. 15. As many therefore as are perfect, let us be of this mind, and εἴ τι ἑτέρως φρονεῖτε, if in any thing ye be otherwiſe minded, that is, if in any particular there be any difference of opinion in any among you, God ſhall reveal even this unto you: that is, there is no reaſon that ſuch a difference ſhould breed any diviſion, deſtroy that unity and peace which is to be preſerved among you; for, though at preſent ye do not, yet upon your prayers to God, and applying your ſelves to uſe of this means, no doubt ye ſhall receive inſtructions from him by the Apoſtles, &c. in all that is neceſſary for you: πλὴν εἰς ὃ ἐφθάσαμεν, &c. v. 16. But, or, In the mean, as far as we are advanced, ſome before other, let not that hinder our unity and peace, let us (all, both thoſe that are foremoſt, and that are not ſo forward) walk by the ſame rule, and mind the ſame thing: All for peace and unity ſtill, and ſo on to the end, in advice to adhere to thoſe that continue in the doctrine he had taught them, and avoid all hereticks. And then begins this chapter, Wherefore my brethren, &c. ſo ſtand in the Lord, that is, according to theſe former directions, ſtand, in oppoſition to apoſtatizing, or falling off, and ſo ſtand, preſerve this peace, all this while exhorted to, and v. 2. I beſeech, or exhort, Euodias and Syntyches τὸ αὐτὸ φρονεῖν Κυρίῳ, to mind the ſame thing in the Lord, that is, to preſerve this peace of God, to live in the unity of the Goſpel. And then the exhortation, v. 4, 5, 6. belonging to that great Chriſtian duty of conſtancy, and rejoicing in prayer to God, inſtead of ſolicitude (here, as Mat. 10. 19. ſeaſonably forbidden) in reſpect of the preſent preſſures, (and all this inforced with the mention of the near approach of Chriſt's coming to deſtroy the perſecuters, and reſcue the faithful) is directly deſigned to fortifie them againſt the Gnoſtick compliances, and ſo is not alien from this matter. After all which follows this of ἡ εἰρήνη τοῦ Θεοῦ, that if they take this courſe preſcribed, this peace of God, by Chriſt commanded, (and to which the Apoſtle had all this while ſo ſolicitouſly exhorted them) would guard and fortifie their hearts (the principles of action and practice) and (νοήματα) their underſtandings, which were the parts ſubject to errors, in Chriſt Jeſus, preſerve them in the right way againſt all the errors and temptations of thoſe times. The only remaining difficulty is, what is meant by this Epithet, added to the peace of God, ὑπερέχουσα πάντα νοῦν, that ſurpaſſeth all underſtanding; which will alſo be intelligible by what hath been premiſed. For as they that did τι ἑτέρως φρονεῖν, c. 2. 15. that is, differed ſomewhat in opinion from others, were obliged v. 16. not to diſturb the peace of the Church for that, but to expect till God ſhould farther reveal or inſtruct them, (which concludes, that peace was more excellent and valuable than that exact knowledge or underſtanding of all things, which might be revealed, and much more than the pretended knowlege and underſtanding of the Gnoſticks) ſo it is moſt fitly here ſaid, that this love and care of preſerving that peace, preſcribed by God and Chriſt, is to be preferred before any underſtanding that either ſome were thought to want, or others to abound in. As for the ordinary notion which is had of this phraſe, for quiet and ſerenity of mind, as a ſpecial mercy of God, though that may be thought agreeable enough to the not caring, &c. v. 6. yet firſt, it will be hard to find any place where that is the notion of the peace of God (though of peace and reſt it is.) As for that of my peace Joh. 14. 27. ſee that place. And then ſecondly, though the no-ſolicitude do here come as an attendant on the precedent rejoicing in afflictions (and that a ſeaſonable means to keep from breaking the unity of the Church, and joining with the heretical Gnoſticks) yet 'tis not neceſſary that this concluding form, The peace of God, &c. ſhould be reſtrained to this laſt particular of no-ſolicitude, which came in but incidentally, but may rather be applied to the grand matter of the Epiſtle, that of preſerving of peace in the Church.

V. 10. Flouriſhed again] That ἀναθάλλειν which ſignifies to flouriſh, or revive, may be here uſed Actively to make revive, or flouriſh again, may appear firſt by analogy with other words of the ſame nature: ſo θριαμβεύειν to triumph, is uſed in the ſenſe of the conjugation Hiphil to make triumph, 2 Cor. 2. 14. So ἀνατέλλειν to ariſe, is Mat. 5. 45. to make ariſe; ſee more Note on Mar. 14. f. And thus is this word clearly uſed Ezek. 17. 24. ἀναθάλλω ξύλον ξηρὸν I make the dry tree to flouriſh. And ſo S. Chryſoſtom ſeems to underſtand, and uſe the word in this place, οὐ γὰρ ὀλίγον μόχθον τὸ ἀνθῆσαι ἀναθῆλαι, For it is no ſmall thing to make things that are withered grow green, and flouriſh again.

Ib. Lacked opportunity] That ἠκαιρεῖσθε here ſignifies, as we have rendred it, not wanted opportunity, but ability, is the expreſs affirmation of S. Chryſoſtom, οὐκ εἴχετε, ſaith he, ἐν χερσὶν, οὐδὲ ἐν ἀφθονίᾳ ἦτε. Τοῦτο γάρ ἐστιν, Ἠκαιρεῖσθε ὑμεῖς, Ye had not in your hands, or power, neither were you in plenty. For that is the meaning of this word. And this, ſaith he and Theophylact, ἀπὸ κοινῆς συνηθείας, taken from common uſe of ſpeech, as when we ſay, στενοχωρία μοι ἐπῆλθε, καιρὸς καιρὸς νῦν ἐστι, ſome ſtreights have come on me, it is now an ill ſeaſon with me. So Gal. 6. 10. ὡς καιρὸν ἔχομεν, not, as we have opportunity, but, as we have ability, (all one with τὰ ἐνόντα δότε ἐλεημοσύνην, Luke 11. 41.) For indeed that is an opportunity, when the wants of others and our plenty meet together. Of this uſe of theſe words we have frequent example among Authors. So for the ſimple καιρὸς Nazienzen περὶ φιλοσοφίας, Τί δὲ μὴ βοηθοῦμεν τῇ φύσει καιρὸν ἔχοντες; Why do we not help our common nature, that is, other men, having ability? (for if we have not ability, the opportunity of another's want lays no obligation upon us.) And accordingly it follows there, μὴ μοι γένοιτο πλουτεῖν τούτων ἐπιθυμοῦντι, God forbid I ſhould have wealth and they want; where πλουτεῖν to have wealth is all one with καιρὸν ἔχειν, precedent. So Plutarch in the Apophthegms of Kings, mentions it as a ſpeech of Philip, (on occaſion of being told that he could not encamp in ſuch a place, where he deſired, becauſe there was no food for the cattel) οὕτω ἡμῖν ὁ βίος, εἰ πρὸς τὰ τῶν ὄνων καιρὸν ὀφείλομεν ζῆν; What a life is our's, if we muſt live according to the proviſion of the aſſes? ad id quod commodum eſt aſinis, ſaith Is. Caſaubon. So in Xenophon, ὑπὲρ τὸ καιρὸν πίμπλασθαι to be filled above plenty. So thoſe that are well provided for, he calls ἐπικαιρεῖους. So Pindar. in Olymp. Πλούτου ἀρεταῖς δεδαιδαλμένοις φέρει πάντα καὶ τὸ καιρόν, Riches embroidered or ſprinkled, varigated with vertues, give ability of many things. So in Polybius l. 10. ſpeaking of the King of Perſia his court at Echatana, it demonſtrates, ſaith he, by the coſtlineſs of it, τῇ μεγάλῃ τῶν ἐξ ἀρχῆς καταβαλλομένων εὐκαιρίαν, the great plenty of them that firſt built it, and lib. 1. κατὰ τὰς τῶν βίων εὐκαιρίας, according to their ſubſtance, or abilities. And then if εὐκαιρία ſignifie ability, or ſufficience, ἀκαιρία muſt needs be want of ability; and ſo the Syriack renders here, you were not ſufficient. See Andr. Downes on Saint Chryſoſtom on Gal. 6. p. 760. and on this place, where he confirms this notion of the word by authorities.

V. 18. An odour of a ſweet ſmell] There were two Altars in the Temple of the Jews, θυμιατήριον the altar of incenſe, within the Temple, and θυσιαστήριον the altar of ſacrifice, without in the court. On theſe two were offered all things that were offered to God; and, under theſe two heads, of Incenſe and burnt-offering, are almsdeeds or works of charity here ſet down, as being the prime things now under the Goſpel, to obtain God's favour and acceptation.

THE

a. [a] Coloſſe was a city in Phrygia, not far from Laodicea and Hierapolis, in the Lydian or Proconſular Aſia. To theſe S. Paul had not perſonally preached the Goſpel, nor ſo much as been among them, c. 2. 1. but had ſent Epaphras his diſciple to them, and he had converted them to the Faith, c. 1. 7. This Epaphras was at the writing of this Epiſtle (from Rome, about the year of Chriſt 59.) a fellow-priſoner of S. Paul there, Philem. 23. And by him (as an eye-witneſs and principal actor in it) S. Paul being advertiſed of the reception of Chriſtianity among them, and the agreeableneſs of their actions to their faith, ſends them this Epiſtle of conſolation, to ſtrengthen and confirm them: and the tenure and ſubject (and oft-times the expreſſions) of it, is muchwhat the ſame as that to the Epheſians had been, and we may thence conclude it to have been written near upon the ſame time with that.

Κολοσσαεῖς.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. I.

1. PAUL an Apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt, by the will of God, and Timotheus our brother,

2. To the ſaints and faithful brethren in Chriſt which are at Coloſſe: Grace be unto you, and peace from God our father, and from the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

3. We constantly render God thanks for you, that by his gtace ye have embraced the Goſpel of his ſon Jeſus Chriſt, and in all our offices of devotion we remember you in our prayers,

3. We give thanks * to God and the Father of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, praying always for you,] * to the God and father τῷ Θεῷ καὶ πατρὶ

4. To which we are the more incited by hearing the news as of your faith, ſo of your charity alſo and liberality extended to the Chriſtians every where;

4. † Since we heard of your faith in Chriſt Jeſus, and of the love which ye have to all the ſaints;]

† Hearing, or, Having heard Ἀκούσαντες

5. That being an effect of your Chriſtian hope, which being faſtened on a rich treaſure in heaven, the reward of all your good works, makes you very liberal of your earthy treaſure, and that is fully agreeable to the doctrine of the Goſpel of Chriſt, Mat. 6. 20.

5. For the hope which is laid up for you in heaven, whereof ye heard before in the word * of the truth of the Goſpel:]

* of the Goſpel of truth, τοῦ εὐαγγελίου τῆς ἀληθείας

6. Which Goſpel as it hath been preached, and brings forth this fruit among you, and hath done ſo from the time of the firſt preaching of it, (ſee Note on Heb. 13. d.) ſo all the world over, where it is preached and received into honeſt hearts, it brings forth the ſame fruit, and by doing ſo attracts multitudes to the profeſſion.

6. Which is come unto you, as † it is in all the world, and bringeth forth fruit, as it doth alſo in you, ſince the day ye heard of it, and * knew the grace of God in truth.]

† alſo through all the world, or, through all the world it bears fruit, and increaſes, even— for the King's MS. reads ἐν παντὶ τῷ κόσμῳ ἐστὶ καρποφορούμενον καὶ αὐξανόμενον καθὼς — * acknowledged the grace of God in the truth, ἐπέγνωτε τὴν χάριν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐν τῇ ἀληθείᾳ.

7. This indeed was according to that doctrine preached to you by Epaphras, whom we ſent to publiſh the Goſpel unto you, and he hath faithfully diſcharged his duty toward you;

7. As ye alſo learned of Epaphras our dear fellow-Servant, who is for you a faithful miniſter of Chriſt;]

8. And hath given me an account of your ready receiving the faith, and the effect of that, your Chriſtian charity.

8. Who alſo declared unto us your love in the ſpirit.]

9. abound to all perfection of divine knowledge both in underſtanding the myſteries of Chriſtianity, and in ordering and regulating your lives according to the rules thereof.

9. For this cauſe we alſo, ſince the day we heard it, do not ceaſe to pray for you, and to deſire that ye might [be filled with the † knowledge of his will, in all wiſdom and ſpiritual * underſtanding:]

† acknowledgment ἐπίγνωσιν

* prudence σοφίᾳ

10. That your behaviour may be ſuch as is agreeable to the divine promiſes and precepts of the Goſpel, perfectly ſuch as God will accept of, upon all occaſions bringing forth the fruit of Chriſtian living, and by that means daily increaſing in divine knowledge, which as it is it ſelf the practice of all vertue, ſo doth it by daily action grow into a habit, every day more perfect and complete.

10. That ye might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleaſing, being fruitful in every good work, and increaſing † in the knowledge of God;]

† to the acknowledgment of God, εἰς ἐπίγνωσιν

11. To which it is conſequent, that through the grace and divine power of God ye ſhall be enabled to continue to the end, and bear whatever afflictions and perſecutions ye meet with in your Chriſtian courſe, not only patiently, but chearfully.

11. Strengthned with all might according to his glorious power, unto all patience, and long-ſufferance with joyfulneſs:]

12. And even acknowledging it with thankſgiving as a ſpecial mercy and favour of God's, that hath enabled us to bear perſecutions and afflictions, and ſo to have our part in that inheritance which is allowed Chriſtians under the Goſpel, that is, to be perſecuted here, and rewarded eternally.

12. Giving thanks unto the Father, which hath * made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the ſaints in light:]

* fitted us for the portion ἱκανώσαντι ἡμᾶς εἰς τὴν μερίδα

13. That God, I ſay, who hath reſcued you from a ſtate of ignorance and heatheniſm, and made you heirs of everlaſting glory, to which he will bring you in the ſame method and manner as he hath brought his own deareſt ſon (who was firſt crucified, then glorified.)

13. Who hath delivered us from the power of darkneſs, and hath tranſlated us into the kingdom of † his dear ſon;]

† the ſon of his own love τοῦ υἱοῦ τῆς ἀγάπης αὐτοῦ

14. Through whom we have pardon of ſin, purchaſed by his death, and ſo are redeemed out of the power of Satan, and made capable of a reſurrection unto life.

14. In whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveneſs of ſins;]

15. In whom God, who is inviſible, is to be ſeen, and his will clearly declared by the Goſpel (ſo that he that ſeeth him, ſeeth the Father, Joh. 14 9.) and who being firſt raiſed out of the grave, and aſſumed to heaven, as the firſt begotten from the dead, v. 18. hath all power given unto him by right of inheritance, as dominion is the birthright of the firſt-born.

15. Who is the image of the inviſible God, the [a] firſt-born of * every creature.]

* the whole creation πάσης κτίσεως

16. And this very agreeably, he being that eternal Word, by whom, ſaith the Pſalmiſt, were the heavens made; and all the creatures in the world, both thoſe which are to be ſeen, being corporeal, and thoſe which, being

16. For by him were all things created that are in heaven, and that are in earth, viſible and inviſible, whether they be [b] thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers, all things were created by him, and for him:]

being ſpiritual, as Angels, ſouls of men, cannot be ſeen, all theſe, I ſay, what degree ſoever they are of, they were all by him created, and therefore are in reaſon to ſerve him, as the Lord of all.

17. And he is before all things, and by him all things conſiſt.] 17. And he hath an eternal being, before any thing which now is created was, and as all was created by him, v. 16. ſo do all owe their continuance and preſervation to him.

18. And he is the head of the body, the Church: who is the beginning, the firſt-born from the dead, that in all things he might have the pre-eminence.] 18. And another title he hath to us, beſide that of Creator, as he hath redeemed us, and purchaſed us to be a congregation called by his name, a Church of Chriſtians, and as by riſing from the dead he hath conquered death, and given us victory over it, that we may after him riſe alſo, and ſo by all titles he hath right of dominion over all.

† it ſeemed good that in him εὐδόκησε ἐν αὐτῷ * him αὐτῷ

19. For † it pleaſed the Father, that in him ſhould all fulneſs dwell;] 19. For in the man Chriſt Jeſus it was thought fit that the whole divine nature ſhould reſide and inhabit, ch. 2. 9.

20. And (having made peace through the blood of his croſs) by him to reconcile all things unto * himſelf, by him, I ſay, c whether they be things in earth, or things in heaven.] 20. And that having, by his ſufferings and ſatisfaction for our ſins, made peace between God and the world, he ſhould reconcile all mankind unto God, not only the Jews, among whom he was born, and who had formerly been his people, and had the promiſes of Chriſt made to them, but the very Gentiles alſo. c.

21. And you that were ſometime alienated, and enemies in your mind by wicked works, yet now hath he reconciled,] 21. And you that were ſtrangers from the worſhip of the true God, and had engaged your ſelves in idolatry, and all the wicked practices that attend that, he hath now brought back to his ſervice, uſed means by preaching of the Goſpel to reform you, to make you lay down your hoſtilities againſt God, the wickedneſs of your lives;

22. In the d body of his fleſh, through death, to preſent you holy and unblameable, and unreprovable in his ſight:] 22. And to that end laid down his very life for you, by that means to preſent you to his father, as thoſe which, though ſinners, are yet reconciled unto him, and are now acceptable in his ſight, free from all charge of ſin from the accuſer of the brethren. d.

23. If ye continue in the faith grounded and ſetled, and be not moved away from the hope of the Goſpel, which ye have heard, and which was preached to every creature under heaven, whereof I Paul am made † a miniſter,] 23. Upon this condition only, that having given up your names to him (received the faith) ye continue firm and conſtant to the end, and whatever perſecutions aſſault you, hold out by virtue of that hope, which the Goſpel hath furniſhed you with, that Goſpel, I mean, which is now made known and preached to all the heathen world, (ſee Note on Rom. 8. d.) and of which I am by Chriſt conſtituted an Apoſtle, and publiſher of it.

† or a preacher and Apoſtle and miniſter, for the King's MS. reads κήρυξ καὶ Ἀπόστολος καὶ διάκονος

24. Who now rejoice in my ſufferings for you, and * fill up that which is behind of the afflictions of Chriſt in my fleſh, for his bodies ſake, which is the Church,] 24. And though it coſt me dear, bring many perſecutions upon me, yet is not this matter of any thing but joy unto me, as knowing that what I ſuffer is but ſome ſmall proportion and remnant of thoſe ſufferings which Chriſt began on the croſs for the Church his body, and doth now again, though he be in heaven, indure in the perſecuting of me an Apoſtle of his,

* by way of correſpondence fill up the remainders ἀνταναπληρῶ τὰ ὑστερήματα

25. Whereof I am made a miniſter according to the diſpenſation of God, which is given to me † for you, to * e fulfill the word of God;] 25. And a miniſter of his Church appointed immediately by God, to bear his word, to preach the Goſpel to the Gentiles, and particularly to you (to whom by Epaphras I have done ſo, ver. 7.) and to leave no place, (whither I can come by my ſelf or others,) without preaching the Goſpel to them. e.

† toward you εἰς ὑμᾶς * to perform † among you, or ὑμῖν

26. Even the myſtery which hath been hid from ages, and from generations, but now is made manifeſt to his ſaints:] 26. That Goſpel, I mean, or revelation of the will of God, which was not revealed ſo clearly in former ages, but kept under ſhadows and dark prefigurations, but now is freely preached to all that receive the faith of Chriſt:

27. To whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this myſtery among the Gentiles, which is Chriſt † in you, the hope of glory:] 27. God being willing to exhibit to ſuch, (and no longer to keep cloſe) this illuſtrious mercy of his to the Gentiles, ſo long concealed, viz. Chriſt preached, the Goſpel revealed to theſe, and in it hope of pardon and of bliſs afforded them, upon reformation of their former lives, and receiving and practiſing the Commands of Chriſt.

28. Whom we preach, warning every man, and teaching every man in all wiſdom, that we may preſent every man perfect in Chriſt Jeſus.] 28. Whoſe doctrine we now publiſh to the world, his precepts of divine purity, and his glorious promiſes, firſt preaching the fundamental heads of the truth of Chriſt, and then ſuperſtructing all farther knowledge of Chriſtian duties, and this to Gentiles as well as Jews, that by this means we may bring in ſervants to God, as many as poſſibly we can, to ſerve him in all that holineſs of life that Chriſt Jeſus himſelf exemplified, and preſcribed.

† is wrought in me in power, ἐνεργουμένην ἐν δυνάμει

29. Whereunto I alſo labour, ſtriving according to his working, which † worketh in me mightily.] 29. Of which number I am one, who endure ſome travail and toil, and withal ſome perſecutions and afflictions (ſee 1 Theſſ. 2. Note b.) according to the meaſure of that grace which he hath effectually beſtowed upon me to the end.

Annotations on Chap. I.

a πρωτότοκος V. 15. Firſt-born] The word πρωτότοκος, beſide the ordinary notion of firſt-born (which cannot ſo well here refer to Chriſt's eternal generation, becauſe of that which is added to it, the firſt-born of every creature, which only gives him a precedence before all other creatures, and doth not attribute eternity to him) is uſed ſometimes for a Lord, or perſon in power, who hath the privilege of the firſt-born, dominion over all his brethren; and according to this notion 'tis uſed κοινῶς in Scripture for a Prince, or principal perſon. So Pſ. 88. 27. David is called the firſt-born of the Kings of the earth, that is, the moſt glorious among them, and Job 18. 13. we have the firſt-born of death. And ſo among the Civilians, Hæres, heir, ſignifies dominus, Lord, Juſtinian. Inſtit. l. 2. tit. 19. de hæred. qualit. & diffe. §. ult. And thus may it fitly be a title of Chriſt incarnate, in reſpect of his power over his Church, the key of the houſe of David laid upon him. But it is poſſible it may peculiarly refer to his reſurrection, in which he was the firſt-born from the dead, v. 18. the firſt which from the grave was raiſed and exalted to heaven, and being ſo riſen, all power was given unto him in heaven and in earth.

b V. 16. Thrones] Theſe ſeveral titles here rehearſed may poſſibly be no more but the expreſſions of ſeveral degrees of dignity among men. So θρόνοι thrones may denote Kings, or Monarchs, and Princes; κυριότητες, dominions (or Lordſhips) may be Reguli, the honours (whether of Dukes or Earls) next under Princes; ἀρχαί, the Præfects of Provinces and cities; and ἐξουσίαι inferiour magiſtrates: and if ſo, then may they be here ſet down to denote all ſorts and conditions of men in the Gentile world, by the chief dignities among them here on earth. But becauſe they may alſo ſignifie the ſeveral degrees of Angels, and becauſe there follows mention of ὁρατὰ καὶ ἀόρατα, viſible and inviſible, and the Angels may moſt probably be contained by the latter of them, as this lower world of men by the former, and becauſe it is the creation that is here referred to, and the creating of the Angels as well as men, &c. belongs truly to Chriſt as God, therefore it will be moſt reaſonable in this place to interpret it in the greater extent to comprehend Angels and men too, the higheſt and moſt eminent of both ſorts, thereby to ſet out the eternal Divinity and power of Chriſt, who is creator of all, and conſequently before the moſt principal Angels, which were created before men: See v. 17. Of the great blaſphemies of the Gnoſticks and their followers the Valentinians in this matter, of Angels creating the θρόνοι κυριότητες ἀρχαὶ ἐξουσίαι ὁρατὰ καὶ ἀόρατα

the world, &c. ſee Irenæus, and Note on 1 Tim. 1. d. And to that Theology of theirs the Apoſtle may here refer.

c. τὰ ἐπὶ γῆς, τὰ ἐν οὐρανοῖς

V. 20. Whether they be things in earth, or —] What is here meant by εἴτε τὰ ἐπὶ τῆ γῆς, εἴτε τὰ ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς, whether the things on earth, or the things in the heavens, will, I conceive, be beſt diſcerned, firſt by comparing this place of the reconciliation wrought by Chriſt with the parallel, Epheſ. 2. 14, 16. where it clearly ſignifies the compacting the Jews and Gentiles into one Church; and ſo again Eph. 1. 10. the gathering in one all things, both which are in heaven, and on earth, doth ſignifie all men of all ſorts. Secondly, by remembring two obſervations, frequent in this Book. 1. That it is the manner of the Hebrew writers to expreſs this inferiour world (for want of one word to ſignifie it) by theſe two, the heavens and the earth, and indeed any aggregate body or totum, by mentioning and enumerating is parts, as the natural day, by the evening and the morning, and ſo to ſet down ſo many days, and ſo many nights, where the truth of the ſtory will not allow us to interpret it litterally of ſo many nights diſtinctly, but of ſo many νυχθήμερα, or natural days, of which any the leaſt part is computed for one. (See Note on Mat. 12. n. and on Epheſ. 5. h.) And not to multiply examples, but to confine the diſcourſe to this particular, thus very frequently the heavens and the earth are ſet to ſignifie the whole lower world, made up of the firmament of the air, that expanſum which is called Heaven (as when we read, the fowls of the heaven) and of the terreſtrial globe of earth and water, (ſee Note on 2 Pet. 3. e.) and then (conſequently to this) τὰ πάντα all things here, explained and interpreted by εἴτε τὰ ἐπὶ γῆς, εἴτε τὰ ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς, whether the things on earth, or the things in heaven, and in the like phraſe v. 16. τὰ πάντα τὰ ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς, καὶ τὰ ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, all things that are in the heavens and on the earth, ſhall ſignifie no more than what is in other places expreſſed by ὁ κόσμος, the world, (as 2 Cor. 5. 19. in the very ſame matter that here is ſpoken of, God in Chriſt reconciling the world to himſelf) ἡ κτίσις the creation, πᾶσα κτίσις, the whole creation, or all creatures, the whole world of creation, or the whole world without reſtriction. Now what is meant by the whole world or the whole creation, will appear by another ſecond obſervation, which is taken notice of, and enlarged on Note on Rom. 8. d. that κτίσις creation, and κόσμος world ſimply, and πᾶσα κτίσις the whole creation, Rom. 8. 22. and here v. 23. ſignifies all the Gentile world, in oppoſition to the Jewiſh encloſure; not all the creatures abſolutely, but all men of all nations, particularly the Gentile Idolaters mentioned here in the next verſe, ὑμᾶς ποτε ὄντας ἀπηλλοτριωμένους, you that were formerly alienated, &c. And then the meaning of the place will be clearly this, that it pleaſed God by Chriſt to reconcile to himſelf (or, as it is poſſible, εἰς αὐτὸν, to him, may be read εἰς αὐτὸ, into one, or the ſame, and ſo be more perfectly parallel to ἀμφοτέρους ἐν ἑνὶ σώματι, both in, or into one body, Eph. 2. 16.) all the men of the world, the Gentiles and the Jews both; the ſame thing which was meant by καταλλαγὴ κόσμου, Rom. 11. 15. the reconciling of the world (that is, the Gentiles in oppoſition to the Jews, that there in the words immediately precedent are ſaid to be caſt off) and 2 Cor. 5. 19. by God was in Chriſt reconciling the world to himſelf. And though the word πάντα all things be here in the Neuter, yet will that be no objection againſt this, it being ordinary for the Neuter to be taken for the Maſculine, as when Chriſt is ſaid to have come σῶσαι τὸ ἀπολωλὸς, to ſave that which was loſt, that is, all the men that were loſt; and ſo Gal. 3. 22. that God hath ſhut up together πάντα ὑπὸ ἁμαρτίαν, all things, that is, all men, under ſin, and innumerable the like: and therefore that which v. 20. is πάντα all in the Neuter, is ὑμᾶς you men, you Gentiles, v. 21. and that joined with the ἀποκατήλλαξεν, he hath reconciled there, as πάντα all with the ἀποκαταλλάξαι reconciling here. That I do not conceive the τὰ ἐν οὐρανοῖς things in heaven to ſignifie Angels, the reaſon is clear, becauſe Chriſt οὐκ ἐπιλαμβάνετο ἀγγέλων, Heb. 2. 16. came not to take hold of, or reduce, or relieve, or conſequently to reconcile, the Angels, but only mankind. And indeed the Angels, that are ἐν οὐρανοῖς in the heavens, never fell, and ſo needed no reconciling. And though τὰ ἐν οὐρανοῖς the things in heaven may poſſibly ſignifie the Saints departed, which are now in Heaven, in reſpect of their ſouls, contrary to the Pſychopannychiſts, and were ſo at the Apoſtles writing this, and even at the time of Chriſt's death, yet the context ſeems not to have any particular aſpect on that matter, but only to look upon Chriſt, and to ſet him up as the one univerſal redeemer and reconciler of all mankind, of the Gentiles as well as of the Jews, and to ſhew what intereſt the Gentile world hath in his death and reſurrection: and therefore I prefer the interpretation firſt given, as being directly pertinent to this purpoſe, and agreeable to the conſequents. And that will more appear, if you look on the place forementioned, and parallel to this, Epheſ. 1. 10. where this reconciling of all things in heaven and on earth, expreſſed there by ἀνακεφαλαιώσασθαι gathering into one, is called v. 9. μυστήριον τοῦ θελήματος αὐτοῦ καὶ τὴν εὐδοκίαν αὐτοῦ, the myſtery of his will according to his good pleaſure, noting it to be ſome act of free undeſerved mercy, imputable to nothing but God's mere grace (and ſuch moſt notoriouſly was the calling of the Gentile Idolaters) and that a myſtery, ſuch as no man ever dream'd of or hoped for before; and what that myſtery was, is in the remainder of that Epiſtle largely ſhewn, eſpecially c. 2. 14, 16, 17. and under the name of the myſtery, c. 3. 3, 5. viz. the bringing in the Gentiles into the Church, preaching ἐν τοῖς ἔθνεσιν among the Gentiles, (c. 3. 8.) the unſearchable riches of Chriſt. And thus, I conceive, the phraſe is to be underſtood, Epheſ. 3. 15. where of Chriſt 'tis ſaid, that, ἐξ οὗ πᾶσα πατριὰ ἐν οὐρανοῖς καὶ ἐπὶ γῆς ὀνομάζεται, the whole family in heaven and on earth is named by, or from, him, that is, ſurely, all the world, Gentiles as well as Jews, are now vouchſafed by him to be called by his name, that is, to be Chriſtians, called and received into his family.

V. 22. Body of his fleſh] The body of his fleſh ſignifies no more than his fleſh, according to the Hebrew notion of בָּשָׂר, which as it ſignifies body, ſo it is oft applied to things which have no body, and ſignifies eſſence or being.

V. 25. Fulfill the word] Πληρῶσαι τὸν λόγον, to fulfill his word, is a phraſe which we meet with 1 Mac. 2. 55. ſpoken of Jeſhua, that for fulfilling the word he was made a Judge in Iſrael: where, as the word ſignifies the will and pleaſure of God revealed to him, ſo πληρῶσαι to fulfill it is to perform it in a very eminent manner. But in this place ὁ λόγος being by the Context confined to another notion, the preaching or publiſhing the Goſpel of Chriſt peculiarly, πληρῶσαι τὸν λόγον Θεοῦ, to fulfill the word of God, will be, to fulfill that preaching, that is, to proceed as far in the preaching of it as by all his diligence and care, by himſelf and others, he could do, and ſo belongs to the preaching it to theſe Coloſſians, to whom, being out of his way, he yet had ſent Epaphras, v. 7. Thus we have a like phraſe Rom. 15. 19. πληρῶσαι τὸ εὐαγγέλιον τοῦ Χριστοῦ, to fill up the preaching, or Goſpel, of Chriſt, that is, to preach it from city to city, from Jeruſalem as far as to Illyricum.

Paraphraſe. CHAP. II.

1. For I am willing ye ſhould be advertiſed how earneſtly I contend for you in deſire to come to viſit you, and in prayer, and zeal, and ſolicitude for you, and for thoſe of Laodicea, whoſe converſion wrought by Epaphras, who was ſent by me, I look upon with much comfort, though I never ſaw any of them (as not being able to go to either of thoſe cities either in my firſt or ſecond paſſage through Phrygia (of which Laodicea is the Metropolis, and Coloſſæ another city) Act. 16. 16. and 18. 23.)

1. FOR I would that ye knew what great conflict I have for you, and for them at Laodicea, and for as many as have not ſeen my face in the fleſh;

* even κ) † fulneſs πληρο-φοριας ſee Lu. 1. Note a. * both the father and Chriſt κ) πατρος * in which εν ω † probabilities πιθανολογια

2. That their hearts might be comforted, being knit together in love, * and unto all riches of the † full aſſurance of underſtanding, to the acknowledgment of the myſtery of God, * and of the Father, and of Chriſt ;]

2. That they may receive the joy and true comfort, which the doctrine of Chriſt truly taught and practiſed will yield every one, that being firſt united together in the Chriſtian charity, they may be filled with all graces in all abundance, and come to know the bottom of this great ſecret or myſtery of God, viz. of the Goſpel, or Chriſtianity, that is, of the courſe which hath more obſcurely been taken by God the Father under the Old Teſtament, and more clearly now by God in Chriſt under the New, to bring ſinners to ſalvation ;

3. * In whom are hid all the treaſures of wiſdom and knowledge.]

3. In which courſe is wrapt up all the depth of divine wiſdom imaginable.

4. And this I ſay, leſt any man ſhould beguile you with † enticing words.]

4. And this care of mine and ſolicitude for you I mention, that it may make you cautious, that no cunning impoſtor ſeduce you, by ſaying things that look like truth, but are not.

5. For though I be abſent in fleſh, yet I am with you in the ſpirit, joying and beholding your order, and the ſtedfaſtneſs of your faith in Chriſt.]

5. For though I am not perſonally preſent among you, yet by the advertiſements I received from Epaphras I underſtand how all things go with you, and ſo am in heart or ſpirit preſent with you, (as when Eliſha's heart is ſaid to have gone with his ſervant, when he knew what he did, 2 Kin. 5. 26.) and rejoice much to ſee the regularity of Eccleſiaſtical affairs among you, and your conſtancy in the truth, in deſpight of all that have tried to lead you out of the way.

6. As ye have therefore received Chriſt Jeſus the Lord, ſo walk ye in him,]

6. And therefore all that I have to add is only this, that as you have received commands from Chriſt for the regulating of your lives, ſo ye be careful to do accordingly ;

7. Rooted and built up in him, and ſtabliſhed in the faith, as ye have been taught, abounding therein with thankſgiving.]

7. As having not only received the faith at firſt, but having been farther inſtructed and improved in it, as when walls are ſuperſtructed on a foundation, yea and confirmed in it, and therefore go on according to theſe beginnings, and abound in all Chriſtian practices, and let that be your way of returning thanks to God for his great mercies of revealing the Goſpel to you.

* deſpoil or carry you captive † elements

8. Beware leſt any man [a] * ſpoil you through Philoſophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the [b] † rudiments of the world, and not after Chriſt.]

8. And take care that no body plunder you, rob you, cheat you of all that you have, your principles of Chriſtian knowledge, by that vain, empty, frothy, pretended knowledge and wiſdom which the Gnoſticks talk of, 1 Tim. 1. 4. and 6. 20. taken out of the heatheniſh Pythagorean Philoſophy, together with the obſervances of the Moſaical Law, and very diſtant and contrary to Chriſtian divinity.

a. b.

9. For in him dwelleth all the fulneſs of the Godhead [c] bodily.]

9. For the whole will of God is by Chriſt really made known to us, as his Divinity really dwells in him ; and therefore there is little need of the additions of the Gnoſticks, which they borrow out of the heathen and Jewiſh Theology, to ſupply the defects of the Evangelical doctrine.

10. And ye are † complete in him, which is the head of all principality and power.]

10. And by him you have knowledge ſufficient to ſatisfie and complete you, without ſuch ſupplies as theſe from the doctrines and divinity of the Gnoſticks, about their Æones, (ſee 1 Tim. 1. Note d.) look'd on by them as divine immortal powers, of which, whatſoever they are (if they be not idol-things) be they Angels of a ſuperiour or ſecond degree, Chriſt is the head, and they which have Chriſt need not trouble themſelves with theſe acceſſions.

11. In whom alſo ye are circumciſed with the circumciſion made without hands, in putting off the body of the ſins of the fleſh, by the circumciſion of Chriſt,]

11. And as you need not take in theſe fragments of heathen Theology into the Chriſtian, ſo is there as little need of the Judaical obſervations, circumciſion, &c. which are urged by the Gnoſticks alſo, Chriſt having in his Goſpel helped you to the true gainful circumciſion, not that outward, the cutting off the fore-skin with a knife, but the inward, ſpiritual, the putting off, throwing away all thoſe carnal ſins which the Gnoſticks again do ſo abound in, and this is the true Chriſtian circumciſion.

12. Buried with him in baptiſm, wherein alſo ye are riſen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raiſed him from the dead.]

12. And to all this you are engaged (and have undertaken it) in your baptiſm, whereof one part, referring to the burial of Chriſt, denotes not only your dying to your ſins, forſaking the impurities of your heathen lives, but alſo the abrogation of, and liberty from, the Moſaical performances, Epheſ. 2. 15. and your laying all down in the grave, to be buried with Chriſt, never to live or have power in or over you again ; and another part (that of coming out of the water) referring to the reſurrection of Chriſt, denotes your vow and engagement to riſe to all Evangelical performances, and to all purity of life, by the virtue of your faith in that God, whoſe power and ſufficience to make good all his promiſes to you, is demonſtrated by his raiſing up Jeſus from the dead.

13. And you being dead in your ſins, and the uncircumciſion of the fleſh, hath he quickned together with him, having forgiven you all treſpaſſes :]

13. And you being heathens and uncircumciſed (and ſo without requiring thoſe legal performances of you) hath he received into covenant, taken you out of your heathen, dark, dead condition, and having pardoned you all your paſt idolatries and provocations, he hath called you into the free eſtate of the Goſpel, requiring none of thoſe legal yokes of you, which the Judaizing Gnoſticks lay upon you :

* Having by his doctrines blotted out the handwriting againſt us

14. * Blotting out the [d] handwriting of ordinances that was againſt us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his croſs :]

14. Having by that proclamation of pardon to all penitent believers, Gentiles as well as Jews, (which is a doctrine of Chriſt's now peculiarly revealed in the Goſpel) blotted out that bill which the Jews were bound by, having as it were ſigned it with our own hands againſt our ſelves (by profeſſing to expect juſtification by the Law) a bill indeed contrary to our peace, deſtructive to us, and having taken it away, cancelled it, and that (as bonds are wont to be cancelled) by ſtriking a nail through it, viz. nailing it to his croſs, that is, cancelling it by his death, undergoing a vile death for us, and obtaining pardon of ſins for us by that means.

16,17. Let no man therefore impoſe on you their doctrines of Moſaical abſtinencies, &c. and condemn, or ſentence Chriſtians (ſee Note i.) for eating or drinking things prohibited by the Jewiſh Law, not obſerving thoſe things which are ſet down in their ſection of feaſts, or new moons, or ſabbaths, which were all but types of Chriſtianity, and therefore now in the preſence of Chriſtianity it ſelf, are not obligatory.

Annotations on Chap. II.

a. Συλᾷν

V. 8. Spoil] Συλᾶν is to ſtrip or rob, as the pillagers in war are wont to do; ἐκδύειν ὅπλων ἢ κειμήλιον, to ſtrip one, as he lyes, of his armour, ſaith Phavorinus, and agreeably to this, ἁρπαγὴν, αἰχμαλωτίζειν, to carry away captive. Hence συλαγωγεῖν is both ἀποσυμπᾶν to deveſt, to ſtrip, and being here applied to the Gnoſticks it belongs to their divinity, which mixes all the heathen gods (under the title of αἰῶνες, a word corrupted from the Hebrew חיות living creatures, which is ſet to ſignifie Angels, Ezr. 1. 5. See Note on 1 Tim. 1. d.) with Chriſt, and makes uſe of all the Theology of Orpheus, and Heſiod, and Pythagoras, which is called ἀπέραντοι γενεαλογίαι endleſs genealogies, 1 Tim. 1. 4. ματαιολογία idle ſpeaking, ver. 6. and here Philoſophy and vain deceit, and alſo by bringing others to them συλαγωγεῖ, either carries them captive to their own heatheniſh errors, or elſe robs them, deſpoils them, of all their Chriſtian ornaments and weapons, leaving them naked, as it were, of all that rich proviſion which Chriſt had laid in for them, depriving them of all the advantages of the Goſpel. But that of carrying captive ſeems rather to be the notion of it.

b. Στοιχεῖα

Ib. Rudiments] Στοιχεῖα ſignifies elements, rudiments, firſt principles, the letters of the Alphabet among Grammarians; the firſt principles, or elements, of which the body is compounded, among the Naturaliſts. And ſo they may fitly ſignifie all imperfect lower ſorts of doctrines or precepts, in oppoſition to that which is more perfect. Thus when Heb. 5. 12. the higher Chriſtian knowledge is expreſs'd by στερεὰ τροφὴ ſolid food, and all the inferior ordinary doctrines thereof but as milk for children or babes to feed on, thoſe lower doctrines there (ſet down c. 6. 1. of Repentance and Faith, &c.) are called στοιχεῖα τ ἀρχῆς τ λογίων τ Θεῦ, the elements of the beginning of the Oracles of God. Now as Chriſtian religion is the true manly knowledge and wiſdom, ſo are there two ſorts of elements, imperfect childiſh beginnings of knowledge, the one among the Jews, the other among the Gentiles. Among the Jews, the rites and ceremonies preſcribed them are fitly called Elements, or beginnings, being a παιδαγωγία τῷ νόμῳ, a pedagogy of the Law, a way to bring up, and diſcipline children, by thoſe groſſer means, as they were able to bear it, to initiate them to ſome kind of piety and vertue; and to them that have received the faith, the Apoſtle calls them ἀσθενῆ καὶ πτωχὰ στοιχεῖα, weak and beggerly elements, Gal. 4. 9. and ſuch as were fit only for νήπιοι babes to be ſubjected to, v. 3. Among the Gentiles, the Philoſophers and the Magi had ſome ways of wiſdom and of religion alſo, wherein they exerciſed their diſciples, many abſtinencies and ways of purgations, ſacrifices, and ceremonies of worſhip to their Dæmons, eſpecially the Pythagoreans, who abſtained from Wine, and Fleſh, and Venery, &c. So ſaith Porphyry in his book Περὶ Ἀποχῆς, and ſo Clemens Alex. Strom. 3. Διὰ φειδωλίαν τοῖς Μάγοις οἶνός τε ὁμοῦ καὶ ἐμψύχων καὶ ἀφροδισίων ἀπέχεσθαι, Their Magi teach them to abſtain from wine, and things that have life in them, and the uſe of venery: and he adds, Λατρεύειν Ἀγγέλοις καὶ δαίμοσιν, they worſhip Angels and Dæmons. Now which of theſe are here referred to, is the only queſtion. And that may beſt be reſolved by conſidering the addition of τῷ κόσμῳ of the world which is joined to it. That word doth once ſignifie the ſervice of the Jewiſh Temple, Eccleſ. 50. 21. The people beſought the moſt high God ἕως τελεσθῇ κόσμος Κυρίου, καὶ τ λειτουργίαν αὐτοῦ ἐτελείωσε, till the worſhip of the Lord were finiſhed, and they had perform'd their office: where κόσμος and λειτουργία are uſed in the ſame ſenſe, for the worſhip or ſervice of the Temple. And if this were the notion of τῷ κόσμῳ, it would confine it to the Jewiſh ceremonies: but the ordinary notion of κόσμος for the world, is that which is generally uſed in the New Teſtament, and ſo muſt denote the men of the world, all ſorts both of Jews and Gentiles, as they are oppoſed to Chriſt: and ſo the Elements of the world will be thoſe imperfect ways of piety and vertue which either the Jews or Gentiles adhered to before Chriſt, or before receiving the faith of Chriſt. And ſo it muſt ſignifie here, the Gentile doctrines eſpecially, noted by Philoſophy at the beginning of the verſe, and the worſhipping of Angels, ver. 18. (ſee Note h.) but withal the Jewiſh abſtinencies and obſervations, v. 14, 16. For it is certain that the Gnoſtick's divinity, which through this whole chapter is peculiarly noted, was a compoſition of Judaiſm and Heatheniſm both; and thoſe doctrines of theirs, which they laboured to impoſe on Chriſtians, are here expreſs'd by the elements of the world, and ſo ver. 20. (ſee Note i.) though Gal. 4. 3, and 9. where the matter confines it to the Moſaical Law, it fitly belongs to that only.

c. Σωματικῶς

V. 9. Bodily] Σωματικῶς may denote, not corporiety, but eſſence, according to the notion of ⲟⲩ, often mentioned (ſee cap 1. Note d.) for eſſence, as well as body; ſo v. 11. σῶμα ἁμαρτιῶν τ σαρκὸς, the body of the ſins of the fleſh, that is, the ſins of the fleſh. Or elſe it may be taken in oppoſition to ſhadows or dark reſemblances, God's will being in Chriſt (not in ſhadows, as among the Jews, but) plainly and ſubſtantially revealed, for the practice of inward purity, and not for the obſervation of thoſe ſhadows thereof which had been among the Jews. And thus the 17th verſe ſeems to interpret it, the ſabbaths, &c. though they were, as commemorations inſtituted for the Jews, by ſtrength of that inſtitution to be obſerved by them, yet had they alſo a farther aſpect, to ſomewhat under the New Teſtament, and as ſuch, are ſaid to be a ſhadow of things to come, the body, or reality, whereof is of Chriſt: Where the Chriſtian doctrine is affirmed to be that ſubſtantial divinity of which that which was under the Law was a ſhadow. But this cannot well be otherwiſe applied to the fulneſs of the Godhead dwelling in Chriſt (which is the primary ſenſe, in which that other is contained, of the manifeſtation of divine knowledge in the Goſpel) but as the word ſhadow is a general word to ſignifie any image, Σκιὰ eſpecially a dark or imperfect one. Thus every body naturally caſts its ſhadow, which as it is the dark image of the body, viz. of ſome lineaments of it, ſo is it far from the ſubſtance of it. Thus the Ghoſts, that is, the ſpecies or images of men, but not their bodies, are call'd their umbræ, ſhadows. And according to this notion of the word Shadow, I ſuppoſe the word bodily may here be interpreted in oppoſition to it, that as on the earth here below the ſun caſts its beams, and ſo dwells here in, or by its beams, or irradiations, but the body of the ſun ſun is in heaven, and ſo, though here be ſome light below, yet there only the fulneſs of light is; ſo here God was in Moſes and the Prophets (and in otherwiſe, holy men, to whom he revealed his will) in ſome degree, in ſome rays, beams, images of his perfections, and more than ſo, God is ſaid to dwell in his ſaints (which differs from being in them, only by permanence or continuance) but ſtill he is or dwells in them, only in thoſe images of him, ſhadows, or rays, not as the Sun doth in the heaven, where the body of it is, in a fulneſs, ſo as he cannot be more in any other; but in Chriſt he dwells in fulneſs, ſo as nothing could be added to it, and ſo in him bodily, that is, as the Sun dwells in the firmament, where the body of it is. The whole divine nature is not only in part, but fully, without abſence of any part of it, in Chriſt; and that not by a ſpecies, or ſhadow, or image only, but really and ſubſtantially: and ſo conſequently (which is the thing which is here deſigned to be proved by it) the will of God muſt be ſuppoſed to be ſo revealed in Chriſt, or by Chriſt, that there can be no need of addition from the heathen philoſophy, or from the Jewiſh law, which the Gnoſticks would needs have added to it. And that is the full ſenſe of theſe words.

d. χειρόγραφον

V. 4. Handwriting] χειρόγραφον is a bill or writing under a man's hand, whereby he binds himſelf to ſome payment of money or duty, a bond or obligation, and which ſtands in force againſt him, to bring any forfeiture or penalty upon him, upon non-performance of the condition to which he is bound: That which the Rabbins call שטר, and שטר חוב cautio debitoris, an obligation; ſcriptura, vel literæ quibus continetur poteſtas quam alius alii tradit, ſaith * Elias Devita, A writing in which is contained a power which one gives another over him. Thus is the Law of Moſes, as it requires abſtinence from meats, obſervation of days, v. 16. and ſo lays obligation on a Jew, that others are not bound to, and binds him to forfeiture of all his hopes, and alſo to puniſhment if he do not perform them. In which caſe this bond or bill is here ſuppoſed to be brought againſt him ſigned by himſelf, and ſtands in force againſt him. Now two ways there are to cancel any writing, the one by blotting or croſſing it with a pen, the other by ſtriking a nail through it. The firſt is done by Chriſt's doctrines (requiring now the inward purity, inſtead of thoſe external obſervances, and that is the meaning of δόγματα doctrines here (as Theophylact acknowledgeth, rendring it by τῇ πίστει by Faith, and τοῖς τῆ πίστεως δόγμασι doctrines of Faith, and Epheſ. 2. 15. (a place parallel to this) it will more appear, by looking on the place) and the ſecond is done by Chriſt's death, expreſſed in that to the Epheſians by ἐν σαρκὶ, but here by προσηλώσας τῷ σταυρῷ, nailing it to his croſs.

* Thisbi p. 244.

ἐν σαρκὶ προσηλώσας

c. μέρος

V. 16. In reſpect] The meaning of μέρος here, which Joſ. Scaliger and Iſa. Caſaubon, Ep. 24. have pitched on, is, that by it is noted פרק, חלק a chapter, or tract of the Talmudiſts upon that ſubject. For the leſſer parts of the Talmud are called פרקים diviſions or parts. Among their writings there is now one called מסכת יום טוב the tract of a good day, that is, a feaſt, and in it many chapters, or פרקים, or ſections. From thence is the mention of Ἀρχιφερεῖς in Juſtinian. Novel. de Heb. 146. By which it appears that among the Expoſitors of the Law there were ſome called φερεῖς, as it were μεισταὶ, that expounded their heads of doctrine ſeverally, and the chief of them Ἀρχιφερεῖς. And ſo the meaning of the place will be, Let no man paſs ſentence on you by what you do in eating or drinking, by that ſection of the Rabbins about Feaſts, New moons, Sabbaths, that is, by your obſerving or not obſerving of thoſe things, which were required indeed by the Jews, but merely as ſhadows and types of that ὁλόκληρον καὶ ἀδιάλειπτον ἑορτὴν, entire and continual feaſt, that a Chriſtian's life ought to be now under the New Teſtament. See Origen. Cont. Celſ. l. 8. p. 404. That μέρει ſhould be miſtaken for ἡμέρᾳ a day, is a conjecture of ſome, which it is ſufficient to have named, having no authority of any MS. to countenance it.

f. καταβραβευέτω

V. 18. Beguile] Καταβραβευέτω, καταβραβευτάτω, ſaith Phavorinus, the word ſignifies to condemn, βραβευτὴς and ἀγωνοθέτης being all one (only the former peculiar to the ἀγῶνες or Grecian games, the other common to all judicatures) and proportionably the notion of the κρ in Compoſition being the ſame too: and ſo the word will have the ſame ſignificancy here that κρίνω, v. 16. of judging or condemning. κρίνειν

Ib. Voluntary humility] The notion of the word θέλω in the Greek tranſlation of the Old Teſtament, for taking delight in any thing, hath been mentioned in Note on Mat. 27. g. and may be judged of by theſe examples not recited there, Pſal. 1. 2. ἐν τῷ νόμῳ κυρίου θέλημα αὐτοῦ, his delight is in the Law of the Lord; τεθέληκάς με, Pſal. 41. 12. thou favoureſt, or loveſt, or delighteſt in me. And ſo being here joined with ἐν ταπεινοφροσύνῃ in humility, it is moſt reaſonably to be taken and rendered, delighting in humility, or, as St. Hierom explains it, ſuperbus fictâ humilitate, proud of a feigned humility; but yet ſo, that ἐν ταπεινοφροσύνῃ in humility may be joined with μηδεὶς καταβραβευέτω, let no man condemn you, v. 16. ſo that the conſtruction and full ſenſe will run thus, Let no man pleaſe himſelf, and condemn or judg you in point of humility and worſhip of Angels. g. θέλω

Ib. Intruding] The word ἐμβατεύσας is explained by ἐπιλῶσαι, τὰ ἔνδον ἐξερευνῆσαι ἢ σκοπῆσαι, to enter into, to ſearch and ſpy what is within; and again, ἐξετάζειν to enquire, in Phavorinus; by ζητῆσαι to ſeek and go as far as one can, ἐπιβαθμῶσαι in Heſychius. It ſignifies to ſeek, or ſearch, or prie into that which is ſecret, and hardly to be diſcovered, and ſo belonging here to the doctrine concerning Angels, it is fitly applied, becauſe no man hath ever ſeen them, nor can ſpeak upon knowledg concerning thoſe points, when Angels are preſent, what they can do, what they have done, what uſe hath been continually made of them by God, what hath been wrought by their miniſtery, &c. Now of the Gnoſticks it is known how great a part of their Theology was made up of conceits concerning the Angels, of which as they had much of the Theologi Poëtæ, the fictions of the heathens; ſo had they therein gratified the Judaizers alſo, who affirming that the Law was given by Angels, were very favourable to the worſhip of them (ſee Note on 1 Tim. 1. d.) This ſort of men are ſaid to have continued long in Piſidia and Phrygia, and therefore to have been forbidden by Canon in the Council of Laodicea, the chief city of Phrygia. Among them there ſtill are Oratories remaining, wherein they were wont to pray to Angels. And the hereſy of theſe Angelitæ or Angelici was, under a ſhew of humility, that God was to be looked on with reverence, as inviſible and inacceſſible, and to be ſued to by the interceſſion and mediation of Angels, firſt the lower, then the higher, till at laſt the requeſt was preſented unto God himſelf. And this of the Mediatorſhip of Angels was among the Platoniſts a ſpecial part of doctrine. Πᾶν τὸ δαιμόνιον, ſaith Plato in Sympoſ. μεταξύ ἐστι θεοῦ καὶ θνητοῦ, ἑρμηνεῦον καὶ διαπορθμεῦον θεοῖς τὰ παρ' ἀνθρώπων, καὶ ἀνθρώποις τὰ παρὰ θεῶν· τῆ μὲν τὰς δεήσεις καὶ θυσίας, τῆ δὲ τὰς ἐπιτάξεις τε καὶ ἀμοιβὰς τῶν θυσιῶν, Every Dæmon, or Angel, is betwixt God and man, declaring and delivering to God the things of men, and to men the things of God; the prayers and ſacrifices of the one, and the commands and returns to their ſacrifices from the other. And again, Θεὸς ἀνθρώπῳ οὐ μίσγυται, ἀλλὰ διὰ τούτου πᾶσα ἡ ὁμιλία καὶ ὁ διάλεκτος θεοῖς πρὸς ἀνθρώπους, καὶ ἐγρηγορόσι καὶ καθεύδουσι, God converſeth not with man, but all the converſation and diſcourſe betwixt God and man is by Angels, both in time of waking and ſleep. And this and the like being the doctrine of thoſe Philoſophers, may well be referred to, v. 8. under the ſtile of Philoſophy and vain deceit. h. ἐμβατεύσαι

Φιλοσοφία

V. 23. Will-worſhip] The word ἐθελοθρησκεία, voluntary worſhip, is not elſewhere uſed in the New Teſtament, and being not at all to be found among the Greek tranſlators, or Apochryphal writers of the Old, and by other later Writers taken particularly from this one place, it will be worthy our inquiry how 'tis uſed here, whether in an ill or a good ſenſe, and that will be done beſt by a full view of the whole place. The occaſion of the Apoſtles diſcourſe here is, the dogmatizing of ſome, ver. 20. that is, teaching ſome things to be forbidden by God, which were not now forbidden by him (nor by any under God which had authority to command) and ſo by their ἐντάλματα, commands, or precepts, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men, i. ἐθελοθρησκεία their own heretical phanſies) Mat. 15. 9. The matter of theſe dogmata is here ſet down, Μὴ ἅψῃ, μὴ γεύσῃ, μὴ θίγῃς, touch not, taſt not, come not near. The word ἅπτεσθαι to touch, as it is here diſtinguiſh'd from γεύεσθαι to taſte, ſeems to refer to the uſe of Women, ſo as we have μὴ ἅπτεσθαι γυναικὸς not to touch a woman, 1 Cor. 7. 1. contrary to which is the ἕκας ἓν τὴν ἑαυτοῦ γυναῖκα ἐχέτω, Let every man have his own wife, ver. 2. For this we know, that the Gnoſticks here oppoſed by St. Paul (as there alſo among the Corinthians) did forbid marriage, as a deteſtable abominable thing, διαβάλλοντες γάμον, τεκνοποιίαν, calumniating, or accuſing, marriage, getting of children, &c. ſaith the Author of the Conſtitutions, l. 6. 16. See Note on 1 Tim. 4. b. And this they ſeem to have had from the Pythagoreans and the Magi (who taught their diſciples ἀπέχεσθαι ἀφροδισίων to abſtain from venery, ſaith Clemens, Strom. l. 3.) but made a worſe uſe of it than they appear to have done. In the next place, the μὴ γεύσῃ taſte not, belongs to abſtinencies from meats, of which ſome there were among the Pythagoreans, ἀπ' ἐμψύχων, from all living creatures (ſee Porphyry περὶ ἀποχῆς) and ſome among the Jews from unclean forbidden meats. And accordingly this is another of the Gnoſticks doctrines (annex'd to the former of forbidden marriage) 1 Tim. 4. 3. ἀπέχεσθαι βρωμάτων to abſtain from meats, according to that of the Author of the Conſtitutions, lib. 6. 8. τινὰ τῶν βρωμάτων βδελύσσονται, they abominate ſome ſorts of meats, and φαυλίζουσι they ſpeak evil of them, c. 26. As for the μὴ θίγῃς, which is ordinarily rendred handle not, and may ſo be applied to ſome Jewiſh rites of not touching any thing that was legally unclean; I ſuppoſe it may better be rendred, come not near. Thus the word is uſed, Exod. 19. 12. of the mount, which they were not to go up to, or touch, that is, approach near it: and ſo it is uſed in the ſame matter, Heb. 12. 20. κἂν θίγῃ τοῦ ὄρους, if it approach the mountain it ſhall be ſtoned. And in this notion, I conceive, it belongs to both the former inderdicts, which are back'd with this, as with an Anathema or deep cenſure, making it an abominable thing to marry, or eat thoſe meats. For therein did their dogmatizing conſiſt, in making marriage and meats βδελύγματα deteſtable things, bitterly judging all that approach'd them: and ſo by the Canons of the Apoſtles, it appears the hereticks of the firſt times did, making marriage the work of the Devil, and the eating forbidden meats, a βδέλυγμα, an abomination. And ſo here v. 17. Let no man judge you in meat, &c. that is, condemn your liberty, as an abominable, damning thing, placing all religion in ſuch obſervances. Of theſe Abſtinencies thus impoſed on Chriſtians by theſe dogmatizing Gnoſticks, the Apoſtle v. 22. makes his obſervation, Ἅ ἐστι πάντα εἰς φθορὰν τῇ ἀποχρήσει, Which are all, &c. Theſe words I conceive are ordinarily miſunderſtood. For firſt, ἀποχρήσεις ſignifies not uſe ſimply, but abuſe; then φθορὰ is ſet in the Epiſtles to denote abominable, unnatural uncleanneſs (ſee Rom. 8. Note i. and 2 Pet. 1. b. and 2. b.) and ſo the ſenſe will be, that theſe doctrines of theirs, borrowed from others, Pythagoreans and Jews, are abuſed and made worſe by them, even to the bringing in all unnatural villany, ſet down Rom. 1. whilſt they deteſt and abominate marriage. As for that which follows, κατὰ τὰ ἐντάλματα καὶ διδασκαλίας τῶν ἀνθρώπων, according to the commandments and doctrines of men, that is ſurely to be connected with δογματίζεσθε ver. 20. thus, why do ye ſubject your ſelves to thoſe ordinances of abſtinencies, which are far from being impoſed by God, fetch'd out of the Philoſophy of the heathen, and rites of the Jews, aboliſhed by Chriſt, and yet moſt ſeverely impoſed on you by theſe hereticks? Having ſet down theſe abſtinencies, thus impoſed and abuſed by hereticks, he then concludes with a brief character of the abſtinencies themſelves, as they were by them pretended to be, in their plea for them. Ἅτινά (or, in two words, Ἃ τινά) ἐστι μὲν λόγον ἔχοντα σοφίας ἐν ἐθελοθρησκείᾳ, &c. Which things have in them ſome notion, or appearance, of wiſdom, that is, of extraordinary perfection (from whence they call'd themſelves Gnoſticks) or piety (which in the Scripture ſtyle is called wiſdom,) viz. in will-worſhip, and humility, and ſeverity toward the body: that is, firſt in performing ſome acts of voluntary, uncommanded perfection; ſecondly, in ſhewing a greater humility than others pretend to, in that of worſhipping of Angels, ver. 18. (ſee Note g.) and thirdly, in auſterities and ſeverities toward the body, abſtaining from ſatisfactions which others uſe, (ſo ἀφειδία ſignifies) ἐν μὴ ἐν τιμῇ τινι πρὸς πλησμονὴν σαρκὸς, and not in any honour to the ſatisfying of the fleſh. Theſe words have ſome difficulty in them, (but ſuch as hath no influence on the enquiry in hand concerning the notion of Will-worſhip: that which others have ſaid from S. Jerome may well be admitted, that the honour here is the ſupplying of wants, as Mat. 15. 6. and 1 Tim. 5. 17. the word is uſed, and then (as an explication of the auſterity precedent) οὐκ ἐν τιμῇ will be, not in the adminiſtring of fewel, or ſupply, ad ſaturitatem carnis explendam, to the filling the ſaturity of the fleſh. But 'tis poſſible τιμὴ may here be taken in a peculiar ſenſe, ſo as marriage is ſaid to be τίμιος honourable in all men Heb. 13. 4. in oppoſition there to theſe Gnoſtick practices, πορνεία fornication, as it contains all unlawful, unnatural luſts, which are accordingly called πάθη ἀτιμίας Rom. 1. 26. affections of diſhonour, and ἀτιμάζεσθαι τὰ σώματα αὐτῶν, diſhonouring their bodies, ver. 24. In this ſenſe I ſuppoſe it evidently to be taken 1 Theſſ. 4. 4. that every one know to poſſeſs his veſſel, that is, his body, ἐν ἁγιασμῷ καὶ τιμῇ, in purification and honour, that is, in a virginal or conjugal purity, μὴ ἐν πάθει ἀτιμίας, not in paſſion of diſhonour, or diſhonourable paſſion, ſo as the Gentiles which know not God, v. 5. Where I ſuppoſe conjugal chaſtity, under the name of τιμὴ honour, to be propoſed by the Apoſtle in oppoſition to all the Gnoſtick practices which there follow, whereas marriage was deteſted and accuſed by theſe, as a work of the Devil: And then in that notion τιμὴ may poſſibly be taken here for the lawful, honourable uſe of marriage, πρὸς πλησμονὴν σαρκὸς, for the ſatisfying the deſires of the fleſh, that is, for the avoiding of fornication, or καῦσις uſtion, and all villany, in which caſe the Apoſtle preſcribes marriage, 1 Cor. 7. 2, and 9. And ſo this laſt part of the character of theſe abſtinences will alſo be here fitly added, to ſhew the wickedneſs of theſe fair pretences of theſe Gnoſticks, in that they brought them to all diſhonourable luſts, by forbidding them the uſe of lawful marriage, and allowing no honourable means of ſatisfying thoſe deſires which are implanted by nature in them. The verſe being thus rendred, it is already viſible that there is no ill, but a good character ſet on ἐθελοθρησκεία, will-worſhip. For firſt, it is here joined with two things which are confeſſedly good, 1. humility, 2. ſeverity and auſterity to, or mortifying of, the body; the firſt a known moral and Chriſtian vertue, the ſecond an act of ſelf-denial, which, as ſuch, cannot be unacceptable to Chriſt, and as a ſpecies of revenge 2 Cor. 7. 11. will be numbred among the effects of ſorrow according to God. Secondly, theſe doctrines are ſaid, in reſpect of will-worſhip diſcernible in them to have λόγον σοφίας, rationem ſapientiæ, ſomewhat of piety in them; which ſomewhat, if it be real, then will it be the ſame that is 1 Tim. 4. 8. ſaid of bodily exerciſe, abſtinence, continence, &c. that it is εἰς ὀλίγον ὠφέλιμος, a little profitable, or profitable for a little. But if λόγος ſignifie ſpecies, onely a ſhew of wiſdom, or piety, yet ſtill the argument will be of force. For can any thing be ſaid to have ſo much as a ſhew of piety in will-worſhip, if will-worſhip, which is thus pretended, paſs confeſſedly for fooliſh or impious? And accordingly the Greek Fathers that interpret λόγον for a ſhew onely, render will-worſhip by piety, onely they add, that this dogmatizer is not truly ſo, but pretends to be ſo; Δοκεῖ εὐλαβὴς τις εἶναι καὶ μέτριος, καὶ τὸ σῶμα καταφρονεῖν, οὐκ ἔστι δέ, He appears pious and moderate, and to deſpiſe the body, and then all the fault is that he is not truly what he appears; and Oecumenius ὑποκρίνεται εὐλάβειαν ἐν τῇ θρησκείᾳ, he pretends piety and devotion in worſhip, where it appears what they meant by ἐθελοθρησκεία, viz. εὐλάβεια piety (the thing ſo commended in Simeon, Luk. 2. 25. and preſcribed, Heb. 12. 28.) and religion or worſhip, which cauſed the Interpreter of Clemens Alexandrinus to render ἐν ἐθελοθρησκείᾳ, in religione, in religion. And accordingly Heſychius expounds it by ἐθελοσέβεια voluntary worſhip, or piety voluntarily performed, the very notion of the נדבה the free-will-offerings among the Jews, rendred by the Septuagint ἐκούσια voluntary oblations, which were ſo far from being ill becauſe not commanded, that they were were far the more acceptable for being free. Ἃ γὰρ ὑπὲρ τὴν ἐντολὴν γίνεται πολλὴν ἔχει τὴν μισθὸν καὶ τοῦτο, ἃ δὲ ἐντολῆς τάξει ὑποσοῦτον, for thoſe that are done above the command have a plentiful reward in this very reſpect, but thoſe that are according to command, not ſo great. And ſo ſaith Socrates of Eccleſiaſtical rites, ἐπεὶ δὲ οὐδεὶς περὶ τούτου ἔγγραφον ἔχει παράγγελμα, δῆλον ὡς κατὰ τοῦτο τὴν ἑκάστου γνώμην καὶ προαίρεσιν ἐτέτρεψαν οἱ Ἀπόστολοι, ἵνα ἕκαστος μὴ φόβῳ μηδὲ ἐξ ἀνάγκης τὸ ἄριστον κατεργάζοιτο, ſeeing there is of this no written command, 'tis manifeſt that the Apoſtles left this to mens choice, that every one might do good not of fear or neceſſity. 'Tis true indeed, where the matter of the worſhip is unlawful, there the will-worſhip muſt needs be ſo; and therefore here ver. 18. when he ſpeaks of worſhipping of Angels, there the ὁ θέλων he that takes pleaſure in this ſort of humility and worſhip, is under an ill character: which notwithſtanding, the voluntary worſhip, where the matter is perfectly lawful, not forbidden, nay approved by a general (though not commanded by a particular) precept, is far from having any tincture of ill in it. And therefore when the word ἐθελοπρεπειασοθρησεία, voluntary abundant worſhip, is by Epiphanius uſed of the Phariſees, it is not by him taken in any ill ſenſe, but onely that it was the denotation of their name, which, though they might out of ſome vanity aſſume it to themſelves, yet had no ill in it, but was rather a title of honour, ἀφωρισμένοι τῷ Θεῷ, ſeparate to God, and their Sect by S. Paul ſtiled ἀκριβεστάτη αἵρεσις τῆς θρησκείας the ſtricteſt ſect of religion. For ſo indeed it appears that the original of theſe Phariſees was the חסידים Aſidæi, ſo call'd for their exceſs of piety and charity, their voluntary performances above what the Law required, ἑκουσιαζόμενοι τῷ νόμῳ, volunteers to the law, that to the precepts of the Law ſuperadded ſome uncommanded acts of piety, 1 Mac. 2. 42. and ſo differed from the Karæi, who did only that which was preſcribed by the Law. And conſequently though the Phariſees pride and boaſting be cenſured by Chriſt, and though their forming theſe voluntary acts of devotion into precepts, and entring them into books, and ſeparating themſelves from all that did not perform their ſevere preſcriptions, rendred them Phariſees, divided even from the Haſidæi themſelves, and then this became a fault, and ſo is looked upon in them; yet the voluntarineſs and uncommandedneſs of their piety was not amiſs, and being the ſame in the Aſidæi and in them, (and in the former of theſe being ſeparated from dogmatizing and cenſoriouſneſs, &c.) it is always looked on as commendable, and the more abundant, ſtill the more rewardable. Of this ſort as the free-will-offerings among the Jews are a known example (of which it is clear, firſt, that they were a part of the worſhip and ſervice of God, when they were performed: ſecondly, that they were not under any particular command of God's in the Law, but were left to every man's liberty, and ſo were ſpontaneous, not neceſſary; and thirdly, that there is a Law, Lev. 22. whereby he that offers them is forbid to offer them maimed or blemiſh'd, ver. 20. by which it appears that they were voluntary, and yet allowed by God, and accepted) ſo many other there were in the Old Teſtament; Abel's oblation, which was not by precept from God, ſay the Fathers generally. And even of Sacrifices in general 'tis obſervable what the antient Author of the Conſtitutions affirms, l. 6. c. 18. that before the golden calf, and their idolatries, Sacrifices were not commanded, or impoſed on the Jews, but onely left to their own choice, ἐὰν ποιῶσι, if they would do them, they ſhould be accepted, &c. and upon thoſe provocations of theirs impoſed, ὅπως στενζόμενοι καὶ ὑπὸ κλοιὸν ἀσχόμενοι τὴν πολυθέου πλάνης ἐκτρέποι, that being ſtreightned and collar'd up (κλοιὸς, δεσμὸς ἐπιλεγχήλιος, ſaith Heſychius) they might keep from idolatry. Such again was the celebration of Purim, the feaſts of the fourth, and fifth, and ſeventh, and tenth month, the feaſt of the dedication of the Altar, inſtituted by the Maccabees, and yet obſerved by Chriſt himſelf. So David's deſign of building the Temple, which though not commanded by God, yet the Prophet Nathan affirms of it, Thou didſt well that it was in thine heart, 1 King. 8. 18. So likewiſe the abſtinences and auſterities of the Rechabites, in Jeremy's time, which are ſo commended by God, and yet were ἐπιμελεῖς τῷ νόμῳ over and above the proportion that was required in the Law. And ſo in the New, Paul's refuſing to receive hire from the Corinthians for all his labour among them, which matter is ſet down at large by him, 1 Cor. 9. The preaching of the Goſpel was committed to him as a truſt, and was under precept, and therefore that was no free-will-offering of his; that is his meaning when he ſaith, εἰ γὰρ ἑκὼν τοῦτο πράσσω, μισθὸν ἔχω, εἰ δὲ ἄκων, οἰκονομίαν πεπίστευμαι, If I do this as a volunteer, that is, * If I did preach the Goſpel without any command (and ſo neceſſity) to do ſo, if I did it of my ſelf freely, this would be rewardable in me; the very preaching would, without any other more honourable circumſtances to enhaunſe it, be matter of greater reward to me than it can now 'tis commanded; but if involuntary, that is, † If my preaching be an act of obedience to a plain command, and ſo neceſſary, v. 16. (and woe to me, if I do it not) and not voluntary in me, then all that can be ſaid of me is, that being truſted with a ſtewardſhip, I do diſcharge it; and ſo * there is nothing of excellence in this, no hinge of contention toward that which is heroical or high. Upon which it follows, Τί οὖν ἐμοί ἐστιν ὁ μισθός; What reward then ſhall be to me? that is, what in this whole matter ſhall bring in any extraordinary reward to me? To which he anſwers, ἵνα εὐαγγελιζόμενος ἀδάπανον θήσω τὸ εὐαγγέλιον, that preaching the Goſpel, I do it freely, without making it chargeable to the auditors, εἰς τὸ μὴ καταχρήσασθαι τῇ ἐξουσίᾳ μου, ſo that I make not uſe of my power, or liberty, which I have in the Goſpel, that is, of the power of receiving maintenance from others (ſuch as Phœbe, and the like, referred to ver. 5.) without putting my ſelf to bodily labour, ver. 6. or by any other ſuch means, perfectly juſtifiable for me to uſe, v. 7. 12. The doing of this thus was that which would yield him the extraordinary reward. And although this was not obſerved by Cephas and other Apoſtles, ver. 5. yet ſure Cephas is not conceived to have ſinned thereby, but 'tis poſitively ſaid that 'tis lawful for all, ver. 7, 11, 14. for Paul as for Cephas and others, though only Paul would not uſe it, ver. 12. and accordingly both there, ver. 15. and after, 2 Cor. 11. 8, 9, 10. he diſtinctly counts, and calls it matter of boaſting, and free-will-offering of his; and ſo 'twas eſteemed by S. Chryſoſtom, τὸ μὲν ἔστιν ἐπίταγμα, τὸ δὲ τῆς ἐμῆς προαιρέσεως κατόρθωμα, one was a precept, the other a vertuous action of his choice, ἃ μὲν γὰρ ὑπὲρ τὴν ἐντολὴν γίνεται, πολλὴν ἔχει τὴν μισθὸν καὶ τοῦτο, for what is done above the command, hath proportionably a plentiful reward. And again of the word neceſſity, that it refers to a command, πρὸς ἀντιδιαστολὴν τῆς ἐλευθερίας τῆς ἐν τῷ λαμβάνειν, in oppoſition to the freedom in receiving (that is, the power to receive v. 12.) foremention'd. So again Theophylact, τὸ εὐαγγελίζεσθαι ἐπίταγμά ἐστι, καὶ χρέος, καὶ ἐὰν πληρῶ τοῦτο οὐδὲν κατόρθωμα, &c. Preaching the Goſpel is a command to me, and ſo a debt, and if I do it, there is no great matter of vertue in it: Τὸ δὲ ἀδαπάνως κηρύσσειν, προαιρέσεως φιλοτιμία, καὶ διὰ τοῦτο καυχήματός ἐστι, But to preach without charging them is the honour of my will, and in that reſpect there is place of rejoicing, or I may glory or rejoice in it. So again he might have abſtained from going up to Jeruſalem, Act. 21. a Prophet told him that bands expected him there v. 11. in which caſe to flie was juſtifiable by Chriſt's ſaying, Mat. 10. 23. yet Paul would needs go up, v. 13. Of ſuch ſort of performances as theſe is that of S. Hierome ad demetriad. Vende omnia, & da pauperibus; non cogo, non impero, ſed propono palmam, præmia oſtendo, Sell all, and give to the poor; I conſtrain not, I command not, but I propoſe a crown, I ſhew thee a reward. Tuum eſt eligere, ſi volueris in agone coronari, It belongs to thee to chooſe, if thou meaneſt to be crowned. And in Epiſt. ad Pammach. Non tibi imponitur neceſſitas, ut voluntas præmium conſequatur, There is no neceſſity impoſed on thee, that the will may obtain reward. And adverſ. Jovinian. Ideo plùs amat virgines Chriſtus, quia ſponte tribuunt quod ſibi non fuerat imperatum, Chriſt therefore doth more value virgins, becauſe they give that freely which was not commanded them. And adverſ. Helvid. Virgo majoris eſt meriti dum id contemnit quod ſi fecerit non delinquit, The virgin is more rewardable, rewardable, becauſe ſhe contemns that which if ſhe indulged her ſelf ſhe offends not. And ſo S. Chryſoſtome, on Rom. 8. Οἱ πνευματικοὶ πάντα πράττουσι ἐπιθυμίᾳ καὶ πόθῳ, καὶ τοῦτο δηλοῦσι τῷ καὶ ὑπερβαίνειν τὰ ἐπιτάγματα, the ſpiritual do all with appetite and delight, and demonſtrate it in exceeding, or going farther than is commanded. And Theophylact, ὑπερβαίνουσι πολλοὶ πολλὰ τῶν ἐπιταγμάτων, many Chriſtians exceed many of the precepts. And Gregory the Great, on Job, l. 26. c. 34. Quidam præcepta legis perfectione virtutum tranſcendunt, Some men do tranſcend precepts (particular precepts) of the Law by perfection of vertues. And ſo Maimonides the ſober Jewiſh Doctor, Ei datur præmium qui quid injuſſus facit, (More Nev. l. 3. c. 17. in Buxtorfes rendring) Reward is given to him who doth any thing when he is not commanded to do it. His words in the original Arabick, ſound thus, [and they teach, that although he be not enjoined by command, yet they give him a reward.] He grants indeed, that he that being commanded doth a thing, hath the greater reward, according to the ſaying that he alludes to out of the Talmud גדול המצויה ועשה &c. Greater is he that being commanded doth a thing, than he that doth it uncommanded; and ſo the ſame Maimonides applies it, in his Yad. tr. Talmud Torah c. 1. to prove that a woman that learneth the Law, hath not ſo great a reward as a man, becauſe ſhe is not commanded to do it: But ſtill ſome reward there is of that uncommanded performance, though not ſo great. And Greg. Nazianzen hath an expreſs ſaying to this purpoſe, ταῦτα δή. d. In our law, ſaith he, ſome things are commanded, and lay a neceſſity upon us, and the not obſerving them brings danger: Others have no neceſſity, but choice, which bring honour and rewards to thoſe that do them, but no danger to them who obſerve them not. And ſo 'tis apparent by S. Paul, not only in the matter of Cœlibacy, 1 Cor. 7. 15. but alſo in his exhortation to the Corinthians, that they would equal the Macedonians in their liberality to the poor Jews; where he profeſſes not to give them precept, v. 8. but γνώμην, his advice or opinion only. In this matter there is an obſervable miſtake, which the Reader is liable to in our Anglicane Councels, p. 449. Canonibus ſub Eadgero, Can. 60. where, among other particulars, we find theſe words, pe læpaꝺ, &c. We teach that all prieſts ſhall blot out all ſuperſtitions of the Gentiles, and we forbid, pilpeop þunga, which word, from the ſound of it (wilweorthunga) is there tranſlated in Latin into fictas ad libitum adorationes, and in the margin a reference is made to ἐθελοθρησκεία will-worſhip, Col. 2. But there is a miſtake in that tranſlation, which will be evident to any, by putting theſe two things together, 1. by comparing with this place an ancient Saxon penitential, which repeats thoſe very Canons, where an ancient hand hath expounded thoſe words, by fontis veneratio, the worſhip of wells, or well-worſhip, (the probability of which interpretation will be the greater, not only by obſerving that the Saxon word pil ſignifies a well or fountain, as freqently as it doth, voluntatem, will, but alſo becauſe in this preſent Canon he ſpeaks of heathen worſhips of ſtones and trees, to which the rendring this of wells or fountains will be moſt agreeable) 2dly, by adding to this another Canon in that Penitential, l. 7. c. 22. where there is a prohibition againſt vowing or bringing alms or offerings to any well, or ſtone, or tree, or to any other creature, but only in God's name, to God's Church, and when we conſider how ordinary it was in former times to worſhip and bring offerings to wells and fountains, the reaſonableneſs of ſuch prohibitions will be acknowledged. Of which kind are divers injunctions to be ſeen, particularly in the office of Lincoln, of Oliver Sutton, againſt the worſhipping of S. Edward's well without S. Clement at Oxford, and S. Laurence's well at Petroburgh. So in a Saxon Homily of Biſhop Lupus, ſpeaking of vicious men, by the aſſault of tribulations brought to ſome ſenſe of their eſtate, he ſaith that they ſuddainly, by the ſeduction of the Devil, vow their alms oꝺꝺonꝺo þylla, oꝺꝺonꝺo ſtane, &c. fol. 6. either to well or ſtone. And in another De Baptiſmo, fol. 20. he warns them againſt Luxury, Adultery, Witchcraft, &c. and then adds nepeopꝺian ȝe pillar, &c. and worſhip not wells nor trees, &c. for all theſe are idle phantaſms of the Devil. But this by the way to prevent miſtakings.

CHAP. III.

1. If therefore ye believe the reſurrection of Chriſt and the advantages which come to you by it (among which is that Chriſtian liberty from thoſe aboliſhed Judaical obſervations, c. 2. 21.) and if ye be after the example of Chriſt, truly riſen alſo, become Chriſtians indeed, there are then other cares much more material for you to be concerned in, the ſtudy and practice of a divine celeſtial life, ſuch (for kind, though not degree) as Chriſt now lives, being by his reſurrection placed next in glory to his father in heaven.

1. IF ye then be riſen with Chriſt, ſeek thoſe things which are above, where Chriſt ſitteth on the right hand of God.]

2. Let this celeſtial purity be the copy for you to tranſcribe, and not theſe terreſtrial groſſer obſervances.

2. Set your affection on things above, not on things on the earth.]

3. For ye by your baptiſm have vowed to put off your former life, and the life which now remains for you to live, is that which Chriſt lives in heaven; a life of purity here, and of glory hereafter.

3. For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Chriſt in God.]

4. And if you live that firſt pure Chriſtian life after your divine pattern, then this ye may be ſure of, that when Chriſt comes to judge the world, all that ſhall be found ſo like unto him ſhall by him be received into the glory which he himſelf enjoys.

4. When Chriſt who is our life ſhall appear, then ſhall ye alſo appear with him in glory.]

5. This may therefore engage you to ſubdue and bring down all thoſe vitious affections that are in your members, and that favour and deſire nothing but earthly things, I mean adultery, fornication, and all ſorts of unnatural filthineſs, ſuch as is ſo ordinary among idol-worſhippers, the fouleſt parts of it admitted into their religion. See Note on Rom. 1. i. and on 1 Cor. 5. i.

5. Mortifie therefore your members which are upon the earth, fornication, uncleanneſs, * inordinate affection, evil concupiſcence, and † covetouſneſs, which is idolatry:] * paſſion παθῶ † inordinate luſting πλεονεξίαν

6. Thoſe ſins which have always brought God's judgments down upon the heathens.

6. For which things ſake the wrath of God cometh on the children of diſobedience.]

7. Of which ſins ye formerly were guilty, when ye converſed among the heathens, and followed their idol-worſhips.

7. In the which ye alſo walked ſome time, when ye lived * in them.] * among is

8. But now that you are Chriſtians, ye are obliged to put off all, not only theſe forenamed, but of the other ſort of affections, all ſudden inflammation of anger, all riſing of it to any height, all continuance of it upon you, till it be improved into malice; and for the tongue, let not that be guilty of any unſavoury, unclean, or reproachful diſcourſe.

8. But now you alſo put off all theſe, anger, wrath, malice, † blaſphemy, filthy communication out of your mouth.] * evil ſpeaking βλασφημίαν

9. Never ſuggeſt or ſay any falſe thing to the injury of another (ſee Note on Act. 5. b.) for this is a principal part of that heathen courſe which ye have renounced.

9. Lie not * one to another, ſeeing that ye have put off the old man with his deeds;] * againſt εἰς

10. Quite contrary to that ſtate of renovation which ye have undertaken, and which conſiſts in the practice of all Chriſtian vertues, after the image of God, who is all truth.

10. And have put on the new man, which is renewed † in knowledge, after the image of him that created him.] † unto knowledge

11. With whom as there is no partiality or difference put between men, but all of all ſorts, even the worſt ſorts, are accepted by Chriſt, ſo ought it be with us, toward all men, of what quality ſoever, we muſt ſhew all manner of fidelity, without any falſeneſs or injuſtice (ver. 9.) toward them.

11. Where there is neither Greek nor Jew, circumciſion nor uncircumciſion, Barbarian, Scythian, bond nor free: but Chriſt is all, and in all.] * compaſſions, bounty, οἰκτιρμοῦ, χρηστότητα,

12. See therefore that ye practiſe (as becomes thoſe who are prized and valued by God, that have the gifts of his Spirit poured out for the converting and ſanctifying of you, and thereby are

12. Put on therefore (as the elect of God, holy and beloved) bowels of * mercy, kindneſs, humbleneſs of mind, meekneſs, long-ſuffering,] are obliged to all that is moſt excellent) the higheſt degrees of Chriſtian kindneſs and liberality, that ye think very meanly of your ſelves, be very mild, hard to be provoked with injuries, never thinking of revenge,

13. Forbearing one another, and forgiving one another, if any man have a quarrel againſt any: even as Chriſt forgave you, ſo alſo do ye.] 13. Shewing that readineſs to be reconciled to them that have wronged you, that ye have found, and which it extremely concerns you to find in Chriſt toward you.

14. And above all theſe things put on charity, which is the [b] bond of perfectneſs.] 14. And over all put on that excellent Chriſtian grace of charity, that love of others, founded in Chriſt's love to you, and to all others, even his enemies, which will keep you united one to another in an indiſſoluble bond, much more perfectly than any other obligation can do, or, which is the obligation to all mercifulneſs, whether in giving or forgiving. b.

15. And let the [c] peace of God † rule in your hearts, to the which alſo ye are called in one body, and be ye thankful.] 15. And let Chriſtian peace and union (ſee Phil. 4. Note b.) be the moderator and guide in all your actions, and do all that may tend to that end, it being the prime thing to which your Chriſtianity obliges you, and your being fellow-members of Chriſt with all others: To which ye may alſo take in that obligation of gratitude to God, who hath been thus merciful to you, and ſolemnly expects this return from you, to be to others as he hath been to you. c.

16. Let the word of God dwell in you richly in all wiſdom, teaching and admoniſhing one another in pſalms and hymns and ſpiritual ſongs, ſinging with grace in your hearts to the Lord.] 16. Let the doctrine of the Goſpel continue and abide in you, and bring forth abundant fruit in all actions of ſpiritual wiſdom, that is, piety. Of this ſort is the adviſing and admoniſhing of others in all things wherein ye can be helpful unto them; and ſuch is ſinging in a pious Chriſtian manner, (ſee Epheſ. 5. c.) that is, bleſſing and praiſing God (ſee Mat. 14. c.) heartily and affectionately, in all the ſeveral ways uſual to that purpoſe (ſee Epheſ. 5. 19.)

17. And whatſoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jeſus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him.] 17. And whatſoever ye do or ſpeak, let it be with acknowledgment of the great mercies of Chriſt to you, that hath enabled you to do whatever it is, and for this mercy reached out in him, let God the Father have the honour and thanks.

18. Wives, ſubmit your ſelves unto your own husbands, as it is fit in the Lord.] 18. Let the wives pay fitting ſubjection to their husbands, and count it their Chriſtian duty to do ſo.

19. Husbands love your wives, and be not bitter againſt them.] 19. And upon the ſame account let the husbands be kind to their wives, and not provoke them by unkind behaviour.

20. Children, obey your parents in all things: for this is well-pleaſing unto the Lord.] 20. So again children are by their Chriſtianity ſo far from being ſet free from their obedience to their parents in any matter, that they are by that very relation obliged to it.

* give not ill words to your children

21. Fathers, [d] * provoke not your children to anger, leſt they be diſcouraged.] 21. The parents on the other ſide are taught their duty toward their children, not to rate or brawl with them, nor to reprove them cauſeleſly, leſt that be a diſcouragement to them. d.

22. Servants, obey in all things your maſters according to the fleſh: not with eye ſervice as men-pleaſers, but in ſingleneſs of heart, fearing God.] 22. Servants, of what ſort ſoever, muſt pay obedience to thoſe which, according to the laws of men, have the rule over them, and not pretend any liberty from Chriſt to do otherwiſe, and their obedience muſt be performed ſincerely for conſcience ſake to God, and not only in thoſe things whereto the maſter's eye can reach.

† or ſerving the Lord and not men, for the King's MS. reads τῷ κυρίῳ δουλεύοντες

23. And whatſoever ye do, do it heartily, as † to the Lord, and not unto men.] 23. And in all your ſervices do heartily and willingly what is required of you, without complaining or murmuring, knowing that your obedience to your maſters is a duty to God:

24. Knowing that of the Lord ye ſhall receive the reward of the inheritance, for ye ſerve the Lord Chriſt.] 24. From whom conſequently you ſhall receive your reward, that portion which belongs to you, for Chriſt is a maſter that will not ſuffer any ſervice performed on his command to be unrewarded.

25. But he that doth wrong, ſhall receive for the wrong that he hath done; and there is no reſpect of perſons.] 25. As on the other ſide, he that doth any thing amiſs againſt the law of Chriſt, whether ſervant toward maſter, or maſter toward ſervant, ſhall not eſcape puniſhment by being a Chriſtian, God ſhall deal with him according to the rules of juſtice, whatſoever he is, and neither favour the ſervants pretenſions againſt the maſter, nor the maſters againſt the ſervants.

Annotations on Chap. III.

a. εἰς ἐπίγνωσιν

V. 10. In knowledge] What εἰς ἐπίγνωσιν ſignifies here is ſomewhat uncertain. If the Prepoſition εἰς be taken by an Hebraiſm for ἐν in or by, then it denotes the means of working our renovation, the knowledge of the Goſpel, in which our pattern is ſet, according to which we are to form our lives for the future; and this is generally expreſſed by ἐπίγνωσις ἀληθείας the acknowledgment of the truth, 1 Tim. 2. 4. Tit. 1. 1. Heb. 10. 26. But it is poſſible alſo that εἰς being taken in the proper notion of it, ἐπίγνωσις may be ſet in oppoſition, or by way of ſuperaddition, to γνῶσις knowledge, which the Gnoſticks boaſted of, and from whence they had their name, and with it joined all vitious corrupt practices; whereupon he requires his Coloſſians to forſake thoſe ſins, and to be renewed to that which the Gnoſticks have not attained to, εἰς ἐπίγνωσιν to acknowledgment, or diſcerning, that is, the experimental, practical knowledge of God's goodneſs to us in regenerating (which is more than the firſt creating) us after his own image, to live according to the divine pattern which he hath ſet us.

b. Συνδέσμῳ τελειότητος

V. 14. Bond of perfectneſs] Συνδέσμῳ τελειότητος, bond of perfectneſs may be, by an hypallage, the moſt perfect bond. But it may be alſo bond of perfectneſs in that notion that perfect Mat. 5. 48. is all one with merciful Lu. 6. 36. for ſo the Chriſtian charity, that is a tranſcript of Chriſt's love to us, is a conſpiration or meeting together (ſo συνδέσμος may ſignifie, ſee note on Act. 8. e.) of all mercifulneſs, or elſe an obligation to it.

c. βραβεῖον

V. 15. Peace of God rule——] Βραβεῖον as it is an Agoniſtical word for the ἐπινίκιον ἄμοιβὴν the reward of the Conqueror, hath been already ſpoken of. Hence the βραβεῦαι are the διοικηταὶ ἀγῶνος, they that adjudge and give this reward to thoſe to whom it belongs, the rulers or adminiſtrators of the combat, and they that decide all controverſies about it. Hence is the word uſed for διαλλακτὴς, ſaith Phavorinus, an umpire, or daies-man, that reconciles doubts or differences between any; and accordingly βραβεύετω, ſaith he, (referring, as I conceive, to this place) μεσιτευέτω, μεσιτευσάτω, ἰθυνέτω. and ſo here, let the peace of God, that peaceable-mindedneſs that Chriſt commandeth you, Mat. 5. be the umpire to compoſe all differences between you and other men.

d. ἐρεθίζειν

V. 21. Provoke] Ἐρέθισμα is ὕβρεις, contumely, ſaith Phavorinus, and ἐρεθίζειν κακολογίαν δηλοῖ παρ' Ὁμήρῳ it ſignifies evil ſpeaking in Homer, and πᾶς ἐρεθισμὸς ἐν χαλεποῖς μύθοις γίνεται δοκεῖ, it conſiſts in hard or bitter words, The word ſignifies contumelious, harſh language; and that is moſt likely to be the meaning here, becauſe of the mention of the θυμῶσιν, that is here added, ſuch words in parents being apt to diſcourage children.

1. MAſters, * give unto your ſervants that which is juſt and equal, knowing that ye alſo have a maſter in heaven.] 1. You that are maſters, deal juſtly and indifferently with your ſervants, require no more than they are able to perform, give them what is fit for them, reward the more diligent with more kindneſs; and the ſame dealing that you deſire to receive from God, do you ſhew to them.

3. Withal praying alſo for us, that God would open unto us a door of utterance, to *ſpeak the myſtery of Chriſt, for which alſo I am in bonds:]

* or, ſpeak with boldneſs, for the King's MS. reads ἐν παῤῥησίᾳ

4. And that I may do it in ſuch a manner as is my duty to do.

4. That I may make it manifeſt, as I ought to ſpeak.]

5. Behave your ſelves with all Chriſtian circumſpection in reſpect of the heathens among whom ye live, that ye neither be corrupted by their ſenſual baits, nor give them any matter of ſcandal or averſion to the faith, but conſidering the danger of your preſent condition, apply your ſelves to it as circumſpectly, and as prudently as ye can: ſee Note on Epheſ. 5. c.

5. Walk in wiſdom toward them that are without, redeeming the time.]

6. Let your diſcourſe be always gracious, pure and Chriſtian, (ſee Note on Epheſ. 5. c.) or chearful and merry: but then, as it is ſuch on one ſide, ſo muſt it be alſo ſavory, diſcreet and ſeaſonable, ſeaſoned with prudence that may make it wholſom to the hearers, accommodating it dexterouſly and skilfully to every man's condition, and capacity, and wants.

6. Let your ſpeech be alway with grace, ſeaſoned with ſalt, that ye may know how ye ought to anſwer every man.]

7. All things wherein I am concerned ſhall be declared to you by Tychicus, one that is employed by me as an aſſiſtant, and intruſted (for his approved fidelity) in preaching the Goſpel to thoſe I cannot come to:

7. †All my ſtate ſhall Tychicus declare unto you, who is a beloved brother, and a faithful miniſter and fellow-ſervant in the Lord:]

† All that concerns me τὰ κατ' ἐμὲ πάντα

10. (who hath been recommended to you (probably by letters from Barnabas) to which alſo I deſire to add mine, and requeſt you to treat him with all reſpect when he comes unto you)

11. And Jeſus, who is called Juſtus, who are of the circumciſion. Theſe only are my fellow-workers unto the kingdom of God, which have been a comfort unto me.]

11. Which Mark, and Jeſus, called by the Romans Juſtus, are Jews, and are the only men that have here of late at Rome aſſiſted me in any work of the Goſpel, and from whom I have received great comfort and advantage.

12. Epaphras, who is * one of you, a ſervant of Chriſt, ſaluteth you, always labouring fervently for you in prayers, that ye may ſtand perfect and complete in all the will of God.]

12. Epaphras, that preached the Goſpel among you c. 1. 7. and is now elſewhere performing ſervice to Chriſt, wiſhes you all happineſs, and daily prays earneſtly to Chriſt for you, that ye may continue undefiled from the ſeduction of hereticks, and grow to a full maturity of Chriſtian knowledge and practice.

* of, or from you, ὁ ἐξ ὑμῶν

13. For I bear him record that he hath † a great zeal for you, and them that are in Laodicea, and in Hierapolis.]

13. And I can teſtifie for him, that he is extremely kind, and induſtrious for your good, and not for yours only, but for thoſe two other cities of Phrygia, in the converting of which he was made uſe of, Laodicea and Hierapolis.

17. And ſay to [b] Archippus, Take heed to the miniſtery which thou haſt received in the Lord, that thou fulfil it.]

b. 17. And bid Archippus (who now probably was placed and reſided Biſhop at Coloſſæ) be careful to diſcharge that truſt duly which from Chriſt is committed to him.

18. * The ſalutation by the hand of me Paul. Remember my bonds.] Grace be with you. Amen.

* The ſalutation of Paul by my own hand, ὁ ἀσπασμὸς τῇ ἐμῇ χειρὶ Παύλου

18. This foregoing Epiſtle being written by a Scribe or Amanuenſis, I now conclude it with mine own hand, and thereby ſalute you, and commend my love unto you. And particularly I would have you remember, that I am perſecuted, and now impriſoned for preaching to the Gentiles the Goſpel of Chriſt; and do ye prepare your ſelves that ye may be armed for the like, and be kind to me, who am ſo kind to you Gentiles as to ſuffer for you.

Written from Rome to the Coloſſians by Tychicus and Oneſimus.

Annotations on Chap. IV.

a. ἡ ἐκ Λαοδικείας

V. 16. From Laodicea] If the right reading in this place be ἡ ἐκ Λαοδικείας, that from Laodicea, then the meaning of it may be, That Epiſtle which the Laodiceans have received, do you, when you ſend them a copy of this, require a copy of, and when you have received it, read it in your aſſembly. But if ἡ Λαοδικείας, without ἐκ be the truer reading, then it muſt be rendred that of Laodicea, noting again ſome Epiſtle ſent to them, and in their poſſeſſion, according to that of the Civil law, L. ſi Epiſtolam, D. de acquir. Rer. domin. Literæ ejus ſunt cujus tabellario ſunt traditæ, multo magis ubi ſunt redditæ, An Epiſtle is his to whoſe meſſenger 'tis delivered, eſpecially when 'tis received by him. And ſo which way ſoever it is, it refers to ſome Epiſtle ſent to the Laodiceans, which Tertullian againſt Marcion ſeems to affirm of that Epiſtle which is now inſcribed to the Epheſians, that a copy of it was written to the Laodiceans, which, if it were done by S. Paul, is yet very reaſonable to imagine to be ſent from Epheſus to them. For Epheſus being the chief Metropolis of Aſia, and Laodicea, being a Church within that circuit, as appears Rev. 1. 11. as the Epiſtle written to the Corinthians belonged to all the Churches of Achaia, 2 Cor. 1. 1. and ſo no doubt was copied out and communicated to them, and as the letter from the Council of Jeruſalem to the Church of Antioch did belong alſo to all Syria and Cilicia, and was by Paul communicated to all the Churches thereof, Act. 16. 4. and as the Epiſtles to the Theſſalonians are ſaid to belong alſo to Philippi, another Metropolis of Macedonia (and thereupon Polycarp in his Epiſtle to the Philippians, mentions ἐπιστολαὶ Epiſtles in the Plural, which Paul had ſent to them, whereas there is but one now known to be inſcribed to the Philippians) and laſtly, as here the Epiſtle to the Coloſſians is expreſly directed to be communicated to the Laodiceans, and this to be ſent from Laodicea to Coloſſæ; ſo there is no difficulty to conceive that the Epiſtle to the Epheſians was by them communicated (as by Paul meant) to the Laodiceans alſo, and ſo may fitly be called ἡ Λαοδικείας, the Epiſtle of Laodicea, or which the Church of Laodicea had received.

b. Ἔπαφρᾶς Ἀρχίπ-πῳ

V. 17. Archippus] It is the opinion of ſome that Epaphras was at this time Biſhop of Coloſſæ, but impriſoned at Rome with Paul, and that Archippus did now in

in his abſence ſupply his place. That Epaphras was about this time priſoner at Rome is concluded probably by Philem. 23. where he calls him συναιχμάλωτον his fellow-priſoner, (for that that Epiſtle to Philemon and this were written from Rome about the ſame time will be conjectured by the naming Timothy at the beginning, and all the ſame perſons, (ſave only Juſtus) as Epaphras, Marcus, Ariſtarchus, Demas, Lucas, at the end of both of them) but that he was then Biſhop of Coloſſæ appeareth not, onely he is here ſaid ver. 12. to be ἐξ ὑμῶν δοῦλος Χριστοῦ, one of them, or that came from them, a ſervant of Chriſt, that heartily prayed for, and had great kindneſs toward them. But all this may well belong to him as the perſon who, by Commiſſion from Paul, had preached the Goſpel to them, and ſo being their ſpiritual father might be allowed to love them paſſionately, and to be very ſolicitous of their proſpering. And then it will be more probable that Archippus ſhould be their Biſhop, of whom it is here affirmed, that he had received διακονίαν ἐν Κυρίῳ, a Miniſtery in the Lord: where it is certain that the διακονία miniſtery ſignifies an office in the Church, which he is to take care that he perform. And it is no way neceſſary, that it ſhould denote the inferior office of Deacon, (or if it did, that would not ſufficiently qualifie him to ſupply the Biſhop's or Ruler's place, whoſe attendant the Deacon was) but in a greater latitude the Epiſcopal function, which being an authority and preſidency over the flock, is yet, like that of a Paſtor, a laborious one, to attend and wait on them, as Chriſt, who being the Lord (Κύριος) of his diſciples, was yet as the ὁ διακονῶν he that miniſtred unto them, waſhing their feet, &c. and ſo καλὸν ἔργον, a good work, 1 Tim. 3. 1. that is, an office of task and miniſtery.

THE First EPISTLE of PAUL the APOSTLE TO THE a THESSALONIANS.

THat the Epiſtles to the Theſſalonians, though placed laſt of all thoſe which were written to whole Churches, were firſt in order of writing, hath been ſaid Note b. on the Inſcription of the Epiſtle to the Romans. And the time and place of writing this are perhaps diſcoverable, by comparing one paſſage 1 Theſſ. 3. 6. with Act. 18. 5. He had ſent Timothy from Athens to encourage and confirm them, c. 3. 1, 2. and that with ſome impatience to hear of them, v. 5. [And when Timothy now came to us from you, and told us the good news of your faith and love, v. 6. we were comforted, &c.] Now the ſtory of this we have diſtinctly in the Acts; Paul had preached at Theſſalonica, Act. 17. 2. and ſome of them, that is, of the Jews in the Synagogue there, v. 1. and many others of the Gentile inhabitants, v. 4. (referr'd to 1 Theſſ. 1. 10.) were perſuaded, that is, received the faith, v. 4. But upon a perſecution raiſed by others of the Jews, and their Proſelytes, he, and Silas, (and Timotheus, it ſeems, v. 14.) were driven thence, and came to Beræa; and being followed thither by thoſe perſecuters, Paul went to the ſea, and from thence to Athens, v. 14, 15. and Silas and Timotheus, which are ſaid to be left at Beræa, c. 17. 14. are warned to make all haſt to him, v. 15. and at Athens Paul expects them, v. 16. and though it be not mentioned in the ſtory, yet it is to be ſuppoſed that they came thither to him, and from thence were diſpatch'd to Theſſalonica, Paul being content to ſtay at Athens alone, out of his earneſt deſire to confirm them by this diſpatch, and to hear from them, which is the ſumm of ch. 3. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6. From Theſſalonica they return to him, and find him at Corinth, Act. 18. 5. (for that is the meaning of ἀπὸ Μακεδονίας there, from Macedonia, of which Theſſalonica was a Metropolis) and after this return of Timotheus it is that S. Paul writes this Epiſtle, for elſe he could not mention it, as he doth ch. 3. 6. And conſequently the place from whence this (and ſo all the other Epiſtle) was written to them, may moſt probably ſeem to be Corinth, where he is ſaid to have ſtayed a year and ſix months, Act. 18. 11. Or if the ſubſcription be authentick which dates it from Athens, it muſt be at ſome other time of his being at Athens, and not at that, Act. 17. (before his coming to Corinth) Paul being gone from thence before Timotheus came to him. And this gives us an evidence by the way that Silas and Silvanus are all one; he that under the name of Silas is joined with Paul Act. 17. 4. and with Timotheus v. 15. being under the name of Silvanus joined with Paul and Timotheus in the inſcription of this Epiſtle, Paul and Silvanus and Timotheus, &c. ch. 1. 1. By this alſo the time of the writing this is concluſible, viz. about his firſt preaching at Corinth, which is placed by Chronologers in the fiftieth year of Chriſt, at the time of the expulſion of the Jews from Rome by Claudius (Act. 18. 2.) that is, in the ninth of his reign, as Oroſius concludes out of Joſephus. This being thus far cleared, we cannot but diſcern the occaſion of writing this Epiſtle, viz. the perſecutions of thoſe that received the faith, and of Paul that preach'd it among them, which was brought upon them by the Jews (and their Proſelytes) that believed not, in Theſſalonica, and through all Macedonia. He had, it ſeems, at the firſt preaching the Goſpel unto them, told them what they were to expect, very ſharp perſecutions (ch. 3. 4.) from the Jews, and Judaizers their Proſelytes, exaſperated by them, but withal, he had advertiſed them what fate ſhould ſhortly befal theſe obdurate Jews and their adherents, viz. that Chriſt ſhould act revenge upon them (in an eminent manner) from heaven, by that power by which he roſe from the dead, and then deliver them from the oppreſſions they were under, and all that their enemies malice or their own fears could repreſent unto them, c. 1. 10. and c. 2. 15, 16. and c. 5. 1. And this was the occaſion of all that he after ſaith, 2 Theſſ. 2. of the coming of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and the day of Chriſt, v. 1, 2, &c. of which ſaith he, v. 5. he had told them when he was with them. All which was exactly fulfilled in the perſecutions brought on the Chriſtians by the Jews and Gnoſticks, and the deſtructions that ſoon after attended upon them. And this was by him very fitly inſiſted on about this time, Simon Magus having already (ſoon after the beginning of Claudius's reign, as Euſebius ſets it, l. 2. c. 12.) ſet himſelf up at Rome (and a ſtatue erected to him) as the ſupreme God, and ſo being already capable of the titles of ἀνθιχείμενος, and ὑπεραίρομενος, &c. he that ſets himſelf up above all that is called God. But being by the preaching of Peter (mentioned by * Euſebius † S. Jerom, and * Oroſius) put to ſhame, and his power extinguiſh'd there at that time, (ἡ τοῦ Σίμωνος ἀπίσθη καὶ πρόσκομμα καταλέλυτο δυνάμις, ſaith Euſebius) it was ſome time before he got up again, and yet longer before theſe Gnoſticks his followers found it ſeaſonable to break out in profeſs'd hoſtility againſt the Orthodox Chriſtians, which is called the Revealing of this man of ſin, 2 Theſſ. 2. 3. What is ſaid in theſe Epiſtles on this ſubject, was fitly deſigned to confirm the believers in Macedonia, that the perſecutions which were thus ſtirred up among them, and the baits of carnality and worldly advantages offered them, might not delude or gain in upon them.

Paraphraſe. CHAP. I.

1. Paul the Apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt, and thoſe two, Silvanus and Timotheus, which came along with me, as companions and partners of my labours in Macedonia, to that Aſſembly of Chriſtians that reſide in and appertain to Theſſalonica, that Metropolis of Macedonia, which, by the grace of God and Goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt preached by me, have been called and converted to the faith; we moſt kindly ſalute you, and wiſh all divine mercy and proſperity to you.

1. PAUL and Silvanus and Timotheus unto the Church of the Theſſalonians, which is in God the Father, and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt; Grace be unto you, and peace from God our father, and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.]

2. We give thanks to God always for you all, making mention of you in our prayers,

3. Bleſſing God for that obedience which your faith, that induſtry which your love, that indurance and conſtancy which your hope in Chriſt hath wrought in you, ſuch as is required of you, and will be acceptable in the ſight of God:

3. Remembring without ceaſing your work of faith, and labour of love, and patience of hope in our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, in the ſight of God and our father:]

4. Knowing, my beloved brethren, the ſpecial favour of God in decreeing to beſtow the Goſpel on you, to reveal Chriſt to you, being Gentiles, above that which you had reaſon to expect or hope.

4. Knowing, brethren beloved, your election of God.]

5. * For

5. * For our Goſpel came not unto you in word onely, but alſo in power and in the Holy Ghoſt, and in much † aſſurance, as ye know what manner of men we * were among you for your ſake.

5. In conſequence to which it was that I was appointed by God in a viſion, Act. 16. 9. to come and preach unto you, and accordingly I did, Act. 17. 1. and that with miracles and extraordinary gifts, (ſee Note on 1 Cor. 2. a.) and matter of abundant conviction, as you know how we behaved our ſelves toward you, that we might work, and gain you to Chriſt.

6. And ye became † followers of us and of the Lord, having received the word in much affliction, with joy of the Holy Ghoſt:]

6. And ye very chearfully and readily received us, being content to ſuffer as the Apoſtles and Chriſt had done before you, embracing the Goſpel, though accompanied with perſecution, with moſt Chriſtian joy.

7. So that ye were enſamples to all that believe in Macedonia and Achaia.

7. And this in ſo eminent a manner, that your example had an happy influence, raiſed an emulation in all the Chriſtians of the other cities of Macedonia, and alſo of Greece; as Corinth, and Athens.

8. For from you ſounded out the word of the Lord, not onely in Macedonia and Achaia, but alſo in every place your faith to Godward * is ſpread abroad, ſo that we need not to ſpeak any thing.]

8. For from the plantation and good ſucceſs of the Goſpel among you it was, that many others in thoſe places were inclined to receive the faith, and ſo your converſion being ſo eminently taken notice of, I need ſay no more in praiſe or congratulation of it.

9. For they themſelves † ſhew of us, what manner of entring in we had unto you, and how ye turned to God from Idols, to ſerve the living and true God,]

9. Every man's mouth being full of it, how readily we were entertained by you, and how really and effectually ye converted from heatheniſm to Chriſtianity,

10. And to wait for his Son from heaven, whom he raiſed from the dead, even Jeſus, which delivered us from the wrath to come.]

10. In full belief in Chriſt, and aſſurance of hope that Chriſt, that was by God's infinite power raiſed from the dead, will protect and deliver his faithful ſervants from that vengeance which will finally and eternally involve all others: An eſſay of which vengeance and deliverance he will e'er long ſhew on the perſecutors, and the believers which are now perſecuted by them.

CHAP. II.

Paraphraſe.

1. FOR your ſelves, brethren, know our entrance in unto you, that it was not * a in vain.

1. For ye, brethren, without my affirming it, know ſufficiently that our coming and preaching was far from being deceitful, or to any treacherous aim of advantage or gain upon you.

2. But even after that we had ſuffered before, and were ſhamefully intreated, as ye know, at Philippi, we were bold in our God to ſpeak unto you the Goſpel of God with much [b] contention.]

2. But having had diſcouragements ſufficient at Philippi, moſt reproachfully handled there, we yet took courage to proceed (ſee Note on Joh. 7. a.) and came to your city, and preached the Goſpel there, though we were very much oppoſed there alſo.

3. For our † exhortation was not of [c] deceit, nor of uncleanneſs, nor in guile:]

3. For my preaching the Goſpel unto you was not to ſeduce any, nor to corrupt any, (as the Gnoſticks do their converts) nor out of any wily worldly end or deſign, to raiſe ſeditions, &c. as many of their falſe Chriſts had done:

4. But as we * were allowed of God to be put in truſt with the Goſpel, even ſo we ſpeak, not as pleaſing men, but God, which trieth our hearts.]

4. But as God was pleaſed to chooſe me to be an Apoſtle, to think me meet for ſo great a truſt, ſo have I endeavoured to approve my ſelf to God in the diſcharge of it, not mentioning thoſe things to you which you were likely to be moſt pleaſed with (for I knew that the Goſpel, which coſt me ſo many perſecutions, would coſt you ſo too, and that, requiring all purity, it hath nothing in it grateful to fleſh and blood) but thoſe which are moſt likely to approve us all to God, which approveth nothing but purity and ſincerity.

5. For neither at any time * [d] uſed we flattering words, as ye know, † nor a [e] cloak of covetouſneſs; God is witneſs.]

5. For I believe no man ever accuſed me of flattering you with pleaſing doctrines (as the Gnoſticks do) or of indulging to you any kind of inordinate luſt or filthineſs, v. 3. (ſee Note on Rom. 1. i.) This you know, and God is witneſs that I was far from being guilty of it.

6. Nor of men ſought we glory, neither of you, nor yet of others, when we might have * been [f] burthenſome as the Apoſtles of Chriſt.]

6. Neither did we deſire to appear before you or others as perſons of any great authority, which yet we had, and might have exerciſed as Apoſtles of Chriſt.

7. But we were gentle among you, even as a nurſe cheriſheth † her children:]

7. But I have ſtill dealt with you in all mildneſs and tenderneſs imaginable, the ſame which is diſcernable in a nurſe to a child, of which, by feeding and making much of him, ſhe becomes extremely fond.

8. So * being [g] affectionately deſirous of you, we † were willing to have imparted unto you, not the Goſpel of God onely, but alſo our own ſouls, becauſe ye were dear unto us.]

8. In like manner I confeſs my ſelf to have an huge tenderneſs and fondneſs of love toward you, ſo that now having done you that greateſt good, preached the Goſpel to you, and nouriſh'd you up in the faith, I have nothing too dear for you, not my life it ſelf, (which is frequently called the ſoul in theſe books, ſee Note on ch. 5. f.) if it may ſtand you in any ſtead.

9. For ye remember, brethren, our * labour and travel: for labouring night and day, becauſe we would not be chargeable unto any of you, we preached unto you the Goſpel of God.]

9. An evidence of which I then gave you, and ye cannot but remember it, how that, beſide the ſufferings which I bare (ſee Note b.) I always laboured in my trade extremely hard, that ſo I might preach the Goſpel to you, and yet not put you to charges.

10. Ye are witneſſes and God alſo, how holily and juſtly and unblameably we behaved our ſelves among you that believe:]

10. You, I ſay, know and can witneſs, and I doubt not of God's teſtimony, how I and the reſt of us, Silvanus and Timothy, have behaved our ſelves toward you that have received the faith, in the performance of all duties toward God and man, ſo as we cannot be blamed or charged by any:

11. As you know how we exhorted, and comforted, and charged every one of you, (as a father doth his children)]

11. Dealing with you as a father doth with his own children, every one of you ſingle, as if every one of you were my child, calling upon you to do your duty, and cheering you up to perſevere againſt all diſcouragements,

12. That ye would walk worthy of God, who hath called you unto his kingdom and glory.]

12. And conjuring you by all the obligations imaginable, that your converſation ſhould be ſome way proportionable to what God hath done for you in calling you to the honour and privilege of being Chriſtians here, and, if you continue conſtant in the faith, glorified Saints in heaven.

13. For this cauſe alſo thank we God without ceaſing, † becauſe when ye received the word of God which ye heard of us, ye received it not as the word of men, but (as it is in truth) the word of God, which * [h] effectually worketh alſo in you that believe.]

13. And herein we have matter of continual joy and thankſgiving to God on your behalf, that when we thus preached the Goſpel to you ye received it readily, not as any doctrine of ours, but as the Goſpel of Chriſt ſent by God from heaven, and which being thus embraced and believed by you, hath alſo attained that end, that perfection, that accompliſhment among you, which every where belongs to it, viz. to bring on them that embrace it the honour of being perſecuted for it, and glorifying God by that means, and withal to give them ſtrength to enable them to bear it Chriſtianly.

14. For ye, brethren, became followers of the Churches of God which in Judea are in Chriſt Jeſus: for ye alſo have ſuffered like things of your own [i] country-men, even as they have of the Jews,]

14. For as it fell out with the Churches of Chriſt in Judea, all that believed and held held faſt to Chriſt, have ſtill been perſecuted by the unbelieving Jews, ſo hath it fallen out to you, your own country-men, the unbelieving Jews among you, have in like manner perſecuted you, as the Jewiſh unbelievers have perſecuted the Chriſtian Jews.

Annotations on Chap. II.

a. Κενὸς

V. 1. In vain] The word κενὸς empty, idle, vain, is known to be proportionable to the Hebrew שוא, which (in the third Commandment and many other places) being rendred vain doth yet ſignifie falſe, viz. empty or void of truth. And ſo here being applied to S. Paul's εἴσοδ⊙ entrance unto them, that is, his firſt preaching the Goſpel to them, it doth not ſignifie the uneffectualneſs of it, or want of ſucceſs among them, for that he had ſpoken of c. 1. 9. but, as the conſequents here manifeſt, the fallaciouſneſs or treacherouſneſs of his aim in coming, which that it was not imputable to him he here proves v. 2. by remembring them of the entertainment which he found at Philippi, very far from ſuch as would encourage a worldly deſigner from going any farther, nothing but perſecution and tribulations: and then, ver. 3. he expreſly adds to this matter, ἡ παράκλησις ἡμῶν οὐκ ἐκ πλάνης, Our exhortation was not out of deceit, or that I might deceive.

b. ἀγῶν

V. 2. Contention] The word ἀγὼν, ſtrife or contention, may be taken in an Active or in a Paſſive ſenſe, that is, either for labour, or ſufferance, both in an high degree. In the former ſenſe it is, when Chriſt commands us, ἀγωνίζεσθε, to ſtrive to enter in at the ſtraight gate, that is, to be very diligent and induſtrious. In the latter it is Heb. 12. 1. being joined with ὑπομονὴ ſufferance, and perſevering, and afflictions, mentioned before c. 11. and after v. 2, &c. ſo Phil. 1. 30. and Col. 1. 29. where ἀγωνιζόμεν⊙ ſtriving, is bearing, ſuffering afflictions, and ſo more fit to be joined with κοπιῶ, toyling, or ſuffering hardſhip, there; for ſo κόπ⊙ ſignifies, the toil, or pains, in bearing, as μόχθ⊙ in doing ver. 9. So 1 Tim. 4. 10. where we ordinarily read ὀνειδιζόμεθα ſuffer reproaches, the King's MS. reads ἀγωνιζόμεθα we combat, that is, ſuffer perſecutions, (which is joined with κοπιῶμεν alſo) which they that do, do it in hope and truſt in the living God, which can and will reward all their ſufferings. And this is agreeable to the nature of the agones, combats, or games among the Grecians, whereof the Poet ſaith, κόπ⊙ μόχθ⊙

Hor. de Ar. Po. Multa tulit fecitque—— v. 413

it is made up of doing and ſuffering both. And ſo we have ἄθλησιν παθημάτων combat of ſufferings, Heb. 10. 32. and of the women Phil. 4. 3. αἵτινες ἐν εὐαγγελίῳ συνήθλησάν μοι, which combated, or contended, that is, ſuffered perſecutions, together with me in the Goſpel. And ſo here it is to be taken in this latter ſenſe, though that alſo added to the former, endurance and diligence both, great induſtry and labour in preaching the Goſpel to them, and withal great perſecution for ſo doing. For ſo it is in the beginning of the verſe, προπαθόντες καὶ ὑβρισθέντες, ſufferings and contumelious reproachful uſage, ſuch are ſcourgings, &c. and thus Phil. 1. 30. τὸν αὐτὸν ἀγῶνα, the ſame combat, is the enduring perſecution, expreſſed by συμπλήρωσε τὴν πίστ⊙ ver. 27. the word uſed in the agones.

Ἄθλησις

So 2 Tim. 4. 7. the fight, or combat, ſeems to refer to that which he had then lately paſt through at Rome, before Nero's tribunal, v. 16, 17.

c. πλάνη

V. 3. Deceit] That πλάνη, which ſignifies deceit, errour, is uſed not onely Paſſively for being deceived by others, but eſpecially Actively for deceiving and ſeducing others, will appear at large, Note on Jude f. And ſo alſo that in the Epiſtles it refers eſpecially to theſe grand ſeducers that were then a-foot, ſo rife in the Churches, the Gnoſticks, whoſe hereſie being accompanied with ſo much uncleanneſs and carnality, whereſoever the πλάνη or ſeduction is joined with words that expreſs or intimate that, there is great reaſon thus to interpret it. Thus Theophylact's gloſs intimates, οὐκ ἀκάθαρτόν τι διδάσκω, ſaith he, οἷα τὰ τῶν μάγων καὶ γοήτων, I teach not any impurity, ſuch as are the doctrines or practices of the Magi and Sorcerers. And accordingly here ἀκαθαρσία uncleanneſs (and that word ſignifies all manner of unnatural luſts) being ſubjoined to πλάνη deceit, or ſeduction, it muſt be thought to refer to theſe practices of thoſe ſeducing hereticks, to whom S. Paul deſireth to oppoſe his own dealing among them, at once vindicating his own ſimplicity and uprightneſs, and accuſing them for the contrary. He came merely to convert them from all the villanies that they, while they were Idolaters, had lived in, and doing ſo, ſuffered great hardſhip of perſecutions; but they (which took ſure care not to be perſecuted) infuſed into them all falſe heretical doctrines and corrupt practices, uncleanneſs and villany. They ſlily ſtole in ἐν δόλῳ in cunning, but he παῤῥησιαζόμεν⊙, v. 2. took all boldneſs and confidence to preach publickly the Goſpel unto them.

d. Λόγ⊙

V. 5. Uſed we flattering——] Λόγ⊙ ſignifies talk, diſcourſe of men, and ſo ἐν λόγῳ εἶναι to be on the tongues of men, and ἐν λόγῳ κολακείας γενέσθαι, to be talked of for flattery, to be accuſed by men for this fault.

c. Πρόφασις

Ib. Cloke of covetouſneſs] Πρόφασις ſignifies not only an occaſion and pretence, but alſo an accuſation, or charge, againſt any. So ſaith Phavorinus, Πρόφασις, αἰτία, ἀφορμὴ, 'tis a charge, an occaſion, againſt any; and again, Πεσλεγόμεν⊙ ὑπερόσωπ⊙ λόγ⊙ ἐπὶ καλῃσοείᾳ τινὸς, a long and ſpecious oration in accuſation of any man: and therefore the rendring Πεοφασίζω by λαλιγισὶ ἐκκόσω, may be a falſe print for ἐκκόψω accuſo; for that will beſt agree with Πεοσβάλλομαι, ὑπολογίζομαι, ὑπονοῶ, words that note accuſing and ſuſpecting, that went before. And ſo again, πρόφασις καὶ ἡ ἀληθὴς καὶ ἡ ψευδὴς αἰτία, it is either a true or falſe accuſation. So προφασιτικοὶ λόγοι עלילות דברים are clancular depravings of mens reputations, raiſing ſuſpicions of them: ſo Dan. 6. 4. ἐζήτουν πρόφασιν εὑρεῖν κατὰ τοῦ Δανιὴλ, they ſought ſome occaſion, that is, accuſation, againſt Daniel. As for the πλεονεξία that is joined with it, that ſignifies ſometimes unnatural luſts and filthineſs, as hath been formerly ſhewed, Note on Rom. 1. h. and

ſo it ſeems to ſignifie here, and to anſwer ἀκαθαρσία uncleanneſs, v. 3. ſo notorious among the Gnoſticks, which were the peſt of Chriſtianity at that time.

f. βάρος

V. 6. Burthenſom] βάρος weight is here taken for the cenſures of the Church, the exerciſe of that Apoſtolical authority and ſeverity; ſo 2 Cor. 10. 10. ἐπιστολαὶ βαρεῖαι letters that had a great deal of weight, that is, ſeverity, threatning of cenſures, &c. and ſo ἐν βάρει εἶναι to light heavy upon them, to uſe ſeverity toward them (which ſome deſired to ſeem to do out of vanity and ambition:) and is here ſet oppoſite to the ἐγενήθημεν ἤπιοι, we became gentle, the tender uſage of a nurſe v. 7. and the ſpirit of meekneſs, 1 Cor. 4. 21.

g. ἱμειρόμενοι

V. 8. Affectionately deſirous] Theophylact is ſo peremptory for another reading in this place, ὁμειρόμενοι, in ſtead of ἱμειρόμενοι, that I cannot but ſet it down, ὁμειρόμενοι ὑμῖν, ſaith he, τυγχάνει προσδεδεμένοι ὑμῖν, καὶ ἐχόμενοι ὑμῶν, ἀπὸ τοῦ ὁμοῦ καὶ τοῦ εἴρω τὸ συμπλέκω. The phraſe ὁμειρόμενοι ὑμῶν, ſignifies bound, or cloſe, or near, to you, from the word ὁμοῦ together and εἴρω, which ſignifies to bind together; adding that ſome have read it ἱμειρόμενοι for ἐπιθυμοῦντες deſiring, ἐκ ἔστι δὲ but that it is not ſo. If his meaning be that ἱμειρόμενοι doth not ſo ſignifie, I ſuppoſe his authority will not prevail againſt the known uſe of the word, and the expreſs Gloſſarie of Heſychius, ἱμείρει, ἐρᾷ, ἐπιθυμεῖ, ποθεῖ, it ſignifies to love, to deſire. But if his meaning be that ἱμειρόμενοι is not the right reading, then unleſs we know what copies he had to authorize that confidence, there will be no reaſon to conſent to it, and yet as little cauſe to make a controverſie of it, the ſenſe being either way the ſame, the word ὁμείρειν) rendred by Heſychius juſt as ἱμείρειν) is: for ſo in him all that we find of that word is, ὁμειρόμενοι, ὁμείρειν), ἐπιθυμοῦσιν, it ſignifies to deſire, as the other before had done.

h. ἐνεργεῖται

V. 13. Effectually worketh] That ἐνεργεῖται is to be rendred in a Paſſive not Active ſenſe, and that it ſignifies τελειοῦται to be perfected, or accompliſhed, hath been largely ſhewn, Note on Gal. 5. b. but to what the accompliſhment of the word, or Goſpel, here refers particularly, muſt be concluded from v. 14. There the proof is ſet down of that which is here affirmed, and that with the particle For, ὑμεῖς γὰρ For you, &c. and therefore in all reaſon that muſt interpret this. Now that which is there mention'd is the Theſſalonians ſuffering perſecution after the manner that other Chriſtians had done before them, which as it is an evidence of their conſtancy in the faith, ſo is that of their proficiency to the higheſt degree of perfection which this life is capable of. And beſides, it being foretold by Chriſt, that they which will receive the faith, and live according to his preſcriptions, ſhall ſuffer perſecutions, their ſufferings are a completion of that word of his.

i. Συμφυλέτῶν

V. 14. Country-men] Συμφυλέτῶν, men of the ſame tribe, or race, or country, with the Theſſalonian Chriſtians, to whom he writes, may not be reſolved to be the heathen inhabitants of that city or country, but the unconverted Jews which were diſperſed there. For at the Apoſtles coming to that city, Act. 17. the firſt thing we read of there, is a Synagogue of the Jews, v. 1. thither Paul went unto them, that is, to the Jews, and preached Chriſt unto them, and ſome of them received the faith, and of devout Greeks, or Gentile Proſelytes, a great multitude, &c. v. 4. And immediately the unbelieving Jews, making uſe of the officers of the courts of the city, raiſed a tumult againſt them, v. 5. and the Apoſtle and Silas eſcaping they ſeiſed upon Jaſon and other brethren, that is, Chriſtians, that had received the faith, and haled them to the magiſtrates of the city, and accuſed them for doing contrary to Cæſar's order, v. 7. And ſo the perſecution thus early began at Theſſalonica, was evidently by the Jews which received not the faith, againſt the Jews and Proſelytes which received it: and theſe Jews of Theſſalonica were ſo zealous in the matter, that as ſoon as they heard of the receiving the faith at Berœa, they went thither, and ſolicited the multitude there againſt them, v. 13. And ſo there is no queſtion but the ἴδιοι συμφυλέται their countrymen, that are here ſpoken of, are the Jewiſh inhabitants of Macedonia, and particularly of Theſſalonica; and accordingly that they may not think it ſtrange, that they ſhould thus be uſed by thoſe of their own nation, he gives them the example of the unbelieving Jews in Judæa that had perſecuted the Chriſtians there, as before they had crucified Chriſt himſelf, &c. v. 15. And their ſpecial quarrel to the Apoſtles was, that they preached to the Gentiles, v. 16. for which and all other their obſtinacy he foretels the wrath of God upon them, and their utter deſtruction approaching, v. 16. That in this perſecution at Theſſalonica ſome were dead, and others ſo evil handled, that there was need of this Epiſtle to comfort them for thoſe that were fallen, and confirm them, by foretelling them the approach of Chriſt's coming to relieve the conſtant ſufferers, and to deſtroy the perſecutors, and thoſe that cowardly fell off to them, will appear, c. 4. 13. and 5. 1. &c.

k. Στέφανος

V. 19. Crown] A crown was an attire or dreſſing for the head, and ſo is mentioned Ezech. 16. 12. together with jewels on the forehead, and ear-rings in the ear, and ſo Ezech. 23. 42. bracelets upon their hands, and crowns upon their heads: not that this was an Enſign of Majeſty peculiar to Kings, but the name of an ornament worn by others, both men, as the Sabeans, Ezech. 23. 42. and women, as in that deſcription of the Jewiſh nation by a woman c. 16. So the Miſna makes mention of Crowns that Bridegrooms and Brides were wont to wear. The Bridegrooms was of Gold, or gilt, or painted, or of Roſes, or Myrtle, or Olives, and ſo the Brides alſo, Gemara Hieroſol. ad tit. Sota c. 9. But theſe interdicted by the Jews about the time of Veſpaſian, ſaith the Miſna tit. Sota c. 9. Of theſe there is alſo frequent mention among the heathens στέφος γαμήλιον a nuptial crown, in Bions Epitaph of Adonis, and in Libanius declam. 8. ſpeaking of nuptial rites οὐκ ἐστεφανωσάμην; was I not crowned? But as of all other ornaments ſo of this it muſt be obſerved that they were either of every days uſe (unleſs days of faſting and mourning) or for extraordinary or feſtival days (in like manner as there was an every days anointing unleſs upon days of humiliation) Mat. 6. and the oil of gladneſs or feſtival oil, Pſal. 45. 7) and the latter of theſe is in thoſe places of Ezechiel called a beautiful crown, and here στέφανος καυχήσεως a crown of boaſting, that is, either of rejoicing or feſtivity, as rejoicing and boaſting is all one, (ſuch, we know, was the nuptial crown, wherewith his mother is ſaid to have crowned Solomon in the day of the gladneſs of his heart, Cant. 3. 11.) or of boaſting, as that ſounds literally, ſuch as are the ſpecial kinds of ornament, wherein one is ſet out moſt pompouſly and magnificently, ſo as vain-glorious perſons adorn themſelves.

Paraphraſe.

1. WHerefore when we could no longer forbear, we thought it good to be left at Athens alone;]

1. And therefore being no longer able to bear the want and deſire of ſeeing or hearing of you, I reſolved to deprive my ſelf of Timothy's company, and to ſtay alone at Athens a City in Greece,

2. And ſent Timotheus our brother and miniſter of God, and our fellow-labourer in the Goſpel of Chriſt, [to eſtabliſh you, and to comfort you concerning your faith;]

2. To ſettle you in the doctrine of the Goſpel, which we had planted among you, and to comfort you againſt all the tribulations which were befallen you for the profeſſion of the faith of Chriſt;

3. To keep you from being diſcouraged or falling off by reaſon of theſe afflictions, by putting you in mind of what I am ſure you know already, that this is to be looked for by all true believers, the Goſpel being the covenant of the Croſs, and ſo nothing in it ſtrange, that God ſhould determine to permit, and not to reſtrain the malice of wicked men, but leave Chriſtians to be exerciſed by them.

4. For of this at our firſt preaching the Goſpel to you we advertiſed you, that afflictions are the Chriſtians portion: And it hath accordingly come to paſs, and ſo you have the experimental knowledge of it.

5. And therefore the occaſion of our late ſending of Timothy was to ſee whether you continued conſtant, or whether the devil and the world bringing perſecutions upon you for the faith, had wrought upon you by thoſe temptations, and ſo all our labour in planting the faith were caſt away and loſt upon you.

6. But now when Timothy came from you unto us, and brought us good tidings of your faith and charity, and that ye have good remembrance of us always, deſiring greatly to ſee us as we alſo to ſee you:]

7. This was matter of extreme joy to us in the midſt of our afflictions, or in the midſt of yours, that though the Goſpel had brought perſecution and diſtreſs upon you, yet you continue faithful and conſtant in deſpight of all.

7. Therefore brethren we were comforted over you in all * our affliction and diſtreſs by your faith.]

Annotations on Chap. III.

a. πειράζειν

V. 5. Tempted] It is ordinary in the Scripture-dialect for Verbs to ſignifie, beſide the action or paſſion noted by them, the effect which is conſequent thereto. Of Paſſives it hath been noted at large, Note on Mat. 11. b. And of Actives there want not examples, eſpecially in this one word πειράζειν which now we ſpeak of. For to tempt doth ordinarily ſignifie no more than to offer temptations, to propoſe, or ſuggeſt, thoſe objects, which if the man reſiſt and reject, are matter of vertue in him: but having tempted here, ſignifies evidently, having brought them unto ſin, that is, wrought upon them, corrupted them by temptations; for otherwiſe his labour in preaching the Goſpel to them would not become vain by that means. So when God is ſaid to give men to Chriſt, Joh. 6. 37. the meaning is, that by God's preventing and preparing grace, they do effectually come to Chriſt, receive and embrace the Goſpel.

b.

V. 8. Live] To live, beſide the literal notation of it, ſignifies alſo to be chearful, or merry, to rejoice. So ζῆν Pſal. 22. 26. your heart ſhall live for ever, which is a conſequent of eating and being ſatisfied, and praiſing God. So Joh. 14. 19. Becauſe I live, ye ſhall live alſo. In the firſt place it is literally taken for Chriſt's reſurrection, but in the ſecond for their rejoicing, ſuch as was cauſed by the recovery of a friend from death to life, (and theſe joined by the figure ἀνταναπλασις obſerved on Mat. 8. Note k.) And this is ordinary in all languages, Hebrew, Greek and Latin. And ſo here it is evidently uſed, we live, if, &c. that is, it is matter of infinite joy to us; and accordingly it follows, as an expreſſion of exultancy, For what thankſgiving can we return for all the joy, &c.

Paraphraſe. CHAP. IV.

1. Now, my brethren, by all the kindneſs which you bear to us, we intreat you, and by all the obligations that the Chriſtian faith lays upon you, and the care of your own eternal welfare, we adviſe you, in the preſence of God, that ye walk exactly by the rule that is ſet you, and daily improve and grow in that piety which is already in you,

1. FUrthermore then we beſeech you, brethren, and exhort you by the Lord Jeſus, that as ye have received of us how ye ought to walk, and to pleaſe God, † ſo ye would abound more and more.]

2. According to the ſtrict commands to this purpoſe which we gave you in our firſt preaching to you.

2. For ye know what commandments we gave you by the Lord Jeſus.]

3. For this is punctually required of you by Chriſt under the Goſpel, that ye ſhould preſerve your ſelves in chaſtity or perfect purity from the ſins of the fleſh, of what kind ſoever:

3. For this is the will of God, even your * ſanctification, that ye ſhould abſtain from fornication:]

4. Every one by ſtudy, and by exerciſe or practice, to learn and enable himſelf moſt ſtrictly to preſerve himſelf in perfect chaſtity, in a married or ſingle life;

4. That every one of you ſhould know how to poſſeſs [a] his veſſel in ſanctification and honour;]

5. Not in any vile unnatural practices, as for want of knowledge of the true God the Gentiles do.

5. Not in the † luſt of concupiſcence, even as the Gentiles which know not God:]

b.

6. Not to yield to irregular inordinate luſt, to commit filthineſs with his fellow-Chriſtian in thoſe things that are not be mentioned plainly; for as theſe are the ſins that on Sodom, on the nations, and in all times on thoſe Gentiles God hath puniſhed ſeverely with utter exciſion, ſo is the like ſtill to be expected on all that are guilty of ſuch villanies, as I have formerly aſſured and warned you.

6. * That no man [b] go beyond and defraud his brother in any matter, becauſe that the Lord is the avenger of all ſuch, as we have alſo forewarned you and teſtified.]

* Not to exceed or be inordinate in a matter with his brother

7. And accordingly you muſt reſolve that Chriſtianity is far from giving liberty for unnatural uncleanneſs, it is on the contrary an obligation to all the purity imaginable.

7. For God hath not called us unto uncleanneſs, but unto holineſs.]

8. And he that deſpiſeth theſe commands of ours in this matter, given by me from Chriſt, ver. 2. as ſpecial parts of the Chriſtian faith, and indulgeth to thoſe contrary ſins, he deſpiſeth the commands, and provoketh the diſpleaſure and wrath of God, and ſinneth againſt that ſanctifying Spirit which God giveth to believers.

8. He therefore that deſpiſeth, deſpiſeth not man, but God, who hath alſo given unto us his holy Spirit.]

9. And as to that of purity from all the impure infuſions of the Gnoſtick hereticks, ſo for charity and peaceableneſs (out of which they are as likely to ſeduce you, and infuſe malice and bitterneſs

† the taught of God to the loving of one another bitterneſs againſt all orthodox Chriſtians) this I need not inlarge on by Epiſtle, there being nothing to which the Chriſtian faith more engages you than this, and your having received the faith makes it ſuperfluous for me to exhort you to it; this, is an inſeperable effect of that, and that which hath been actually impreſſed on you.

10. And indeed ye do it towards all the brethren, which are in all Macedonia: but we beſeech you, brethren, that ye increaſe more and more;]

10. And accordingly your practice hath been toward all your fellow-Chriſtians in Macedonia, there hath been unity and peace in all thoſe Churches: Only I exhort you to increaſe every day more and more in this grace,

11. And that ye * ſtudy to be quiet, and to do your own buſineſs, and to work with your own hands (as we commanded you,)]

* contend φιλοτιμεῖσθαι

11. And to be as earneſt to exceed all others in quietneſs and peaceableneſs, as the moſt ambitious are to get the greateſt honours, or the moſt factious to contend and make debate, and not to meddle with other mens matters, but every man to follow diligently the buſineſs of his calling, as when I was with you I commanded you,

12. That ye may walk honeſtly toward them that are without, and that ye may have lack of nothing.]

12. That by ſpending your time in honeſt labour, you may both preſerve your reputation entire among the Gentiles, (who will have an ill opinion of Chriſtianity, if it make men idle) and that you may earn ſo much by your labour, as may ſupply all your wants and neceſſities.

13. But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them that d are aſleep, that ye ſorrow not even as † others which have no hope.]

d.

† the reſt οἱ λοιποὶ

13. As for the ſtate of the dead (thoſe eſpecially that have fallen under the perſecutions brought upon you by the unbelieving Jews (ſee note on c. 2. i.) for your receiving and maintaining the Faith) wherein by your exceſs of ſorrow it ſeems you want advice, I muſt exhort you to moderate that paſſion, and not to behave your ſelves as they that believe not any reſurrection or reward for their ſufferings in another life.

14. For if we believe that Jeſus died and roſe again, even ſo them alſo which ſleep * in Jeſus will God bring with him.

* through διὰ

15. For this we ſay unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive, and remain unto the coming of the Lord, ſhall not prevent them which are aſleep.]

14, 15. For upon our belief of Chriſt's death and reſurrection depends alſo the raiſing of their bodies that die for the teſtimony, or by occaſion of the faith of Chriſt, and that ſo certainly and ſpeedily, that they that do not die at all ſhall at the day of judgment have no advantage of them whoſe bodies have lain in the graves ſo many years, the riſing of the one being in the ſame twinkling of an eye, 1 Cor. 15. 52. with the change of the other who are found alive.

16. For the Lord himſelf ſhall deſcend from heaven with a ſhout, with the voice of the Archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Chriſt ſhall riſe firſt:]

16. For this ſhall be the method of it, Chriſt ſhall come from heaven, and the Archangel that hath other Angels under him ſhall call them, to be ready at the preſence of the Judge, ſummon all the world to appear before him, aſſembling them as with a ſhout, or a voice, or a trumpet, every of them uſed to call aſſemblies together, and to ſummon them to appear before tribunals, (ſee Pſal. 47. 5, 8. Jer. 4. 5. and 6. 1.) And then firſt all the bodies of all pious men that ever were in the world ſhall riſe out of their graves;

17. Then we which are alive, and remain, ſhall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and ſo ſhall we ever be with the Lord.]

17. And in the very moment that that is done, all that are alive on earth, as we now are, ſhall be carried by the Angels into the clouds, there to meet Chriſt, and appear before him, and being adjudged by him to eternal bliſs, ſhall never part from Chriſt again, but enjoy his preſence for ever.

18 Wherefore comfort one another with theſe words.]

18. This conſideration is certainly ſufficient to yield you matter of comfort and ſupport in the death of any that is neareſt to you, and to aſſure you, that Chriſt's promiſe of delivering the perſecuted is no whit leſs performed to them that die under the perſecutions, than to them that live to ſee their perſecutors deſtroyed, which ſhall now e'er long come to paſs. See ch. 2. 16.

Annotations on Chap. IV.

a. σκεῦος ἑαυτοῦ

V. 4. His veſſel] It is the conceit of a learned man that σκεῦος ἑαυτοῦ, his own veſſel, here ſignifies his lawful or proper wife: But there is no example nor analogie for this interpretation, unleſs that the wife is elſewhere called the weaker veſſel, 1. Pet. 3. 7. But that ſuppoſes the man to be a veſſel too, and concludes no peculiarity of that title to the woman, but only that ſhe is the weaker. The wives are indeed by ſome called ἄρουρα ὑμῶν your fields, in Demetrius Cydonius, by others ναὸς ὑμῶν your dwelling, in Euthymius Zygabenus; but no where σκεῦος veſſel. And indeed the Context doth otherwiſe incline it to denote the man's own body. For that which is oppoſed, v. 5. to this poſſeſſing his own veſſel with chaſtity and honour, is πάθος ἐπιθυμίας, the paſſion of luſt, that is, inordinate luſt, as the Gentiles, &c. Now thoſe Gentile impious unnatural practices were not peculiarly oppoſed to conjugal chaſtity, but ſimply to chaſtity or purity, whether in marriage or out of marriage. And to that beſt agrees the notion of his own veſſel, as it ſignifies his own fleſh, his own body. Now the word σκεῦος ſignifying ſimply an utenſil, or inſtrument of uſe, (ſee Mat. 21. Note b.) the body being the great utenſil or inſtrument of the mind, is fitly ſo called. Thus Barnabas in his Epiſtle calls the body of Chriſt σκεῦος τοῦ πνεύματος, the veſſel, or utenſil of the Spirit; and ſo the Jews call the body כְּלִי an inſtrument, and the Greek σκεῦος is very near that, onely the firſt σ abundant. This poſſeſſing, or (as κτᾶσθαι ſignifies ſometimes in the idiom of theſe Writers) preſerving or keeping (Luk. 21. 19.) the body in purity and honour, is the perfect chaſtity either in cœlibacy or the conjugal ſtate, in oppoſition to all thoſe unnatural luſts which are called πάθη ἀτιμίας Rom. 1. 26. diſhonourable affections, the baſeſt, vileſt ſubmiſſions imaginable; and the ſame is here called πάθος ἐπιθυμίας, which makes it not improbable that that ſhould be read ἀτιμίας alſo, but however it ſignifies the ſame thing, inordinate deſires, or luſts. And to this alſo agrees that which follows v. 6. See Note b.

b. Τὸ ὑπερβαίνειν

V. 6. Go beyond] Τὸ ὑπερβαίνειν is a general word to ſignifie tranſgreſſing of the due limits in any thing; ὑπερβαίνειν ὀρθότητα, to go beyond the bounds, παράβασις ὄρκων tranſgreſſing of oaths and obligations, ſaith Heſychius; and when the cloſe of Heſiods ἔργα καὶ ἡμ. is,

——ὑπερβασίας ἀλεείνων, that is, ſaith Proclus, ἐκκλίνειν τὰς παραβάσεις τῆς ὀρθῆς καὶ καλῆς σκοπῆς, to avoid all deviations from the right and good mark, and ſo in Phocylides,

——μὴ γὰρ ὑπερβῇς,

and

——ὑπερβασίη δ' ἀλεεινὴ,

miſchievous tranſgreſſing, this being applied to matters of uncleanneſs (as appears v. 7. and by the modeſt, civil expreſſion of ἐν τῷ πράγματι, in a matter, and by the addition of πλεονεκτεῖν, which hath formerly been explained to belong to inordinacy, or unnatural luſts) will be concluded moſt probably to ſignifie thoſe filthineſſes which exceed the bounds and law of nature. Hence perhaps it is that Heſychius hath rendred Ὑπερβάσεις, ὕβρεις, contumely, in that notion of the word wherein Clemens in his Pædagogus l. 2. cites it, οὐδ' ἐπ' ἀῤῥενοῦσθαι, &c. that diſhonourable, villanous practice here mentioned, v. 5. And thus we find ἀνδροβασίαι uſed by Epiphanius of the Gnoſticks, πᾶν εἶδος ἀνδροβασιῶν καὶ λαγνευτήρων ὁμιλιῶν πρὸς γυναῖκας, &c. And to this purpoſe it may perhaps be farther obſervable that the Hebrew בָּא or בּוֹא from whence is the Greek βῶ or βάω (the old word from whence the reſt of the tenſes of βαίνω come) doth in the Old Teſtament ſignifie the husband's companying with the wife, and is rendred going in unto her, and accordingly βαίνειν and ἐπιβαίνειν are by human Authors uſed in that ſenſe, applied to other creatures. Ariſtot. Hiſt. Animal. l. 5. cap. 14. ſpeaking of an Elephant, Βαίνει πίσσα ἐτῶν ἢ ἐξ ὧν, and ——σωφάντ' ἐπιβήτορα καπετὸν

in Homer, Odyſſ. Ψ'. and ἀναβαίνουσιν ἐπὶ τὰς μήτρας οἱ ἵπποι, Ariſt. Hiſtor. Animal. l. 6. c. 12. And to the ſame ſenſe βαλδίειν, and in Cicero the Latin batuere. Another ordinary notion there is, wherein theſe two words ὑπερβαίνειν and πλεονεκτεῖν, which are here uſed together, do agree, viz. to

ἐν τῷ πράγματι

viz. to denote ſuperiority or being in a more eminent degree. So ſaith Chryſoſtom of the Biſhops ſuperiority above Presbyters, in the point of Ordination, Τῇ χειροτονίᾳ μόνῃ ὑπερεβήκασι, καὶ τούτῳ μόνον δοκοῦσι πλεονεκτεῖν, In this they exceed, or have more power. But this notion being by the Context rendred unappliable to this place, will onely ſignifie, that theſe two words being of the ſame importance in other things, may probably be ſo in this matter alſo, wherein πλεονεξία is ſo viſibly uſed in theſe Sacred writings for unnatural, unclean exceſſes. See Epheſ. 5. 5. Theophylact, though he acknowledge the phraſe to belong to matters of uncleanneſs, and ſo interprets ἐν τῷ πράγματι, ἐν μίξει, yet thinks it belongs peculiarly to μοιχεία adultery, which, ſaith he, is here fitly called πλεονεξία and ὑπερβασις (I ſuppoſe it ſhould be read ὑπεροχασις, that it may be anſwerable to ὑπερέχειν) becauſe God, ſaith he, hath allowed every man his wife, καὶ ὅρους τέθεικε τῇ φύσει, and defined bounds to nature, τοῦτο μίξιν ἢ πρὸς μίαν γυναῖκα ἐκείνῳ, that he ſhould content himſelf with that one woman, and he that doth not, he may properly be ſaid to exceed, and to deſire inordinately, καὶ ταῦτα κατὰ ἀδελφοῦ and this peculiarly againſt, or to the wronging of his brother. But the ſin here mentioned being a ſpecification of what was meant by πάθει ἐπιθυμίας and an inſtance of the practice of the heathens that knew not God, v. 5. and preſently attended with God's being an avenger of all ſuch things, v. 6. it will not ſo reaſonably be reſtained to adultery, but be taken for thoſe foul ſins for which the Gentiles myſteries were ſo famous, and for which God's judgments remarkably fell upon them, and muſt in like manner be expected to fall on Chriſtians that are guilty of them. To theſe S. Chryſoſtom applies the phraſe, Tom. 11. p. 24. l. 13. πᾶν γὰρ ὑπερβαῖνον τοὺς ὑπὸ Θεοῦ τεθείσας νόμους, τὰ ἀλλοκότων ἐπιθυμεῖ καὶ ἃ παρομισμένων, He that exceeds the laws ſet by God, deſires ſtrange and not regular things. I ſhall here add, how the Biſhops of our Church in the days of Henry 8. thought fit to interpret or paraphraſe this place, in the book named A neceſſary Doctrine and Erudition for any Chriſten man, in the diſcourſe of Matrimony, where falling on mention of this text of Scripture, they thus expreſs this part of it, that no man ſhould craftily compaſs and circumvent his brother to obtain his fleſhly luſts: where it is evident what they underſtood by the whole phraſe, particularly by ἐν τῷ πράγματι, to obtain his fleſhly luſts, agreeably to what we have here noted.

c. θεοδίδακτοι

V. 9. Taught of God] The word θεοδίδακτος is all one with διδακτοὶ τοῦ Θεοῦ the taught of God Joh. 6. 45. of which ſee there Note d. Yet ſome difference there is. There Θεὸς is peculiarly God the Father, as appears v. 37, 39, 44, 65. and ſo the taught of God are the followers, diſciples of him, who as being firſt ſuch, (having that honeſt heart which hath always been taught them by God, and by his preventing grace wrought in them, and accepted by him) do, when Chriſt is revealed to them, conſtantly receive and entertain him: But here Θεὸς, God, ſeems rather to ſignifie Chriſt ſpeaking of that which was not in them till they were Chriſtians, viz. brotherly love, at leaſt was taught them and required of them moſt eminently by Chriſtianity. (Thus in the Epiſtle of Pope Gregory the ninth to the Univerſity of Paris, about Ariſtotle's works, nec Philoſophos ſe oſtentent, ſed ſatagant fieri Theodidacti; Let them not boaſt that they are Philoſophers, but let them be content that they are, or endeavonr to be, God's ſcholars, that is, Chriſtians, inſtructed by the tractates of holy Fathers, as there it follows.) And therefore the εἰς τὸ ἀγαπᾶν for the loving of one another, may either be a notation of the End, or onely of the Effect, and it is uncertain which. The word εἰς will bear either. If it be the End, then the ſenſe is, that to this eſpecially is their Chriſtianity deſigned, that they love one another, their being Chriſtians obliges them expreſsly to that, and makes his exhortation to it unneceſſary. Thus S. Chryſoſtom applies the words of the Prophet, they ſhall be all taught of God, to the perſpicuity and plainneſs of the Evangelical precepts, Σαφῆ καὶ δῆλα τὰ παρ' ἑαυτῆς καλέσηται ἅπασιν, ὅτε κοινοὶ τῆς οἰκουμένης ὄντες διδάσκαλοι, ἵνα ἕκαστος καὶ δι' ἑαυτοῦ μανθάνειν δύνηται ἐκ τῆς ἀναγνώσεως μόνης τὰ λεγόμενα, καὶ τοῦτο προσαναπωῦν ὁ προφήτης ἔλεγεν, Ἔσονται πάντες διδακτοὶ Θεοῦ, καὶ μὴ ἕκαστος τὸν πλησίον ἑαυτοῦ, &c. The Apoſtles, as common Doctors of the world, propoſed to make all things perſpicuous and manifeſt of themſelves, that every one might by bare reading learn them, and to this the Prophet agrees, ſaying, They ſhall be all taught of God, and ſhall not ſay every one to his neighbour, &c. If it be the Effect, then the meaning is, that by their having been thus formed by the Chriſtian faith, they do already (ſee ver. 18.) perform this, and therefore need no exhorting to it. * Tom. 5. p. 244. l. 25.

d. κεκοιμημένοι

V. 13. Are aſleep] That κοιμᾶσθαι to ſleep ſignifies to die, to depart out of this world, (according to the Scripture-ſtyle) there is no queſtion. Onely two things are here to be obſerved: firſt, that the word which is in the ordinary reading κεκοιμημένων in the præter tenſe, thoſe that have fallen aſleep, is in the King's MS. κοιμωμένων, they that ſleep, in the preſent, to note ſimply thoſe that die, not onely thoſe that are already dead, but that die daily; remembring withal, that κοιμᾶσθαι to ſleep is the word which is proper to expreſs the death of the righteous, whoſe death is but a repoſe of their bodies in their graves, or dormitories, and a reſt of their ſouls in God's hands; ſecondly, that the men here peculiarly ſpoken of are thoſe that die in the cauſe, or for the faith of Chriſt. That ſure is expreſs'd by κοιμηθέντας διὰ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, thoſe that ſleep through Jeſus, that is by occaſion of him, or for Chriſtianity ſake. And ſo ſignifies thoſe that have been perſecuted, and died either by the hands of the perſecutors, or before the time comes of Chriſt's deſtroying the perſecutors, and releaſing the perſecuted by that means. And the conſidering of this will give us the occaſion of this diſcourſe, and of that concerning the times and ſeaſons following it ch. 5. 1. That the Chriſtians at Theſſalonica were ſorely perſecuted by the unbelieving Jews, and haled and dragg'd to the Roman Officers, as diſturbers of the civil peace, hath been evidenced, Note on ch. 2. h. Againſt theſe perſecutions the Apoſtle deſigned to confirm and comfort them by this Epiſtle. And the direct way of doing it was to put them in mind of what he had told them when he was with them, that God's judgments ſhould ſhortly ſeize upon the unbelieving Jews, their perſecutors, chap. 2. 16. and bring them relief by that means. Of this he ſpeaks as of a thing known to them, ch. 5. 1. But yet one objection there was either expreſs'd by them, or foreſeen and here anſwered by them, viz. that this deliverance being not yet come, ſome of the faithful either were daily put to death by the Roman Officers upon the Jews inſtigation (for the accuſations brought againſt them were capital, Act. 17. 6, 7.) and ſo were not thus reſcued, or elſe did daily die before this promiſed deliverance came. And to this the Apoſtle gives anſwer here, that they ſhould not be diſcouraged or grieve for thoſe which thus died, eſpecially in the cauſe of Chriſt, becauſe their ſouls being by death brought to their harbour and their crown the ſooner, their bodies, which alone were ſuppoſed to be the ſufferers, were no way loſers by it, being ſure to be raiſed by Chriſt, (whoſe reſurrection converted his death into advantage to him) and that ſo ſpeedily, at the ſound of the dooms-day trumpet, that they which ſhould then be found alive, which have never died, ſhould have no advantage of them, but on the other ſide, they that were dead for the faith of Chriſt, ſhould firſt be raiſed before they that were remaining alive ſhould be caught up with Chriſt. And this was full matter of comfort to them, and anſwer to the objection. After which he fitly reſumes the diſcourſe of the times and ſeaſons of the vengeance on the Jews, and deliverance of the faithful by that means, ch. 5. 1. And ſo this is a perſpicuous account of the coming in of this diſcourſe of the Reſurrection in this place.

CHAP. V.

Paraphraſe.

1. BUT of the [a] times and the ſeaſons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you;]

1. But concerning that notable time or ſeaſon of Chriſt's coming in judgment on the Jews and others, to deſtroy the obdurate and reſcue the believers, I ſhall not need to ſay much to you; a.

2. For your ſelves know perfectly, that the day of the Lord ſo cometh as a thief in the night.]

2. For this hath been oft told you, that as it is not now far off, ſo when it comes it ſhall come on a ſudden, Mat. 24. 27, and 42. Luke 17. 27. (ſee 2 Pet. 3. 10.) and this not only in Judæa, but in other places where the obdurate Jews and Gnoſticks ſhall be (ſee Mat. 24. 28.) and continue to perſecute the Chriſtians.

3. For when they ſhall ſay, Peace and ſafety; then ſudden deſtruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child, and they ſhall not eſcape.]

3. For as in the ſtill and quiet part of the night, when men are faſt aſleep, the thief comes, v. 4. and Joel 2. 9. and by the windows enters into, and rifles the houſe; ſo when they are moſt ſecure, perſecuting the Chriſtians in the bittereſt manner without all fear, then ſhall this ruine come upon them on the ſudden, as pangs and throes of child-birth do on a woman (for ſuddenneſs and for ſharpneſs much like them) and there ſhall be no more poſſibility for them to eſcape, than there is for a woman in that condition to eſcape thoſe pains.

4. But ye, brethren, are not in darkneſs, that that day ſhould overtake you as a thief.]

4. But ye, my brethren, are not ſo ill inſtructed, nor are your actions and lives ſuch, as that this danger ſhould thus ſurprize you unawares.

5. Ye are all the children of light, and the children of the day: we are not of the night, nor of darkneſs.]

5. Your profeſſion engages you to ſuch practices, wherein if you live conſtant, none of theſe evils can befall you.

6. Therefore let us not ſleep as do others, but let us watch and be ſober.]

6. And this is an obligation on you, that ye be not by company and enticement of others drawn to any of their evil ways.

7. For they that ſleep, ſleep in the night, and they that be drunken, are drunken in the night.]

7. For it is negligence and voluptuouſneſs that is likely to betray men to this deſtruction that comes as a thief in the night, theſe being thoſe deeds of darkneſs which are to be thus puniſhed.

8. But let us who are of the day, be ſober, putting on the breaſt-plate of faith and love, and for an helmet the hope of ſalvation.]

8. But we Chriſtians let us keep out of all theſe: and to ſecure us from the temptations that may invite us to them, let our conſtant adherance to Chriſt, and that love of him that caſts out fear of perſecution, ſupply the place of a breaſt-plate to us; and the ſtedfaſt aſſurance and confidence of our preſent reſcue and deliverance (if we adhere to Chriſt) and eſpecially of our eternal reward from Chriſt, let that ſupply the place of an helmet (to ſecure our heads) to confirm us in the truth againſt all heretical corruptions that may ſolicite our judgments.

9. For God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain ſalvation by our Lord Jeſus Chriſt,]

9. For of this be ſure, that this great judgment which is now a coming, is not deſigned by God againſt the pure conſtant Chriſtians, but upon their enemies and perſecutors, nor for ſuch as we are to be deſtroyed, but to be delivered by that means.

10. Who died for us, that whether we wake or ſleep, we ſhould [b] live together with him.]

10. For he that died on purpoſe to bring us to good life, to redeem us from all iniquity, will certainly preſerve and ſecure thoſe that are thus redeemed, that live thoſe lives which he requires, and adhere conſtant to his commandments; and therefore for us, without the help of our worldly providences, he will certainly ſecure us, preſerve theſe lives of ours ſo long as he ſees that beſt for us, and that moſt remarkably at this time in deſtroying the perſecutors, and reſcuing the perſecuted, and in another world preſerving us to eternal life. b.

11. Wherefore comfort your ſelves together, and edifie one another, even as alſo ye do.]

11. And therefore continue, I pray, to encourage and confirm one another, as already ye do in this matter.

12. And we beſeech you, brethren, to know them which labour among you, and [c] are over you in the Lord, and admoniſh you,]

12. One thing it is needful for me here to interpoſe, that ye pay all due reſpects to the Biſhops of your ſeveral Churches, that belong to this Metropolis, and ſo all others through all Macedonia, and all others that are employed for your ſpiritual good, c.

13. And to eſteem them * very highly in love for their works ſake. And be at peace among your ſelves.]

* more than abundantly ὑπερ ἐκ περισσοῦ

13. And to pay them as great a reſpect as is poſſible, for the pains that they have taken among you. And then to that I muſt add this exhortation, that one with another ye live in perfect unity and peace.

14. Now we exhort you, brethren, warn † them that are [d] unruly, comfort the feeble minded, ſupport the weak, be patient toward all men.]

† the irregular

14. And for the preſerving your Churches from the inrodes of ſchiſmaticks and hereticks, the Gnoſticks of whom you are in greateſt danger, firſt, be careful when you ſee any man forſake his ſtation, grow idle, forſake his work, to proceed with ſuch a man according to Chriſt's rule, Mat. 18. 15. and ſo firſt to admoniſh him of his fault, and never leave till ye have reduced him (for this idleneſs is an ill ſymptom;) ſecondly, be as careful to encourage the fearful, that may be in danger to be wrought on by the ſharpneſs of perſecutions; thirdly, thoſe that are ready to fall, hold up as well as you can; and fourthly, thoſe that are fallen, deal as gently with them as is poſſible, that ye may reſtore them, Gal. 6. 1. d.

15. See that none render evil for evil unto any man, but ever follow that which is good, both among your ſelves and to all men.]

15. And be ſure that they that are injured or perſecuted do not think of avenging themſelves, Rom 12. 19. but do as much good both to your fellow-Chriſtians and to your enemies, and all without exception, as is poſſible.

16. Rejoice evermore.]

16. Rejoice in time of perſecution, in adverſity as well as proſperity, Phil. 4. 5.

17. Pray without ceaſing.]

17. Not omitting the frequent conſtant times of prayer as oft as they return, (as continual ſorrow, Rom. 9. 2. is not that which is never diſcontinued in the act, but that which hath conſtant frequent returns to him, though ſometimes intermitted.)

18. In every thing give thanks: for this is the will of God in Chriſt Jeſus * concerning you.]

* toward εἰς

18. And in adverſity as well as proſperity continue your acknowledgments of God's goodneſs to you, Job 1. 21. For this is the condition of the Evangelical covenant, which is the covenant of ſufferings, that we ſhould rejoice in them, Mat. 5. 12. and give God thanks for them, 1 Pet. 3. 15. and 4. 16.

19. Quench not the Spirit.]

19. The gifts of tongues, healing, &c. which were given in form of fire, muſt be uſed accordingly, not quenched with neglect, vanity, wicked life, but preſerved by prayer, thankſgiving, and holy life; and when ye ſee gifts in others, by which they appear to be true teachers, ye muſt not have the ſame averſion to them, that ye would to falſe prophets.

20. Deſpiſe not propheſyings.]

20. And for that faculty of interpreting ſcripture, ye ought to ſet a ſpecial value upon it, 1 Cor. 14. 5.

21. Prove all things, hold faſt that which is good.]

21. Try all thoſe who pretend to extraordinary gifts, and examine whether they have them or no, by that gift of diſcerning of ſpirits, and make uſe of thoſe who approve themſelves to have what they profeſs. c

† every ſort of evil

22. Abſtain from † all [e] appearance of evil.]

22. There is no ſin ſo ſmall, but ye ought carefully to abſtain from it. e.

* the whole of you, the ſpirit

23. And the very God of peace ſanctifie you wholly: and I pray God * your whole [f] ſpirit, and ſoul, and body, be preſerved blameleſs unto the coming of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.]

23. And that God which is the author of all good things, and particularly of that peaceableneſs recommended to you, v. 13. and appointed to be ſecured by the following means, work all kind of purity in you, that of the fleſh and ſpirit. And I heartily pray that all and every part of you may be kept immaculate, that whenſoever Chriſt comes, either in his ſignal puniſhments here forementioned, or in that judgment after death, ye may be approved and rewarded by him. f. who

24. And I doubt not but that Chriſt who hath called you to the knowledge of his truth, afforded you ſuch privileges and advantages, advanced you thus far, will farther enable you to perſevere ſpotleſs unto the end.

24. Faithful is he that calleth you, who alſo will do it.]

25. Brethren, pray for us.

See Rom. 16. Note c.

26. Greet all the brethren with [an holy kiſs.]

27. I require you with all the weight of adjuration, that this Epiſtle be read and divulged to all the Chriſtians of your Church, and ſo likewiſe to all the Churches under the Metropolis of Theſſalonica, and to all the Churches of all Macedonia. See Note on Phil. 1. a.

27. I charge you by the Lord, that this Epiſtle be read unto all the holy brethren.]

28. The grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt be with you. Amen.

Annotations on Chap. V.

a. χρόνοι καὶ καιροὶ ἡμέρα Χριστοῦ

V. 1. Times and ſeaſons] What χρόνοι and καιροὶ, times and ſeaſons, here ſignifie, appears ſufficiently by v. 2. where in another phraſe the ſame thing is expreſſed by ἡμέρα Χριστοῦ ἔρχεται, the day of Chriſt cometh; which is without queſtion the ſame which is ſo oft called the coming of Chriſt, for the deſtroying the enemies of Chriſtianity, (which he ſhould do καιροῖς ἰδίοις in the proper ſeaſons, 1 Tim. 6. 15.) and the day approaching, and day in all languages ſignifies judgment (ſo 1 Cor. 3. 13. the day ſhall declare, that is, the judgment that ſhall ſit upon them; and ſo diem dicere, is to call a man into any court of judicature, and a days-man among us is a judge) and ſo the word καιρὸς ſeaſon is uſed Rom. 13. 11. εἰδότες τὸν καιρὸν knowing the ſeaſon, and that ſeaſon expreſſed in the end of the verſe, as here, by ἡμέρα ἤγγικεν the approaching of the day. So Mat. 16. 3. σημεῖα καιρῶν, the ſigns of the times, were the ſigns of that approaching deſtruction, and accordingly Luk. 12. 56. it is called καιρὸς οὗτος this time or ſeaſon. And to this matter (plainly ſet down before, c. 2. 16. the full vials of God's wrath falling on the perſecuting Jews,) the reſt of this diſcourſe to v. 12. doth evidently belong, and the ſuddainneſs and unexpectedneſs of it (and the ſurprize of all carnal men, which joined with the perſecutors or went on in unchriſtian ſins) deſcribed, as it is frequently in the Goſpel, Mat. 24. Luk. 19. and in the Epiſtles, Rom. 13. 2 Pet. 3. and elſewhere. And that it cannot belong to the laſt coming of Chriſt to judgment or final doom, appears both from hence that that was the ſubject of the former diſcourſe, cap. 4. 13, &c. and this as a diſtinct matter it entred upon with a Περὶ δέ, &c. But concerning the times and ſeaſons; and ſecondly by the end to which this diſcourſe is here deſigned by the Apoſtle, viz. to comfort the Chriſtians that were under perſecution, and give them patience and conſtancy, for which this was a fit conſideration, that this judgment of God would come ſuddenly, and when it was leaſt expected, and ſo would ſurprize them if they were not watchful: And this but a tranſcript of Chriſt's words on this matter, Mar. 13. 32. (and the very word καιρὸς ſeaſon there made uſe of v. 33.) and more punctually under the phraſe of the thief in the night, Mat. 24. 43. All which belonged peculiarly to this doom upon the Jews, and not to the general judgment, which it is to us certain that thoſe that then lived were not concern'd in, but only in this other. And if it be here queſtioned how this deſtruction of the Jews ſhould concern the Chriſtians in Macedonia, and ſo be matter of ſuch particular advertiſement to the Theſſalonians, I anſwer that the Jews being at this time diſperſed into ſeveral parts much farther from Judea than Macedonia, did likewiſe whereſoever they were, oppoſe the Apoſtles preaching to the Gentiles, and not only ſo, but perſecuted thoſe that received the faith with all bitterneſs: and how peculiarly this was obſervable at Theſſalonica, ſee Note on c. 2. i. The Jews were the fountains of perſecutions, ſaith Tertullian: and as they proſecuted the Chriſtians before the heathen powers, ſo all the falſe-hearted, temporizing, carnal Chriſtians, that were not willing to bear perſecutions, complyed and joined with them againſt the pure and orthodox, and all that did ſo, being engaged in the ſame courſe, were involved alſo in the ſame deſtruction; and ſo the Jews and Gnoſticks, which at this time were the cockle among the wheat in every Chriſtian plantation, over-ran all the Churches of Aſia, &c. as appears by the Apoſtles (and Chriſt's Rev. c. 2, 3.) Epiſtles to them, and infeſted this plantation in the Churches of Macedonia alſo (as oft appeared in the Epiſtle to the Philippians, another Church of Macedonia.) It was moſt fit then for the Apoſtle to forewarn them of their dangers which were likely to aſſault their conſtancy; and to fortifie them againſt timidity on one ſide, and the carnal baits on the other (as he doth in the former part of this Epiſtle,) by this aſſurance that God's judgments would ſuddainly ſurprize theſe enemies of his, and nothing but conſtancy and purity be likely to preſerve any from that heavy deſtruction.

b. σὺν αὐτῷ ζῆν

V. 10. Live together with him] To live together with Chriſt, though it comprehend under it, yet muſt not neceſſarily be confined to, the future immortal life, but may belong firſt and literally to preſervation and deliverance here; ſo as σώζεσθαι, which is ordinarily rendred, to be ſaved, doth (v. 3. 8, 9. and oft elſewhere) denote deliverance out of calamities and deſtructions here, which is alſo attended conſtantly (and when the temporal is not had, ſupplied) with eternal life. Thus doth the matter here in hand incline to interpret it; being the deſcription of that coming of Chriſt for the deſtroying of the enemies of Chriſtianity, which is deſigned as a means of preſerving the conſtant Chriſtians, and giving them quiet halcyonian days after the ſtorms wherein they had been toſſed. And ſo to live is to live proſperouſly and cheerfully in the profeſſion of Chriſtianity here, together with an aſſurance of living and reigning with him eternally. And according to this muſt the phraſe, whether we ſleep or wake, be interpreted, not ſo as ſleeping ſignifies death, and waking being not yet dead but alive (though that ſenſe will have truth in it alſo applyable to the notion of life for eternal life) but as may beſt agree with the contexture of this Chapter. Here this calamity approaching the Jews and Gnoſticks is ſaid to come as a thief in the night, v. 2. Upon which he tells the pious Chriſtians that they are in no danger of receiving hurt from this, v. 4. they are not in darkneſs, that this day or judgment ſhould thus ſurprize them, and ſo again v. 5. on which he builds his exhortation v. 6. wherefore let us not ſleep, but watch and be ſober, in the figurative notion of ſleep for ſin, and watching for carefulneſs and conſtancy; and v. 7. the ground of that figurative notion of ſleep is ſet down, becauſe as ſleep is a night-work, ſo drunkenneſs is a night-work, and ſo every ſin, and therefore that viſitation that comes as a thief in the night is likely to ſurprize them, and none elſe. And on the contrary the ſober, pure, conſtant Chriſtian, he is ſure to eſcape; which he farther proves v. 9. by Chriſt's dying to that end to bring us to that purity: and conſequently being riſen again, and coming to do vital acts (ſuch is executing vengeance on enemies) he will be ſure to preſerve thoſe which are thus qualified, and that whether they wake or ſleep. That cannot now be in that figurative ſenſe formerly uſed for piety and ſin, for they that thus ſleep ſhall not thus live; but (as by the figure ἀναπαύλασις, noted on Mat. 8. k. it is ordinary) in the vulgar ordinary ſenſe of waking and ſleeping, the one noting ſolicitude, the other ſecurity: and ſo the ſenſe will be moſt current, that without their ſpecial care and ſolicitude (referring all to God, and ſo laying them down to ſleep, and taking their reſt) they ſhall be ſecured by Chriſt, and live when others that were more ſolicitous for their ſafety, the Gnoſticks, were deſtroyed with the Jews.

ἀναπάυλασις

c. Περιστάσεως ὑμᾶς

V. 12. Are over you] Προϊστάμενοι ὑμῶν, thoſe that are ſet, or rule, over you, are ſure the Biſhops of ſeveral Churches, called in the firſt times Προεστῶτες Prefects, and and Preſidents in the Latin Church. As for that objection which may ariſe here from the plural number, which argues that they were more than one, the account is to be the ſame that was given for ἐπίσκοποι more Biſhops than one, Phil. 1. 1. becauſe firſt, as Philippi was a Metropolis of Macedonia, and contained many Churches, and conſequently Biſhops under it, ſo was Theſſalonica here alſo, and all the Churches that were under it were written to alſo in this Epiſtle inſcribed to the Metropolitan Church. Secondly, it hath been before obſerved (Note on Phil. 1. a.) that Theſſalonica and Philippi being both Churches of Macedonia, theſe Epiſtles were written to both, and indeed to all the Chriſtian Churches of Macedonia (as the Epiſtle to the Corinthians belonged alſo to the Saints or Chriſtians of all Achaia.) And there being many Biſhops conſtituted in that whole country, they are all here contained under theſe phraſes, Κοπιῶντες κοπιῶντες ἐν ὑμῖν, they that labour among you, that is, labour in the word and doctrine, 1 Tim. 5. 17. and προϊσταμένους thoſe that are ſet over you, and νουθετοῦντες they that exhort you, it being the Biſhop's office to do all theſe.

d. Ἄτακτοι V. 14. Unruly] Ἄτακτοι irregular is a military word, and ſignifies diſbanded Souldiers, that have left their employment or ſervice or obedience to their commanders, and ſo may here be ſet to expreſs thoſe that live not in obedience to the Apoſtles rules, or to the commands of their ſuperiors the Biſhops in their Churches, who are here firſt admoniſhed according to Chriſt's directions, Mat 18. 15. and ſo again a ſecond time, 2 Theſſ. 3. 12. and if they reform not are then to be cenſured and excommunicate, 2 Theſſ. 3. 6. But the Context in that place ſeems to refer to one particular kind of irregularity (contrary to the expreſs orders of the Apoſtle there, v. 10.) viz. living idly, giving over the works and duties of their callings, v. 11. which beſide the diſobedience to his orders, was literally alſo a forſaking their colours, leaving that rank wherein they were placed by God; and ſo there v. 7. Ἀταξίαν is ſet oppoſite to labouring v. 8.

e. Εἶδος V. 22. Appearance] The word εἶδος, which is ordinarily rendred appearance, is known to ſignifie (as the Latin ſpecies among authors,) kind, or ſort. Thus they that interpret it otherwiſe, acknowledge the Syriack to render it. And ſo the meaning of the place will be, ἀπὸ παντὸς εἴδους πονηροῦ, from all ſort, or the whole kind, of evil, from all that is truly ſo, be it never ſo ſmall, according to that of Ribbi in Pirch-avoth c. 2. יהוי זחיר במצוה קלה כבחמירה be as careful in the keeping a light, as an heavy commandment. Thus the place ſeems to be underſtood by S. Baſil, who oppoſes πᾶν εἶδος πονηρὸν every kind of evil to τὸ δόκιμον, which will upon trial bear the touch, on the beginning of the Prov. Δόκιμος τραπεζίτης τὸ μὴ δόκιμον καθέξει, ἀπὸ δὲ παντὸς εἴδους πονηροῦ ἀφέξεται, A good merchant will keep that which is good, unadulterate metal, but will abſtain from all kind of evil, or adulterate; not from that which appears ill, if it be not, for to what purpoſe then is his skill or touchſtone? but from that which is ill, whatever it appear. So Theophylact, μὴ τούτου ἐκείνου, ἀλλ' ἁπλῶς παντὸς πεφεύγατε ψεύδους, καὶ ἀψεύστου ἡμῶν, fly from all ſimply, not from this or that, from every lying prophet and from every ſin. So * Leonitius de Sect. περιξ. γ'. ſpeaking of the hereſie of the Manichees, which choſe the worſt things ἐξ ἑκάστης αἱρέσεως out of each hereſie, he adds, ὃ φεύγει ἢ οὐδὲ εἰδωλολατρείας, ὃ παντὸς εἴδους κακοῦ, it abſtains not even from Idolatry, nor from any ſort (not ſhew or appearance, but kind or ſort) of evil.

* Bib. Pat. Grac. t. 1. P. 503. E.

f. Ὁλόκληρον ὑμῶν V. 23. Whole ſpirit and—] The ὁλόκληρον ὑμῶν, the all, or whole of you, the intire or complete man is here divided into three parts, ſpirit, ſoul, and body. There ſeems to be a particular mention of each of theſe in the creation, Gen. 2. 7. Firſt עפר מן האדמה the duſt of the earth, that viſible maſs, the fleſh, or members, that is, the body: then ſecondly, נפש חיים the living ſoul, the animal or ſenſitive faculty, common to man with beaſts and other ſenſitive creatures, and that is ψυχὴ the ſoul, which therefore in the New Teſtament ordinarily ſignifies the life, Luk. 12. 20. ψυχήν σου ἀπαιτοῦσι they require thy ſoul, that is, thy life from thee. So Mat. 10. 39. and 16. 25, 26. and elſewhere. See c. 2. 8. Thirdly, נשמת חיים the breath of life, the rational faculty capable of divine illumination, and ſo called πνεῦμα the ſpirit, or that which was at firſt breathed into man by God, and returns immortal into his hands again. And ſo this may be the full meaning of the words, your ſpirit, ſoul and body, that is your rational, immortal ſpirit, your ſenſitive, mortal ſoul, and your body, the place of reſidence of both, which three make up the whole man, the ὁλόκληρον ὑμῶν the whole of us; and ſo Marcus Eremita περὶ μέλαν. τριμερὴς ὑπόστασις σώματος, πνεύματος καὶ ψυχῆς, the three-parted hypoſtaſis of body, ſpirit, and ſoul. But there is another notion of the word ſoul, which may poſſibly make a change in this matter: For the Hebrew נפש ſoul, Gen 23. 8. is by the Chaldee paraphraſe rendred רצוה the will, and ſo it muſt there ſignifie; for there Abraham communed with them, ſaying, if it be your ſoul (we render it mind) that is, your pleaſure, your election or choice, (that is an act of the Will) that I ſhould bury my dead out of my ſight, hear me, &c. So Pſ. 27. 12. the ſoul of my enemies, muſt ſignifie the pleaſure, and is rightly rendred the will of my enemies, ſo as they may deal with me as they pleaſe; and ſo the ſame phraſe is again uſed Pſal. 41. 2. So Deut. 21. 14. Thou ſhalt let her go לנפשה according to her ſoul, that is, her will, whither ſhe pleaſe, or chooſe to go, that is, freely, the will being that free faculty which chuſes what it pleaſes, and accordingly the Septuagint read there ἐλεύθεραν free to go whither ſhe will, This Theſſalus, Cent. 2. 27. calls ψυχὴν πρακτικὴν the practical Soul, viz. the beginning of Action, for ſuch the Will is. And that this is the notion of the ψυχὴ ſoul here, is the opinion of the moſt ancient writers, Origen and Irenæus, as ſhall anon appear: And if it be ſo, then the word σῶμα body muſt be taken in a more comprehenſive latitude, ſo as to contain the ſenſes and ſenſitive appetites that are ſeated in the body, in the notion that the fleſh and the members are oppoſed to the ſpirit and the mind Rom. 7. and Gal. 5. And then this will be the diviſion of the man, the fleſh, or body, or ſenſitive, carnal appetites on one ſide, and the Spirit, or upper ſoul, the rational propoſals on the other ſide, and the will or choice, that freely inclines to one or the other of theſe as it pleaſes. For the firſt of theſe three, the Fathers are wont to ſet τὰ πάθη the paſſions, ἐπιθυμίαν ſenſual deſire; ὁ δῆμος the common people of the ſoul in Maximus Tyrius, τὸ θῆλυ the woman-part in Philo, ὁ παῖς ὁ ἐν ἡμῖν the child in us in Simplicius on Epictet. p. 70. and again p. 296. πεπέζιον ψυχῆς μέρος, the lower foot-part of the ſoul, by which the ſoul communicates with the body, τὰ ἄλογα πάθη the unreaſonable affections generally among the Stoicks, and ἀλογία unreaſonableneſs, ἵππος the horſe in Socrates, θηρίον the beaſt in Plotinus, or ζωωθὲν τὸ σῶμα the body enlivened, θηρία καὶ τετράποδα the beaſts and fourfooted creatures of the ſoul, which ſtill allure us to beſtial things; οὐκ ἀνθρώπου ἢ ἀνθρωπος, not of man as man (ſaith Nemeſius de Nat. Hom. c. 1.) ἀλλὰ ζῴου μὲν πρωτίστως, ἀνθρώπου δὲ ἐπομένως, ἐπειδὴ καὶ ζῶον ὁ ἄνθρωπος, but of the living creature primarily, and conſequently of the man, in that man is a living creature. For the Spirit they ſet τὸ ἡγεμονικὸν the leading faculty of the ſoul, ὁ νοῦς and νοερὸν the intellectual faculty, ἡνίοχον the rider of that horſe in Socrates, ὁ παιδαγωγὸν ῥυθμίζουσα καὶ μετριοῦσα τὰς ἀλόγους ἐν ἡμῖν, ὀρέξεις, καὶ πρὸς τὸ ὠφέλιμον ἀπαθόνουσα αὐτὰς, the pædagogue that modulates the irrational appetite, and ſets it right to that which is profitable; in Simplicius, ὁ ἐν ὑμῖν θεὸν the God in us; in Julian, κυβερνήτειον ψυχῆς εἶδος, καὶ ὡς ἔφη αὐτὸν δαίμονα ἑκάστῳ δοθέντα, οἰκεῖσθαι ἐπ' ἄκρῳ τῷ σώματι, πρὸς ὃ ὁ ἐν ἐσχάτῳ συγγένειαν ἀπὸ γῆς ἡμᾶς ἀνέχοντα, Orat. 2. p. 127. the chief part of the ſoul, the dæmon that is given to every one, dwelling in the top of the body, and raiſing us from the earth to our kindred in heaven; the τὸ ἄρρεν the maſculine part in Philo, ὁ ἄνθρωπος the man in others, the inward man in Saint Paul, and ὁ νοῦς the mind, διάνοιαν the underſtanding, Mar. 12. 30. and σύνεσιν in the ſame ſenſe v. 33. Betwixt theſe two then, as in the middle of them, is placed ψυχὴ, as that ſignifies the will, the elective faculty, called by the Ancients αὐτεξούσιον and αὐθαίρετον, the will, or choice. This Philoſophy concerning the parts and diviſion of man * Nemeſius cites from Plotinus, ἐκ τριῶν ὁ ἄνθρωπός σύνεστι [illegible] σώματος καὶ ψυχῆς καὶ νοῦ, that the man is made up of three, body, ſoul, and mind; and he affirms Apollinarius Biſhop of Laodicea to have followed him in it. The ſame we may ſee in Irenæus l. 5. c. 9. together with the notion of ὁλόκληρον ὑμᾶς for the whole of you, which we have given. Sunt, ſaith he, tria ex quibus perfectus homo conſtat, carne, animâ, ſpiritu, There are three things of which the entire perfect man conſiſts, fleſh, ſoul, ſpirit. And again, anima eſt quidem inter hæc duo, aliquando ſubſequens ſpiritum elevatur ab eo, aliquando autem conſentiens carni decidit in terrenas concupiſcentias, The ſoul is betwixt the fleſh and ſpirit, and ſometimes following the ſpirit is elevated by it, ſometimes conſenting to the fleſh falls into earthly concupiſcences. So Origen l. 1. ſup. Epiſt. ad Rom. Triplex hominis portio, Corpus, ſeu caro, infima noſtri pars, cui per genitalem culpam legem inſcripſit peccati ſerpens ille veterator, quâque ad turpia provocamur, ac vitii diabolo nectimur; Spiritus, quo divinæ Naturæ ſimilitudinem exprimimus, in qua Conditor optimus de ſuæ mentis archetypo æternam iſtam honeſti legem inſculpſit digito, h. e. ſpiritu ſuo, hoc Deo conglutinamur, unumque cum Deo reddimur; Porrò tertia, & inter ea media, Anima, quæ velut in factioſa republica non poteſt non alterutri partium accedere, hinc atque hinc ſolicitatur, liberum habet utrò velit inclinare; ſi carni renuncians ad ſpiritûs partes ſeſe induxerit, fiet & ipſa ſpiritualis, ſin ad carnis cupiditates ſemet abjecerit, dejenerabit & ipſa in corpus. There are three parts of a man, the Body, or fleſh, the loweſt part of a man, on which the Serpent by original ſin inſcribed the law of ſin, and by which we are tempted to filthy things; and as oft as we are overcome by the temptation are joined faſt to the devil; the Spirit, by which we expreſs the likeneſs of the divine Nature in which God from the pattern of his own mind engraved the eternal law of honeſt, with his own hand or ſpirit, by this we are joined faſt to God, and are made one with him; then the Soul, which is the middle betwixt theſe two, which as in a factious commonwealth cannot but joyn with one or other of the former parties, being ſolicited this way and that, and having liberty to which it will joyn; if it renounce the fleſh and joyn with the ſpirit, it will it ſelf become ſpiritual, but if it caſt it ſelf down to the deſires of the fleſh, it will it ſelf degenerate into the body. All moſt diſtinctly and largely to the ſame purpoſe, when the ſoul or will thus conſents to the body or fleſh, then luſt is ſaid to conceive and bring forth ſin, Jam. 1. 15. ἐπιθυμία συλλαβοῦσα Thus the fleſh or lower ſoul, like the harlot, ſolicites the will, the middle faculty of the man, to impure unlawful embraces, δελεάζει, invites, and attracts it with ſome pleaſant bait; then when it hath obtained its conſent, by this means it conceives ſin, which, when by ſome degrees it is grown to perfection, proceeds from conſent to act, from conception to birth, from act to delight, from delight to frequent iteration, thence to habit, from habit to obduration, and at laſt it ſelf is able to bring forth again, it brings forth death: with which agrees that of the Poet, δελεάζει

Αἶπος ἄρουρα θανάτου ἐπικομίζεσθαι,

Æſchyl. Επτ' επι Θηβ. That which is ſin in the field, is death in the harveſt. And Ἄλης, ὅθεν παφλάυστον ἀζαμᾶ θέρος,

Id Πέρσαις, Luſt bloſſoms and fructifies ſin, from whence comes a lamentable harveſt. So again when the ſpirit gets the conſent and the embraces, the fruits of the ſpirit follow alſo. And ſo * Thalaſſius having compared the will, under the title of ψυχὴ πρακτικὴ, the practical ſoul, or beginning of action, to a woman, adds, Ἡ ὁ νοῦς συγγενόμενος ἐπιτίκτει τὰς ἀρετὰς, with which when the mind joyns, it bring forth vertue, To this is referred the ſpirit's luſting againſt the fleſh, and the fleſh againſt the ſpirit, and many the like paſſages of the New Teſtament; and in Julian Or. 4. p. 267. διττὴ μαχομένη φύσις, ἐς ἓν κακρεμένη, ψυχῆς καὶ σώματος, ἡ μὲν θείας, τῆς δὲ σκοτεινῆς καὶ ζοφώδους, the double nature that is at ſtrife, mingled together, viz. ſoul and body, one divine, the other dark and black, from whence, ſaith he, riſes the μάχη καὶ στάσις the ſtrife and diſſention in man.

THIS second Epiſtle ſeems to have been written not many months after the former, about the 51. of Chriſt, whilſt the Apoſtle yet remained at Corinth, or was removed to Athens perhaps. For having in the former expreſs'd his intentions and deſire to viſit them again in Macedonia, 1 Theſſ. 3. 10, 11. it no where appears that he did find an opportunity to do ſo; and then it is not improbable, that being by the interveniency of affairs, and perhaps of dangers, hindred from making good his reſolution, he ſhould thus haſten to ſend this Epiſtle to ſupply that defect, to confirm their minds, and to correct an errour which he ſaw they were in concerning that coming of Chriſt, (mentioned in the former Epiſtle, c. 2. 16. and 5. 3.) for the acting revenge upon his enemies the Jews, which they either from the words of his Epiſtle (ſee ch. 2. 2. Note c.) or by ſome other means, had perſuaded themſelves would come more ſpeedily than in truth it was likely to come. The ill conſequence of this miſtake the Apoſtle foreſaw, viz. that if they depended on it as inſtant, ὡς ὅτι ἐνέστηκεν, and ſhould find their hopes of immediate deliverance, which was to attend it, fruſtrated, this would be ſure to ſhake their faith and their conſtancy. And therefore diſcerning their error, he thought it neceſſary to rectifie it, by mentioning to them ſome things which were neceſſarily to be precedent to it, and reminding them that this was exactly according to what he had told them when he was among them. And this is viſibly the ſum of the two firſt chapters, the third being enlarged occaſionally to ſome particulars.

CHAP. I.

Paraphraſe.

1. PAUL and Silvanus and Timotheus unto the Church of the Theſſalonians, in God our father, and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, See 1 Theſſ. 1. 1.

2. Grace be unto you and peace from God our father, and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

* that ὅτι

3. We are bound to thank God always for you, brethren, as it is meet, * becauſe that your faith groweth exceedingly, and the charity of every one of you all toward each other aboundeth.]

3. We count our ſelves bound to give God eſpecial thanks for his mercy and grace afforded you, by the help of which it is that your adherence to the Chriſtian faith grows every day more conſtant, for all your perſecutions, ch. 2. 14. and ſo alſo your mutual love and charity, unity and amity one toward another, without any breach or ſchiſm among you.

4. So that we our ſelves glory in you in the Churches of God for your patience and faith in all your perſecutions and tribulations that ye indure.]

4. And accordingly we expreſs our joy by boaſting of you to other Churches of Chriſtians, that you have with great patience endured ſore perſecutions, and yet continued firm and conſtant in all.

5. Which is a manifeſt token of the righteous judgment of God, that ye may be counted worthy of the [a] kingdom of God, for which ye alſo ſuffer:]

5. Which is a notable means of evidencing the great juſtice of God's providence, and diſpenſations of the things of this world, when all the perſecutions that fall on you tend but to the trial and approving of your conſtancy and fidelity to Chriſt, and ſo to the making you capable of that glorious deliverance which Chriſt will ſhortly work for all that adhere to him, when the unfaithful and cowardly are deſtroyed with the perſecutors. And indeed this is it for which they perſecute you, as they have done us, that we profeſs to believe that Chriſt will ſhortly exerciſe this regal power of his for the deſtroying of his enemies, and reſcuing the perſecuted out of their calamities:

a.

6. Seeing it is a righteous thing with God to recompenſe tribulation to them that trouble you;]

6. It being moſt juſt with God to puniſh your perſecutors, to deal with them as they have dealt with you;

7. And to you who are troubled, reſt with us, when the Lord Jeſus ſhall be [b] revealed from heaven with his mighty Angels,]

7. And to give you, in proportion to your ſufferings, a participation of eaſe and joy with the Apoſtles of Chriſt, at that glorious coming of his to the puniſhing of his enemies foretold Mat. 24. with thoſe notable meſſengers, and miniſters, and executioners of his power, (ſee Note on 2 Pet. 3. d.)

b.

8. In flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the Goſpel of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt,]

8. In rendring a moſt ſevere vengeance to all the obdurate Jews, and wicked carnal heretical Gnoſtick Chriſtians,

9. Who ſhall be puniſhed with everlaſting deſtruction from the preſence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power,]

9. Which ſhall be finally deſtroyed by the judgment of God, at his powerful appearance in vengeance againſt his crucifiers.

10. When he ſhall come to be glorified in his ſaints, and to be admired in all them that believe, (becauſe our teſtimony among you was believed) in that day.]

10. At which time alſo he will ſhew miraculous acts of mercy to all pious faithful Chriſtians, to deliver them (and ſo conſequently you, who have received the Goſpel preached by us) in the day of his vengeance on his enemies, ſee Note on Heb. 10. a.

* make you worthy ἀξιώσῃ

11. Wherefore alſo we pray always for you, that our God would * count you worthy of this calling, and fulfil all the good pleaſure of his goodneſs, and the work of faith with power,]

11. To which purpoſe we pray for you continually, that God will by his grace enable you to walk worthy of that high calling or privilege, that of being Chriſtians, owned and vindicated by him, and powerfully accompliſh and complete in you all the good works and fruits of faith and patience, which may render you acceptable in his ſight,

12. That Chriſt may have the honour of your patience, and you be rewarded for it, according to the great mercy and goodneſs of God in Chriſt Jeſus.

Annotations on Chap. I.

a. Βασιλεία θεοῦ

V. 5. Kingdom of God] That the kingdom of God ſignifies the ſtate of the Goſpel or Chriſtian profeſſion, appears oft in the Goſpels, eſpecially in the parables of Chriſt; when the kingdom of God is likened to a net, 10 a pearl, &c. and to that the addition of τῆς θλίψεως for which ye ſuffer, may here ſeem to incline it, it, but the καταξιωθῆναι that goes before is not well appliable to that. For that ſignifying to be vouchſafed, or thought worthy, to have their parts in it, or to have it beſtowed upon them, it muſt refer to ſomewhat yet future, which through the mercy of God ſhould be beſtowed upon them; and then that, whatſoever it is, being hoped for and depended on by them, it may well be ſaid that they ſuffer for that, that is, either for the profeſſing that hope of theirs, whereby the malice of others is provoked againſt them, or at leaſt in hope or intuition of it. Two other notions therefore there are of the kingdom of God: firſt, that of reigning with Chriſt in endleſs bliſs in another world; and ſecondly, the exerciſe of Chriſt's regal power, which was then ſo oft foretold to be approaching, in deſtroying his enemies, and preſerving his faithful ſubjects, according to that double office of a King, Rom. 13. of avenging of offenders, and rewarding them that do good. Of this ſee Note on Mat. 3. c. And that this is the notion of it in this place appears very probable by that which follows, where it is ſaid, that it is juſt with God to repay tribulation to their perſecutors, and to the perſecuted ἄνεσιν releaſe, refreſhment from the perſecutions under which they had been. This was it that the Apoſtles had foretold them in their preachings (ſee Note a. on the title of the Epiſtle to the Romans) and the benefits and fruits which they had been promiſed upon their perſeverance in the faith through all their perſecutions, not excluding their eternal reward (but ſuppoſing that for the future, and in caſe they did not outlive the preſent diſtreſſes, 1 Theſſ. 4. 13.) but withal giving them into the bargain this aſſurance of an eminent deliverance here, halcionian days of reſt to the Church upon the deſtruction of their perſecutors, according as it fell out in Veſpaſian's days, after the deſtruction of the Jews. And this the Apoſtles profeſſed to expect, and ſo did the Orthodox Chriſtians generally: and as S. Stephen was ſtoned for that expectation Act. 6. 14. ſo were the Apoſtles and their followers perſecuted alſo; and ſo it was literally ὧν ἧς πάσχετε, for this avowed expectation of this kingdom thus underſtood, they ſuffered perſecution.

b. Ἀποκάλυψις Χριστοῦ

V. 7. Revealed] Ἀποκάλυψις Χριστοῦ the revelation of Chriſt, as the coming of Chriſt, is a phraſe of a doubtful ſignification, ſometimes ſignifying the coming to the final doom, but ſometimes alſo that coming that was deſcribed Mat. 24. and was to be within that generation. And ſo ſure it ſignifies in ſeveral places of S. Peter, 1 Pet. 1. 7, 13. and chap. 4. 13. and the σωτηρία ἑτοίμη ἀποκαλυφθῆναι ἐν ἐσχάτῳ καιρῷ, the deliverance ready to be revealed in the laſt time, ch. 1. 5. the deſtruction of the Jews being the time of the deliverance and eſcaping to the Chriſtians that were perſecuted by them, (ſee Rom. 13. 11.) So again 1 Pet. 5. 1. where S. Peter ſaying of himſelf that he was a witneſs of the ſufferings of Chriſt, addeth he was alſo ὁ μελλούσης ἀποκαλύπτεσθαι δόξης κοινωνός, partaker of the glory that ſhould be revealed, that is preſent at the tranſfiguration, whereby Moſes and Elias were repreſented and declared the glorious conſequents of his crucifixion, that is, the deſtruction of his crucifiers, and deliverance of his faithful diſciples; ſee Note on Mat. 17. a. Luke 9. b. and 2 Pet. 1. 16. And ſo here it moſt probably ſignifies, where the vengeance on the oppreſſors, that is, the crucifiers of Chriſt, and perſecutors of Chriſtians, is deſcribed, and an appendix of that reſt and releaſe to the oppreſſed, which is that σωτηρία deliverance, ſo oft promiſed to them that perſevere and endure and outlaſt thoſe perſecutions, and that ἐν ἡμέρᾳ ἐκείνῃ, v. 10. in that day, which is the notation of that time of vengeance upon the Jews; ſee Heb. 10. a. As for the mentions, firſt, of the Angels, ſecondly, of the flame of fire, thirdly, of the everlaſting deſtruction, which may here ſeem to interpret this revelation of Chriſt, ſo as to ſignifie the day of the general doom; it is evident firſt, that the Angels being miniſters of God in executing his judgments on nations, this remarkable vengeance on the Jews may well here, and is elſewhere fitly expreſs'd by his coming, or revealing himſelf with, or by, his Angels. So Mat. 16. 27. and elſewhere often. See Note on Jude g. Then ſecondly, for the πῦρ φλογὸς, fire of flame, or flaming fire, that is ordinarily the expreſſion of the appearance of Angels (he maketh his miniſters a flaming fire, ſaith the Pſalmiſt) and ſo adds little to the former. And ſecondly God's judgments, if they be deſtructive, are ordinarily in prophetick phraſe expreſs'd by flaming fire; ſee Mat. 3. 12. Thirdly, for the ὄλεθρος αἰώνιος, that ſignifies an utter deſtruction: when of the chaff it is ſaid, Mat. 3. 12. that it ſhall be burnt with unquenchable fire, it refers to the cuſtom of winnowing, where the fire being ſet to the chaff, and aſſiſted with the wind, never goes out, till it have burnt up all. Mean while not excluding the eternal torments of hell fire, which expect all impenitent ſinners that thus fall, but looking particularly on the viſible deſtruction and vengeance which ſeiſeth on whole nations or multitudes at once in this life. And that this is the meaning of the ὄλεθρος αἰώνιος everlaſting deſtruction here, appears by all that here follows in this chapter, the time aſſign'd for it, ὅταν ἔλθῃ ἐνδοξασθῆναι, &c. when Chriſt ſhall come (the ordinary expreſſion of this his vengeance on his crucifiers) to be glorified in his ſaints, and to be admired among all believers in that day; which that it belongs to ſomewhat then approaching, and wherein thoſe Theſſalonians were then concerned (not to the general judgment, yet future) is evident by his prayer for them, that they may have their part in that great favour of God, v. 11. and that the name of the Lord Jeſus may be glorified ἐν ὑμῖν among them to whom he writes, ἐν ὑμῖν ἐν αὐτῷ and that they may be glorified in, or through, him, by this remarkable deliverance, which ſhould ſhortly befall them which were now perſecuted.

Paraphraſe. CHAP. II.

a. b. 1. But now, brethren, concerning that famous coming of Chriſt ſo often ſpoken of ch. 1. 5, &c. (and mentioned to you by me 1 Theſſ. 5. 1.) for the deſtroying and cutting off the crucifiers of Chriſt and perſecutors of Chriſtians (ſee Note on Mat. 24. b.) the thing which is juſtly looked on by you as the period of your miſeries and perſecutions, ſo univerſally cauſed by them, and which conſequently will be attended with the plentiful coming in of diſciples to the Chriſtian profeſſion, and with a greater liberty of publick aſſembling for the worſhip of Chriſt than our perſecutions and diſperſions will now afford us (ſee Note on Rev. 1. d.) concerning this matter, I ſay, I beſeech you,

1. NOW we beſeech you, brethren, * [a] by the [b] coming of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and † by our gathering together unto him,] * concerning the † our

c. 2. That ye be not removed out of the truth (which ye have already been taught, and believed from Chriſt and us) either by the pretended or miſunderſtood revelations or inſpirations of ſome, or by any thing ſaid to you by me when I was with you by word of mouth, or by that which I wrote to you in the former Epiſtle, ch. 5. 2. as if it were our affirmation, that this now were the period of time wherein the day of the Lord, his coming to judge and deſtroy the Jews, were inſtantly a coming; I foreſee the danger of this miſtake to you, that if you believe this and find your ſelves confuted by the event, it will be matter of great trouble to you, and may poſſibly ſhake your conſtancy, and tempt you to disbelieve our Goſpel, and forſake your profeſſion.

And therefore let not this cheat by any artifice be put upon you, being of ſo dangerous importance, if you believe it to be taught by us; but reſolve on this, that before that come, firſt there muſt be, according to Chriſt's prediction, a great departure or defection from the faith to the hereſie of the Gnoſticks, (or perhaps this may be the meaning of the departure, that in the order and method of things foretold by Chriſt, one thing muſt ſolemnly precede, the Chriſtians breaking off their compliance with the impenitent Jews, leaving them as obdurate, and departing avowedly to the Gentiles, Mat. 24. 13.) and ſecondly, Simon Magus, that wicked Impoſtor, and accurſed perſon owned to ruine, together with his followers the Gnoſticks, ſhall ſhew themſelves in their colours, having for ſome ſpace concealed their malice;

but diſcern what 'tis which makes ſome ſtop in this buſineſs, their ſeaſon of ſhewing themſelves and making open profeſſion of all hoſtility and hatred againſt the Orthodox Chriſtians is not yet come. The peculiar ſeaſon will be when the Apoſtles have given over preaching to the Jews, as hopeleſs and refractory, and ſo go to the Gentiles, Mat. 24. 13. and conſequently break off that more tender compliance with the Jews; For as long as that holds the Jews will not be ſo ſharp againſt the Chriſtians, and conſequently 'twill not be yet ſo fit a ſeaſon for the Gnoſticks to diſcover their venom againſt them.

7. For the i myſtery of iniquity † doth already work, * only he who now letteth will let, until he be taken out of the way:]

7. And therefore though i.
this ſort of men be already formed into a ſect, under their ringleaders Simon and Carpocrates, &c. yet at this time 'tis carried more cloſely, they are not broken out into ſuch open renouncing of, and oppoſition to Chriſt and Chriſtians, they have no occaſion as yet to ſide with the Jews againſt the Chriſtians, nor ſhew of quarrel whereupon to exaſperate the Jews againſt them, becauſe the Chriſtians walk warily and do nothing contrary to the Moſaical Law, which is the thing which holds them from breaking out, v. 6. But as ſoon as ever that which withholdeth is removed, that is, as ſoon as the Apoſtles depart, v. 3. go profeſs'dly to the Gentiles, give over the Jews, and permit not Chriſtians to Judaize, but call them off from obſerving the Law,

8. And then ſhall * k that wicked be revealed, whom the Lord ſhall conſume † with the ſpirit of his mouth, and ſhall deſtroy * with the brightneſs of his coming,]

8. Then immediately ſhall k.
this ſect of Gnoſticks ſhew itſelf, join with and ſtir up the Jews, and bring heavy perſecutions upon the Chriſtians, and (having this opportunity to calumniate them to the Jews) behave themſelves as their profeſſed oppoſers. And Simon Magus ſhall ſet himſelf forth in the head of them; whom, as a profeſs'd enemy of Chriſt, Chriſt ſhall deſtroy by extraordinary means by the preaching and miracles of S. Peter: and for all the Apoſtatizing Gnoſticks that adhered to him, they ſhall be involved in the deſtruction of the unbelieving Jews, with whom they have joined againſt the Chriſtians.

9. Even him whoſe coming is after the working of Satan, with all power, and ſigns, and lying wonders,]

9. This perſon, whom now I ſpeak of, and his followers are ſuch as by Magick do many ſtrange things to deceive men into an admiration of themſelves,

10. And with all deceivableneſs of unrighteouſneſs, in them that periſh, becauſe they received not the love of the truth, that they might be ſaved.]

10. And by baits of luſt, &c. they work upon the generality of wicked carnal Chriſtians, and this as a puniſhment for their not being brought to ſincere repentance and true faith by the Goſpel, but preferring the ſatisfaction of their own humors, and paſſions, and prejudices, Joh. 8. 45. before the doctrine of Chriſt, when it came with the greateſt conviction, and evidence, and authority among them, Tit. 2. 11.

11. And for this cauſe God ſhall ſend them † ſtrong deluſions, that they ſhould believe a lie:]

11. And this is the cauſe why God ſuffers meer Magicians to deceive them by falſe miracles, and by that means to bring them to believe all kind of falſneſs, falſe gods, falſe ways of worſhip, deceitful, cheating, falſe miracles to get authority to thoſe and all manner of heathen, licentious, vicious practices, the conſequents of thoſe errors, and the moſt contrary to Evangelical truth:

12. That they all might be * damned who believed not the truth, but had pleaſure in unrighteouſneſs.]

12. That ſo filling up the meaſure of their obdurations, they may fall under condemnation, or be judged and diſcerned to be what they are, impenitent infidels, and accordingly remarkably puniſhed.

† that he ὅτι

13. But we are bound to give thanks alway to God for you, brethren, beloved of the Lord, † becauſe God hath from the beginning choſen you to ſalvation, through ſanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth,]

13. The more of truth there is in all this, the more are we bound to bleſs and praiſe God for his goodneſs to you, brethren, that he hath been ſo favourable to you above others, as to appoint the Goſpel to be preached to you, and you to be called to the faith of Chriſt ſo early (ſo theſe being Jews at Theſſalonica are ſaid to have believed before others, Epheſ. 1. 12.) and ſo to be taken out of that wicked generation by the preaching of the Goſpel, and that grace which is annex'd to it, and by your receiving of the truth (by which means you are ſafe both from the Apoſtaſie, v. 3. and the deluſions, v. 10. and from the deſtruction that ſhall ſhortly come upon the Jews and Gnoſticks, v. 1, 8, and 12.)

14. Whereunto he called you by our Goſpel, to the obtaining of the glory of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.]

14. Unto which honour and advantages God hath by our preaching advanced you, that thereby ye might have your parts in all the glorious effects of Chriſt's power in his ſervants, and over his enemies.

15. Therefore, brethren, ſtand faſt, and hold the traditions which ye have been taught, whether by word or our Epiſtle.]

15. To conclude therefore, Do you, brethren, take care to retain conſtantly all the doctrine which I have (both at my being with you for the preaching of the Goſpel to you, and ſince in mine Epiſtle) delivered to you, all ſuch, I mean, as I have truly told or written to you, not ſuch as are unduly put upon you under that pretence, v. 2.

16. Now our Lord Jeſus Chriſt himſelf, and God, even our father, which hath loved us, and hath given us everlaſting conſolation and good hope through grace,]

16. And I beſeech that Lord and Saviour of ours, Jeſus Chriſt, and God the Father, who out of his meer love to us hath thus given us his Son, and through him afforded us matter of endleſs comfort, even the hope of eternal joys to reward our temporary ſufferings, and revealed this to us in the preaching of the Goſpel, (ſee Note on Heb. 13. c.)

17. Comfort your hearts, and ſtabliſh you in every good word and work.]

17. That he will now in your tribulations and perſecutions refreſh and chear you up, and confirm you to perſevere ſtedfaſt and conſtant in the profeſſion of the truth, and in all Chriſtian practices.

Annotations on Chap. II.

a. περὶ

V. 1. By] The Prepoſition ὑπὲρ is oft taken in the notion of περὶ, of, or about, or concerning, or for, as that denotes the matter of the enſuing diſcourſe, as when we ſay in Engliſh, Now, for ſuch a matter, or point, or queſtion, which is the form of entring upon any diſcourſe. And thus it ſeems to be underſtood here, making the coming of Chriſt, &c. the things which he proceeds to diſcourſe of, which having been touched upon in the former Epiſtle c. 5. 1. (and, it ſeems, that which was ſaid in that Epiſtle, miſunderſtood by them in ſome circumſtances) he proceeds, as in a known matter, to ſpeak of it, and ſo ὑπὲρ will be beſt rendred, concerning.

b. παρουσία τοῦ Κυρίου

Ib. Coming of our Lord] Παρουσία τοῦ Κυρίου, the coming of the Lord, hath been at large explained, Note on Mat. 24. b. to ſignifie the coming of Chriſt as a Judge to deſtroy the Jews, (as Pſal. 96. 13. For he cometh, for he cometh to judge the earth, and as Pſal. 97. 5. the hills melted like wax at the preſence of the Lord, the very παρουσία τοῦ Κυρίου here) and by that means to reſcue thoſe that were perſecuted by them: and this is by Saint James c. 5. 7, 8. called by this title, παρουσία τοῦ Κυρίου, the coming of the Lord, and that then ἐγγίζουσα, approaching, and farther expreſſed v. 9. by the Judge ſtanding before the doors; and ſo there is little reaſon to doubt but that it ſo ſignifies here. 'Tis true indeed that 1 Theſſ. 4. 15. παρουσία τοῦ Κυρίου, the coming of the Lord, is uſed for the final day of doom; but the phraſe here appears not to refer to that place: for after the deſcription of that to the end of that fourth Chapter, the Apoſtle c. 5. begins begins περὶ δὲ τ χρόνων κ τ καιρῶν but concerning the times and ſeaſons, as of ſomewhat which was then approaching, and preſumed to be ſufficiently known among them, and on that ſubject he tells them, that they know that the day of the Lord cometh as a thief in the night. Now to this coming of the day of the Lord it is that the Apoſtle here refers, in this ſecond Epiſtle (that which he had ſaid of it in the firſt Epiſtle, and particularly the αἰφνίδιος ὄλεθρος ſuddain deſtruction v. 3. being miſinterpreted by ſome of them, and changed into ἐνέστηκεν ἡ ἡμέρα τ Χριστ the day of Chriſt is inſtantly approaching) as may appear by the end of the ſecond verſe, where the very phraſe is uſed, the day of the Lord, which therefore is to be taken for the interpretation of παρουσία Χριστ, the coming of Chriſt v. 1. the one as well as the other ordinarily denoting this judgment of Chriſt's upon the Jews (ſee Note on Rom. 13. d.) And then the ἐπισυναγωγὴ ἡμῶν ἐπ' αὐτόν, our aſſembling to him, muſt be proportionably explained to ſignifie that greater liberty of the Chriſtians to aſſemble to the ſervice of Chriſt, the freedom of Eccleſiaſtical aſſemblies, which was a conſequent of that great judgment on the perſecutors in the times of Veſpaſian and Titus. See Note on Rev. 1. b. and c. 5. 10. and c. 7. 15. Thus is the phraſe uſed 2 Mac. 2. 7. where God's gathering his people again together, an effect of his receiving them into mercy, is his giving them the liberty of the Temple and his ſervice there. And ſo ἐπισυναγωγὴ ἑαυτῶν, the aſſembling of themſelves, Heb. 10. 25. is their meeting together in the publick ſervice of Chriſt. And this, as it was an happy conſequent of this deliverance, ſo was it to be uſed as a ſolemn means of expreſſing their gratitude to Chriſt, who had thus delivered them, and ſo was peculiarly a gathering together ἐπ' αὐτὸν to him.

ἐπισυναγωγὴ ἐπ' αὐτόν

V. 2. Is at hand] The word ἐνέστηκεν here notes the immediate approach of this day, or the inſtant coming of it. So ἐνεστῶτα, the thing juſt at hand, Rom. 8. 38. and 1 Cor. 3. 22. are ſet oppoſite to τὰ μέλλοντα, the things to come, which were future, but after ſome time, not ſo immediately to come to paſs. And this being the direct and exact notion of the word, is a key to the whole matter. For that this day was ἐγγίζουσα, drawing near, had been oft affirmed by the Apoſtle, and as Lactantius ſaith (ſee Note on title of the Epiſtle to the Rom. a.) commonly foretold by Peter and him in all their preachings, and 1 Theſſ. 5. 1. he had farther given them warning, that it would come as a thief in the night, that is, on a ſuddain, unobſervably, or unexpectedly. This it ſeems was miſtaken by them, and the ſuddainneſs and unobſervableneſs of it when it ſhould come, interpreted by ſome to denote the immediate, inſtant approach of it, at that time wherein he ſpake. This error of theirs they founded on three things: firſt, on the Revelations which ſome had received in this matter, and which were underſtood to this ſenſe; which is the meaning of διὰ πνεύματος, by ſpirit, the ſpirit of prophecy, either truly ſuch, or pretended to be ſuch; ſecondly, on the diſcourſes and affirmations of S. Paul when he was among them, which is the meaning of διὰ λόγου by word of mouth; thirdly, on the words of his former Epiſtle, where he had ſaid c. 5. 2. that it cometh as a thief in the night, and that when they ſaid peace and ſafety, τότε αἰφνίδιος αὐτοῖς ἐφίσταται ὄλεθρος, then a ſpeedy deſtruction invadeth them; which laſt they interpreted, as if he had ſaid ὅτι ἐνέστηκεν, that it were now inſtant, or preſent at hand, and ſo founded their doctrine upon Saint Paul: which is the meaning of ὡς δι' ἡμῶν, as if we had thus taught, either by word of mouth, or by that Epiſtle, or by both, that this day of the Lord was now inſtantly a coming: where as the miſtake was no more than by interpreting ἐφίσταται, by ἐνέστηκεν, the approach when they ſaid, Peace, that is, when they leaſt look'd for it, by the being now immediately at hand, ſo it was an error of ill conſequence, and directly contrary to what the Apoſtle had taught them, when he was with them, v. 5. and therefore their embracing it was juſtly branded by him with the title of ταχέως σαλευθῆναι ἀπὸ τ νοός being ſuddainly ſhaken from the ſenſe, or underſtanding, or notion of that coming, which he had imparted to them. And beſides it was a miſtake that he foreſaw would ſhreudly diſturb them, when looking for it according to that belief, they ſhould find themſelves defeated, and ſo be tempted to call the Apoſtles truth in queſtion from whom they took themſelves to have it. And as this would be apt to give them doubts of the truth of the whole Goſpel, which they had believed on the ſame authority, ſo would the ſharpneſs of the preſent perſecutions be in danger to ſhake them quite out of their conſtancy, when they found themſelves thus deluded in their expectation of relief; and this is the meaning of θροεῖσθαι, being troubled, And accordingly we find in S. Peter 2 Epiſt. c. 3. v. 4. that many thinking Chriſt's promiſe broken concerning this his coming, went over to the Gnoſticks, joined with them in infidelity and carnality, walking after their own luſts, and ſaying, Where is the promiſe of his coming?

V. 3. Falling away] That ἀποστασία in its natural ſignification imports no more than abſceſſion or departure, is clear by the Verb ἀφίστημι, from which it immediately comes. So Act. 15. 38. when 'tis ſaid of John τ ἀποστάντα ἀπ' αὐτῶν ἀπὸ Παμφυλίας, ſure it ſignifies no more than that he had departed from them, not from the faith of Chriſt in our modern notion of Apoſtaſie; and in that place the Kings MS. reads ἀποστήσαντα, which is a Verb made from ἀποστάτης Apoſtate, and yet there ſignifies no more than leaving, or forſaking their company, not the faith of Chriſt at that time. Thus the word is uſed diſtinctly in this matter of Moſes's Law, Act. 21. 21. ἀποστασίαν διδάσκεις ἀπὸ Μωσέως, thou teacheſt the Jews in Aſia, &c. to forſake the Moſaical Law. And therefore it is poſſible that the word ἀποστασία here may ſignifie either, firſt, this departing of the Apoſtles from the Jews, leaving them and departing to the Gentiles, which was indeed a great provocation to the Jews to perſecute them moſt bitterly, and ſo might be made uſe of by the Gnoſticks as the opportunity moſt fit to exaſperate the Jews againſt them; or elſe ſecondly, the departing of the believing Jews from the Moſaical obſervances, Circumciſion, &c. and this alſo ſharpned the perſecutors againſt them. And ſo Saint Luke uſes the word ἀποστὰς, Act. 19. 9. of Paul, when the Jews were hardned and diſobedient, and ſpake evil of that way before the multitude, ἀποστὰς ἀπ' αὐτῶν ἀφώρισε τοὺς μαθητὰς, he departed from them, and ſeparated the diſciples, that is, he (and the Chriſtian believers) forſook and ſeparated from them, and betook himſelf to the Gentiles of Aſia; and ſo at other times he did, Act. 13. 46. and finally, Act. 28. 28. And to this the Apoſtle ſeems to exhort the Hebrew believers, Heb. 13. 13. Let us therefore come forth to Chriſt without the camp, make an expreſs ſeparation from the unbelieving Jews, bearing Chriſt's approach, that is, although we be perſecuted by them for doing ſo. But beſides theſe, there is the ordinary vulgar notion of Apoſtaſie, which may very probably be meant here, a notable diſcernable apoſtatizing of Chriſtians to that abominable impiety of the Gnoſticks, of which Saint Paul 1 Tim. 4. 1. affirms ἀποστήσονταί τινες τ πίστεως, προσέχοντες πνεύμασι πλάνοις, ſome ſhall apoſtatize from the faith, giving ear to deceitful ſpirits; and this, ſaith he there, the ſpirit ſaith expreſly, that is, Chriſt hath diſtinctly foretold, Mat. 24. 10. And then ſhall many be ſcandalized, that is, fall off from the faith, and falſe prophets ſhall ariſe and deceive many, v. 11. and the love of many ſhall grow cold, v. 12. contrary to the enduring to the end. And this there as the immediate forerunner of that great day; for, as it there follows v. 14. Then ſhall the end come. And againſt this the Apoſtle warns them to take heed, Heb. 3. 12. leſt there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief in departing from the living God; and they that did ſo, he ſaith they do ὑποστέλλεσθαι εἰς ἀπώλειαν, draw back, or fall off, unto perdition, Heb. 39. 22. And (beſides that by theſe warnings and intimations (ſee Heb. 12. 15.) it appears that many did, according to Chriſt's prediction, fall off) it is farther moſt certainly known that Samaria, which was the firſt-fruits, as it were, unto Chriſt, after his aſcenſion, and embraced the faith univerſally, Act. 8. 12, 14. did alſo, by the ſubtilty of Simon Magus and the Gnoſticks, fall off from their firſt faith to that abominable Hereſie. And ſo this may very fitly be here referred to by the Apoſtle, as that which muſt neceſſarily come to paſs before the coming of this day.

c. Ib. Man of ſin] Ἄνθρωπος ἁμαρτίας, the man of ſin, is here the denotation of a very wicked ſort of people: and though it be in the Singular number, muſt not yet, in any reaſon, be confined to a ſingle perſon, but to ſome one or more ring-leaders, and their followers. Thus we know Χριστὸς Chriſt ſignifies him as he is the head of his Church, and is ſometimes uſed to ſignifie the whole ſociety of Chriſtians (ſee Note on Gal. 3. d.) And ſo Ἀντίχριστος Antichriſt is ſure no ſingle perſon, conſidered alone, but in conjunction with his followers. And in this latitude proper names of perſons are prophetically uſed to ſignifie people, Jezebel for this hereſie of Gnoſticks, the whole ſet of them, (ſee Note on Rev. 2. n.) and many the like. And accordingly here it cannot be ſtrange that the ἄνθρωπος ἁμαρτίας, the man of ſin, ſhould ſignifie more than one ſingle perſon, viz. Simon and the Gnoſticks. So likewiſe for all that follow, υἱὸς ἀπωλείας the ſon of perdition (one fit and ſure to be deſtroyed, as בן מות the ſon of death, one that ſhall ſurely die 2 Sam. 12. 5.) ὁ ἀντικείμενος he that oppoſeth himſelf, (a circumlocution of Antichriſt) and ὁ ἄνομος the wicked one, v. 8. All which are here ſet to denote that impious ſect under him, which is known by the ancients by the title of πρωτότοκος τοῦ Σατανᾶ, the firſt-born of Satan, that accurſed Simon the Magician. That 'twas ſome Magician is clear by what is ſaid of him v. 9. of the working of Satan evidenced in him, ἐν πάσῃ δυνάμει, καὶ σημείοις, καὶ τέρασι ψεύδους, &c. v. 10. in all power, and ſigns, and lying wonders: and accordingly ſaith Theophylact, Ἀνθρωπός ἐστιν ἔχων σατανᾶν ἐνεργοῦντα δι' αὐτοῦ ἐνεργείᾳ, 'tis a man that hath Satan in him working by him, (which one beſide many other circumſtances ſufficiently prove that it was not Caius, or any other of the Roman Emperors, as ſome have conceived.) And that it was particularly Simon Magus appears by Euſebius l. 2. c. 12. who at the beginning of Claudius's reign mentions his coming to Rome, and there deſcribes him διὰ τῶν ὑπ' αὐτοῦ ἐνεργουμένων δαιμόνων τέχνης δυνάμεις μαγικὰς ποιήσασθαι, (words directly parallel to this ninth verſe) doing ſuch miracles there by the help of the devils, that he was taken for a god, and accordingly had a ſtatue erected betwixt the two bridges built on Tiber, with this inſcription, Simoni Deo Sancto; and, ſaith he, almoſt all the Samaritans, and ſome of other nations, confeſſed him τὸν πρῶτον θεὸν, the firſt, or principal God, and accordingly worſhipped him θυμιάμασι καὶ θυσίαις καὶ σπονδαῖς, with all ſorts of ſacrifices, and with him alſo Helena (which went about with him, but had before been a proſtitute ſtrumpet in Tyrus) calling her τὴν ἀπ' αὐτοῦ πρώτην ἔννοιαν, that firſt cogitation that proceeded from him, a kind of Pallas out of Jupiter's head. Of him we may read at large in Irenæus, and by both ſee how truly not only that title belongs to him (given to him by Euſebius) that he was πάσης αἱρέσεως ἀρχηγὸς the ring-leader of all the hereſie that crept into the Church, and ſo of the Apoſtaſie here ſpoken of among the Samaritans, and of all the doctrines and practices of the Gnoſticks quickly following in the Church, but alſo how perfectly appliable to him is that which is here added, that he exalted himſelf above all that is called God, or worſhip, &c. For before his baptiſm it is ſaid of him Act. 8. that he was by all the Samaritans cried up to be δύναμις Θεοῦ μεγάλη (or, as the MSS. read, ἡ καλουμένη μεγάλη, the divine power, which is called great, that is, the Divine Majeſty, called diverſly by ſeveral nations, but by all acknowledged as the greateſt and ſupreme Deity) and after the feigned reception of the Faith and Baptiſm, he did not leſſen, but rather increaſe his pretenſions. And accordingly ſaith Irenæus l. 1. c. 20. Simon Magus intendit contendere adverſus Apoſtolos, uti & ipſe glorioſus videretur eſſe. A Claudio Cæſare ſtatuâ honoratus eſſe dicitur propter Magiam. Hic igitur à multis quaſi Deus glorificatus eſt, & docuit ſemetipſum eſſe qui apud Judæos quaſi Filius adparuerit, in Samaria autem quaſi Pater deſcenderit, & in reliquis Gentibus quaſi Spiritus S. adventaverit. Eſſe autem ſe ſublimiſſimam virtutem, hoc eſt, eum qui ſit ſuper omnia Pater, & ſuſtinere vocari ſe quodcunque eum vocant homines. Simon Magus ſet himſelf to contend againſt the Apoſtles, that he alſo might appear glorious. He was for his Magick honoured with a ſtatue by Claudius Cæſar. He was glorified by many as a God, and taught that himſelf was he that appeared as the Son among the Jews, that in Samaria he deſcended as the Father, and in other nations came as the Holy Ghoſt. That he was the moſt ſublime virtue, that is, he which was the Father over all, and that he was content to be called by the higheſt titles that any man did call him. And ſo ſaith Tertull. de Anima, Simon (ſpeaking of Hellena his prima ennoia by which he created the Angels and powers which made the world, and whom he called alſo the loſt ſheep, becauſe of her having been in a brothel-houſe) ſaith that ad hanc deſcendit Pater ſummus, to her deſcended the ſupreme Father, (calling himſelf by that title) and having carried her back to his palace, exinde ad hominum reſpexit ſalutem, from thenceforth had all care to the ſalvation of men. Again that ſtatue of his was made, ſaith Irenæus, ad figuram Jovis, after the figure of Jupiter, and Helena's after the figure of Minerva, and theſe, ſaith he, were worſhipped by men. And at laſt among the doctrines of his followers, Saturnilus and Menander, he ſets down, Judæorum Deum unum ex Angelis eſſe, c. 22. that the God of the Jews was one of the ſeven Angels that made the world. Ipſum verò Simonem unum Patrem eſſe qui fecit Angelos, Archangelos, Virtutes, Poteſtates. But that Simon himſelf was the only Father that made the Angels, Archangels, Virtues, and Powers. So clearly making himſelf ſuperiour to the God of the Jews, and indeed creatour of him. So ſaith Juſtin Martyr Apol. 2. (ſee Note b. on Jude.) Now for the ἀποκαλυφθῇ, this mans and theſe Gnoſticks revealing themſelves, that ſignifies their putting off that diſguiſe of Chriſtianity under which they veiled themſelves a while, and ſetting up, he and his followers, profeſſedly againſt Chriſt and his Apoſtles. For Simon himſelf, that at firſt he was baptized and made a ſhew of being a Chriſtian, hath appeared Act. 8. but this without any ſincerity at that time, any γνησία προαίρεσις, genuine purpoſe of change, ſaith Cyril of Jeruſalem, Cat. 1. After this he went on in his way of deceiving the people by his ſorceries, as appears by his deſiring to buy the power of working miracles from the Apoſtles; and being denied that, ſoon after he ſet up and oppoſed himſelf againſt Chriſt, and accordingly is here called ὁ ἀντικείμενος, the adverſary, or he that oppoſeth himſelf, and by S. John, ὁ Ἀντίχριστος the Antichriſt, which is the ſame. And about the time of erecting the ſtatue to him at Rome, being by the preaching of the Goſpel driven out of that city, it was ſome ſpace of years before he appeared there again in conteſtation with S. Peter; which may paſs for his revealing of himſelf, that at the writing of this Epiſtle was yet future. And accordingly Theophylact, ſpeaking of the myſtery of iniquity, Ἄρχεται ἤδη φησὶ, ſaith he, καὶ ὁ Σίμων καὶ Νικόλαος οἱ αἱρεσιάρχαι τὰ τοῦ Ἀντιχρίστου ἐνήργουν, the myſtery of iniquity was already begun, for Simon and Nicolas leaders of hereſies did work the works of Antichriſt. As for the Gnoſticks, the followers of him, and other ſuch leaders, thus it was: The Jews perſecuting the Chriſtians, and thoſe perſecutions ſhaking the faith of many, and the Gnoſticks keeping themſelves ſafe from thoſe perſecutions, by forſwearing of Chriſt in time of danger from the Jews (as they ſacrificed to Idols, to ſecure them from the Gentiles) and having other carnal baits, all manner of filthineſs to invite carnal and fearful perſons to their party, did ſoon draw all Samaria from Chriſt, and ſo, whereever Chriſtianity was planted in other parts, at Rome, in Aſia, &c. corrupted the believers every where, ſo that many were polluted, or infected by their poiſon, Heb. 12. 15. and at length joined with the Jews in the greateſt bitterneſs of perſecuting the orthodox Chriſtians, firſt ſecretly, ὡς κύνες λαθροδήκται, as dogs that bite and bark not, ſaith Ignatius, and then they were the myſtery here, but at laſt openly and avowedly, and that is the meaning of καὶ ἀποκαλυφθῇ the revealing this myſtery. And this avow'd oppoſing and perſecuting the Chriſtians was to be a forerunner of that day of the Lord, and 'till that was come, the day was not yet inſtant, though near at hand.

V. 4. Worſhipped] Σέβασμα in this place being joined with λεγόμενον Θεὸν called God, not to diſtinguiſh it from the former, but with an ἢ, or, to explicate the former, or to extend it farther than the former might be thought to extend, muſt ſignifie not the worſhip it ſelf, but that which is worſhipped, whatſoever that is. The nations and people of the world, all of them, acknowledged and worſhipped ſomewhat which they called God, or Numen, but all falſe and Idol-nothings, ſave only the one Creator of heaven and earth; yet on theſe they beſtowed thoſe magnificent titles of God, and Great power of God, and other the like: and to comprehend all thoſe titles by which all thoſe falſe Gods were known, this word σέβασμα, worſhip, or deity, or (by repeating the word λεγόμενον) all that is called worſhip or deity, is here uſed. And ſo the word is uſed by the Author of the Book of Wiſdom, c. 14. 20. and rightly rendred, a God. So Act. 17. 23. ἀναθεωρῶν τὰ σεβάσματα ὑμῶν, beholding your worſhips, that is, their δαίμονες, their idols, (ſo ſaith Theophylact, σεβάσματα, ἤτοι εἴδωλα, worſhips, that is, Idols) and dæmons, of which their city had and worſhipped ſo many. For ſo v. 16. it is ſaid of him that he did θεωρεῖν behold that their city was κατείδωλον full of Idols, or falſe gods, and v. 22. that he did θεωρεῖν behold again that they were δεισιδαιμονέστεροι worſhippers of more Idols or Dæmons than any other city. So in Photius Ep. 162 Τὰ τῆ Ἑλληνικῆς θρησκείαι σεβάσματα, θεὸς, &c. not the worſhips, but the gods that are worſhipp'd by the Grecians: and again, οἰκεῖον ἐδυσφήμησε σέβασμα he reproached his own God. And ſo 'tis truly here ſaid of Simon Magus, that he did ſet himſelf up above all that is any where worſhipped, true or falſe God, making himſelf the ſupreme Father of all, who had created the God of the Jews, as appeared Note e.

g. Καθίσαι εἰς τὸν ναὸν Θεοῦ

Ib. Sitteth in the Temple of God] What καθίσαι εἰς τὸν ναὸν Θεοῦ ὡς Θεὸν, to ſit on the Temple of God as God, ſignifies, cannot now be difficult after the conſideration of the former paſſages Note e. and f. For being owned by all Samaria as the ſupreme God, and worſhipp'd, as was ſaid, θυμιάμασι, καὶ θυσίαις, καὶ σπονδαῖς, by incenſe and ſacrifices, &c. it cannot be doubted but theſe were performed to him in thoſe places which had been ſet apart to the worſhip of the true God; and ſo that is to ſit or place himſelf in the Temple of God, ἀποδεικνύτα ἑαυτὸν ὅτι ὁ Θεὸς, vaunting, or declaring, himſelf that he is God, aſſuming thoſe honours to himſelf. Thus ſaith Juſtin Martyr, Apol. 2. of ſome, that is, of him and Helena his ſtrumpet, that they did λέγειν ἑαυτοὺς εἶναι θεούς, affirm themſelves to be gods. And ſo Irenæus, Docuit ſemetipſum, &c. He taught that he was God. See Note e. To this purpoſe it is that Juſtin Martyr affirms that Claudius erected him a ſtatue at Rome on Tiber, betwixt the two Bridges, inſcribed Simoni Deo Sancto, to Simon the holy God: Every ſuch ſtatue or image being, according to the Theologie of the Heathens, a kind of ναὸς or temple or chapel, where the God to whom the ſtatue was conſecrated was ſaid to dwell. And although Petrus Cyaconius in Opuſc. ſuſpects this to be a miſtake of Juſtin, becauſe about that place in Rome An. Dom. MDLXXIV. a baſis of a marble ſtatue was digg'd up with this inſcription Simoni Sanco Deo Fidio ſacrum, &c. yet the authority of Juſtin, writing this ſo ſoon after to the Emperors of Rome, who could and would have diſcerned his falſity, if it had been ſuch, will be abundantly ſufficient to oppoſe to this conjecture, eſpecially when Irenæus inſiſting on it ſoon after him, and Tertullian better acquainted with that city and ſtory than to be thus impoſed upon, have added their confirmations of it, and many writers of the Church of Rome after them continued the tradition unqueſtioned, 'till this conjecture ſet up againſt it.

h. Κατέχειν

V. 6. Withholdeth] Κατέχειν here ſignifies to hinder, to reſtrain him that is there ſpoken of, that is, the ὁ ἀντικείμενος, the impious proud adverſary, Simon Magus and his Gnoſticks v. 11. from putting off their diſguiſe, and revealing themſelves in their colours, that is, cruel profeſſed enemies to Chriſt and Chriſtians: and by the addition here of ἐν τῷ ἑαυτοῦ καιρῷ in his own ſeaſon, ſome conjecture may be made what the τὸ κατέχον that which hinders ſignifies. For it being thereby manifeſt that there was a ſeaſon moſt proper for them thus to reveal themſelves, the τὸ κατέχον muſt be the abſence or not approach of that ſeaſon. Now what the Gnoſticks ſeaſon of ſhewing or revealing themſelves was, appears by what hath formerly been ſaid, viz. the Chriſtians ſeparating from the Jews. 'Till they did this, the Gnoſticks wanted a pretence to exaſperate the Jews, but then having that advantage they ſhewed themſelves in their colours; and ſo this is their ſeaſon of revealing themſelves. And the point of time when this ſeaſon came was, when the Apoſtles departed profeſſedly from the Jews (ſee Paraphraſe on Rom. 7. 1.) and not only gave over tempering and complying with them, but preaching to them alſo, as contumacious and hopeleſs, with a Behold we turn to the Gentiles. For this made the Jews to become implacable to the Chriſtians, to perſecute them bitterly (ſee Eph. 3. 1, 13.) not only as contemners of Moſes's Law, which interdicted that free commerce with the Gentiles, but as thoſe that hated them, and thought them unworthy of the Goſpel of Chriſt, Act. 13. 46. And from thence ſprang the Apoſtaſie of many weak Chriſtians to this party, through this neceſſity of adhering to one ſide or other, either of perſecuting with the Jews, or being perſecuted with the Chriſtians, the Apoſtle, Heb. 13. 13. calling the Chriſtians to come from among them, to go out unto Chriſt without the Camp, bearing his reproach, that is, to leave off the Jewiſh ceremonies, which now became obſtructions and hindrances to the progreſs of the Chriſtian faith, and to do it though it brought all perſecutions upon them. And accordingly all were now forced to make their choice and avow it, and ſo they did (to avoid the perſecution from the Jews:) many profeſs'd themſelves Jews, though they were not ſo by birth (nor circumciſed many of them Gal. 6. 12, 13.) and then, having departed from the faith, ſoon proceeded to the greateſt hatreds of them which did not, expreſs'd the fierceſt zeal againſt the Chriſtians of any, according to Chriſt's ſaying, that the Jewiſh Phariſaical Proſelytes became doubly more the children of the devil than themſelves (ſee Note on Mat. 23. e.) This then being the ſeaſon of the Gnoſticks breaking out againſt the Chriſtians, the abſence of that ſeaſon muſt conſequently be the Apoſtles and orthodox Chriſtians keeping fair with the Jews, and being not yet departed to the Gentiles, their obſerving ſome ceremonies in compliance with, and in hope of gaining the Jews. This we know they did for ſome time, upon a double conſideration: firſt, on hope of doing good upon the Jews by that means, (ſo Paul circumciſed Timothy, Act. 16. 3. and ſo he purified himſelf, Act. 21. 26.) and ſecondly, to avoid the perſecutions of the Jews, which it ſeems S. Peter did, Gal. 2. 12. fearing thoſe of the circumciſion. And as yet the Apoſtles, it ſeems, had not given over theſe compliances when S. Paul wrote this. And this, as long as it laſted, kept it from being a fit ſeaſon for the Gnoſticks to ſhew themſelves, and ſo in all probability is the τὸ κατέχον here, that which hindred, and the ὁ κατέχων, ordinarily rendred, he that hinders v. 7. (which is in all reaſon the ſame, the Gender making no difference in this matter, and if it did, yet the ὁ being appliable to the Law, ὁ νόμος, and not any neceſſary denotation of a perſon, and withal the Neuter as fit to interpret the Maſculine, as the Maſculine to interpret the Neuter) 'Tis true indeed, divers of the Antients expecting ſtill ſome farther Antichriſt continually, did phanſie the Roman Empire to be the τὸ κατέχον, or that that hindered: But that was cauſed by looking for that as future which was ſome time paſt, and now out of their minds, and by the Apoſtles not mentioning what it was; which omiſſion of his was occaſioned by his having told them of it formerly, and ſuppoſing that they knew it ſufficiently (καὶ νῦν οἴδατε, and now ye know, &c.) ſo that there was no need of repeating it, and it ſeems they had been, at his being among them, ſo fully inſtructed in it, that he tells them 1 Theſſ. 5. 1. that he need not write to them of this ſubject.

ἐξερχώμεθα ἔξω τῆς παρεμβολῆς

i. ἀνομία μυστήριον ἐνεργεῖν

V. 7. Myſtery of iniquity] It muſt here be explained 1. what ἀνομία iniquity, and 2. what μυστήριον myſtery, and 3. what ἐνεργεῖν acted here ſignifie. For ἀνομία, that may ſignifie no more than ſome great enormous ſin or conjuncture of ſins; and ſo will very fitly be applied to this ſect of the Gnoſticks, who were the vileſt ſort of people in the world, in reſpect of their abominable Luſts, Perjuries, joining with Idols, &c. But the notion which ſeems to be moſt proper to this place is ſomewhat ſuperadded to all this, viz. their malicious bitter perſecuting of the Orthodox Chriſtians. This is the notion of ἀνομία iniquity, Mat. 24. 12. upon the increaſing of which many ſhould be offended, v. 10. and their love of Chriſt, zeal to Chriſtianity, ſhould grow cold. And then it will be be eaſie to conjecture what is the myſtery of iniquity, viz. this villany in both parts of it, the vile ſins of theſe men, and their bitter hatred to Chriſtians, both ſomewhat diſguiſed and kept ſecret, not profeſs'd and avowed, (becauſe it was not yet ſeaſonable,) but yet acted underhand more warily. And that is the meaning of ἐνεργεῖται agitur; for the word is generally uſed in a Paſſive ſenſe (ſee Note, on Gal. 5. b.) and ſo ſignifies this, which is ſpoken of, to be already acted, ἀρχὴν ἔλαβε, hath received its beginning, ſaith Theophylatt. And ſo in other the Epiſtles it is affirmed, that there were among them emulations, contentions, ſtrifes, ſeditions, confuſion, and every evil work, all this together with the unclean abominable ſins, ἤδη, already, acted among them, but as yet more ſecretly and cloſely, only waiting their opportunity to break out, and ſhew themſelves at a time of the beſt advantage, when that compliance of the Chriſtians with the Jews, the obſervation of the Moſaical rites (one of which was, that they that were Jews ſhould not converſe with thoſe of another nation, Joh. 4. 9.) ſhould be laid down, removed out of the way, the Apoſtles every where leaving the Jews, and departing to the Gentiles, laying down the uſe of the Moſaical rites, and calling their diſciples to come out from the Jews, as they do Act. 19. 9. Heb. 13. 10, 13. Gal. 2, and 3, and 4, and 5.

V. 8. That wicked] That ὁ ἄνομος the wicked here is the ſame with ὁ ἀντικείμενος the oppoſer v. 4. there is no queſtion; and that this was Simon and his followers hath been ſhewed (Note e.) and clearly appears by the character v. 9. that his coming is κατ' ἐνέργειαν τοῦ Σατανᾶ, according to the working of Satan in all power, and ſigns, and lying wonders, that is, that they uſed ſorcery, and did many ſtrange things (ſuch prodigies as the Devil could help him to act) by that means, and as it follows v. 10. ſucceeded very proſperouſly among many hypocritical, unſincere, carnal Chriſtians, who were (by their indulgence of luſts, and promiſe of immunity from perſecutions, and by the ſtrangeneſs of their ſorceries, Simon undertaking to flie in the air, &c.) corrupted and ſeduced by them. And this is farther deſcribed in the deſtruction, that upon this revelation of themſelves ſhould ſoon involve him and his. The relations of which are punctual among the antients. Of Simon ſaith Arnobius adv. Gent. l. 2. Viderant currum Simonis Magi, & quadrigas igneas Petri ore diſſlatas, & nominato Chriſto evanuiſſe. Viderant pondere præcipitatum ſuo, cruribus jacuiſſe præfractis: poſt deinde perlatum Brundam, cruciatibus & pudore deſeſſum, ex altiſſimi culminis ſe rurſum præcipitaſſe faſtigio. The chariot and fiery horſes of Simon, with which this magician undertook to flie in the air, were blown away by Peter's mouth, and vaniſh'd at the name of Chriſt, and ſo he fell down, and brake his legs, and after ſome time was brought to Brunda, and through the torments and the ſhame became weary of his life, and caſt himſelf headlong from the top of an high place, and ſo periſh'd. Many other teſtimonies of this are elſewhere mentioned, (ſee Note a. on 2 Tim. 3.) And for the Gnoſticks, his followers, 'tis Euſebius's affirmation of them, l. 3. c. κθ' Λόγῳ θαῦμον εἰς τὸ παντελὲς ἀπωλόμενον, In a moment they were utterly deſtroyed, the αἰφνίδιον ὄλεθρον ſwift deſtruction, foretold 1 Theſſ. 5. 2. And two means are here mentioned by which this ſhould be done, firſt, by the breath of Chriſt's mouth, ſecondly, by the brightneſs of his coming: the former noting the power of the Goſpel in the mouth of the Apoſtles Peter and Paul, who contended with him perſonally at Rome, and brought ruine and ſhame upon him; and the ſecond noting the vengeance that befell the Jews by the Roman armies, at which time the Gnoſticks, that ſided with them, were deſtroyed alſo (ſee Note on 2 Pet. 2. 9. and Jude a.) And this ſeems to be ſo called 1 Tim. 6. 14. where he is charged to continue conſtant to Chriſt whatever combats he met with, μέχρι τῆς ἐπιφανείας until the appearance of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, which was ſurely ſomewhat then approaching, that was likely to fall out in Timothy's life time, and which as he adds ver. 15. God, as the bleſſed and only potentate, expreſſing his mercy and power together to all that adhere unto him, and as King of Kings, and Lord of Lords, ſubduing and bringing down the ſtouteſt perſecutors, ſhould ſhew forth, καιροῖς ἰδίοις in thoſe proper ſeaſons, which he had appointed for it.

CHAP. III.

Paraphraſe.

1. *Finally, brethren, pray for us, that the word of the Lord † may have free courſe, and be glorified even as it is * with you;]

1. And as I pray for your comfort and conſtancy, ch. 2. 17. ſo it becomes you to be conſtant in prayer for me and the reſt of the Apoſtles and miniſters of the Goſpel, that our preaching may be ſucceſsful and proſperous, meeting with no ſuch obſtacles as may hinder the progreſs of it, but may be every where received, and obeyed, and honoured by the good lives of the believers, as it hath among you;

2. And that we may be delivered from [a] † unreaſonable and wicked men; for all men have not faith.]

2. And that we may be reſcued out of the hands of

theſe villanous hereticks the Gnoſticks, that deal in all unnatural impieties, and are ready to oppoſe us whereſoever we come, and keep many from receiving the faith, and corrupt other hypocritical profeſſors, and ſuch there are in the world; all are not ſincere.

3. But the Lord is faithful, who ſhall ſtabliſh you, and keep you from * evil.]

3. But for you, I truſt in α

that God who hath promiſed to ſecure and defend you from being overcome with ſuch temptations of theſe cunning diabolical hereticks.

4. And we have confidence in the Lord touching you, that ye both do and will do the things which we command you.]

4. And through the grace of God watching over you, I am confident that ye will ſtill continue to obey our advices to you, as hitherto ye have done.

5. And the Lord direct your hearts into the love of God, and into the † patient waiting for Chriſt.]

5. To which confidence I ſhall join my prayer to that God, that he will direct you ſo to love him, as to endure any perſecutions rather than deny the faith, to confeſs Chriſt, whatſoever it coſt you.

6. Now we command you, brethren, in the name of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that ye withdraw your ſelves from every brother that walketh diſorderly, and not after the tradition which he received of us.]

6. Now I charge you by virtue of that Apoſtolical power given me by Chriſt, that if you obſerve any man to caſt off obedience to thoſe rules which we gave at our being with you, that is, to forſake his work, the buſineſſes of his calling (ſee 1 Theſſ. 5. Note d.) then (after a firſt admoniſhing of him 1 Theſſ. 5. 14. and a ſecond here v. 12.) you proceed to the cenſures of the Church againſt him, by that means to keep others from being corrupted by him, or doing as he doth, ſee v. 14.

7. For your ſelves know how ye ought to follow us; for we behaved not our ſelves diſorderly among you.]

7. For you cannot but remember, how beſide my admonitions to this purpoſe, I ſet you by my own example a pattern in this, by my not ſpending my time idly among you.

8. Neither did we eat any man's bread for nought, but wrought with * labour and travel night and day, that we might not be chargeable to any of you.]

8. Being very careful to put no man to any charges, nor to eat what we did not pay for, but earning our living by hard labour in our occupations.

9. Not becauſe we have not power, but to make our ſelves an enſample unto you to follow us.]

9. Not becauſe we might not lawfully receive from you if we would, 1 Cor. 9. 4. but on purpoſe to give you a pattern, that you labour as we have done.

10. For even when we were with you this we commanded you, that [b] if any would not work, neither ſhould he eat.]

10. For when we were among you preaching Chriſt,

b

it was our command to all, what the Jews have thought fit to require of all men proverbially, that they muſt labour themſelves, and not expect to be maintained by others labours, being idle themſelves.

† may run τρέχῃ

* among or toward πρὸς

† abſurd

* the evil one πονηροῦ

† patience of ὑπομονὴν

* wearineſs and toil κόπῳ καὶ μόχθῳ

11. Some ſuch idle perſons we hear there are among you, that are diſobedient to our orders, and give over their work, and ſpend their time impertinently in things that they ſhould not meddle with.

11. For we hear that there are ſome which walk among you diſorderly, working not at all, but † are buſie-bodies.]

† buſie themſelves about that which belongs not to them περιεργαζομένους

12. And to theſe we again give warning now, (as before we did, 1 Theſſ. 5. 14.) that they live and labour quietly, and ſo earn their living, (and if upon this ſecond admonition they reform not, let them be cenſured v. 6.)

12. Now them that are ſuch we command and exhort by our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that with quietneſs they work, and eat their own bread.]

13. And as for you, brethren, be careful to do as much good as you can, and be not idle.

13. But ye, brethren, be not * weary in well-doing.

* ſluggiſh ἐν κακοποιΐᾳ.

14. And as before ver. 6. ſo now I ſay again, if upon this ſecond admonition given by this Epiſtle v. 12. any man ſtill continue refractary in this matter, let him be cenſured and branded by you, and dealt with as an excommunicate perſon, that ſo by ſhaming ye may poſſibly reform him. See Note on 1 Cor. 5. g.

14. And if any man obey not our word by this Epiſtle, note that man, and have no company with him, that he may be aſhamed:]

15. Yet meanwhile apply unto him your friendly Chriſtian admonitions, that thoſe, together with that ſhame, may work effectually upon him, which is your duty to endeavour on every ſinner, and not to deal with him as men deal with their enemies, for how ill ſoever he is, you are to do him all good imaginable, and therefore I preſcribe you that of withdrawing familiar commerce from him, as a method of all others moſt probable to do him good, and then that may be a ſeaſon of advantage for your exhortations to work upon him.

15. Yet count him not as an enemy, but admoniſh him as a brother.]

16. Now † the Lord of peace himſelf give you peace always, by all means. The Lord be with you all.

† the ſame Lord of peace αὐτὸς.

17. This concluſion wherein I ſalute you, I write with mine own hand, and ſo it is my cuſtom to do in all my Epiſtles.

17. The ſalutation of Paul with mine own hand, which is the token in every Epiſtle; ſo I write.]

18. The grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt be with you all. Amen.

The ſecond Epiſtle to the Theſſalonians was written from * Athens.

* See Note a. on the Title of the firſt Epiſtle.

Annotations on Chap. III.

a. ἄτοποι

V. 2. Unreaſonable] That ἄτοποι abſurd men, with the addition of πονηροὶ wicked or villanous, ſignifie the Gnoſticks here (deſcribed ch. 2.) will appear firſt, by a place in Polycarpus's Epiſtle to the Philippians, p. 18. where citing the place 1 Cor. 3. 9. againſt μοιχοὶ and ἀρσενοκοῖται, thoſe that were guilty of effeminacy and unnatural luſts, he adds, οὔτε οἱ ποιοῦντες τὰ ἄτοπα, neither they that do abſurd things, noting the ἄτοπα to be an expreſſion of thoſe filthy ſins againſt nature. Secondly, by the prayer which here follows v. 5. that God would direct their hearts to the love of God, and patience of Chriſt, that is, that conſtancy of love to God, which conſiſts in confeſſing him in time of perſecutions, the want of which is often noted in the Gnoſticks, and thoſe that were corrupted by their infuſions. See Note on 1 Joh. 2. a. And accordingly in that Epiſtle of Polycarpus, p. 20. deſcribing Simon Magus the father of the Gnoſticks, he makes up his character of theſe four things, firſt, denying Chriſt to be come in the fleſh, ſecondly, not confeſſing the teſtimony of the croſs, thirdly, converting the oracles of God to their own luſts, fourthly, denying the reſurrection and judgment to come. To which he ſets oppoſite the Chriſtians patient ſuffering for Chriſt, pag. 21. and loving him that died for them.

V. 10. If any would not work —] This was a proverbial ſpeech among the Jews, in Bereſith Rabba, ראי בל סי שאונו לא לעי לא נגום, and in Obel Moed, מחוגע אינו אוכל, Whoſoever doth not labour, doth not eat. THE

First EPISTLE of PAUL the APOSTLE

TO

THAT Timothy first converted by Paul, (and therefore here called his own son in the faith, ver. 1, 2.) and that some time before his coming to Paul at Lystra, Act. 16. (as appears by the testimonial which he then had of the brethren v. 2.) and then after employed by him for the planting of the Gospel, Act. 16. 3, &c. was at length placed Bishop of Ephesus, the prime Metropolis of Asia, appears sufficiently in the records and writings of the ancient Church. So the anonymous Author of his life in Photius Num. 254. Ἀπόστολ☉ Τιμόθε☉ ὑπὸ τῦ μεγάλ Παύλ χ) χειρ☉νε῀) τ῀ Ἐφεσίων μητροπόλεως ἐπίσκοπ☉, χ) ἀθεσνίζε῀, The Apostle (so were others called beside the primary) Timothy is ordained and installed Bishop of the Metropolis of the Ephesians by S. Paul. So the Fathers of the Council of Chalcedon Act. 11. who from Timothy to their time reckon 27 Bishops of Ephesus. So Eusebius l. 3. c. 4. Τιμόθε☉ τ῀ ἐν Ἐφέσῳ παροικίας ἱστορ῀) πρῶτ☉ τ῀ ἐπισκοπ῀ λελη χέναι, Timothy is storied to have been the first Bishop of the province of Ephesus. And the same might be testified by innumerable more. S. Chrysostom may be taken for all, Hom. 15. in 1 Tim. 5. 19. Δῆλον ὅτι ἐκκλησίαν λοιπὸν ὡ῀ ἐμπεπισ῀μέν☉ ὁ Τιμόθε☉, ἢ μ᾽λλον ἔθν☉ ὁλόκληρον τὸ τ῀ Ἀσίας, It is manifest that Timothy was intrusted with a Church or rather with a whole nation, that of Asia. Now for the time when he was placed in this Bishoprick, as that will be useful to direct us when this Epistle was written, so will that it self be concluded from this first Epistle ch. 1. 3. where S. Paul's exhorting him to abide at Ephesus, that he might admonish some not to teach other doctrine, &c. is an intimation of his leaving him Bishop resident there, and that, saith he, he did πορ῀όμεν☉ εἰς Μακεδονίαν, going or when he went into Macedonia, that is, in that part of S. Paul's travail set down Act. 20. There v. 1. S. Paul went out from Ephesus, πορε῀θ῀ναι εἰς Μακεδονίαν, to go into Macedonia, at which time in all probability, (and by Analogie with the words 1 Tim. 1. 3.) he left Timothy Bishop there. 'Tis true that when S. Paul is in Macedonia Timothy is with him there, 2 Cor. 1. 1. and after he had wintered in Epirus, Tit. 3. 12. and spent three months in Greece, Act. 20. 2, 3. and returned back into Macedonia, then Timothy is with him, Act. 20. 4. and goes straight to Troas v. 5. All which might well be after the leaving him at Ephesus, either on occasion of the business of that Church, about which he might go to consult S. Paul being so near, or in obedience to some summons of S. Paul (such as after we see he had to a longer journey, even to come to Rome to him, 2 Tim. 4. 9.) After this coming to Troas, Act. 20. 6. (although I suppose he was with him among the rest of the Bishops of Asia at Miletus v. 17. yet) there is no farther mention of Timothy in the book of the Acts. Supposing then that this of Act. 20. 1. was the point of time to which S. Paul refers, when he speaks of his being left to reside at Ephesus, and supposing again that he could not write to him at any part of the time when he was with him, and yet the whole contexture of the Epistle rendring it probable, that it was written (by way of directions) soon after his leaving him there, and that whilst it was yet uncertain to S. Paul whether he should come to Ephesus again, c. 3. 14, 15. (which also may be the reason that there are no salutations in the close, because of his coming newly from thence, and his thoughts to be there again speedily) it will be from these premises reasonable to conclude that either it was written on the way as he went from Ephesus toward Macedonia Act. 20. 1. at Troas perhaps where he stayed a while (see Note a. on Title of 2 Cor.) or at his very first coming to Macedonia, or in Epirus, or in Greece: but the former of them, as neareſt to his coming from Ephesus, is the most probable. That it was before his coming to Miletus, Act. 20. 17. may thus appear: 1 Tim. 3. 14. He tells Timothy that he hopes shortly to come to him, (to Ephesus that chief Metropolis of Asia) but at his being at Miletus he tells them that he knows, that they shall see his face no more, Act. 20. 25, 38. and therefore that his being at Miletus must needs be after the writing this Epistle: his meeting them at Miletus, being to supply the place of his coming to Ephesus, which had formerly been designed by him, but now put off through haste to get to Jerusalem by Pentecost, Act. 20. 16. As for the subscription of the Epistle, that it was from Laodicea in Phrygia Pacatiana, 'tis Cujacius his observation that that could not be antient, there being no distinction between Pacatiana and Salutaris till the time of Constantine; and it is farther evident by Col. 2. 1. that Paul had not at the writing of that Epistle to the Colossians been at all at Laodicea, and yet that that was long after the writing of this Epistle, that being set by Chronologers, An. Chr. 59. Soon after this, as S. Paul tells the Ephesians and Asiaticks, Act. 20. 29. that after his departure grievous wolves should enter in among them, so he here saith, he left Timothy at Ephesus to fortifie the Church against them; and who those wolves are appears by their Fables and Genealogies here ch. 1. 4. which are the known character of the Gnosticks then, and the Valentinians afterward; and so is the swerving from charity, good conscience, and faith unfeigned, &c. ver. 5, 6. Besides this suppressing of hereticks, another special use there was of leaving Timothy at Ephesus, that, as Metropolitan of Asia, he might ordain Bishops and Deacons in all the other Cities where they were wanting, as is said of Titus in Crete. And accordingly this Epistle brings him particular directions to that purpose, ch. 3. Which is a proof that this Epistle was written to him soon after his fixing there, to furnish him for the discharge of this office. Mean while this is evident, that the Gnosticks were now scattered in Asia, and so characterised by him ch. 4. and ch. 6. and there distinctly specified (more than in any other place of the New Testament) under the title of ψευδώνυμ☉ γνῶσις c. 6. 20. science falsly so named, that is, the men that assumed falsly to themselves the name of Gnosticks or knowing men. And against some doctrines and practices of theirs he here arms him.

CHAP. I.

Paraphrase.

1. PAUL an Apostle of Jesus Christ * by the commandment of God our Saviour and Lord Jesus Christ, which is our hope,]

1. I Paul that (Act. 13. 7.) was sent out and constituted an Apostle of Jesus Christ, according to the designation of him, who being God incarnate is both our Saviour and Lord, to rescue us from the power of sin, and to rule and reign in our hearts, even he on whom all our trust and expectation and hope of good is founded and built;

* according to the appointment, κατ' ἐπιταγὴν

2. Unto

2. To my dearly beloved Timothy whom I firſt converted, and ſo begat to Chriſtianity, I ſend my heartieſt wiſh of all good from God our careful and loving father, and Chriſt Jeſus to whom he hath committed all power in his Church unto the worlds end.

2. Unto Timothy, my own ſon in the faith, Grace, mercy and peace from God our father, and Jeſus Chriſt our Lord.]

3. This Epiſtle I now ſend thee for thy directions, in purſuance of that Commiſſion which I gave thee when I conſtituted and appointed thee to reſide as Biſhop at Epheſus, at the time when I went thence to go to Macedonia, Act. 20. 1. that preſiding and governing the Church there, thou mighteſt ſuppreſs the ſeeds of the Gnoſtick hereſie ſowed there, and keep men within the form of ſound doctrine, that which in all Churches was delivered by us,

3. † As I beſought thee to * abide ſtill at Epheſus when I † went into Macedonia, that thou mighteſt charge ſome that they teach no other doctrine,]

† Even as καθὼς
* continue at μεῖναι
† was going πορεύ-ομενος

4. And warn thy flock not to heed thoſe fabulous pedegrees of the gods, which under the name of Æones the Gnoſticks (ſee Note on Col. 2. a.) talk ſo much of, and ſo bring in many perplex'd diſputes, rather than inſtruct men in the way of ſalvation under the Goſpel, or of Chriſtian doctrine in matters belonging to God.

a.

4. Neither give heed to fables and endleſs [a] genealogies, which * miniſter queſtions, rather than † edifying which is in faith; ſo do.]

* yield παρέχει
† the edification of God which is in faith οἰκοδομίαν θεοῦ τὴν ἐν πίστει, or the diſpenſation of God, for the King's MS. and an antient one in Magdalen Colledge, Ox. read οἰκονομίαν

5. The ſubſtance and perfection, or elſe the deſign and aim of Chriſtian duty being charity, whoſe genealogy is this, faith unfeigned begets a good conſcience, that is, abſtaining from all ſin, that purity of heart, that love of all men:

5. Now the end of the commandment is charity, out of a pure heart, and of a good conſcience, and of faith unfeigned:]

6. Which ſome aiming not at, have gone out of the way to a divinity made up of empty words, for ſo was the Gnoſticks, ſee v. 4.

6. From which ſome having ſwerved have * turned aſide unto vain jangling,]

* been turned aſide to vain diſcourſes, ἐξεκλιθησάν εἰς ματαιολογίαν

7. Joining Judaiſm to Chriſtianity, and undertaking to expound the Law, and to find thoſe myſteries in it which are the foundations of their impure doctrines, but obſerve no part of the Law, nor at all apply it to the ruling of their lives.

7. † Deſiring to be teachers of the Law, * underſtanding neither what they ſay, nor whereof they affirm.]

† who will be doctors of the law, θέλοντες νομοδιδάσκαλοι
* not thinking either μηδὲν νοοῦντες

8. Which is conſequently a grievous abuſe of the Law, whoſe whole goodneſs conſiſts in this, that a man order his actions ſo by it, as to abſtain from the ſins that it forbids, and do the good which it requires;

8. But we know that the Law is good, if a man uſe it lawfully;]

9. It being certain that as good men will perform their duty without any law, ſo the Law of Moſes, as all other laws, was given to the ſons of thoſe excellent Patriarchs, becauſe it was foreſeen they would not always continue ſo good, and ſo was on this very deſign to keep in order ſuch men as theſe, to reſtrain ſuch impure Gnoſticks as theſe from the ſins they are guilty of, (and not to ſtand them in any ſtead, except they live according to it.) Accordingly you know that Moſes's Law is very ſevere againſt the rebellious and contumacious, againſt blaſphemers and ſeditious, ſuch as Corah, Num. 16. 8. called Sinners there, (and to ſuch are the Gnoſticks compared Jude 11.) to the impure, and ſuch as contemn all that is holy, ſuch as Eſau, to whom the Gnoſticks are compared Heb. 12. 16. againſt parricides and murtherers,

9. Knowing this, that the Law is not made for a righteous man, but for the lawleſs and diſobedient, for the ungodly and for ſinners, for unholy and prophane, for murtherers of fathers and murtherers of mothers, for manſlayers,]

10. Againſt fornicators, and thoſe of the fouleſt ſort of thoſe, Lev. 18. 22. againſt thoſe that ſteal and ſell ſervants, Exod 21. 16. Deut. 24. 7. againſt falſe and perjurious perſons, and generally all thoſe ſins and ſinners that now the Goſpel of Chriſt makes to be ſuch, and theſe hereticks are noted for,

10. For whoremongers, for them that defile themſelves with mankind, for men-ſtealers, for lyers, for perjured perſons, and if there be any other thing which is contrary to † ſound doctrine,]

b.

11. According to the Goſpel of Chriſt or of God, when he dwelt among us, appeared here on the earth, for the preaching of which I have been conſtituted an Apoſtle.

11. According to * the [b] glorious Goſpel of the bleſſed God, which was committed to my truſt.]

* the Goſpel of the glory

12. And I account it a great mercy of Chriſt, both that he hath given me abilities, and that he hath vouchſafed to make uſe of me for ſo great a work, thinking me a fit perſon to be ſo intruſted, and ſetting me apart to do him ſervice in the Church,

12. And I thank Chriſt Jeſus our Lord who hath enabled me, for that he counted me faithful, † putting me into the miniſtery,]

† appointing me for θέμενός εἰς

13. Having been ſo hugely unfit and unworthy of ſuch an honour by my former behaviour whilſt I was a Jew, blaſpheming the name of Chriſt, perſecuting the Chriſtians, and uſing them moſt deſpitefully. Notwithſtanding all which God was merciful to me, looked on it but as an act of blind zeal in me, and therefore laid it not ſo to my charge as to deliver me up to my ſelf, but recalled me mightily in the midſt of my carreer.

13. Who was before a blaſphemer, and a perſecutor, and * injurious; but I obtained mercy, becauſe I did it ignorantly in unbelief.]

* a contumelious perſon, ὑβριστὴν

14. Since which time he hath moſt plentifully poured out on me the gifts of the Holy Ghoſt, and proportionably to them, a lively faith toward Jeſus Chriſt, and an earneſt zeal for his Goſpel, which hath been wrought in me by his grace.

14. And the grace of our Lord † was exceeding abundant, with faith, and love which is in Chriſt Jeſus.]

c.

15. O! 'tis a truth of an huge price, and fit to be the only tradition or cabala among us Chriſtians, inſtead of all the Jewiſh ſecrets and myſteries that are talked of by theſe hereticks, that Chriſt Jeſus came a Saviour into the world on purpoſe to reſcue out of their evil courſes, and to obtain pardon and ſalvation upon their reformation, for the greateſt ſinners in the world, of which number I have reaſon to look on my ſelf as the principal of all others.

15. This is a faithful ſaying, and worthy of all [c] acceptation, that Chriſt Jeſus came into the world to ſave ſinners, of whom I am chief.]

16. But being ſuch, God hath dealt moſt mercifully with me, called me from heaven whilſt I was perſecuting him, that I might be a prime object of his patience and longanimity, and in order of time the firſt that was ſo miraculouſly called, that ſo the wickedeſt of the Gentiles may in me have an example of hope of mercy, if they ſhall come in unto Chriſt.

16. Howbeit for this cauſe I obtained mercy, that in me firſt Jeſus Chriſt might ſhew forth all long-ſuffering for a pattern to them which ſhould hereafter believe in him to life everlaſting.

d.

17. Now to the great ruler and wiſe diſpoſer of all ages of the world, Governour and commander of Angels, the one true God, whoſe attributes are to be incorruptible, inviſible, and wiſe beyond all imagination, ſo as none partakes with him, and from whom all the wiſdom of all others doth proceed,

17. Now unto the King [d] * eternal, immortal, inviſible, the only wiſe God,] be honour and glory for ever and ever. Amen.

* of ages, or Angels

e. f.

18. Now to thee, O Timothy, thou who wert firſt converted by me, I give this commiſſion, as a truſt I commit to thee (agreeable to the revelations which were made of thee, that, though young, thou ſhouldſt be ordained a Biſhop in the Church ch. 4. 14. though we find no mention of this in the Acts, as we do of Saul and Barnabas, Act. 13. 2.) that according to that appointment of God, thou ſhouldſt carefully diſcharge that Epiſcopal office committed to thee,

18. This charge I commit unto thee, ſon Timothy, according to the [e] prophecies which went before on thee, that thou † by them mighteſt [f] war a good warfare,]

† according to them ἐν αὐταῖς

19. Holding faſt and continuing conſtant in the true faith, and diſcharge of a good conſcience; not as ſome, which falling into impure lives, have afterward fallen into foul errors in point of faith.

19. * Holding faith and a good conſcience, which ſome having put away, concerning faith have made ſhipwrack;]

* having ἔχων

20. Such are in thy Church of Epheſus, Hymenæus, 2 Tim. 2. 17. and Alexander, 2 Tim. 4. 14. whom by the Cenſures of the Church I delivered into Satan's power, to chaſten and afflict them, that they may reform, and recover from that very ill courſe in which they are both for faith and manners.

20. Of whom is Hymenæus and Alexander, whom I have delivered unto Satan, that they may † learn not to blaſpheme.]

Annotations

Annotations on Chap. I.

a. γενεαλογίαι

V. 4. Genealogies] Moſt of the divinity of the Gnoſticks (made up out of the Greek poets, Antiphanes, Heſiod, Philiſtion, &c.) conſiſted of συζυγίαι and γενεαλογίαι, conjunctions, and then from them Genealogies, how one thing joins with another, and begets a third (out of Night and Silence come forth Chaos, &c.) and applies all the Theologie and Genealogies of the Gods in Orpheus, &c. to the αἰῶνες, as they called the Angels, (ſee Note d.) in reference and oppoſition to which it is, that the Apoſtle here v. 5. ſets down a true Chriſtian genealogie of that excellent grace of Charity, ſo much wanting in thoſe hereticks, accordingly as it is produced in a Chriſtian, and that, ſaith he, is the ſpecial genealogie, with the ſtudy of which we Chriſtians (eſpecially they that call themſelves Gnoſticks) need to trouble our ſelves. See Tit. 3. 9.

b. δόξη

V. 11. Glorious Goſpel] δόξη here ſeems to refer to the ſchechina among the Jews, which we have often ſpoke of, noting the preſence or appearance of God, of Chriſt on the earth among us. See Note on Mat. 3. k. and 16. n.

c. ἀποδοχὴ

V. 15. Aeceptation] What is the importance of ἀποδοχὴ here, muſt be learn'd from the uſe of קבל among the Jews, eſpecially in the Chaldee idiom, where it ſignifies to receive any thing for undoubted, and with an honourable reſpect, the ſame that they expreſs alſo by שמע to hear, that is, obey, and believe with the exhibition of honour; ſee Paulus Fagius on the Chaldee Paraphraſe, Gen. 25. 15. Thus when 2 Kin. 14. 11. the Hebrew reads שמע, and the Greek ἤκουσεν heard, the Chaldee Paraphraſe reads קבל received; by which appears what is the meaning of δέχεσθε προφήτην, to receive a prophet, Mat. 10. 41. (which in like manner Luke expreſſes by ἀκούειν to hear, in oppoſition to ἀθετεῖν to neglect, Luk. 10. 16.) to wit, to believe and honour him. So 1 Cor. 2. 14. ὁ δέχεται τὰ τοῦ πνεύματος, receives not the things of the ſpirit, that is, neither believes nor values them, but as it follows, they are fooliſhneſs unto him. So Joh. 1. 12. λαμβάνειν to receive is explained by πιστεύειν to believe in the end of the verſe, and ſo προσλαμβάνειν v. 11. where the Syriack hath קבל in both places. Hence are the Cabalæ of the Jews, their receivings, that is, traditions (as to give, Eph. 4. 8. is all one with to receive, Pſal. 68. 18. and as in the Greek λῆμμα and δῶρον receipt and gift are all one) which they eſteem ſo undoubted and honourable. For as the office of the Doctor is מסר to deliver, ſo of the Diſciple קבל to receive, as in the beginning of Pirche Aboth, Moſes קבל received the Law from Mount Sinai, ומסרה and delivered it to Joſhuah. And as from the former of theſe words is the Hebrews קבלה Cabala, their doctrine received, and had in ſo much reverence, ſo from the ſecond is their מסורת their doctrine delivered by hand from their anceceſſors, and without writing tranſmitted to poſterity, the firſt expreſſed in the New Teſtament often by ἀποδοχὴ, the ſecond by παράδοσις. So that this is the full ſenſe of this place, If there be any undoubted dogma worthy of belief, any true Cabala, this certainly is it, that Chriſt came into the world to ſave ſinners.

δέχεσθε προφήτην

δέχεται τὰ τοῦ πνεύματος

λαμβάνειν

d. αἰῶνες

V. 17. Eternal] The αἰῶνες here of which God is ſaid to be the King, may poſſibly ſignifie the ſeveral ages of the world, and no more, that being the ordinary notation of αἰὼν age. But it is alſo known what notion of αἰῶνες there was among the hereticks of thoſe firſt times, ſet down at large by Irenæus in his diſcovery of the Valentinians, where there is a great deal of phantaſtical unintelligible ſtuff about the Æones. And therefore conſidering that the Gnoſticks hereſie was now abroad in the Church of Epheſus, named diſtinctly in the cloſe of this Epiſtle c. 6. 20. and referr'd to in a great part of this Chapter v. 3, 4, 6, 7, 9, 10. and becauſe the Valentinians were but the progeny of theſe, ſaith Irenæus, and took their doctrines from them, and becauſe it hath been already ſhewn (Note on Col. 2. a. and h.) that theſe were the titles of the Angels, who were in Ezechiel called חיות living creatures (and from thence theſe αἰῶνες formed by them;) it is therefore not improbable that the Apoſtle might refer to this Theologie of theirs here, as he had done before v. 4. by their genealogies. And then this will be the meaning of the βασιλεὺς τῶν αἰώνων, the King, or Ruler, or ſupreme Commander, (as of the whole world, ſo particularly) of the Angels, his conſtant ſubjects and ſervants, and executioners of his will, thoſe to which under the name of αἰῶνες, the Gnoſticks attribute ſo much. To the ſame purpoſe is added the incorruptible, inviſible, only wiſe God (in oppoſition to Simon Magus, whom they taught to be the ſupreme God, being but a corruptible, viſible man, that by his ſorcery got the reputation of wiſdom among them.) And the giving glory and praiſe to him is an antient form of Confeſſion of faith, which was wont to be done by way of Doxologie, and ſo is here ſet as a ſhort Creed, againſt the Gnoſticks, ſo as the Doxologie in that form which is now continued in the Church was framed againſt other hereticks.

V. 13. Prophecies] That the Apoſtles received frequent revelations, and never more diſtinctly and frequently than to this matter of deſigning Biſhops and Governours of the Church, may appear by many places. Thus concerning Paul and Barnabas the text is diſtinct, Act. 13. 2. The holy Spirit ſaid, Separate to me Paul and Barnabas for the work to which I have called them; and ſo here of Timothy, and c. 4. 14. for that by prophecy here is meant ſuch revelation, may appear by comparing 1 Cor. 14. 25. with v. 30. for there what is προφητεύειν to propheſie in the former place, (and v. 31.) is ἀποκαλυφθῆναι αὐτῷ to receive a revelation in the latter. To this ſenſe Saint Chryſoſtom and Theophylact are clear, Τὸ τῆς διδασκαλίας καὶ ἱερωσύνης ἀξίωμα μέγα ὄν, τῆς τοῦ Θεοῦ δεῖται ψήφου, ὥστε τὸ ἄξιον δέξασθαι, διὸ τὸ παλαιὸν ἀπὸ τῆς προφητείας ἐγίνοντο οἱ ἱερεῖς, τέλειον ἀπὸ Πνεύματος ἁγίου· ἔτω ὁ Τιμόθεος ἠρέθη ἐπὶ τῇ ἱερωσύνῃ, The dignity of being a Doctor and a Prieſt being a great one, wants God's ſuffrage that a worthy perſon may receive it, thereupon the Prieſts were made anciently by propheſie, that is, by the Holy Ghoſt. Thus Timothy was choſen to the Prieſthood, that is, his Epiſcopacy. And ſo generally 'tis ſaid of the Biſhops of Aſia, that the Holy Ghoſt had ſet them over the flock, Act. 20. 28. Thus ſaith Clemens Romanus of the Apoſtles, that at their firſt preaching in every region and city, καθίσανον τὰς ἀπαρχὰς αὐτῶν, δοκιμάσαντες τῷ πνεύματι, εἰς ἐπισκόπους καὶ διακόνους, They conſtituted their firſt fruits, making trial and judgment of them by the ſpirit, into Biſhops and Deacons: and again, πεπληροφορημένοι τελείαν γνῶσιν τοὺς προειρημένους, having received perfect foreknowledge, that is, revelation or prophecy, they conſtituted the forementioned Biſhops and Deacons, and not only ſo for the preſent, but for the next courſe or ſucceſſion; for ſo ſaith he, μεταξὺ ἐπινομὴν δεδώκασιν ὅπως ἐὰν κοιμηθῶσι, διαδέξωνται ἕτεροι δεδοκιμασμένοι ἄνδρες τὴν λειτουργίαν αὐτῶν, Afterward they gave order that if thoſe whom they had conſtituted ſhould die, other men that were approved (by the ſpirit alſo) ſhould undertake their Miniſtery, or employment. So ſaith Clemens Alexandrinus of Saint John, that in Aſia he conſtituted Biſhops, ſometimes (ὅλας ἐκκλησίας ἀρμόσων) made up whole Churches, ὅπου ἢ κλῆρον ἕνα τινὰ κληρώσων τῷ ὑπὸ τοῦ πνεύματος σημαινομένων, ſometimes ordained ſome certain perſons, ſuch as were ſignified to him by the Spirit. (See Act. 8. Note f.) That this ſhould thus be done in the Apoſtles time, beſides the will of God, there is this reaſon alſo diſcernible, becauſe in the firſt preaching of the Faith to any City or Region, performed by the Apoſtles in their journeys, as it was neceſſary that the Apoſtle before he went away from them ſhould leave a Governour among them, ſo it was not poſſible in ſo ſhort a ſtay as ordinarily was made after the converſion of ſome in a city; to diſcern by any human means, who of thoſe νεόφυτοι new converts would be fit for that imployment; and ſo this rendred it very neceſſary that the Apoſtles, either by the diſcerning ſpirit which they had extraordinarily beſtowed on them, or by particular Revelation, ſhould thus make deſignation of the perſons. But after, when Churches were ſetled, and men had continued in the Faith ſo long as to give teſtimony of their ſincerity and abilities to qualifie them for that office, there was not that need προφητεύειν

of Revelation in this matter, human means being in ſome meaſure ſufficient to direct in it. And accordingly by the qualifications which Saint Paul names to Timothy and Titus in their ordaining Biſhops in every Church, it is evident that they made Biſhops upon obſervation and experience of mens behaviour and abilities, and upon the teſtimonials of the brethren, (and therefore were forbid to make a novice Biſhop, that is, one lately converted, 1 Tim. 3. 6. becauſe of him they could not have this experience, or theſe teſtimonies) and were not afforded divine Revelation in it, or any thing proportionable to that.

f. στρατεύειν στρατείαν

Ib. War a good warfare] What is the meaning of the phraſe στρατεύειν στρατείαν here muſt be fetched out of Num. 4. 3. where the Levites are ſaid to go לצבא into the army or hoſt, which is rendred by the Septuagint λειτουργεῖν to officiate; and ſo Num. 1. 50. λειτουργήσουσι καὶ παρεμβαλοῦσι, they ſhall miniſter and encamp: ſo generally under the Law the miniſtery of the prieſts is compared to a warfare, the Temple to a camp, the inferior officers to watchmen, and the like; ſo Exod. 38. 8. when the women brought their gifts after child-birth to the Tabernacle, they are expreſſed by הצבאות אשר צבאו the warriers that warred in the door of the tabernacle. And therefore it is that 2 Sam. 6. 2. where there is ſpeech of the bringing back of the Ark, it is called the Ark of the Lord, whoſe name is the Lord of hoſts, who dwelleth between the Cherubims, that is, the Lord of the Ark or Tabernacle (the Temple being not then built) dwelling in it, between the Cherubims: and that perhaps is the reaſon why in Zachary's propheſie, which concerns the rebuilding of the Temple, he is ſo oft intitled the Lord of hoſts, as the title moſt agreeable to ſtir them up to that work: ſo when Pſal. 103. the Angels are called his hoſt, 'tis becauſe they miniſter unto him, and, as it follows, do his will; and ſo the Sun and Moon are called the hoſt of God, as thoſe that miniſter unto him. Thus when Iſa. 40. 2. it is ſaid, Their warfare is accompliſhed (where the Old Latin reads corruptly malitia for militia) it belongs clearly to the ceſſation of the Levitical Prieſthood; and ſo Dan. 8. 13. the ſanctuary and the hoſt ſhall be trodden down; and ſo Iſa. 24. 21. In that day God will viſit the hoſt of the moſt High, the Temple in the like manner. Thus in the New Teſtament the weapons of our warfare 2 Cor. 10. 4. the inſtruments of the exerciſe of our Apoſtleſhip, the Cenſures of the Church, &c. and 2 Tim. 2. 3. καλὸς στρατιώτης, a good Soldier of Chriſt, that is, miniſter, and v. 4. I have fought a good fight, executed the office of my Apoſtleſhip as I ought to do. And juſt ſo here, στρατεύειν καλὴν στρατείαν, to diſcharge the office of Evangeliſt firſt, then Biſhop, as he ought.

CHAP. II.

a. 1. In the firſt place therefore I adviſe thee, and all the Biſhops under thy Metropolis, that you have conſtant publick offices of devotion, conſiſting firſt, of ſupplications for the averting of all hurtful things, ſins and dangers; ſecondly, of prayers for the obtaining of all good things which you want; thirdly, of interceſſions for others; and fourthly, of thankſgiving for mercies already received; and all theſe not only for your ſelves, but, in a greater diffuſion of your charity, for all mankind,

1. I Exhort therefore, that firſt of all [a] ſupplications, prayers, interceſſions, and giving of thanks be made for all men,]

2. For Kings, and for all that are in authority, that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godlineſs and * honeſty.]

2. For the Emperors and rulers of provinces under them, to whom we owe all our peaceable living in any place, in the exerciſe of religion and vertuous life, and therefore ought in reaſon to pray and give thanks for them.

† Who wills that all men ſhould eſcape, or be ſaved, πάντας ἀνθρώπους σῶσαι θέλει ζωθῆναι

5. For it is but one God that is Creator of all, (who conſequently deſigns and wills the good of all) and ſo likewiſe but one Mediator and peace-maker between God and man, even he that hath taken our common nature upon him, and in it died for all thoſe whoſe nature he aſſumed, even Jeſus Chriſt;

5. For there is one God, * and one Mediator between God and men, the man Chriſt Jeſus;]

* one alſo Mediator of God and men, εἷς καὶ μεσίτης Θεοῦ καὶ ἀνθρώπων

6. Who died to redeem all men, and reſcue them out of their evil ways, laying down his life, pouring out his blood in our ſtead, and thereby gave alſo a teſtimony of the truth of his doctrine, thus ſealed with his blood, in the time appointed by God, and foretold by the prophets, as the ſeaſon for the working this great work.

9. The ſecond direction I give for women, that they come to the aſſemblies, and pray (in like manner as was ſaid of the men, ver. 8.) and that they do it in ſuch attire as is decent, accounting modeſty and ſobriety the greateſt ornament that they are capable of, and not ſetting themſelves out vainly and with oſtentation, in curious dreſſings of hair, in embroidery, or jewels, or other ways of ſumptuous attire.

11. And of the woman I farther command, that ſhe be content to learn, and to exerciſe obedience and ſubjection to thoſe who are placed over her, both in the Church and at home.

11. Let the woman learn in * ſilence with all ſubjection.]

* quietneſs ἡσυχίᾳ

12. And that ſhe neither undertake to teach in the Church, nor at home to have any authority over her husband, but to be obedient and meek, and ſtill in both thoſe capacites.

But by means of the ſeed of the woman, the Meſſias which ſhould be born from her poſterity, ſhe had a promiſe of redemption, and ſo all others of her ſex, upon condition of their perſeverance in the faith, and love and obedience to Chriſt, and performance of thoſe great Chriſtian duties of chaſtity and modeſt behaviour, which I now require of them. c. d.

Annotations on Chap. II.

a. δεήσεις

V. 1. Supplications, prayers—] Of theſe four ſorts of prayer 'tis affirmed by S. Chryſoſtom, that they were in his time all uſed in the Church, ἐν καθημερινῇ λειτουργίᾳ in the daily ſervice, καὶ τοῦτο, ſaith he, ἴσασιν οἱ μύσται, πῶς καθ' ἑκάστην ἡμέραν γίνεται καὶ ἐν ἑσπέρᾳ καὶ ἐν πρωΐᾳ, and this is ſufficiently known to all the Prieſts, or thoſe that officiate morning and evening. And ſo it appears by the Liturgies. The word δεήσεις referring to the larger or leſſer Collecta, that in the Litany for deliverance from all the evils there named, and the other after, in which the phraſe τῷ Κυρίῳ δεηθῶμεν we humbly beſeech thee, O Father, is uſed, which is for the averting of evils. The ſecond to the prayers for mercy and other wants. The third to the αἰτήσεις, wherein the word αἰτησώμεθα. Let us pray for the whole ſtate of Chriſt's Church, for Kings, &c. is inſerted. And the fourth to the ſolemn thanksgiving for all men, and to the hymns ſung to the praiſe of God. And it may be obſerved, that the direction here of praying for Kings, &c. is agreeable to that of the Hebrews; R. Chaninah in Pirche Aboth c. 3. §. 2. חנינא סגן הכהנים בשלומה של מלכות שאלמלא מוראה איש את רעהו חיים בלעו Pray for the peace of the kingdom, for unleſs there be fear, men will devour one another alive. And ſo when Petronius came to ſet up Caligula's image in the Temple, they that would die rather than that ſhould be done, being asked then whether they would wage war with the Emperour, anſwered, No; but on the other ſide twice a day they offered ſacrifice for the ſafety of the Emperour: ſee Joſephus, and Jer. 29. 7. Accordingly was the Chriſtians practice, as long as the Emperours continued heathen, praying in their Liturgies ὑπὲρ Βασιλέων, for Kings, after, when they were Chriſtian, δεόμεθα ὑπὲρ τῶν εὐσεβεστάτων καὶ θεοφυλάκτων βασιλέων, We pray thee for our moſt pious Kings, defenders of God, or of the faith of Chriſt, as it is in S. Chryſoſtom's Liturgie, and that ὑπὲρ κράτους, νίκης, διαμονῆς, εἰρήνης, ὑγείας, σωτηρίας αὐτῶν, for their power, victory, continuance, peace, health, ſafety. The very things which they prayed for them when they were yet Gentiles, ſaith Tertull. in Apol. Sine monitore precamur pro omnibus Imperatoribus, vitam illis prolixam, imperium ſecurum, domum tutam, exercitus fortes, ſenatum fidelem, populum probum, orbem quietum, We pray for a long life to our Emperours, a ſecure empire, a ſafe houſe, valiant armies, a faithful ſenate, a good people, a quiet world. This was after done for Arrian and heretical Kings, as Conſtantius. Παρακαλοῦμεν τὸν Θεὸν ὑπὲρ κοινῆς τῶν ἐκκλησιῶν εἰρήνης, ὑπὲρ τοῦ κόσμου εὐσταθείας, ὑπὲρ βασιλέων, ὑπὲρ στρατιωτῶν, καὶ συμμάχων, ſaith Cyril, Cat. 10. We beſeech God for the common peace of the Churches, for the quiet of the world, for our Kings, their Souldiers, and auxiliaries.

V. 8. Holy hands] The ceremony of waſhing was among the Jews conſtantly uſed before prayers: ſo Ariſteas*, Ἔθος ἐστὶ πᾶσι τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις, ἀπονιψαμένοις (I ſuppoſe it ſhould be ἀπονιψαμένους) τῇ θαλάσσῃ τὰς χεῖρας, ὡς ἂν εὐξαίμεθα πρὸς τὸν Θεόν, It is the cuſtom for all the Jews to waſh their hands whenſoever they pary to God: and ſo among the Mahometans. So Abul Faraii de moribus Arab. Fundamenta legis ſunt 1. Munditiei cura, 2. Oratio, The foundations of the law are 1. Cleanneſs, 2. Prayer. Others, as Al Gazal that mention the fundamenta legis, leave out Mundities, Cleanneſs, and comprehend it in Oratio, Prayer, according to that ſaying of Mahomet (in Ebnol Athir) Non accipit Deus preces abſque mundatione, God receives not prayers without cleanſing, or waſhing; and, Orationis Clavis eſt mundities, Cleanneſs is the key of Prayer, ſaith Al Gazal; and Mahomet again, Fundata eſt Religio in munditie, Religion is founded in cleanneſs. This ſignificant rite the Apoſtle here applies to the thing ſignified by it, cleanneſs of the heart and actions, and makes that neceſſary to the offering up any acceptable ſervice unto God. Of this Al Gazal an Arabick writer makes three degrees, 1. the cleanſing the members of the body, from unlawful actions, 2. the cleanſing of the heart from all manners that are worthy of diſpraiſe, all vices worthy of hatred, 3. the cleanſing of the ſecret (that is, the inward) affections of the heart from every thing beſide God, that they may be at full leiſure to meditate of, or pray to him. See Mr. Pocock's Notes on Abul Faraii p. 302. and Miſcell. Notes c. 9. p. 388.

c. σωθήσεται διὰ τεκνογονίας

V. 15. Saved in child-bearing] Some difficulty there is what is here meant by σωθήσεται διὰ τεκνογονίας, ſhe ſhall be ſaved by child-bearing. A firſt notion that may be thought to belong to it, is, that as σώζεσθαι to be ſaved ſignifies oft to eſcape, noting ſome temporal deliverance (of which ſee Note on Luk. 13. b.) ſo διὰ may note by, that is, through, not as a means or condition, but as the term out of, or through, which the deliverance is wrought as σώζεσθαι δι' ὕδατος being ſaved through the water, 1 Pet. 3. 10. and διὰ πυρὸς through the fire, 1 Cor. 3. 15. is being delivered out of the water and fire; and then the meaning of it will be, that ſhe ſhall paſs, though with ſome difficulty, ſafe through child-bearing; and this as a moderation of that curſe inflicted upon womankind upon Eves ſin, that ſhe ſhould bring forth children in ſorrow, or with ſore travail at their birth. But this doth not ſeem probable to be the meaning of the place, becauſe that which follows, if they continue in the faith, &c. v. 15. is not a condition of that deliverance from the peril of child-birth, that being common to believers and pagans, faithful and unfaithful. And indeed the curſe being but this, that in ſorrow ſhe ſhould bring forth, Gen. 3. 16. there hath ſince been no change in that matter, no promiſe upon any condition, that that puniſhment ſhould be moderated. A ſecond interpretation then there is, by obſerving the importance of the word τεκνογονεῖν (which is rendred child-bearing) c. 5. 14. where of the younger widow 'tis ſaid let her marry, and τεκνογονεῖν, where it is thought to ſignifie, not only or peculiarly bringing forth, but alſo breeding and bringing up children. And then that may be conceived the meaning of it here, and ſo the phraſe will be, ſhe ſhall be ſaved διὰ τεκνογονίας by bearing, and bringing up, or breeding, her children in the fear and nurture of the Lord, to which the next words are applied alſo ἐὰν μείνωσιν if they, that is, the children, abide in the faith, &c. But againſt this there are two exceptions alſo: 1. that τεκνογονεῖν in that c. 5. doth no way appear to ſignifie any more than bringing forth the children: for that other part of breeding or bringing up may well be contained under ruling the houſhold (which there follows) of which the children are a part; and then there is no example that the word ſhould ſignifie in that larger ſenſe, and conſequently no reaſon that it ſhould be ſo interpreted here: 2dly, there is as little reaſon to apply the following words to the children, if they, that is, if the children ſhall continue, &c. for beſide that there is no other mention of the children precedent, ſave what is in that compound word; and again, if τέκνα children be underſtood, then that plural Neuter muſt have a Verb ſingular to join with it, according to rules of Grammar and uſe of theſe Books, and ſo it would be μείνῃ, not μείνωσιν: beſides theſe, I ſay, there will be little reaſon that the childrens continuing in the faith ſhould be the condition of the ſalvation of the mother, when ſhe is before preſumed to have done her part in the breeding of them. The difficulties thus diſcernible againſt either of theſe interpretations make it not unreaſonable to pitch upon a third interpretation, ſo as τεκνογονία ſhall ſignifie the womans bearing of the promiſed ſeed, which was the means foretold for the bruiſing the ſerpents head, and ſo for the reſcuing the woman from that eternal puniſhment which was juſtly deſerved by her ſin.

ἐὰν μείνωσιν

This is no new interpretation, but ſo antient as to be mentioned by Theophylact, though not accepted by him, and this perfectly agrees with every circumſtance in the Context. For thus it will connect with what went before; the woman, that is, Eve, v. 12. being deceived was in the tranſgreſſion, that is, was firſt guilty of eating the forbidden fruit, but reſcued from the puniſhment by the promiſed ſeed, that is, by her child-bearing, by the Meſſias, which was to be born of a woman, and ſo to redeem that nature which he aſſumed; but this not abſolutely, but on condition of faith, and charity, and holineſs, and ſobriety, and continuing in all theſe; and this advantage belonging not only to the firſt, woman Eve, but to all her poſterity, in reſpect of whom it is that the number is changed from the Singular to the Plural, She, as the repreſentative of all women, had the promiſe made to her, Gen. 3. 15. but the condition muſt be performed by all others as well as her, or elſe the benefit will not redound to them. And this is the moſt literal importance of the διὰ alſo, being ſaved by this, as by a means of all womens and mens redemption and ſalvation.

Ib. If they continue] The changing of the number here from σωθήσεται ſhe ſhall be ſaved to ἐὰν μείνωσιν if they abide, hath had an account given of it already, Note c. to which it may farther be added, that this is but agreeable to the former diſcourſe v. 9, 11. In v. 9. it is in the plural, that the women adorn themſelves, but v. 11. in the ſingular, Let the woman learn in ſilence, and v. 12. But I ſuffer not a woman, &c. where it is certain that the women in one place are all one with the woman in the other places. And ſo it is here alſo. d. ἐὰν μείνωσιν

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. III.

a. 1. Now to proceed to other directions neceſſary for thee, thou art to conſider this great and weighty truth, that the Epiſcopal office, whenſoever any man is a candidate or ſuiter for it, is an honourable (though never ſo dangerous and burtheniſom a) function, (ſee James 3. 1.) and conſequently that thou muſt be very careful in the choice of the perſon whom thou, as Metropolitan of Epheſus, admitteſt to this dignity.

1. THis is a * true ſaying, If a man deſire the office of a Biſhop, he deſireth a [a] good work.] * faithful πιστὸς

b. c. 2. And therefore theſe enquiries thou muſt make of any whom thou meaneſt to ordain, and receive the teſtimony of the Church concerning him (ſee Note on Act. 6. b.) And therein let theſe qualifications be obſerved: 1. that he be a perſon not ſcandalous for any ſin ſince his converſion, 2. that he have not put away his wife (ſo as is ordinary both among Jews and heathens, but forbidden by Chriſt, except for fornication) and married another, 3. that he be ſober and intent to his buſineſs, 4. moderate in all his actions, as that is oppoſed to diſtemper or giddineſs, 5. of a grave compoſed behaviour, humanity and modeſty together, 6. apt to entertain ſtrangers, 7. one that is able and ready to communicate to others the knowledge which himſelf hath,

2. A Biſhop then muſt be blameleſs, the [b] husband of one wife, † vigilant, ſober, [c] * of good behaviour, given to hoſpitality, apt to teach,] † ſober, temperate νηφάλιον, σώφρονα * comely

3. 8. A temperate perſon, in oppoſition to exceſſive drinking, 9. one that uſes no violence, 10. that uſes no ſordid courſe for gain, 11. of a mild and peaceable diſpoſition, (ſee Note on 2 Cor. 10. a.) 12. neither apt to be angry and quarrel, nor 13. inſlaved to the love of wealth,

3. Not given to wine, no ſtriker, not greedy of filthy lucre, but * patient, † not a brawler, not covetous,] * gentle ἐπιεικῆ † not quarrelſom ἄμαχον

4. 14. That by ruling his own family well, and keeping his children in obedience to diſcipline, and in all probity of manners, ſhews that he is fit to be a Governour,

4. One that ruleth well his own houſe, having his children in ſubjection with all gravity,]

5. (For ſure he that cannot rule ſo much a leſs province, will be unfit to be made a Governour of the Church of God.)

5. (For if a man know not how to rule his own houſe, how ſhall he take care of the Church of God?

d. 6. 15. Not one that is but newly planted or inſtructed in the faith, leſt ſo great a dignity ſo ſuddenly beſtowed on him may tempt him to pride and vanity, and ſo bring the ſame ruin upon him that fell upon the devil, who was tempted in like manner by that glorious condition wherein he was created, and for his pride was caſt out of heaven into the torments of hell, 2 Pet. 2. 4.

6. Not a [d] novice, leſt being lifted up with pride, he fall into the condemnation of the devil.]

7. To theſe qualifications muſt be farther added, 16. that he be a perſon of good reputation, under no reproach for his former life among unbelievers; for if he be, there will be danger that he be contumelioufly uſed by them, and this the devil will make uſe of to inſnare others, to give them averſions to the doctrine of ſuch a man who is under ſo much ſcandal for his former life: ſee Theophylact.

7. Moreover he muſt have a good report of them which are without, leſt he fall into reproach and the ſnare of the devil.

8. And as for the chuſing of the Biſhop all this care muſt be taken, ſo for the Deacons, that muſt every where be conſtituted to attend the Biſhop, they alſo muſt be choſen grave, ſober perſons, not cunning and deceitful, not given to exceſs of drinking wine or ſtrong drink, thoſe which uſe not any ſordid courſe for gain,

8. Likewiſe muſt the Deacons be grave, not double-tongued, not given to much wine, nor greedy of filthy lucre,]

9. But ſuch as being orthodox in point of faith, live pure and Chriſtian lives according to the doctrine and directions thereof.

9. Holding the myſtery of the faith in a pure conſcience.]

10. And before any be thus aſſumed into holy Orders, let them be well known, and by teſtimony approved for ſufficiency, piety, and good behaviour, and then being found blameleſs, perſons of good report among all, let them then be aſſumed into Orders.

10. And let theſe alſo firſt be proved, and then let them uſe the office of a Deacon, being found blameleſs.]

11. So likewiſe the women that have any office in the Church (ſee Note on Tit. 2. b.) muſt be of a grave behaviour, not given to ſlander and calumniate, not given to any exceſs, truſty in all that is committed to them.

11. * Even ſo muſt their wives be grave, not ſlanderers, ſober, faithful in all things.] * The women in like manner, γυναῖκας ὡσαύτως

12. And as of the Biſhops, ſo of the Deacons, let them be thoſe that have not put away former wives upon diſlikes, and married others (ſee Note b.) but thoſe which either have not married, or lived conſtantly with their firſt wives, and duly brought up their children, and governed their families.

12. Let the Deacons be the husbands of one wife, ruling their children and their own houſes well.]

13. For though the office of a Deacon be an inferior degree, yet it is a ſtep to the higher, and they that behave themſelves well in it, are fit to be aſſumed to an higher imployment, that of rulers or Biſhops, that greater dignity in the Church of God, (ſee Note on Joh. 7. a.)

13. For they that have uſed the office of a Deacon well, purchaſe to themſelves a good degree, and great † boldneſs in the faith which is in Chriſt Jeſus.] † authority παῤῥησίαν

15. But if it ſhall fall out that I cannot come, that then by theſe thou mayſt for the main be provided and inſtructed how to diſcharge the office commited to thee, being an office of ſtewardſhip or prefecture in God's family, the Church, not of Idol falſe, but of the one true God, the pillar and baſis which holds up the truth, ſuſtains and keeps it from ſinking.

f. 16. The truth, I mean, of God's œconomy at this time, which is moſt precious and valuable, and tends mightily to the begetting of all piety and vertue in our hearts. And it conſiſts of theſe ſo many degrees. 1. That God himſelf took on him our fleſh, and here on earth viſibly appeared among us in an human ſhape, and did thereby make known his will

16. And * without controverſie great is the myſtery of [f] godlineſs, God was † manifeſt in the fleſh, juſtified * in the Spirit, ſeen of Angels, preached † unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up * into glory.]

Annotations on Chap. III.

a. Καλὸν ἔργον

V. 1. A Good work] Καλὸν ἔργον here signifies honestum opus, a work of some vertue and excellence in it self, as being that which is the consecrating a man's life, at least the greatest part of it, to the service of God, to which therefore an immarcessible crown of glory is proposed by Saint Peter as the reward, 1 Pet. 5. 4. where, as the great reward in heaven, Mat. 5. is an argument that the vertue to which it is assigned is a very eminent vertue, very acceptable in the sight of God, so is this an evidence that the good work here is look'd on as an eminent state of piety, so far from being censurable in him that desires it as he ought to do, in order to the glory of God, or the love of our brethren, or the just provision for their spiritual wants, that it is very commendable in him, and the desire of it is an act of Christian piety in the more perfect degree, as the designing this without putting the flock to any charge is yet more excellent in S. Paul, 1 Cor. 9. 18. And this may be farther evident by the fault of those who forsake this or any other Ecclesiastical office and return to the world, ad seculum, again; such was Demas who had been a fellow-labourer of S. Paul's, Philem. 24. Col. 4. 14. but after forsook him, 2 Tim. 4. 10. ἀγαπήσας τὸν νῦν αἰῶνα, having loved this present age, or world: not that this crime was that love of the world, which 1 John 2. 15. is a crime in any Christian, but that he betook himself to his own worldly secular affairs again, forsaking the attendence on the service of God in his Church; as he that marries a wife is said to be solicitous for the things of this world, how he may please his wife: which love of the world, though it be not in it self a fault (for then marriage could not be faultless) yet if it be the taking one off from Ecclesiastical employments which hath devoted himself to them, will be a fault in him; and that was Demas's crime, not, as 'tis thought, forsaking of Christianity. And that was charged on some others, though Timothy stuck close to him, Phil. 2. 21. All seek τὰ ἑαυτῶν, &c. betake themselves to the care of their own secular affairs, not to the affairs of Christ, in attending on the Gospel, ver. 22. And the criminousness of this arising from hence, that he forsakes that which is more excellent for that which is less so, though it be not otherwise unlawful, Ecclesiastical for Secular employments, is an evidence that the Ecclesiastical employment is καλὸν ἔργον in this notion, a good, that is excellent, work, a state (if lived in as it ought) of some perfection.

ἀγαπήσας τὸν νῦν αἰῶνα

b. μιᾶς γυναικὸς ἀνὴρ

V. 2. Husband of one wife] What is the meaning of μιᾶς γυναικὸς ἀνὴρ the husband of one wife both here and v. 12. and Tit. 1. 6. and of ἑνὸς ἀνδρὸς γυνὴ the wife of one husband c. 5. 9. will not be easily resolved. For if it should be interpreted as an interdict of chusing to the office of Bishop or Deacon any who had lived in Polygamy, that is, had had more wives at once, though that might have some colour of sense in it from the practice of the Jews, as far as concerned the man (who among them was permitted Polygamy) yet this is not appliable to the widow or woman c. 5. 9. for never among Jews (or even Turks) was it permitted that the woman should have more than one husband at once; and the reason is clear, because the multitude of husbands did not help forward, but rather hinder propagation, for which it was that the multitude of wives was permitted. Only among the Barbarians there is mention of the πολυάνδροι, a people so called, because the wife among them had many husbands; and among the Medes that dwelt in the Mountains, 'tis said that a woman was married to five husbands at once. But there is no probability that this should be referred to, or looked upon in this place. Then for the other interpretation, that here the Digamist, or he that hath had two wives successively one after another, should be made uncapable of holy Orders, or be under some reproach for so doing, and his having married but once should be as necessary to a Bishop or Deacon, as sobriety, &c. this is a little strange, it being ordinary for the wife to die soon after marriage, and without children, and in that case, the second marriage tending as much to the ends of Matrimony (comfort of life, propagation, remedy of lust) as the former can be supposed to do. And besides, this prohibition being not to be found in the laws of any nation, and being grounded on no other text but this (of the meaning of which the question now is) will no farther be concluded hence, than the words of this place do enforce it. A third sense the phrase is capable of, which seems much fitter for the matter in hand, that he be said here to be, or to have been, the husband of more wives than one, who married after divorce, that is, who having put away his wife on any cause whatsoever, even for that of fornication, which the Law of Christ allows, doth marry another. This he that had done was by the words of Christ, especially as they are set down Mar. 10. 11. Luk. 16. 18. and by a speech of S. Paul's 1 Cor. 7. 39. under such prejudices, that we cannot wonder that here he is not thought fit to be received into holy Orders, and so the woman also. They that marry after Divorces, are in the first Canon of the Council of Laodicea expressed by οἱ ἐλευθέρως καὶ νομίμως συναφθέντες δευτέροις γάμοις, freely and legally coupled in second marriages. And the like mention we find of them Concil. Neocæsar. can. 52. where such a δίγαμος is supposed αἰτῶν μετάνοιαν to entreat absolution. And Concil. Ancyr. can. 39. Διγάμων ὅρος, the term of abstension, or separation, which belongs to the Digamist, (in this notion of it) is mentioned as a known and vulgar thing. And Concil. primi Niceni Can. 8. the Novatians error appears to have been, their refusing to communicate with these Digamists upon their repentance, in like manner as with those that had fallen in time of persecution; which signifies these two to be look'd on as crimes of high importance in a Christian, for which the Censures of the Church fell heavy on them, though upon Repentance the Catholicks admitted them to Communion again. And thus also in * Athenagoras, we Christians, saith he, are commanded either to remain every man as we are, ἢ ἑφ' ἑνὶ γάμῳ, or to content our selves with one marriage (which is no where commanded in that other sense of marrying after the death of the first, and therefore must be understood of this other sort, after Divorce.) For the second marriages, saith he, are εὐπρεπὴς μοιχεία, a comely kind of adultery: Adultery, saith he, from Christ's words, for he that puts away his wife, and marries again, committeth adultery (which proof of his restrains his words to those second marriages which are after Divorces;) but that a well-favoured, fashionable, comely one, because the Imperial laws say nothing against such marriages after Divorces allowed by them. And again, saith he, 'Tis the Law of Christ that no man shall put away her ἣν ἔφθασέ τις τὴν παρθενίαν whom he hath defloured, or made no virgin, and marry again. This seems to be Theophylact's understanding of it; for as on this place he saith it was opposed to the practice of the Jews, among whom, saith he, ἐφέρετο πολυγαμία, polygamy was permitted, or, as other Copies read, ἐφέρετο πολυπαιδία, multitude of children was desired, in which respect their divorces were permitted: so on Tit. 1. 6. he applies it to him who had so little kindness πρὸς τὴν ἀνάληψιν, that he marries another, and after expresly to the δίγαμος, who, saith he, doth that which is not ἀνεπίληπτον unblameable,

ἐν ἀγ τοῖς ἔξω νόμοις δοκεῖ, though it be approved by the Laws of them which are not Christians: where if ἀπελθοῦσα be thought to signifie the dead wife, then it will be unappliable to the practice of the Jews; for all others, as well as they, married second wives after the death of the former; and therefore it must probably signifie her that is departed by divorce, and then that which followeth of the digamist will also concur with it, to interpret his sense to this purpose. For of such marriages after divorces we know the practice and allowance of the Græcians and Romans, as well as Jews, and of the Imperial Laws. And so before him Theodoret, If any man having put away his former wife shall marry another, he were worthy of reprehension; and therefore a Bishop, that must be ἀνέγκλητος, must not be such an one. So Chrysostom also, from whom Theophylact had his sense and words. So Plutarch in his Ῥωμαϊκ. making mention of a law prohibiting to marry second marriages on festival days, saith that it was brought up, because either widows married, which might do well to do it in secret, or those whose husbands were living, and then they ought to be ashamed to think of any other husband. So Valer. Max. l. 2. c. 1. calls the experience of many marriages, legitimæ cujusdam intemperantiæ signum, a sign of intemperance, but such as the law of Heathen men permits. So in * Ærodius, among the Presbyters that were brought as witnesses against Marcellinus, one being found to have married again after Divorce, placuit reprobari, he was rejected, saith he: whence it appears that such marriages were not only allowed by the Imperial laws, but that they were practised also among Christians: which farther appears by Marculfus Formul. l. 2. c. 30. Dum inter illum & illam non charitas secundùm Deum, sed discordia regnat, & ad hoc pariter conversare minimè possunt, placuit utriusque voluntate ut se à consortio separare deberent, quod ità & fecerunt, Seeing between him and her Christian charity doth not reign, but discord, and so they cannot converse tegether, it is agreed by the consent of both parties, that they should separate from one another's companies, which accordingly they did. This, it seems, was a formula used among Christians, as there was another to the same purpose, Leg. Rom. c. 19. and Novel. Instit. 117. And this being allowed by the secular Imperial laws, and accordingly practised, the Council of Carthage thought fit to make a Canon to reform it (Can. Sec. Zonaram 116.) and to reduce it to Christ's and Saint Paul's institution, and therefore appointed that the Emperor should be desired to make an Impetial law against it. † Saint Hierom mentions some that being divorced this day, married the next, and adds, Uterque reprehendendus maritus, & cui tam citò displicuit, & cui tam citò placuit, both husbands were to be blamed, he that was so soon displeased with his wife, and he that so soon liked and married her. And so * Innocentius of those who after a divorce marry anew, in utraque parte adulteros esse, they are on both sides adulterers, and to be excommunicate. To this belongs that of * Justin Martyr, Οἱ νόμῳ ἀνθρωπίνῳ διζυγίας ποιούμενοι, ἁμάρτωλοί ἐισι παρὰ τῷ κυρίῳ διδασκάλῳ ἡμῶν, they that by man's law make second marriages, are sinners in the account of Christ our Master. He that would see more to this purpose for the confirming of this interpretation, may consult Zonaras's Scholia on that Canon, and Rodolphus Fornerius Rerum Quotid. l. 6. c. 23. and Burchard l. 9. c. 72. and the Notes on Cod. Can. Eccl. Universa. And that this custom was also among women, who thus divorced themselves from their husbands, will appear by Justinians Novell. 117. which will therefore be appliable to the prohibition of the widows being chosen which was not ἑνὸς ἀνδρὸς γυνὴ the wife of one husband also.

V. 6. Novice] Νεόφυτος signifies not in respect of age, for Timothy himself was such; but in respect of receiving the faith, by analogy with the use of the word φυτεύω to plant, for to instruct in Christianity, to teach the faith, as when Saint Paul saith that he hath planted; and so saith Theophylact, 'tis all one with νεοβάπτιστος newly baptized, lately received into the Church.

V. 15. House of God] What οἶκος Θεοῦ the house of God here signifies, is evident by the Context. The whole discourse here is to give Timothy directions for the chusing and constituting Bishops and Deacons in his Province, that is, over all Asia, of which Ephesus, where Timothy was placed by S. Paul, was the chief Metropolis. This then being the Province wherein he was to ordain, must needs be the οἶκος Θεοῦ house of God, wherein he is here directed how he should behave himself, being by S. Paul set there as the οἰκονόμος, or steward in an house, who having, under the Master, chief power in the family, to him it belongs to entertain or remove servants and officers out of it. But this not so to restrain the phrase to that one Province, but that both the universal and every other particular Church of Christ is capable of that title, as truly and properly as that of Ephesus or Asia at that time. For indeed the phrase is derived from the Temple, which as the special place of God's presentiating and exhibiting himself, is called God's house, where he dwells, and delights, and meets the pious votary, receives his addresses, entertains and treats him, as in his own house, and answers the petitions which he came to offer there, and where his Angels, which are his attendants and court, as it were, are peculiarly present, 1 Cor. 11. 10. As when the Angels appeared to Jacob at Luz, he presently calls it Beth El, the house of God, saying, surely God is in this place, this is no other than the house of God, &c. Proportionably to this the whole family of God, as that comprehends the whole corporation or community of all the Christians alive, is fitly styled οἶκος Θεοῦ, this great house of God; and in like manner, every lesser society of Christians among whom God is pleased to dwell also, and rule by his οἰκονόμος, or steward. And such is every Bishop in every particular Church. Of this house of God, in this sense, two titles are here set down, fitly belonging both to the whole, and to each branch, but especially verified at that time wherein the words were delivered, that first age of the Apostles preaching and planting of the faith. The first title is, Ἐκκλησία Θεοῦ Ἐκκλησία ζῶντος, the Church of the living God, in opposition to the Θεοῦ ζῶν false, dead, lifeless gods, whose pictures were adored τος in their heathen Temples. Those were ἐκκλησίαι places of meeting and assembling, but only for the worship of idols, empty nothings. But the house of God, where Timothy was set the œconomus, or steward at Ephesus, contrary to Diana's Temple there, was the Church of the living God; and so was every such regular assembly of Christians under a Bishop (such as Timothy was) an œconomus set over them by Christ. Such again every larger circuit under the Metropolitan, who as Timothy again, had χειροτονίαν καὶ κρίσιν ordination and jurisdiction over the whole Province. And such all the particular Churches of the whole world considered together, under the supreme head, Christ Jesus, dispensing them all by himself, and administring them severally not by any one œconomus, but by the several Bishops, as inferior heads of unity to the several bodies, so constituted by the several Apostles in their plantations, each of them having an αὐτονομία, a several distinct commission from Christ immediately, and subordinate to none but the supreme donour, or plenipotentiary. The second title is, that it is στύλος καὶ ἑδραίωμα τῆς ἀληθείας, the pillar of truth, and στύλος καὶ ἑδραίωμα τῆς ἀληθείας the basis of that pillar. The houses anciently were built on pillars, Judg. 16. 26. where we find the pillars whereupon the house standeth, and v. 29. the two middle pillars, whereon the house stood, and on which it was born up, and upon the removing of which the house fell; and so when the Psalmist describes the land by this similitude of an house, he supposeth it set on pillars, and the feebleness of those pillars, when they want bearing up, are an evidence of the weakness of the earth. The earth is weak, and the inhabitants thereof, I bear up the pillars of it, Psal. 75. 4. Now of a pillar it is known, that it receives the usefulness from the basis on which it stands, which being so set that it cannot sink, the pillar being firmly fastned on that, and standing upright, it is able to bear a vast weight of building laid upon it. And so these two, though several in themselves, yet joyning together, and consolidated into one, they do as one, not severally, support what is laid upon them. A like expreſſion we find in the Jewiſh writers, from whence it ſeems to be imitated; as when Maimonides in his firſt volum lib. יסודי התורה begins his firſt Hilchet, called יסוד הי סורות ועמוד החכמות thus, the foundation of foundations and the pillar of wiſdom, is to know there is a firſt being, &c. which phraſe, though it differs from this in ſpeaking of a firſt, abſolutely firſt foundation, whereas this ſpeaks indefinitely of a foundation, yet it agrees with it in this, that foundation and pillar are joined together, to ſignifie not ſeveral, but one and the ſame title. It is therefore neceſſary ſo to render theſe words, στύλος καὶ ἑδραίωμα, pillar and ground, that they be not diſtinct titles of the houſe of God, a pillar one, and a baſis another, but (by the figure of ἓν διὰ δυοῖν, one deſcribed by two) a pillar upon its baſis, which firmly ſuſtains that which is built and erected upon it. And ſo is the houſe of God, (the Church, both Univerſal of Chriſt, and, under him, of all the Apoſtles, and each particular, of each ſingle Apoſtle's plantation) this pillar erected firmly upon the baſis to ſuſtain, to uphold the truth of Chriſt, which being by Chriſt and his Apoſtles erected, as a roof upon a pillar, is ſuſtained and upheld by it. If the truth of the Goſpel had been ſcattered abroad by preaching to ſingle men, and thoſe men never compacted together into a ſociety under the Government of Biſhops, or Stewards, &c. ſuch as Timothy was, to whom was delivered by Saint Paul that παραθήκη 1 Tim. 5. 20. a depoſitum, or body of ſound doctrine, to be kept as a ſtandard in the Church, by which all other doctrines were to be meaſured, and judged; if, I ſay, ſuch a ſummary of faith had not been deliver'd to all Chriſtians that came in, in any place, to the Apoſtles preaching, and if there had not been ſome Steward to keep it, then had there wanted an eminent means to ſuſtain and uphold this truth of the Goſpel, thus preach'd unto men. But by the gathering of ſingle converted Chriſtians into aſſemblies or Churches, and deſigning Governors in thoſe Churches, and entruſting this depoſitum, or form of wholſom doctrine to their keeping, it comes to paſs that the Chriſtian truth is ſuſtain'd and held up, and ſo this houſe of God is affirmed to be the pillar and baſis of truth, or that pillar on a baſis by which truth is ſupported. According to which it is that Chriſt is ſaid to have given not only Apoſtles, and Prophets, and Evangeliſts, but alſo Paſtors and Teachers, that is, the Biſhops in the Church (known indifferently by thoſe two titles) εἰς καταρτισμὸν τῶν ἁγίων, for the compacting of the Saints into a Church, εἰς οἰκοδομὴν, for the building up of the body of Chriſt, confirming, and continuing them in all truth, Eph. 4. 12. that we ſhould be no longer like children carried about with every wind of doctrine, &c. v. 14. And ſo again when Hereſies came into the Church in the firſt Ages, 'tis every where apparent by Ignatius's Epiſtles, that the only way of avoiding of error and danger was to adhere to the Biſhop in communion and doctrine, and whoſoever departed from him, and that form of wholſome words kept by him, ὑφὰς) was ſuppoſed to be corrupted, and immers'd in that ſink of corruption which was then among the Gnoſticks, the peſts of that age of the Church. To which purpoſe theſe ſayings of that divine Martyr are expreſs, Μηδεὶς χωεὶς τοῦ ἐπισκόπου τι πρασσέτω τῶν ἀνηκόντων εἰς τὴν ἐκκλησίαν, Let no man do ought of thoſe things which belong to the Church without the Biſhop; and ὁ λάθρα ἐπισκόπου τι πράσσων, τῷ διαβόλῳ λατρεύει, he that doth any thing without the privity of the Biſhop, worſhips the devil, Epiſt. ad Smyrn. And this is his meaning of ἐντὸς θυσιαστηρίου ἦς), being within the altar, preſerving communion with and dependence on the Biſhop, who ſat in that part of the Church which was called the θυσιαστήριον, or altar, which he that did not, ὑστερεῖ) τοῦ ἄρτου τοῦ Θεοῦ, falls ſhort of the bread of God, Ep. ad Epheſ. from thence concluding, Σπουδάσωμεν οὖν μὴ ἀντιτάσσεσθαι τῷ ἐπισκόπῳ ἵνα ὦμεν Θεῷ ὑποτασσόμενοι, Let us take care not to reſiſt or oppoſe the Biſhop, that we may be ſubject to God: Πάντα γὰρ ὃν πέμπει ὁ οἰκοδεσπότης εἰς ἰδίαν οἰκονομίαν οὕτως δεῖ ἡμᾶς αὐτὸν δέχεσθαι ὡς αὐτὸν τὸν πέμψαντα· τοῦ οὖν ἐπίσκοπον δεῖ ὡς αὐτὸν Κύριον προσβλέπειν, For every one whom the Maſter of the houſe ſends to his own ſtewardſhip, him muſt we receive as him that ſent him: we muſt therefore look to the Biſhop, as the Lord himſelf. And in the Epiſtle to the Magneſians, Πρέπον ἐστὶν ἡμᾶς μὴ μόνον καλεῖσθαι Χριστιανούς, ἀλλὰ καὶ εἶναι, ὥσπερ καί τινες ἐπίσκοπον μὲν καλοῦσι, χωρὶς δὲ αὐτοῦ πάντα πράσσουσι, We ought not only to be called Chriſtians, but alſo to be ſuch, as ſome call, or acknowledge the Biſhop, but do all without him. And again, μηδὲ πειράσηται εὔλογόν τι φαίνεσθαι ἰδίᾳ ὑμῖν, not to think it reaſonable to entertain any private opinions of our own: for, as he adds, they that did ſo were ſure to be ſeduced in ſuch times, being once grown wiſer than their teachers. So in Ep. ad Philadel. Ὅσοι Θεοῦ εἰσιν καὶ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, οὗτοι μετὰ τοῦ Ἐπισκόπου εἰσίν, As many as are of God and of Jeſus Chriſt, theſe are with the Biſhop, ἐν θυσιαστηρίου, ὡς εἷς ἐπίσκοπος, ἵνα ὃ ἐὰν πράσσητε κατὰ Θεὸν πράσσητε, There is one altar as one Biſhop, that whatever ye do, ye may do according to God. And ſpeaking of ſeduced Hereticks, he mentions their only way of repentance, ἐὰν μετανοήσωσιν εἰς ἑνότητα Θεοῦ, καὶ συνέδριον τοῦ ἐπισκόπου, if they repent and return to the unity of God, and the counſel of the Biſhop. And ſo every where in all thoſe Epiſtles to the ſame purpoſe, to ſignifie that that form of doctrine, depoſited with, and kept by the Biſhop in the Church, is the only ſure means to ſupport and preſerve the truth. Which how little it belongs to thoſe Congregations or Churches which have either caſt out that Apoſtolical form of ſound words, or by degrees received in many corruptions and falſities, either againſt the will of their Governours, or by connivence or aſſiſtance of them, doth eaſily appear by what hath here been ſaid, becauſe as the good husbandman ſows ſeed in his field, ſo the enemy may ſcatter darnel, and the field bring forth the fruits of one as well as the other.

V. 16. Godlineſs] The notion of piety in this place is obſervable for Chriſtian Religion, doctrine of Chriſt, whether as that which is it ſelf the true way of ſerving and worſhipping of God, ſo as will be acceptable unto him (and ſo is εὐσέβεια piety) or that which preſcribes, and delivers the moſt exact and perfect way of ſerving God, and ſo by a Metonymy is called piety. That it ſignifies ſo here, appears by the parts of this myſtery, as they are here ſet down; God, that is, Chriſt incarnate, manifeſted in the fleſh, &c. the ſeveral articles of our faith from the Birth to the Aſſumption of Chriſt, which all together are called μυστήριον εὐσεβείας, the myſtery of piety; the parts of our religion, into which all Chriſtians are initiated or entred; the foundation on which all our Chriſtian practice is built, God being ſo deſirous that men ſhould live according to that Law of his revealed by Chriſt, that to preach it to us, and inforce it on our practice, he was himſelf pleaſed to aſſume, and manifeſt himſelf in our fleſh, and to teſtifie the truth of this, the Spirit of God came down viſibly upon Chriſt, and the voice from heaven, This is my beloved ſon, Mat. 3. 17. and ſo in the ſeveral particulars here mentioned, as branches of our initiation into Chriſtian religion, grounds of our believing, and practiſing the Chriſtian doctrine. Thus c. 6. 5. where ſpeaking of the wicked Hereticks of thoſe times, the Gnoſticks, he mentions it as a piece of their doctrine, that εὐσέβεια is πορισμὸς, piety (that is, the Chriſtian religion, the being of that profeſſion) is gain, matter of ſecular advantage. Thus again c. 6. 3. 'tis called more expreſly ἡ κατ' εὐσέβειαν διδασκαλία, the doctrine which is according to piety. So Tit. 1. 1. the truth which is according to piety is ſet to denote the Goſpel. Agreeable to which it is that mercifulneſs and ſpotleſs purity are called θρησκεία καθαρὰ pure worſhip, &c. James 1. 27. that is, prime ſpecial branches of the true religion. In other places 'tis true, that εὐσέβεια piety is taken in a narrower ſenſe for that vertue particularly of worſhipping God aright, as Tit. 2. 12. in diſtinction from the duties toward others and our ſelves, 1 Tim. 6. 11. 2 Pet. 1. 6. and in one place 1 Tim. 5. 4. for the return of gratitude in children to their parents, which is a kind of piety alſo, as the love of our country, honouring of magiſtrates, that are a ſort of gods as well as parents to us, is ordinarily called piety.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. IV.

1. But there are riſen up ſome among you which oppoſe this Chriſtian doctrine, mentioned in the cloſe of the third chapter, deny this form of Evangelical truth, viz. the Gnoſticks that deny Chriſt to be come really in the fleſh, 2 Joh. 7. And there is no wonder in this, for Chriſt expreſly foretold it Mat. 24. 11. that before the time of the Jews ruin, before that notable coming of Chriſt (ſee Notes on Mat. 24. b. c. d. Act. 2. b.) ſome ſhall forſake the faith, and follow erroneous ſeducing teachers (ſee Note on Luke 9. c.) though the doctrines which they teach are moſt unclean, polluted, deviliſh doctrines. See 2 Pet. 3. Note a.

1. NOW the Spirit ſpeaketh expreſly, that in the latter times ſome ſhall depart from the faith, giving heed to ſeducing ſpirits, and doctrines of devils;]

a. 2. Which they ſet off through the fair pretences of greater perfection and depth of knowledge, which theſe liars make ſhew of among the people, men that have their conſciences ſtigmatized with the marks and brands of their ill works, notorious to all for infamous perſons.

2. * Speaking lies with hypocriſie, having their [a] conſcience † ſeared with an hot iron,]

* Through the hypocriſie of lying ſpeakers, ἐν ὑποκρίσει ψευδολόγων † branded

b. 3. Part of the character of theſe men is, to interdict marriages, and ſpeak againſt them as unlawful, and ſo likewiſe to command abſtinences from ſome ſorts of meats, from which the Jews abſtain, but by the liberty allowed by Chriſt are perfectly lawful for all Chriſtians, ſo they be taken with thankſgiving and acknowledgment of the donour.

3. [b] Forbidding to marry, and commanding to abſtain from meats, which God hath created * to be received with thankſgiving of them which believe and know the truth.]

and thoſe that have acknowledged the truth to partake of with thankſgiving, εἰς μεταλήψιν μετ' εὐχαριστίας τοῖς πιστοῖς καὶ ἐπεγνωκόσι † ἀλήθειαν

4. For indeed all the creatures in the world, being created for the uſe of Man, may lawfully be uſed and eaten by a Chriſtian, if it be done with faith and acknowledgment of the donour, (ſee Mat. 14. c.)

4. For every creature of God is good, and nothing † to be refuſed, if it be received with thankſgiving:]

† polluted being received, ἀπόβλητον λαμβανόμενον

c. 5. For there are but two things neceſſary to make any thing lawful for our uſe: Firſt, God's permiſſion of freedom allowed us by him, and that we have in this matter by the expreſs words of Chriſt that tells us, that which goes in (that is, meats, &c.) is not that which defiles a man; and ſecondly, prayer, which bleſſeth our meat to us, being, beſide the calling for God's bleſſing upon it, an acknowledgment of God from whom it comes, and who hath allowed it for food for us.

5. For it is ſanctified by the [c] word of God and prayer.]

6. Such admonitions as theſe, which may help ſecure them from the infuſions of theſe men, thou art frequently and timely to give the Chriſtians under thee notice of, and by ſo doing thou ſhalt approve thy ſelf faithful in the diſcharge of thy office of Biſhop, whoſe duty this is, thus to ruminate and chew over and over again, and ſo to feed continually on the doctrines of Chriſt, and by inſtructing others to make returns for all the good inſtructions thou haſt thy ſelf received and imbraced obediently.

6. If thou * put the brethren in remembrance of theſe things, thou ſhalt be a good miniſter of Jeſus Chriſt, ‖ nouriſhed up in the words of faith, and of good doctrine, † whereunto thou haſt attained.]

* ſuggeſt theſe things to the brethren ταῦτα ὑποτιθέμενος τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς ‖ nouriſh'd or fed with ἐντρεφόμενος τοῖς
† which thou haſt followed ᾗ παρηκολούθηκας

7. But eſpecially be ſure that inſtead of their doctrines of abſtinences from marriage and from meats, quite contrary to the Goſpel, which ſets an honourable character upon marriage, and takes away difference of meats, and inſtead of idle ridiculous grounds, upon which they found theſe abſtinences, thou do by diligent ſearch into the doctrine of the Goſpel, purſue that perfection of Chriſtian knowledge, which, though thou art young, may fit thee for the diſcharge of that venerable office.

7. But * refuſe prophane and old-wives fables, and exerciſe thy ſelf rather unto godlineſs.]

* avoid παραιτοῦ

d. 8. For though abſtinence from daily meats, and wines, and from marriage, be, as an act of ſelf-denial and exerciſe, acceptable to God; yet if this be not obſerved with due limits, if meats be abſtained from as unlawful, and marriage in like manner as abominable and deteſtable, (as by the Gnoſticks, who yet indulged to all villany, it was) then there is no good, but hurt in them, Col. 2. 22. And indeed conſidered at the beſt Col. 2. 23. the profit of them is but little in compariſon to that of piety, which is of the greateſt value imaginable, will help us to all advantages that we can wiſh. If we would have a comfortable life here, this is promiſed to them that ſeek the kingdom of God and his righteouſneſs, Mat. 6. 33. and and ſo for many particular Chriſtian duties they have promiſe of preſent beatitude, and whatſoever in any ſingular caſe may ſeem to be wanting to the felicity and proſperity of the pious man here, it is ſure to be made up abundantly in another life.

8. For bodily exerciſe † [d] profiteth little; but godlineſs is profitable unto all things, having promiſe of the life that now is, and of that which is to come.]

† is profitable for a little

9, 10. And to this purpoſe it is to be obſerved as a moſt certain and conſiderable truth, that to all truly pious perſons there is ſo great aſſurance of an eternal reward, that this our hope in God is the only ground of our ſuffering patiently any thing that falls upon us, being confident that this God, as he deſireth the eternal welfare of all, ſo hath promiſed to ſave all that ſhall believe and obey him, and ſo conſequently is the moſt aſſured Saviour of them that do ſo.

9. This is a faithful ſaying and worthy of all acceptation.

10. For therefore we both labour and * ſuffer reproach, becauſe † we truſt in the living God, who is the Saviour of all men, ſpecially of thoſe that believe.]

* or combate, for the King's MS. reads ἀγωνιζόμεθα, ſee 1 Theſſ. 2. b.
† we have hoped ἠλπίκαμεν

11. Theſe things do thou put thoſe in mind of that have received them already, confirm them that they may continue in them (and not be depraved by the Gnoſtick hereticks which teach the contrary, as in thoſe former particulars v. 3, 8. ſo in this laſt of ſuffering perſecutions for the Goſpel) and teach them to thoſe that have not as yet received them.

11. Theſe things * command and teach.]

* exhort παράγγελλε

12. And though thou art a young man in years, yet let the gravity of thy life ſupply the want of the years that are wont to be required of thy office, and let thy diſcourſe and all thy demeanour and courſe of actions be exemplary to all the Chriſtians under thy juriſdiction, both in reſpect of conſtant love and adherence to God, and of profeſſion of the faith, and of purity or chaſtity, three main particulars wherein theſe heritical Gnoſticks do endeavour to corrupt others.

12. Let no man deſpiſe thy youth, but be thou an example of the believers in word, in converſation, in charity, † in ſpirit, in faith, in purity.]

† the words ἐν πνεύματι are not found in the King's MS.

e. 13. Betwixt this and the time of my coming to thee, ſee thou be diligent in performing thy office in the ſeveral parts of it, expounding the Scriptures, confirming believers, and admoniſhing them of any fault or danger, and inſtructing the ignorant or unbelievers.

13. Till I come, give attendance to [e] reading, to exhortation, to doctrine.]

14. Make uſe of thoſe gifts which in order to thy function were given thee (according to the revelation from the Spirit concerning thee, ch. 1. 18.) at thy ordination (ſee Note on ch. 5. f.) when beſides me 2 Tim. 1. 6. ſome others alſo of the Apoſtles, one or more, laid hands on thee (ſee Note on Act. 11. b.)

14. Neglect not the gift that is in thee, which was given thee by prophecy, with the laying on of the hands of the Presbytery.]

f. 15. [f] * Meditate upon theſe things, † give thy ſelf wholly to them, that thy profiting may appear to all.

* Exerciſe thy ſelf in theſe things † ſpend thy time in them, ἐν τούτοις ἴσθι

16. Take heed unto thy ſelf, and unto thy doctrine, continue in them: for in doing this thou ſhalt both ſave thy ſelf, and them that hear thee.

Annotations on Chap. IV.

a. κεκαυστηριασμένων ✝ συνειδήσιν

V. 2. Conſcience ſeared] The meaning of this phraſe κεκαυστηριασμένων ✝ συνειδήσιν is, I conceive, not rightly apprehended, when it is thought to ſignifie an inſenſate conſcience, as if the reſemblance were here to fleſh, when it is ſeared or cauterized. Heſychius and Phavorinus have both taken notice of the phraſe, and rendred it to another ſenſe. Κεκαυστηριασμένοι (it ſhould be κεκαυστηριασμένοι) βεβασανισμένοι, μὴ ἔχοντες ✝ συνείδησιν ὑγιῆ, ſaith Heſychius, the phraſe denotes thoſe that being brought to the teſt, are found faulty, have not a good conſcience. The meaning of this muſt be collected from the office of the βασανισταὶ, explorers, or examiners, or or triers, by which he explains it, and of them ſaith he, Βασανιστὴς, ὁ διαιτητὴς, ἢ ὥσπερ τῶν ἀνδραπόδων τὴν ἀλήθειαν πυνθανόμενος, One ſet to examine ſlaves to find out the truth. And when any upon ſuch examination is found faulty, he is wont to be branded for a cheat or raſcal, and that branding or ſtigmatizing is here the thing referred to; and ſo κεκαυστηριασμένοι τὴν συνείδησιν are men of a proſtituted, branded, ſtigmatized conſcience, infamous villains. And ſo ſaith Phavorinus alſo, Κεκαυστηριασμένοι τὴν συνείδησιν, τυλίεσι, μὴ ἔχων ὑγιῆ (referring, no doubt, to this place) it ſignifies having not a ſound, or whole, conſcience.

b. Κωλυόντες γαμεῖν

V. 3. Forbidding to marry] Many hereticks there were in the antient Church, which prohibited marriage, and taught abſtinence from meats, as neceſſary, having much of their doctrine from the Pythagorean Philoſophers. Such were the Encratitæ, Montaniſts, and Marcionites. But theſe came after the Apoſtles times, and are not ſo probably ſpoken of here as thoſe which were preſent then in the Church. And ſuch, ſaith Ignatius, there were in the Apoſtles times, Ep. ad Philad. and ſuch, ſaith Irenæus, was Saturninus, l. 1. c. 22. who with Simon Magus was the father of the Gnoſticks. Of him Theodoret ſaith, that he was the firſt that among Chriſtians affirmed marriage to be the work of the Devil, and commanded to abſtain from the fleſh of beaſts. And indeed that this was generally the doctrine of the Gnoſticks appears from Clem. Alex. Strom. l. 3. where ſpeaking of them he ſaith, they do εὐφήμως δι' ἐγκρατείας ἀσεβεῖν, εἰς τε τὸν κτίσιν καὶ τὸν δημιουργὸν, διδάσκοντες μὴ δεῖν ἀφροντίστως γάμον καὶ παιδοποιΐαν, μηδὲ ἀνιέναι τῷ κόσμῳ συνεχήσοντας ἑτέρους, μηδὲ ἐπιχορηγεῖν τῷ θανάτῳ τροφὴν, Under a pretence of continence they committed all villany againſt the creation and the Creator, teaching that men ought not to receive marriage, nor get children, nor bring into the world ſuch as would be miſerable, nor furniſh death with food or nouriſhment, that is, people the world with men, whom death will conſequently feed on. And again, εἰσὶν οἱ πορνείαν ἀνύποιστον τὸν γάμον λέγουσι, καὶ ὑπὸ διαβόλου ταύτην ἀφορμὴν δοσμαλίζουσιν, There are that affirm, and teach for doctrine, all marriage to be fornication, that is, utterly unlawful, and that it is brought in and delivered by the devil, p. 446. So Iræneus, l. 1. c. 22. Nubere & generare à Satana dicunt eſſe, The Gnoſticks affirm marriage and generating to be from the devil. So the Author of the Conſtitutions l. 4. 8. τὸν γάμον ἀθετοῦσι, they contemn marriage, and ſet it at nought, ἀγαμίαν διδάσκουσι, teach not to marry at all, l. 6. 10. and for meats, τινὰ τῶν βρωμάτων βδελύσσονται, they abominate ſome kinds of meats, l. 6. 8. and c. 26. βρώματά τινα φαυλίζουσι, they affirm ſome meats to be ill, (ſee Col. 2. Note i.)

c. Λόγου Θεοῦ

V. 5. Word of God] The word of God in this place, by which meats are ſaid to be ſanctified, that is, reſcued and freed from all uncleanneſs or pollution, ſo that they may lawfully be uſed and enjoyed, is certainly that word of truth now revealed in the Goſpel, which frees the Chriſtian from thoſe obſervances. For this only can ſatisfie conſcience, that it is lawful to do ſo, and conſequently that it may be done with faith or aſſurance that they do not ſin. And as this ſecures us in general that no meat is now unlawful to a Chriſtian under the Goſpel; ſo to make it in the particular lawful to each one, the addition of prayer is the only requiſite, meaning by that the prayer of faith, coming to God with the aſſurance it is lawful, and acknowledging it to be received of him, and praying for his bleſſing upon it.

d. Πρὸς ὀλίγον

V. 8. Profiteth little] Πρὸς ὀλίγον is not to be taken in a ſenſe wherein little ſignifies nothing at all, but as when it is ſet in compariſon and oppoſition to ſome greater matter, as here in oppoſition to πρὸς πάντα for all things, as in that ſpeech of Plato's, Σωκράτη ἐπ' ὀλίγον φροντιστέον, ἀληθείας ἐπὶ πολὺ, Socrates is a little to be conſidered, but truth much.

e. Ἀνάγνωσις

V. 13. Reading] Ἀνάγνωσις Reading, is the rendring of the Hebrew מקרא ſet oppoſite to the διδασκαλίας or traditions (which the Rabbins call the oral word) and in the holy Scripture ſo called, becauſe none but that was ſuffered to be read in the Church, but this not ſimply read, but expounded alſo. See Note on 1 Cor. i. c.

f. μελέτα

V. 15. Meditate] The word μελέτα is Agoniſtical, ſaith Peter Faber, and belongs to the παγκρατιαστὰς and παγκρατεῖς, in which the young men are exerciſed in Ephebæo, and from thence 'tis applied to exerciſes in the Schools, Declamations, &c. So Heſychius, Μελετᾷ, ἀσκεῖ, ἐπιμελεῖται, γυμνάζει, μελέτη δὲ ἄσκησις, it ſignifies to exerciſe, as well as to take care or meditate; and ſo the relation which here it hath to proficiency doth infer.

CHAP. V.

Paraphraſe.

* Exhort παρακάλει

1. REbuke not an Elder, but * intreat him as a father, and the younger men as brethren;]

1. Deal not rigidly with a Biſhop of the Church, (ſee Note on Act. 11. b.) have that reſpect to his office, that whenever there is need of thy exhortation, thou do it as to a father of the Church, with all humble reſpect to him: And for any inferior officers in the Church, let thy rebukes and correptions be fraternal, and full of kindneſs and friendlineſs to them.

2. The elder women as mothers, the younger as ſiſters, with all purity.]

2. Behave thy ſelf toward women, the antienter ſort, or widows of the Church, with great reſpect, the younger with modeſty and civility, abſtaining from any behaviour toward them that may ſavour any thing of wantonneſs or turpitude.

3. Honour [a] widows that are widows indeed.]

3. Let thoſe widows which have neither huſbands nor children be reſpected and relieved (ſee Note d.) by you, that is, by the Church out of their ſtock which is intruſted to your diſpoſing.

† toward their own family τὸν ἴδιον οἶκον

4. But if any widow have children or nephews, let them learn firſt to ſhew piety † at home, and to requite their parents; for that is good and acceptable before God.]

4. But if any widow which is a Chriſtian be not perfectly deſtitute, but have children or grandchildren, let them relieve and take care for her, as a part of their family, v. 16. this being due by way of gratitude (ſee Note on c. 3. f.) to the parents which have done ſo much for them, and ſo conſequently that, which as God approves of, ſo he requires at their hands.

* But is left quite alone μεμονωμένη

5. * Now ſhe that is a widow indeed, and † deſolate, truſteth in God, and continueth in ſupplications and prayers night and day.]

5. But the widow that is truly ſo, and is fit to receive relief from the Church, is ſhe that is wholly deſtitute, hath none of her children to relieve her, no body but God to hope in or rely on, and ſo continues hoping and praying at ſet conſtant times continually, without any other cares to diſtract, or buſineſs to employ her.

* licentiouſly στρατευομένη

6. But ſhe that liveth * in pleaſure, is dead while ſhe liveth.]

6. But ſhe that abſtains from marrying, not in order to piety, but that ſhe may live the more at her own diſpoſal, ſhe is not to be counted a widow or vital member of the Church, but a kind of carcaſs or piece of noiſomneſs in it.

7. And theſe things give in charge, that they may be blameleſs.]

7. Give theſe rules, that none but blameleſs perſons may be taken in, and thoſe that have need of it.

b.

8. But if any [b] provide not for his own, and eſpecially for thoſe of his own houſe, he hath denied the faith, and is worſe than an infidel.]

8. But if any man or woman do not maintain thoſe that belong to them, eſpecially thoſe of their family, (as their parents clearly are, having a right to live in their houſe, and a propriety to be maintained by them (or that they take care for and relieve them) ſuppoſing they are able to do it) that man or woman doth quite contrary to the commands of Chriſt, and indeed performs not that duty to parents that even infidels think themſelves obliged to do.

† husband ἀνδρὸς

9. Let not a widow be taken into the number under threeſcore years old, having been the wife of one † man,]

9. Let none be liſted as a widow into the number of thoſe that are to be maintained by the Church (ſee Note on Tit. 2. a.) under the age of ſixty, nor any that have parted with their huſbands, and married again, (ſee Note on c. 3. b.)

10. * Well

10. And let them be ſuch as have by their acts of duty and charity approved themſelves to thoſe among whom they have lived in all things of which their condition hath been capable; ſuch are good careful education of their children, hoſpitality, friendlineſs and humility, and ſubmiſſion to the meaneſt offices for the relief of thoſe that ſtand in need, care for all that are in any diſtreſs, and in brief ſeeking occaſions for all works of charity, and not only embracing them when they have been offered.

10. * Well reported of for good works; if ſhe have brought up children, if ſhe have lodged ſtrangers, if ſhe have waſhed the Saints feet, if ſhe have relieved the afflicted, if ſhe have diligently followed every good work.] * Which hath had teſtimony of her good works, ἐν ἔργοις καλοῖς μαρτυρούμενη

c. 11. But receive not into the Church-offices thoſe widows that are under that age, for there will be danger of ſuch, that they will be weary of their employment in the Church, of living in that pious ſtrict condition, ver. 6. and then they will relieve themſelves by marrying;

11. But the younger widows refuſe, for when they * have begun to [c] wax wanton againſt Chriſt they will marry;] * grow weary of

12. Which is a great and a puniſhable crime in them, viz. that of violating their promiſe made unto the Church (a kind of conjugal tie) that they would attend it alone, and not forſake it, which when they do, and return again to the world, what is it but a giving the Church a bill of divorce, and marrying another husband?

12. Having condemnation, becauſe they have † caſt off their firſt faith:] † violated ἠθέτησε

13. And ſuch young widows being unfit for ſuch a receſs and vacancy, have nothing to do with their time, but ſpend it in going about from houſe to houſe, in asking queſtions; and not only ſo, but fall into tatling and looſe diſcourſe, into cenſuring and medling with other folks matters, entertaining themſelves and others with unſeemly diſcourſe, either calumniating or talking wantonly.

13. And withal * they learn to be idle, wandring about from houſe to houſe; and not only idle, but tatlers alſo and buſie-bodies, ſpeaking things which they ought not.] * being idle they learn to go about to houſes, and being not only idle, but tatlers alſo and buſie-bodies, to ſpeak things that are not fit μανθάνουσι περιερχόμεναι τὰς οἰκίας, οὐ μόνον δὲ ἀργαὶ ἀλλὰ καὶ — λαλοῦσαι τὰ μὴ δέοντα.

14. My direction therefore is, that the younger women, widows or others, that have not attained to this gravity of mind and command over themſelves, do in that caſe betake themſelves to a married life, and ſerve God in that, bearing and bringing up children (ſee Note on c. 2. d.) guiding domeſtick affairs, that ſo they may not do any thing which may give advantage to thoſe that are willing to take it, to accuſe or find fault, or bring reproach upon ſuch looſe profeſſors, and the Church for their ſakes.

14. I will therefore that the younger women marry, bear children, guide the houſe, give no occaſion to the adverſary to ſpeak reproachfully.]

15. For ſome ſuch you know there are which have forſaken the Chriſtian path, and betaken themſelves to the Gnoſticks, bitter enemies to Chriſtians, and theſe would be glad to have ſomewhat to ſay againſt you.

15. For ſome are already turned aſide after Satan.]

16. If any Chriſtian hath any helpleſs widow of his family, (ſee v. 8.) let him undertake the care and charge of them, and not caſt them upon the Church to provide for them, leſt if they do, there be not in the ſtock of the Church ſufficient to provide for all that are truly helpleſs.

16. If any man or woman that believeth have widows, let them relieve them, and let not the Church be charged; that it may relieve them that are widows indeed.]

d. 17. Let the Biſhops that have diſcharged that function well, receive for their reward twice as much as others have, eſpecially thoſe that preach the Goſpel to whom it was news, and alſo continue to inſtruct congregations of Chriſtians in ſetled Churches, ſee Act. 11. b.

17. Let the Elders that rule well be † counted worthy of [d] double honour, eſpecially they who * labour in the word and doctrine.] † be allowed, enjoy, be rewarded with ἀξιούσθω * labour hard κοπιῶντες

18. For this is agreeable to that ſignificative ceremony of the Law, which allows the beaſt that is uſed to go over the corn, and tread out the grain out of the ſtraw, (after the manner that threſhing doth,) to feed all the time that he doth the work, and ſo to have a certain reward in a liberal manner for all his labour.

18. For the Scripture ſaith, Thou ſhalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn; and, The labourer is worthy of his reward.]

e. 19. Admit not any complaint againſt a Biſhop of any Church under thy Metropolis (ſee Act. 11. b.) unleſs it be teſtified by two or three at leaſt.

19. [e] Againſt an Elder receive not an accuſation, but † before two or three witneſſes.] † upon ἐπὶ

20. All others that have committed any ſcandalous offence, thou art to admoniſh firſt, and rebuke in the preſence of the community of the people, and if they reform not, inflict the cenſures of the Church upon them, that (beſide other advantages to the offenders themſelves, the reforming them by that means) others that ſee and hear this may be awed hereby, and kept from falling into the like.

20. Them that ſin, rebuke before all, that others alſo may fear.]

21. And I conjure thee by all that is holy, that with all impartiality and uprightneſs thou proceed in Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures without favour.

21. I charge thee before God, and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and the elect Angels, that thou obſerve theſe things * without preferring one before another, doing nothing † by partiality.] * without prejudging ἄνευ προκείματος † according to inclination, κατὰ πρόσκλισιν

f. g. 22. And when thou haſt inflicted the Cenſures on any, make not too much haſte to abſolve them again, before they have by good works approved the ſincerity of their reformation. And, by the way, take ſpecial care, that by knowing other mens enormous acts, thou be not enticed or inveigled, (1 Cor. 15. 13.) or brought to partake with them, and commit the ſame. Be ſure that thou keep thy ſelf unpolluted from thoſe ſins that are now ſo rife among you.

22. [f] Lay hands ſuddenly no man, neither be partaker of other mens ſins. [g] Keep thy ſelf pure.]

23. (Yet ſay not I this, to prohibit thee drinking wine phyſically and moderately in reſpect of thy ſicklineſs, to which drinking of water is unwholſom; This may ſafely be done by thee, without incurring that danger of pollution, v. 22.)

23. Drink no longer water, but uſe a little wine for thy ſtomachs ſake, and thine often infirmities.]

h. 24. Some mens ſins are diſcernible ſo as to bring them under the cenſures of the Church, by way of precedent demerit, and then are no more diſcernible in them, (and theſe may be the ſooner abſolved) but in ſome they follow after that cenſure alſo, that is, are not reformed upon cenſure, but continued in by repeated acts viſibly and diſcernibly, even when they are under the cenſures of the Church, (in which caſe there muſt be no abſolution.)

24. [h] Some mens ſins are open beforehand, * going before to judgment; † and ſome men they follow after.] * leading them to cenſure, προάγουσαι εἰς κρίσιν † but in or to ſome alſo they follow, τισὶ δὲ καὶ ἐπακολουθοῦσι

25. So in like manner men's good works, almsdeeds, &c. in caſe they do reform upon cenſure, are or muſt be manifeſt before abſolution; and when they are not ſo (but on the contrary, their deeds continue evil, or their good works but very few) they cannot be ſo concealed but they will be diſcernible, and by them judgment will be made, who is to be abſolved, who not.

25. Likewiſe alſo the * good works of ſome are manifeſt beforehand, and they that are otherwiſe cannot be hid.] * good works are conſpicuous, τὰ καλὰ ἔργα προάδηλα ἐστί

Annotations on Chap. V.

a. χήρας

V. 3. Widows] There were two ſorts of χῆραι or lone perſons, which we render widows, in the antient Church. Firſt, thoſe that were taken in to ſerve and officiate there as diaconiſſæ (and thoſe were eſpecially, though not only, choſen of virgins, ἀειπαρθένοι that always continued ſuch, as by a place of Ignatius may be collected;) theſe were a kind of imitation of thoſe which in Chriſt's and the Apoſtles times voluntarily had devoted themſelves to the ſervice of God, and to miniſtring to, that is, providing for, the neceſſities of Chriſt and the Apoſtles and Saints, out of their own ſubſtance. ἐξ ὑπαρχόντων αὐταῖς, Luk. 8. 3. Such was Joanna a married woman, and Suſanna and others there. Such was Phœbe, ἀδελφὴν ἡμῶν, ἥτις διάκονον τῆς ἐκκλησίας τῆς ἐν Κεγχρεαῖς Rom. 16. 1. our ſiſter, that is, a believer, and ſhe a Deaconeſs of the Church in Cenchrea, which is moſt probably the γυνὴ ἀδελφὴν 1 Cor. 9. 5. the Chriſtian woman that went along with Paul and Barnabas. For before there was any ſtock in the hands of the Church to make proviſion for either the Apoſtles or any other, there could no other courſe be taken but this, to have them ſupplied by ſuch perſons which did ἐκ τῶν ὑπαρχόντων αὐταῖς out of their own poſſeſſions γυνὴ ἀδελφὴ ſeſſions liberally impart to them. But when afterward the faithful had brought their poſſeſſions, and laid them at the Apoſtles feet, and when inſtead of that greater liberality, yet by the help of the offertory at the Sacrament, wealth came into the hands of the Church, and thereby, ſaith Juſtin Martyr, Apol. 2. πρεσβὺς πᾶσιν ἐν χείᾳ ὅσοι ἐνδεμὼν ἐγένετο, the Prefect became the guardian to provide for all that were in want) then this office was inſtituted in the Church, firſt of men-deacons Act. 6. and after of women alſo, which were more uſeful for œconomical ſervices, and theſe were called πρεσβύτιδες Tit. 2. 3. elder women, and afterward Diaconiſſæ, Deaconeſſes, and might be admitted into the Church at fourty years old. See Can. 5. of the Council of Chalcedon. The ſecond ſort of widows were thoſe who being childleſs and helpleſs were to be fed and maintained by the Church, and theſe are particularly ſpoken of in this place, and thoſe many of them formerly married, and therefore were not to be received in till ſixty years old, v. 9. for ſo Zonaras on the Council of Chalcedon gives the reaſon, becauſe, ſaith he, the widow which hath had an husband is not, at the ſame age, ſo likely to continue unmarried, as ſhe that hath lived a virgin to that age, κὴ γλσσαμβύη, &c. μᾶλλον ἂν ἔλη περὶ τὸ πάθος ἐπικλινής. And in caſe ſhe marry, that ſhe is to be removed out of this liſt ſeems clear; both firſt, becauſe in that caſe the husband muſt provide for her, and ſecondly by what is here ſaid ver. 11. of the care in not admitting ſuch as are young and likely to marry. This relief which is here ſpoken of for widows being deſigned on purpoſe to give them the more leiſure and vacancy for acts and exerciſes of piety, v. 5. waiting on God, continuing in prayer and ſupplication night and day, which is not ſuppoſable of married women, which have ſo many other affairs belonging to them. v. 14. to bring forth and bring up children, to manage the houſhold and the like.

b. Προνοεῖν

V. 8. Provide] Προνοεῖν to provide here doth not ſignifie laying up by way of careful, thoughtful providence before hand, but only taking care of for the preſent, as we are able, relieving, maintaining, giving to them that want. So ſaith Heſychius, Προνοεῖ, ἐπιμελεῖ), Πρόνοια, ἐπιμέλεια, φροντὶς, to take care for. So children that are expoſed by their parents are ἀπρονόητοι in Harmenopulus, unprovided, deſtitute. So when Alexander Aphrodiſæus ſaith, πᾶν τὸ προνοεῖν τινος ἀγαθόν τι τῷ προνομβύῳ ἀπεργάζεται, ὅπερ. λυσ. βιβλ. ἀ. ζητ. ιδ'. he is ſaid to provide for any who allows him any good thing. And Ammonius in his Scholia on the ε' φωναὶ, having reſolved that one of God's acts is προνοητικὴ τ' καλαδεεσίων providing for thoſe that want, applies that of the Poet to it, Θεοὶ δώσῆρες, &c. God's giving them what they want, making his providence and giving to be all one, and ſo προνοεῖν here is interpreted by ἐπαρκεῖν, v. 16. which is the ſon's duty to the aged helpleſs parent, and he that doth it not was infamous among heathens; and accordingly Theophraſtus in his Characters among the vileſt actions, whoring, gaming, ſtealing, &c. placeth * μητέρα μὴ τρέφειν, neglecting to feed the mother, and elſewhere, next after frequent worſhiping of God, he placeth γονεῖς γηροβοσκῶν καλῶς, duly feeding the aged parents: and therefore John being by Chriſt commanded to be a ſon to Mary, preſently takes her home to his houſe, Joh. 19. 27. As among the Samians the mothers of thoſe which were ſlain in the wars were given to the richer citizens to be maintained by them; and the form of ſpeech was like Chriſt's to John, Σοὶ ταύτην δίδωμι * μητέρα I give thee this mother. Thus in Hierocles ſpeaking of marriage and children, θρεπτάς τε γηροβοσκὰς — γεννῶμεν, ſaith he, we beget helpers and feeders of our age: and as he adds, when the fathers dye, their children muſt in their ſtead perform this office to the Grandfather; ſo Ariſtoxenus in his Pythagorean Sentences, lib. 4. the children muſt think all they have to be their parents, and conſequently muſt provide for them to the utmoſt of their power. See Stobæus, Ser. 77.

* Stob. p. 448.

c. Καλαςρωνιάζειν

V. 11. Wax wanton] Καλαςρωνιάζειν, as (without the prepoſition) ςρωνιάζειν, is ὑβρίζειν, βαρέως, φέρειν, and ſo ςρωνᾶν, τρυφᾶν in Phrynichus, and ἀταξιᾶν in Phavorinus, to grow ſtout or proud or diſorderly, not willing to bear ſo much ſtrictneſs, and ſo to put ones ſelf out of the liſt or number of the Votaries; and here the widows that were ἐν καταλόγῳ, as after-times called it, in the number of thoſe that were to be maintained by the Church, and there to wait on the ſervice of the Church, when they begin to be weary of that kind of life, then they are ſaid καλαςρωνιάζειν τῷ Χριςῷ, or ςρωνιάζειν κατὰ τῷ Χριςῷ, to grow inſolent and weary of Chriſt, that is, his ſervice in the Church. Thus ςρῶθος Rev. 18. 3. ſignifies irregular, diſorderly behaviour, and ςρωνιάζειν v. 7, 9. to live diſorderly, enormouſly. ςρῶθος

d. Διπλῆ τιμὴ

V. 17. Double honour] The διπλῆ τιμὴ double honour refers to the elder brother's portion, פי שנים double portion, Deut. 21. 17. and this going along with power of ruling the family, Gen. 4. 7. (after the death of the father) is fitly accommodated to the office of Biſhop in the Church; and ſo the electing of Barnabas and Paul to the Apoſtleſhip, Act. 13. 2. is expreſſed by ἀφορίσατε ſeparate, the word uſed about the firſt-born Exod. 13. 2. and ſo in Clem. Conſtit. l. 11. 28. διπλῆ αὐτοῖς ἀφορίζεσθω μοῖρα, Let a double portion be ſeparated for them. Thus the double portion of the ſpirit of Elias reſting on Eliſeus, was the making him his ſucceſſour in the office of Prophet, as the father above the ordinary ſons of the Prophets, to have rule over them. And ſo this verſe is the ſetting down the reaſonableneſs, that the Biſhop that diſchargeth his duty or prefecture well, ſhould be looked upon in all reſpects as one that hath the primogeniture of maintainance (to which v. 18. refers) as well as dignity, eſpecially if his pains be extraordinary, as it muſt be, if he both preach the Goſpel where it was not before heard, (which is called λόγος the word, and εὐαγγελίζειν to preach, Rom. 15. 20. and κηρύσσειν to preach) and take pains in farther inſtructing the believers in the Churches, which is διδασκαλία, teaching or doctrine. For the word τιμὴ, that that ſignifies wages, reward of ſervice, appears (among many others) by the third verſe of this chapter, Honour widows, that is, relieve, maintain them. So Joh. 12. 26. where ſpeaking of thoſe that attend on and miniſter to Chriſt, he ſaith, τιμήσει αὐτὸν ὁ Πατὴρ, the father ſhall honour, that is, reward him, or pay him his wages; but eſpecially Mat. 15. where the command of Gods, of honouring the parents, ver. 6. is expreſs'd v. 5. by giving them that by which they may be profited, that is, maintainance, &c. ſee Col 2. Note i. So in Nicolaus Damaſcenus of the Thyni, Τῶν ξένων πρὸς μὲ ἐκτοσίως ἐληθότας σφόδρα τιμῶσι, They honour, that is entertain, receive, ſtrangers exceedingly. So Act. 28. 10. they of the Iſland honoured Paul with many honours, giving him proviſion for his journey. As for the ἀξιόω that is joined to it, although that comes from ἄξιος worthy, yet it ſignifies, without any reference to that, ſimply to enjoy, to receive, to have, as might appear by many evidences among authors. One for all, that of Juſtin Martyr, or the author περὶ τ ἁγ. κ ὁμοσ. τριάδ. where ſpeaking of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, he ſaith of them, τ αὐτῆς κ μιᾶς δεότητος ἠξίωνται), (not they have been counted worthy, but) they have had (have been endued with) one and the ſame divinity. διπλῆ τιμὴ ἀφορίσατε ἀξιόω

e. Κατηγορίαν παραδέχεσθαι

V. 19. Againſt an Elder receive not an accuſation] What is the meaning of κατηγορίαν παραδέχεσθαι to receive an accuſation here, muſt be explained by the judicial proceedings among the Jews, where before the giving of the ſentence there were three parts, 1. קובא ריב the admiſſion of the cauſe, or ſuit, when the Judge doth not reject the complaint or accuſer, and that is here κατηγορίαν παραδέχεσθαι, to admit an accuſation, and is the meaning of Iſa. 1. 23. neither doth the cauſe of the widow come unto them, the character of an unjuſt judge, that he admits not the widows complaint againſt the oppreſſor. After the complaint is admitted, then 2dly. there is סנונדרין ריב the confirmation of the ſuit or complaint, when the accuſer confirms his ſuggeſtion by oath; for before that oath, one ſaying one thing, and the other the contrary, (which is called ἀντιλογία contradiction, Heb. 6. 16. and in * Lucian δικάζειν and ἀντιλέγειν, as parts of judicial proceedings) the Judge is uninclined to either ſide, but then comes in the oath, and is πέρας ἀντιλογίας the end of that affirming and denying (in the Author of that Epiſtle) takes away the æquilibrium that the Judge was in before, and by it he is now confirmed to the believing the one part againſt the other, whereupon the oath is ſaid to be πρὸς βεβαίωσιν for confirmation in that place, κατηγορίαν παραδέχεσθαι ἀντιλογίας * τυραννικ. p. 397. πέρας ἀντιλογίας πρὸς βεβαίωσιν place, Heb. 6. 16. as in the Roman Law Ὅρκος ἐπιφερόμενος ἀμφισβήτησιν τέμνει, ſaith Pſellus in Συνοψ. νομ. v. 12, 13. the oath coming in, parts the controverſie, or doubt, and in Leg. Bajuvar. c. 12. tit. 15. 2. In his verò cauſis ſacramenta præſtentur, in quibus nullam probationem diſcuſſio judicantis invenerit (See Bignon. not. in Marculfi Form. l. 1. c. 38.) then is the uſe of oaths when the diſcuſſion of the plea by the judge yields him no ſatisfactory proof. The third part is חקר ריב Job. 29. 16. the ſearching out of the cauſe by arguments afterwards produced (cauſæ κεφαλαιώδεις) and conſidered of by the Judge. The firſt of theſe only it is that belongs to this place, the admiſſion of the complaint, or accuſation which againſt a πρεσβύτερος or governor of the Church is not allowed under two or three witneſſes, in reſpect of the gravity of his perſon and weight of his office or calling, who muſt not be defamed (as the being brought into the court is a kind of defamation) if there be not great cauſe for it.

f. χεῖρας ἐπιτίθεναι

V. 22. Lay hands] That χεῖρας ἐπιτίθεναι laying on hands is a ceremony of prayer or benediction, is ordinarily known in the Old Teſtament, uſed firſt by the father to the children, in beſtowing the bleſſing upon them, and with that ſucceſſion to ſome part of the eſtate. So when Jacob bleſſed the children of Joſeph, Gen. 48. 14. he laid his hands upon their heads, v. 15. And from thence it was among them accommodated to the communicating of power to others as aſſiſtants, or deriving it to them as ſucceſſors. So when Moſes aſſumed the ſeventy to aſſiſt him, Num. 11. 17. this, ſaith Maimonides, was done by his laying hands upon them, Sanhedr. c. 4. And when he left the world, and conſtituted Joſhua his ſucceſſor, God appointed him to take Joſhua, and lay his hands upon him, Num. 27. 18. So Deut. 34. 9. Joſhua was full of the ſpirit of wiſdom, that is, was his ſucceſſor in the Government, for Moſes had laid his hands upon him. From theſe three uſes of the ceremony, in Prayer, in paternal Benediction, in creating of Officers, three ſorts of things there are in the New Teſtament to which it is principally accommodated. In Prayer it is uſed either in curing diſeaſes, or pardoning ſins. Diſeaſes, the corporal bands, Luk. 13. 16. were cured by impoſition of hands, Act. 19. 17. and 28. 8. and ſo it was foretold Mar. 16. 18. they ſhall lay their hands on the ſick, and they ſhall recover: And ſo Sins, the ſpiritual bands, were done away, or pardoned, by the ſame ceremony, laying on of hands, uſed in the abſolution of penitents. Thus Heb. 6. 2. as the Baptiſms are thoſe uſed among the Jews and Chriſtians for the admiſſion of Proſelytes, ſo the impoſition of hands doth probably denote the reſtoring of penitents that were lapſed after Baptiſm, (ſee Note on Heb. 6. b.) From that of paternal Benediction is that of laying on hands in bleſſing of infants, Mar. 10. 16. by that means ſignifying them to be fit to be received into the Church by Baptiſm, as thoſe that have title to this kingdom of heaven, the Church here, and, through the ſame mercy of God in Chriſt, heaven hereafter. This benediction and impoſition of hands I ſuppoſe it is, that Clemens Alexandrinus refers to Pædag. l. 3. c. 11. in theſe words, Τίνι δὲ ὁ πρεσβύτερος ἐπιτίθησι χεῖρας; τίνα δ' εὐλογήσει; On whom doth the Presbyter lay hands? whom ſhall he bleſs? meaning moſt probably in that place the ſolemnity with which the Catechiſt diſmiſſed thoſe that were catechized, preparatory to their Baptiſm: and ſo ſaith Euſebius of Conſtantine, de vita Conſtant. l. 4. that to prepare for his Baptiſm, ἐξομολογεῖται τὰ διὰ χειροθεσίας εὐχῶν ἠξίωτο, he made profeſſion, (that is, confeſs'd his ſins, and profeſs'd the faith) and then was vouchſafed thoſe prayers that are given by impoſition of hands: to which purpoſe alſo the Author of the Conſtitutions called Apoſtolical, l. 7. c. 39. where having ſet down the ſeverals in which the Catechumenus muſt be inſtructed, he adds, but let him that lays on hands adore God, &c. Secondly, that of confirming thoſe of full age that had formerly been baptized. Such that of the Epheſian diſciples ſeems to be, Act. 19. who being baptized, v. 5. Paul laid his hands on them, v. 6. To which in thoſe times many extraordinary gifts were conſequent, ſpeaking with tongues, &c. as had formerly fallen out Act. 10. 44. Laſtly, from that in creating ſucceſſors, or aſſiſtants in power, came the uſe of impoſition of hands in Ordination, whether of Biſhops or Deacons, Act. 6. 6. and 8. 17. and 13. 3. 1 Tim. 4. 15. 2 Tim. 1. 6. To this laſt it is that this exhortation of Paul to Timothy is by many thought to refer, that he ſhould be careful to have thoſe whom he received into Orders, ſufficiently approved to him. But the Context ſeems rather to refer it to that which was uſed in Abſolution, that he ſhould not make too much haſt in receiving thoſe that were under Cenſures, to Abſolution; for that was the thing which would moſt probably make him partaker, or guilty of, their ſins, which the Cenſures were deſigned to reform in them, but would not do ſo, if before they had approved their repentance and reformation, they were received to the peace of the Church again. And thus it connects with the words foregoing v. 20. Thoſe that offend rebuke before all, that the reſt may have fear, and v. 21. I charge thee that thou obſerve theſe things without prejudging, doing nothing by favour or inclination, or partiality, whereon it follows, Lay hands ſuddainly on no man; and to that alſo belong the following rules, ver. 24, 25. (ſee Note h.) Thus in Victor about the Vandalick perſecution, l. 2. Qui nobis pœnitentiæ manus collaturi ſunt, & reconciliationis indulgentiam, obſtrictos peccatorum vinculis ſoluturi, they that lay their hands of penance upon us, and confer the indulgence of reconciliation, and looſe us from the bands of ſin; where it is clearly uſed in this ſenſe. And in Can. 5. of the Council of Carthage, diſt. 50. Presbyteris & Diaconis, ſi quando de gravi aliqua culpa convicti miniſterio remoti fuiſſent, manus non imponerentur ut pœnitentibus, Prieſts and Deacons which had been convict of any grand fault, and ſo removed from their miniſtery, ſhould not have hands laid on them as penitents. And in the third Council of Carthage (that in S. Auguſtin's time) Can. 32. Cujuſcunque autem pœnitentis publicum & vulgatiſſimum crimen eſt, quod univerſa Eccleſia noverit, ante Abſidem manus ei imponatur, When the penitent's ſin is known to the whole Church, the Biſhop is to lay his hands on him before the Abſis, that is, the upper part of the Choir, where the Altar is. And Concil. Agath. Diſt. 5. c. 63. Pœnitentes tempore quo pœnitentiam petant, impoſitionem manuum & cilicium ſuper caput, ſicut ubique conſtitutum eſt, conſequantur, Let the penitents receive impoſition of hands, and ſackcloth upon their heads, as it is every where appointed. And ſo Hincmarus concerning the divorce of Thietberga, ſacri Canones jubent ut pœnitentes tempore quo pœnitentiam petunt, impoſiturum manuum, & cilicium ſuper capita à Sacerdote, ſicut ubique vulgatum eſt, ante Abſidem accipiant, The holy Canons command that the penitents when they demand repentance, that is, admiſſion to penance and abſolution, ſhall receive from the Biſhop impoſition of hands, and ſackcloth upon their heads, as it is every where known, before the Abſis, where the Altar ſtands. So in Fulgentius Ep. 1. de conjug. Acceptâ manûs impoſitione, pœnitentiam, ſecundùm modum quem habet Chriſtiana religio, peregit. He performed penance by impoſition of hands, according to the manner obſerved in the Chriſtian religion, So in Avitus Alcimus Ep. 24. Manûs impoſitionem adhibite converſo ab hæreſi, Uſe impoſition of hands to him that is converted from hereſie. And in the Author contra Prædeſtin. l. 3. Non auſi ſunt Eccleſiarum Pontifices manum imponere pœnitenti, niſi confeſſionem voluntariam oſtendenti, The Biſhops of the Churches durſt not lay hands on the penitent, but on his ſhewing his voluntary confeſſion. And in the Chronicle of Jo. Gerundenſis, ſpeaking of the Arrians Synod of Toledo, one of the Canons is, De Romana religione ad noſtram Catholicam fidem venientes non debere baptizari, ſed tantummodo per manûs impoſitionem, & Communionis perceptionem ablui, They that come from the Roman religion to our Catholick faith ought not to be baptized, but only purged by impoſition of hands and receiving the Communion. And this is the notion which S. Cyprian had of this place, and Pacianus in paræneſi ad pœnit. And though Theophylact ſeem to underſtand it of Ordination, yet what he adds in explication of the following words, neither partake of other mens ſins, τῶν μελλόντων, &c. Thou ſhalt be guilty both of his future ſins and even of his paſt, becauſe thou haſt neglected them, made darkneſs light, and not diſmiſſed him to the ſtate of mourning and compunction, ſeems to belong to abſolution.

Ib. Keep

g. σεαυτὸν ἁγνὸν τήρει

Ib. Keep thy ſelf pure] What is the meaning of σεαυτὸν ἁγνὸν τήρει, keep thy ſelf pure, will appear by the antient Gloſſary, Ἁγνὸς caſtus, it ſignifies that kind of purity which conſiſts in perfect chaſtity, free from all ſhew of impurity. So 2 Cor. 11. 2. ἁγνὴ παρθένον a pure chaſt virgin. So Tit. 2. 5. the widows or female officers of the Church muſt be ἁγναὶ pure or chaſt, and Timothy muſt behave himſelf toward the younger women ἐν πάσῃ ἁγνείᾳ in all purity or chaſtity, c. 5. 2. and ſo the Hebrew טהור anſwerable to ἁγνὸς ſignifies. So that this precept and the other following of drink a little wine, though they come in here as in a parentheſis (the 24. and 25. being to be connected in ſenſe to the matter of Abſolution and Cenſures, ſee Note h.) yet they are added ſeaſonably and pertinently to the μηδὲ κοινώνει immediately precedent, after this manner, Thou art not to be over-favourable to offenders, to abſolve them too eaſily or ſpeedily. But above all thou muſt be ſure not to join with them in their courſe. And becauſe there be two chief heads of that falſe doctrine which is moſt frequent among you, (the hereſie of the Gnoſticks, from which eſpecially flow the faults to which the cenſures are moſt due) viz. forbidding of marriage (to which is conſequent all impure abominable living) and abſtinence from wine and meats——c. 4. 3. I therefore now warn thee concerning theſe two. In the former reſpect, that abſtaining ſpontaneouſly from marriage, not as from a thing unlawful, but only denying thy ſelf that liberty which thou mayſt lawfully uſe, thou be ſure to preſerve perfect chaſtity, and not fall into the leaſt degree of Gnoſticiſm, for that is κοινωνεῖν ἀμαρτίαις ἀλλοτρίαις, to commit thoſe ſins which thou art to cenſure in others. That is the meaning of κοινωνεῖν and συγκοινωνεῖν, to be guilty thy ſelf, not only to be blameable for thy indulgence to others, and ſo for their commiſſion. So Eph. 5. 11. Μὴ συγκοινωνεῖτε have no fellowſhip with the unfruitful works of darkneſs that is, do not permit your ſelves to be drawn into their dark villanous myſteries, to commit thoſe heathen ſins which there are committed, but rather diſcover them, and bring them to light. And ſo Rev. 18. 4. Go out of her, my people, that ye may not συγκοινωνεῖν communicate with, or partake of, her ſins, that is, be corrupted with, and drawn into the like commiſſions. And ſo here, 'twill be a caution to Timothy againſt the Gnoſtick practices (as elſewhere to avoid youthful luſts 2 Tim. 2. 22.) not to fall into thoſe guilts which he ought to deteſt and puniſh, but to keep himſelf perfectly pure from their practices. As for the ſecond thing, their abſtinences from meat and wine, this temper is to be obſerved; It is no doubt lawful for thoſe that can do it without any hurt to their bodies, to abſtain from meats which are moſt pleaſurable, and ſo from wine; and for thee to do thus, as long as thy health well permits, is both lawful and commendable (and the Gnoſticks hereſie conſiſts in this, that they impoſe ſuch abſtinences on all as neceſſary, and ſo διὰ βδελυρίαν, not διὰ ἄσκησιν, as the Canons Apoſtolical ſtyle it, out of a deteſtation, and an opinion of the unlawfulneſs of meat, not for ſelf-denial, or auſterity:) but theſe creatures of God being created for the benefit and refreſhment of man, theſe thou mayſt very ſafely make uſe of, and thy health of body being infirm, and ſubject to frequent diſeaſes, there is no reaſon thou ſhouldſt never drink any wine, the continual uſe of water may be hurtful to ſuch an habit of body as thine, and moderate taking of wine may be more proper, and then it is beſt to remit of that auſterity, which might otherwiſe be laudably continued, and tend to the preſerving of virginal chaſtity, but is not to be impoſed on thoſe whoſe health will not bear it. To this interpretation of the words agrees the diſcourſe of Cyril of Jeruſalem, Catech. 4. Νηςεύοντες οὖν τε καὶ κρεῶν ἀπεχόμεθα (ſo the Barocian MS. reads inſtead of νηςεύομεν ἀπεχόμενοι) οὐχ ὡς βδελύγμαλα μισοῦντες, ἀλλὰ διὰ μισθὸν προσδοκῶντες——μὴ τοίνυν καταφρόνει τῆς ἐγκρατείας, καὶ διὰ τῆς τῶν σωμάτων ἀσθενείαν μεταλαμβανόντων, μηδὲ ἔλεγχε (ſo the Barocian, not ψέγε) τὸν ὀλίγῳ οἴνῳ χρωμένους διὰ τὴν στόμαχον καὶ τὰς πυκνὰς ἀσθενείας, (the Barocian adds καὶ μήτε αὐτὸν ὡς ἀμύητον καταγίνῃς) μήτε ὡς ἀλλόκοτα μίσει τὰ κρέα· οἶδε γάρ τινας τοιούτους ὁ Ἀπόστολος, λέγων, κωλυόντων γαμεῖν, ἀπέχεσθαι βρωμάτων, &c. When we faſt, we abſtain from wine and fleſh, not hating them as unlawful, but expecting a reward:——deſpiſe not therefore thoſe that eat in reſpect of the weakneſs of their body, nor find fault with thoſe that uſe a little wine for their ſtomach, and frequent infirmities, nor condemn them as ſinners, neither hate fleſh, as unlawful; for the Apoſtle knew ſome ſuch when he ſpeaks of forbidding to marry, and abſtaining from meats. Which being ſaid on this occaſion incidentally, he returns again to the former matter, v. 24. But if both theſe, neither partake, &c. and keep thy ſelf pure, be interpreted to be an effect or conſequent of his laying on hands ſuddainly, then there is no ſuch occaſion of introducing that parentheſis, and therefore ſure that is not the meaning of it.

* περὶ βρωμ. p. 93.

h. Τινῶν ἁμαρτίαι πρόδηλοι

V. 24. Some mens ſins are open before——] That theſe two laſt verſes of this chapter belong to the buſineſs of Church-Cenſures and Abſolution, may appear by the Context: v. 20. there is direction for the publick rebuking of offenders, whether by way of correption, or inflicting the Cenſures, and v. 21. there is a conjuration againſt prejudging on one ſide, and partiality or favour on the other, and v. 22. deliberation, and delay, and obſervation of the penitents behaviour is required, before he be abſolved, Lay hands ſuddainly on no man, that is, before the ſincerity of his reformation be approved to thee, according as in the primitive Canons, they muſt exerciſe themſelves for ſome ſpace in good works, before they are capable of Abſolution; and then ſome words coming between, as proper to Biſhop Timothy's youth, that he be ſure that he fall not himſelf into thoſe ſins which he ſees committed by others, and ſo his office of juriſdiction become a ſnare to him, (and on occaſion of that, the 23d. verſe being added by way of parentheſis) it follows very pertinently to that former matter, Some mens ſins are πρόδηλοι open beforehand, &c. that is, by not abſolving offenders over haſtily, by obſerving and waiting a while, thou wilt be more able to paſs a right judgment. For the behaviour of ſome men under the cenſures is ſo ill, that they deſerve to be farther cenſured rather than abſolved, and in that reſpect it is not good to be too haſty in abſolving. And the good works of ſome men do approve and demonſtrate the ſincerity of their repentance, which yet they cannot do, if they be abſolved preſently before they have ſo approved themſelves. And whether one way or other, mens works will manifeſt what they are; and though for a time they may be concealed, yet if the Biſhop make not overmuch haſt to abſolve, they will diſcover themſelves either by their good works to be ſincere, or by their ill to be unſincere. And ſo ſtill this is the rendring of a reaſon for the point in hand, that the Biſhop make not overmuch haſt to Abſolution.

CHAP. VI.

Paraphraſe.

* as are ſervants under yokes ὅσοι εἰσὶν ὑπὸ ζυγὸν δοῦλοι

1. LET as many * ſervants as are under the yoke count their own Maſters worthy of all honour, that the name of God and † his doctrine be not blaſphemed.]

1. Thoſe Chriſtians that are bond-men to heathens muſt perform all ſervice and obedience to them, which belongs to them by the law of ſervants among the heathens, that the profeſſion of Chriſtianity and the doctrine of the Goſpel be not looked upon by the heathens as that which makes men worſe livers than they were, neglecting their moral duties for being Chriſtians.

† the doctrine be not evil ſpoken of ἡ διδασκαλία βλασφημῆται

* the rather ſerve them μᾶλλον δουλευέτωσαν † becauſe they who help to do good are faithful and beloved, ὅτι πιστοί εἰσι καὶ ἀγαπητοὶ οἱ τῆς εὐεργεσίας ἀντιλαμβανόμενοι

2. And they that have believing maſters, [a] let them not deſpiſe them, becauſe they are brethren; but * rather do them ſervice, † becauſe they are faithful and beloved, [b] partakers of the [c] benefit. Theſe things teach and exhort.]

2. And thoſe Chriſtians that have Chriſtian maſters muſt not withdraw any of that obedience which is due to them, upon this plea, that they are Chriſtians. and ſo their equals or brethren; but think themſelves the more obliged to ſerve them, becauſe the faith and love that conſtitutes men Chriſtians, conſiſts in helping to do good, and that is all wherein

a. b. c.

wherein their ſervice conſiſts, and conſequently their performing due ſervice to them is a very Chriſtian thing, and that which Chriſtianity doth not leſs, but more oblige them to. Theſe are things of ſuch a nature, ſo much required by Chriſtian religion, and the contrary at this time ſo taught by the Gnoſtick hereticks, that it is neceſſary for thee to give theſe admonitions to all, to tell them what is their duty, and exhort them carefully to practiſe it.

3. But the Gnoſticks v. 20. that teach libertiniſm inſtead of the doctrine of Chriſt and the Goſpel (ſee Note on c. 3. f.) are to be known by this character,

3. If any man teach otherwiſe, and conſent not to wholſom words, even the words of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and to the doctrine which is according to godlineſs,]

4. They are ſwell'd with an opinion of knowledge, (whence they take their title, Gnoſticks) whereas indeed they know nothing, and ſtudy nothing but diſputings and verbal controverſies, which have no matter of ſubſtance in them, Col. 2. 8. and this is a kind of diſeaſe or diſtemper in them, and all that comes from it is uncharitableneſs, ſpeaking evil of their ſuperiors, Jude 8. and maintaining impious opinions contrary to moral life, as that of libertiniſm of all ſorts,

4. He is * proud, knowing nothing, but † doting about queſtions and ſtrifes of words, whereof cometh envy, ſtrife, railings, * evil ſurmiſings,]

* puff'd up τέτυφωται † ſick νοσῶν
* wicked opinions κακόνοιαι

5. Diſputings void of all ſolidity, empty and unprofitable, ſuch as are proportionable to men whoſe very underſtandings are debauched and corrupted, and void of all truth, men that have taken up an opinion (that cauſed the diſcourſe at this time) that Chriſtian religion (ſee Note on c. 3. f.) is an advantageous trade, a means of helping one to ſecular immunities and privileges, (as that a ſervant ſhall be free by that means:) ſuch men as theſe are fit for Eccleſiaſtical cenſures or diſcipline to be paſs'd upon them.

5. † Perverſe diſputings of men of corrupt minds and deſtitute of the truth, * ſuppoſing that gain is godlineſs: from ſuch withdraw thy ſelf.]

† odd kind of diſputings of men that have their underſtanding perverted διαπαρατριβαὶ διεφθαρμένων ἀνθρώπων ἀπὸ τῆς ἀληθείας νομιζόντων πορισμὸν εἶναι τὴν εὐσέβειαν * thinking that piety is advantage,

6. As for that opinion of theirs, that Chriſtianity is an advantageous calling, though it be far from true, nay, impious, in that ſenſe whereto they apply it, yet in this other 'tis moſt orthodox, that a Chriſtian life with a competent ſufficient ſubſiſtence is all the wealth in the world, and much better than a great deal more wealth.

6. But godlineſs with † contentment is great gain.]

† a competency μετ' αὐτάρκειας

7. For for any thing above that competency or ſufficiency for this life, 'tis clear 'tis no way advangeous to us, for as we brought nothing with us into this world, ſo we cannot carry any out, and ſo that which we do not ſpend or uſe, is loſt to us.

7. For we brought nothing into this world, and it is * certain we can carry nothing out.]

* manifeſt δῆλον

d. 8. And what that competency or ſufficiency is, it is as clear, viz. food and raiment, which is all we ſtand in need of.

8. And having food and raiment, † let us be therewith [d] content.]

† we ſhall be ſufficiently provided for with theſe

e. 9. Whereas on the other ſide, they that ſet their minds on the getting of riches, are thereby betrayed into many temptations and ſnares to ſin, into many deſires and purſuits, which are both ridiculous and unprofitable of themſelves, bring nothing of ſatisfaction with them, and beſides bring great miſchiefs upon them, many times moſt contrary to the deſigned advantages, and which finally bring ruin even in this world, (and that the Gnoſticks will find) and eternal damnation in another.

9. But they that [e] will be rich, fall into temptation and a ſnare, and into many fooliſh and hurtful luſts, which * drown men in deſtruction and perdition.]

* ingulph βυθίζουσι

10. For at this time 'tis evident what a deal of miſchief hath been cauſed by the love of this worldly traſh, for the preſerving of which many have forſaken the orthodox faith and fallen off to the Gnoſtick hereſie, and brought themſelves to a ſad and moſt wretched condition.

10. For the love of money is the root of all evil; which while ſome coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themſelves through with many ſorrows.]

11. But thou which art by God appointed to be a Governour in his Church muſt keep thy ſelf exactly from all theſe, and endeavour earneſtly the attaining and exerciſing all thoſe vertues which are moſt contrary to the practice of theſe hereticks, viz. innocence, obſervation of the pure Chriſtian doctrine (ſee Note on c. 3. f.) perſeverance in the faith, perfect charity to other men, a patient endurance of all the perſecutions that light upon thee, moderation toward offenders (oppoſed to too great ſeverity.)

11. But thou, O man of God, flee theſe things: and follow after righteouſneſs, godlineſs, faith, love, patience, meekneſs.]

f. 12. Let Chriſtianity be the race wherein you run, and in that ſo behave thy ſelf that you may obtain the crown (ſee Note on Phil. 3. c. and 2 Pet. 1. d.) to the obtaining of which thou art put into a courſe by God, and haſt, as in one of the Grecian combates, quitted thy ſelf very well before many ſpectators, ſuffered a great perſecution for the faith of Chriſt (which many are witneſſes of) and held out valiantly.

12. [f] † Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life, whereunto thou art alſo called, and haſt profeſſed a good profeſſion before many witneſſes.]

† Strive the good ſtrife

13. And accordingly I now adjure thee by all that is pretious, as thou believeſt God to be able to raiſe thee from the dead, if thou ſhouldſt periſh in the combate, or as thou art a Chriſtian, and thereby obliged to imitate Chriſt, who when he came before the Roman Procurator, held out conſtantly even to death.

13. I give thee charge in the ſight of God, who quickneth all things, and before Chriſt Jeſus, who before Pontius Pilate witneſſed a good confeſſion,]

14. That thou keep cloſe to the Evangelical rule, and continue conſtant without any blemiſh or blame, without any falling off in time of hazard (as ſome others are obſerved to do) until that coming of Chriſt (ſo often ſpoken of, and expected according to his promiſe) for the reſcue of his faithful ſervants, and deſtruction of the perſecutors and the cowardly, (ſee Note on 2 Theſſ. 2. k.)

14. That thou keep this commandment without ſpot, unrebukable, until the appearing of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt,]

15. Which God ſhall declare in that ſeaſon which he thinks moſt fit and opportune for it, and thereby expreſs his omnipotence, ſuch as no body can reſiſt, be he never ſo great and mighty, to the advantage of all his faithful ſervants;

15. Which in his * times he ſhall ſhew, who is the bleſſed and only potentate, the King of kings and Lord of lords,]

Amen.

16. Who only have immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto, whom no man hath ſeen nor can ſee: to whom be honour and power everlaſting. Amen.]

17. And as at all times, ſo eſpecially in ſuch a ſeaſon as this, when perſecutions reign already, and vengeances are approaching from God upon thoſe that take moſt care to ſecure themſelves, it will be a ſeaſonable admonition from thee to all rich men, not to bear it high, to be proud or inſolent upon that ſcore, nor to depend or rely on their wealth, which they have upon ſuch uncertainties, but to keep cloſe and depend on God, who alone is able to preſerve them, and will, if adhered to, make a cheerful, plentiful proviſion for them;

Annotations on Chap. VI.

a. Μὴ καταφρονείτωσαν ὅτι ἀδελφοί

V. 2. Let them not deſpiſe them ——] It is here ſomewhat uncertain to whom theſe words, ὅτι ἀδελφοί εἰσι, becauſe they are brethren, and ὅτι πιστοὶ, &c. do belong, whether to the ſervants, that pretended themſelves at liberty becauſe they were Chriſtians, or to the Maſters, whom the ſervants would not obey, but deſpiſe, becauſe thoſe Maſters were ἀδελφοὶ brethren, and ſo but equals, no better men than they. That the latter is it, is made probable by this, that in the beginning of the verſe we read πιστὺς δεσπότας believing Maſters, where the πιστοὶ, faithful or believing, is directly applied to the Maſters. But there is more reaſon to adhere to the former. 1. Becauſe the probability for the latter is of no force, concluding only that the Maſters here ſpoken of are Chriſtians, which is granted alſo in the former interpretation, and not that the ſecond πιστοὶ, &c. is not appliable to the ſervants; for it is certain that the ſervants here ſpoken of are ſuppoſed to be Chriſtians alſo; for otherwiſe the Apoſtles exhortation could not here be given to them, or to Timothy concerning them, neither Paul nor Timothy having juriſdiction over thoſe that were not Chriſtians: 2dly. becauſe the Libertine Chriſtians plea againſt ſubjection to their Maſters cannot be ſuppoſed to have been taken from the Chriſtianity of their Maſters; for 'tis evident by the firſt verſe that they excepted againſt ſubjection, and pleaded exemption from obedience to Maſters that were not Chriſtians, viz. thoſe which kept them under yoke, (as Chriſtians were not allow'd to do to Chriſtians) that is, heathen Maſters; but their plea againſt all ſubjection both to heathens v. 1. and to πιστοὶ δεσπόται believing Maſters v. 2. was the ſame, only this that they were Chriſtians, and therefore too good to ſerve Heathens; and again Chriſtians, whoſe title ἀδελφοὶ brethren was a ſtyle of equality, and ſo an argument that they were free from ſerving their fellow Chriſtians: 3dly. becauſe the direct rendring of the word being that which we have given in the margent, the ἀντιλαμβανόμενοι τῆς εὐεργεσίας with the particle οἱ before it, being in all reaſon the Subject, and πιστοὶ καὶ ἀγαπητοὶ, faithful and beloved, the Predicate in the Propoſition, the ſenſe will be obvious, by applying it to the ſervants, (but not ſo by applying it to the Maſters) thus, Let not the Chriſtian ſervants deſpiſe their Chriſtian Maſters upon this ſcore, that the ſervant by Chriſtianity is made a brother, and equal to his Maſter, but the rather ſerve them upon this very ſcore of being Chriſtians, becauſe they that help and aſſiſt in doing good, (as Chriſtian ſervants of Chriſtian Maſters do aſſiſt their Maſters in doing good, whereas it cannot fitly be ſaid of the Maſters, though Chriſtians, that they thus help or aid their ſervants) are faithful and beloved, that is, ſuch as Chriſtians ought to be, exerciſing fidelity and love to God, and to their Maſters for God's ſake, who hath commanded obedience to them. And for theſe reaſons this notion ſeems the moſt probable, by applying all theſe to the ſervants in the latter part of the verſe, but to thoſe as ſervants of the πιστοὶ δεσπόται, Chriſtian Maſters, in the former part of it. And if we conſider the words in ſeveral, and then all of them together, this will yet be more evident. Πιστοὶ and ἀγαπητοὶ are the ordinary titles of Chriſtians, proportionable to the two prime graces of a Chriſtian. Faith and Love; and ſo ἀδελφοὶ, brethren, is a title alſo ſignifying the ſame thing, but withal noting an equality, ſuch as is among brethren. The Gnoſticks upon this ground taught liberty and manumiſſion of ſervants from their Maſters, by their being Chriſtians, and ſo fellow-brethren, not ſervants of their fellow-Chriſtians. To which argument of theirs taken from one title of Chriſtians, the Apoſtle anſwers, and makes retortion, by mentioning thoſe other titles of Chriſtians alſo, which may very well be reconcilable with ſubjection, as πιστοὶ faithful, which is an Epithet that belongs ordinarily to ſervants, noting fidelity, which is the ſpecial thing required in them. And ſo alſo ἀγαπητοὶ beloved will be, which, as it is the title of Chriſtians every where in the New Teſtament, ſo it is alſo a title of ſervants too, in that they aſſiſt their Maſters in doing good, which is but the work of a wife to a husband, of one friend or beloved to another. All this is ſaid moſt clearly in reference to the Gnoſticks, whoſe doctrine that was, and the ſeeds of it were viſible in Aſia (and affirmed to be ſo in one Church under Timothy's care, that of Smyrna) in Polycarp's time, which cauſed Ignatius's admonition in his Epiſtle to him, that the men or maid ſervants ſhould not be puff'd up, ἀλλ' εἰς δόξαν Θεοῦ πλέον δουλευέτωσαν, but to the glory of God let them ſerve the more, as (here) become the better ſervants for being Chriſtians, and μὴ αἱρέσθωσαν ἀπὸ τῆς κοινῆς ἐλευθερίας, &c. Let them not deſire, or pretend to, any common liberty upon the ſcore of being Chriſtians.

Πιστοὶ ἀγαπητοὶ ἀδελφοὶ

b. Ἀντιλαμβάνεσθαι

Ib. Partakers] Ἀντιλαμβάνεσθαι is to help, either from one notion of ἀντὶ, contra, to take up at the other end, and ſo to bear part of a burthen, as the wife is the man's helper; or as ἀντὶ ſignifies, vice, or pro, to bear any weight in another's ſtead, ἀντιλαμβανόμενος, βοηθὸς an helper, ſaith Heſychius; and ſo here ἀντιλαμβάνεσθαι τῆς εὐεργεσίας, to aſſiſt doing good (ſee Note on Mat. 6. m.) But when it is joined with a Genitive of the perſon, it ſignifies ſomewhat more. See Note on Luk. 10. b.

c. εὐεργεσία

Ib. Benefit] The word εὐεργεσία is but once more uſed in the New Teſtament, Act. 4. 9. and there 'tis taken Actively, doing good, not receiving it, beneficentia in the Active, not beneficium in the Paſſive ſenſe, which, ſaith, Ariſtotle, is εὐεργούμενον, as it is in the receiver. And thus εὐποιΐα is doing, not receiving, good, with which this holds analogy directly.

d.

V. 8. Content] Ἀρκεσθησόμεθα τούτοις ſignifies we ſhall be ſatisfied with theſe. So the Syriack renders it, Wherefore meat and cloathing are ſufficient for us, מספקא (from מפק or שפק) both in ſenſe and ſound differing little from the Latin ſufficio, only in the Latin termination.

c. Βουλόμενοι πλουτεῖν

V. 9. Will be rich] That the βουλόμενοι πλουτεῖν they that will be rich, is part of the character of the Gnoſticks in this place, and that they were a ſort of Chriſtians that made no uſe of their religion, but to their ſecular advantages, v. 5. and whenſoever it was not reconcilable with thriving in the world, (brought perſecution) made no ſcruple of renouncing their Chriſtian profeſſion, hath often been ſaid, and may appear from one eminent place of Clemens Alexandrinus, who, (oppoſing ὁ ἀληθῶς γνωστικὸν the true knower of myſteries, or ſearcher into profitable Cabala's, the Chriſtian indeed to the Gnoſtick, or knower of myſteries here falſly ſo called v. 20.) hath theſe words, οἶδεν αὐτὸς καὶ τὰ νηστείας τὰ αἰνίγματα τῆς ἡμερῶν τούτων τῆς τεσσάδος, καὶ τὴν πρώτην σκιᾶς· ἐπονομίζουσι δὲ ἡ μὲν Ἑρμοῦ, ἡ δὲ Ἀφροδίτης· αὐτίκα νηστεύει κατὰ τὸν βίον φιλαργυρείας τε ὁμοῦ καὶ φιληδονίας, ἐξ ὧν αἱ πᾶσαι ἐκφύονται κακίαι, He knows the myſteries of the faſtdays, the fourth and ſixth day of the week, one is named by the name of Mercury, the other of Venus, and accordingly he faſts or abſtains in his converſation from love of money, and love of pleaſures, from which all evil doth ſpring. Where, as love of pleaſures, every where imputed to the Gnoſtick hereticks, is mentioned as one root of all villany, ſo is love of money taken notice of as the other (v. 10.) and both in relation to the Gnoſticks here, to whom the true Chriſtian is oppoſed.

f. Ἀγωνίζου τὸν καλὸν ἀγῶνα

V. 12. Fight the good fight] This whole verſe alludes to the exerciſes of the Grecians. In which as there were five ſorts, Running, Wreſtling, &c. formerly mentioned, ſo every of them is commonly ſtyled ἀγὼν a combat combat or ſtrife, and they which contended in each of them ſaid, as here, ἀγωνίζεσθε ἀγῶνα. The rendring of this fight a good fight may make it believed to belong peculiarly to that of cuffing πυγμὴ, whence our Latin pugna fight comes. But the word is not here to be ſo reſtrained, but ſet more generally in ſome common word, as ſtrife or combat, (as ἀγωνίζεσθε εἰσελθεῖν, ſtrive to enter in at the ſtrait gate, and ἐπαγωνίζεσθαι Jud. 3. to contend earneſtly) and then 'twill by the conſequents be applied to that of racing, where the crown was ſet over the goal, that he that came formoſt, and ſo conquered, might catch it off and carry it away with him; for ſo ἐπιλαβοῦ lay hold, or apprehend, that follows here, and ver. 19. is the word that expreſſes the catching of the crown from the top of the goal, and eternal life is that crown; and the ἐνώπιον πολλῶν μαρτύρων, before many witneſſes, denotes the many ſpectators that were wont to be at thoſe games, called from thence πανηγύρεις, frequentiæ, and ſolemnities; and ſo καλεῖν may refer alſo to the κήρυξ, or præco, who proclaimed the laws and the prize or reward of the ἀγῶνες, and called the company together to contend for it.

ἐνώπιον πολλῶν μαρτύρων καλεῖν

g. εἰς ἀπόλαυσιν

V. 17. To enjoy] Εἰς ἀπόλαυσιν, εἰς τρυφὴν, ſaith Phavorinus, a chearful, comfortable condition, (agreeable to the πάντα all things, and πλουσίως richly, preceding:) and thus it is uſed, not only in an ill, but good ſenſe, ἀπολαύω πλούτου, enjoying wealth, for εὐδαιμονῶ, being happy, and ἀπολαύω τιμῆς, enjoying honour, for εὐτυχῶ, that other kind of happineſs.

h. θεμέλιον

V. 19. Foundation] The word θεμέλιον in this place ſeems to have a peculiar ſignification (different from that other of foundation ſo ordinary in other places) and coming from τίθημι, to lay up, as θησαυρὸς doth, it may poſſibly ſignifie no more than a treaſure, ſomewhat laid up, and ſo both ἀποθησαυρίζον, laying up, going before, and εἰς τὸ μέλλον, for the future, or time to come, following it, would incline to render it. So Tobit. 4. 9. in the ſame matter of alms-giving, θέμα γὰρ ἀγαθὸν θησαυρίζεις, for thou layeſt up for thy ſelf a good treaſure, a good laying up, againſt the day of neceſſity. Beyond this, it is the obſervation of a late Critick, Sam. Petit, that the word θεμέλιον may ſignifie in the ſame latitude that the Hebrew עקר (which is anſwerable to it) doth, that is, not only, a foundation, but, as the Rabbins uſe the word, a bill of contract, a bond or obligation, that he receives that lends out any thing, upon which he may found a confidence of having it returned to him again. To this perhaps it may be appliable that the Hebrew מושר, which is rendred θεμέλιον ſometimes, is alſo rendred σωθήκη, Iſa. 30. 1. a compact. And then it will have this weight here, that the alms-giver by his liberality receives and lays up an obligation from God, that this mercy of his ſhall be rewarded. And to this notion of the word that of Prov. 19. 7. is very agreeable, He that hath pity on the poor lendeth to the Lord, and that which he hath given he will pay him again. In this ſenſe, ſaith he, the word is again found 2 Tim. 2. 19. where God's θεμέλιον is ſaid to have a ſeal affixed to it, which ſeems to refer to a bill or bond: and becauſe thoſe ſeals had their inſcriptions on both ſides, agreeing to the conditions of the two perſons contracting, accordingly it is there added, firſt on God's part, The Lord knoweth them that are his, that is, God will be faithful and conſtant in owning thoſe that are his ſervants; then 2dly. on man's part, Let every one that nameth the name of Chriſt depart from iniquity. So that God's θεμέλιον there may very well ſignifie his χειρόγραφον, bill or bond, (and ſo here the word may ſignifie alſo) which being left with any man as a means to ſecure him, a depoſitum, a σωθήκη, a pledge, or pawn, may well be ſtyled θεμέλιον, from τίθημι pono, ſomewhat delivered him as his ſecurity.

i. Ἀντιθέσεις

V. 20. Oppoſition of ſcience] That the γνῶσις ψευδώνυμος, ſcience falſly ſo called, is ſet down to denote the heretical crue of the Gnoſticks, there can be no queſtion, and is elſewhere largely ſhewed, Note on 2 Pet. 1. c. That the firſt Author of theſe was Simon Magus, is alſo evident in Irenæus and others of the antients. Now it ſeems there were thus early diſcourſes written by him or ſome of his, for the oppoſing the true Chriſtian doctrine, and theſe are here called ἀντιθέσεις oppoſitions or contradictions: to which agrees that of Dionyſius Areopagita περὶ θεῖ. ὀνομ. c. 6. where mentioning them, he ſtyles them οἱ τῆς φρενοβλαβείας Σίμωνος ἀντιῤῥητικοὶ λόγοι, the contradictory diſcourſes of the dotage of Simon, by the φρενοβλάβεια or dotage of Simon meaning the ſame that is here expreſs'd by the ψευδώνυμος γνῶσις, that is, thoſe heretical, proud, but ſottiſh followers of Simon.

[a] Second EPISTLE of PAUL the APOSTLE

TO

a. Δευτέρα εἰς Τιμόθεον

THAT this Epiſtle was ſent to Timothy from Rome there is no queſtion, and that, whilſt he was in reſtraint and danger there. But whether this were at that firſt time of his being there, mention'd in the laſt of the Acts, An. Chr. 58. or whether immediately before his Martyrdom, which was ten years after, about the thirteenth or fourteenth of Nero, there is this reaſon to demur, becauſe he tells him c. 4. 6. that he is (as the ordinary Engliſh reads) now ready to be offered, and that the time of his departure is at hand; which ſeems, with the ſubſcription of the Epiſtle, to determine it to the latter. On the other ſide, ſome paſſages there are which incline it to the former; as when he ſaith c. 4. 16. that in his firſt defence though all forſook him, yet the Lord ſtood with him, that the preaching might be fulfilled, and that all the Gentiles might hear, &c. which ſeems to refer to his firſt being at Rome, after which time he proclaimed the Goſpel to the Gentiles in other regions. So ſaith Clemens in his Epiſtle to the Corinthians, p. 8. that he came εἰς τὸ τέρμα τῆς δύσεως, to ſome remote parts in the Weſt. So S. Jerom in Catal. that being diſmiſs'd by Nero, he preach'd the Goſpel of Chriſt in the Weſtern parts. So ſaith Euſebius l. 2. c. 21. Τότε μὲν οὖν ἀπολογησάμενον, αὖθις ἐπὶ τὸ κηρύσσειν θεῖον διακονίαν λόγου ἔχει σελαῦξις ὁ Ἀπόστολον, Then having made his defence, the report is that he did again betake himſelf to the office, or miniſtery, of preaching the Word. So when he remembers to Timothy his perſecutions at Antioch, Iconium and Lyſtra, c. 3. 11. and what Alexander at Epheſus had done to him, Act. 19. 33. it is not ſo probable that this ſhould be repeated by him 14. years after the fact, and juſt before his death, as at his firſt being at Rome, which was not above four years after the fact. So when he ſaith c. 4. 12. that he had ſent Tychicus to Epheſus, it is probable that that was at the writing of the Epiſtle to the Epheſians, which he ſent from Rome by Tychicus about this time of his firſt being there. And for the one argument on the other ſide, the approaching of his death, to that may be oppoſed what he adds c. 4. 17, 18. that he was delivered out of the mouth of the lion, that is, either from Nero under the title of the lion, or from his great danger, adding confidently for the future, that the Lord ſhall deliver him; which was literally true of this firſt, but cannot in the ſenſe of delivering him from his danger, (to which the 17th. verſe belongs) be verified of his laſt danger, from which he was not delivered. And for the words ver. 6. I ſuppoſe they may thus beſt be rendred, Ἐγὼ γὰρ ἤδη σπένδομαι, for I am already poured out, (ſee Note on Phil. 2. e.) that is, my danger of death is already ſo great (ſo in the eye of man) that I am as it were wine poured out upon the ſacrifice, to prepare it for offering up. To which he may fitly reſemble his being brought out to the bar, to be tried for his life. And when 'tis added, καὶ ὁ καιρὸς τῆς ἐμῆς ἀναλύσεως ἐφέστηκε, and the time of my departure hath been at hand, that may denote no more than an imminent danger of death, mentioned as now paſs'd, without any foretelling that he ſhould now inſtantly die. And in this ſenſe it will be reconcilable with the Lord's having delivered him out of the mouth of the lion, v. 17. viz. this imminent, but now paſs'd, danger. And thus may the ſeventh verſe be interpreted alſo, I have fought a good fight, (of afflictions) (ſee 1 Theſſ. 2. Note b.) run great hazards, and paſs'd Chriſtianly through them, I have run my race, (ſo τελεῖν ſignifies, not to finiſh, but to perform; ſee Note on Act. 21. a.) I have kept the faith, not ſwerved from it, for all my danger; by δρόμος, race, not referring to the whole courſe of life, but to this one combat of afflictions at Rome, now freſh in his memory, and recited in that chapter, ver. 16, 17. That Timothy which is here appointed to come to him, chap. 4. 9. did accordingly come, is generally acknowledged, and that after his coming, the Epiſtles to the Philippians, Coloſſians and Philemon were written, as appears by the place, Rome, from whence they are all dated, and the joining of Timothy's name in the front of them. Now of all thoſe Epiſtles 'tis clear that they were written at his firſt being at Rome, and not immediately before his Martyrdom. For Philip 1. 26. and 2. 23, 24. he expreſſeth his confidence that he ſhall be delivered, and again come unto them, which is not reconcilable with his perſuaſion of the inſtant approach of his death at the writing of this, and to Philemon v. 22. he ſends to make proviſion for his lodging at Coloſſæ. As for the Subſcription of the Epiſtle, which refers it to the δευτέρᾳ, the ſecond time of his coming before Nero, that may poſſibly ſtand good, by this interpretation; that he was twice at his firſt impriſonment brought out to the barr before the Emperour, and freed both times, that the firſt, being his greateſt danger, was moſt memorable to him by all mens forſaking him, and the interpoſing of God's protection when all other means failed him. And this is more likely to be recited by him in an Epiſtle written ſoon after it, than in one of ten years diſtance from it. However, we know that the Subſcriptions of the Epiſtles are not to be found in all the antient copies. What the deſign of this Epiſtle was, is manifeſt, to ſtir him up to caution, diligence, and diſcharge of his office, on occaſion of the creeping hereſie of the Gnoſticks, c. 2. 17. ſtollen in among them, which had much debauched the Aſiaticks, c. 1. 15. and made uſe of Magick to oppoſe the truth of the Goſpel, c. 3. 8.

CHAP. I.

Paraphraſe.

1. PAUL an Apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt by the will of God, according to the promiſe of life which is in Chriſt Jeſus,]

1. I Paul, who (far from any merit of mine, meerly by the good pleaſure of God and his undeſerved grace) have received commiſſion to make known the Goſpel or the promiſe of Life, which now is made by Chriſt to all penitent believers,

2. To Timothy, my dearly beloved ſon, Grace, mercy, and peace from God the Father, and Chriſt Jeſus our Lord.]

2. Send greeting in the Lord to Timothy by me converted to the faith.

3. I thank God, whom I ſerve from my forefathers with pure conſcience, that without ceaſing I have remembrance of thee in my prayers night and day,]

3. In my thankſgivings and prayers to God (whom, as my progenitors of the tribe of Benjamin did before me, ſo I have obeyed ſincerely all my time, even when through ignorance I perſecuted the Chriſtian faith, doing according to the dictate of my conſcience, or as I was perſuaded I ought to do) I mention thee conſtantly, praying and giving thanks to God for thee,

4. Greatly

4. Deſiring earneſtly to ſee thee whom I love ſo dearly, (and this paſſionate deſire being inflamed by the remembrance of thy tears at our parting) that our meeting again may be as full of joy as our parting was of ſorrow;

4. Greatly deſiring to ſee thee, being mindful of thy tears, that I may be filled with joy;]

5. Remembring the ſincerity of thy obedience to the Goſpel of Chriſt, and being confident that as thy mother and grandmother, which received the faith before thee, continued in it to the end, ſo thou alſo wilt perſevere and never fall off from it.

5. When I call to remembrance the unfeigned faith that is in thee, which dwelt firſt in thy grandmother Lois, and thy mother Eunice, and I am perſuaded that in thee alſo.]

6. And that it may be ſo, I now write to thee, as a monitor or remembrancer, that thou conſider the honourable calling which was conferred upon thee by my laying hands upon thee, and making thee Biſhop, (in which ſome others joined with me, ſee Note on 1 Tim. 5. f.) and the many extraordinary gifts conſequent thereto, which thou art obliged to ſtir up and quicken by the diligent exerciſe of them, and neither by fear nor compliance with any to let them lye by thee unprofitably.

6. Wherefore I put thee in remembrance, that thou ſtir up the gift of God which is in thee by putting on of my hands.]

7. For ſure that God that gave us this commiſſion and gifts, hath not given thee or me ſo poor a cowardly ſpirit, as that we ſhould be afraid of the dangers and threats of men againſt the preaching of the Goſpel; but couragious hearts to encounter any difficulty, a love of God which will actuate this valour, and caſt out all fear of danger, and withal a tranquility of mind, and a full contentedneſs in whatſoever ſtate.

7. For God hath not given us the ſpirit of * fear; but of power, of love, and of a † ſound mind.]

* timidity of cowardiſe δειλίας

† ſobriety σωφρονισμῦ

8. Whatever therefore the danger be of preaching Chriſt, be not diſcouraged, or whatever the example of my ſufferings, do thou reſolve to do and ſuffer the like chearfully and couragiouſly, and to be a fellow-ſufferer with the Goſpel of Chriſt, to bear whatſoever falls upon that, by that ſtrength which God gives thee,

8. Be not thou therefore aſhamed of the teſtimony of our Lord, nor of me his priſoner: but be thou * partaker of the afflictions of the Goſpel, according to the power of God,]

* a co-ſufferer with the Goſpel, συνκακοπάθησον τῷ εὐαγγελίῳ

9. Who hath reſcued us out of the evil world, and called us to ſanctity, not becauſe we had deſerved that mercy of his, but of his own free mercy and goodneſs long ago deſigned us in Chriſt;

9. Who hath ſaved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpoſe and grace which was given us in Chriſt Jeſus, † before the world began;]

† long time ago, ſee Note on Tit. 1. 2.

10. And now hath revealed it to us, and made us partakers of it, by Chriſt's coming into the world, and preaching the Goſpel to us, who hath thereby voided the power of death over us, and made a clear revelation of that life and immortality which was not before ſo certainly revealed, that if we will obey him, we may certainly be made partakers of it.

10. But is now made manifeſt by the appearing of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, who hath aboliſhed death, and hath brought life and immortality to light, through the Goſpel;]

11. And for the preaching and teaching of this, eſpecially to the Gentiles, God hath given me the authority and commiſſion of an Apoſtle.

11. Whereunto I am appointed a preacher, and an Apoſtle, and a teacher of the Gentiles.

12. And that (viz. my preaching to the Gentiles) hath exaſperated the Jews, and brought perſecutions upon me: but I am not diſcouraged with them, (ſee Rom. 5. 5.) becauſe Chriſt, on whom I have depended, I am ſure, will never fail me; and in his hands I can with all chearfulneſs repoſe my life, as knowing him able and willing to preſerve it to me, till he pleaſe to call for me out of this world.

12. For the which cauſe I alſo ſuffer theſe things; nevertheleſs I am not aſhamed, for I know whom I have believed, and am perſuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him * againſt that day.]

* unto εἰς

13. When thou wert with me I gave thee a ſhort ſummary of the chief things that were to be believed by all, in oppoſition to all growing hereſies, and do thou take care not to depart from it in any part of it, but keep conſtant to it in the outward confeſſion and conſtant adherence to Chriſt, and in preaching and teaching others.

13. Hold faſt the † form of ſound words which thou haſt heard of me, in faith and love which is in Chriſt Jeſus.]

† ſhort from ὑποτύπωσιν

14. Hold thee conſtantly to the doctrine of the Goſpel, or ſummary of it agreed on by the Apoſtles to be taught in all Churches, and whenever thou art tempted to the contrary, remember that this ſtands by the direction of the Spirit of God that abides among us, and make uſe of that Spirit to confirm thy ſelf in it.

14. That good thing which was committed unto thee, keep by the Holy Ghoſt which dwelleth in us.]

15. Thou heareſt, I preſume, that the Aſian Chriſtians that were at Rome, ſave only Oneſiphorus, v. 16. fell off from me in time of my diſtreſs.

Annotations on Chap. I.

a. οἶκον Ὀνησιφόρου

V. 16. The houſe of Oneſiphorus] What οἶκον Ὀνησιφόρου, the houſe of Oneſiphorus, here ſignifies, is thought fit to be examined by ſome in order to the doctrine of praying for the dead. For becauſe the prayer is here for the houſhold, and not for the maſter of it, Oneſiphorus himſelf, it is by ſome preſently concluded that Oneſiphorus was dead at that time. And then that being ſuppoſed, it appears v. 18. that S. Paul prays for him, that he may find mercy in that day. How far it may be fit to pray for them that are departed this life, needs not to be diſputed here. 'Tis certain that ſome meaſure of bliſs, which ſhall at the day of judgment be vouchſafed the Saints, when their bodies and ſouls ſhall be reunited, is not till then enjoyed by them, and therefore may ſafely and fitly be prayed for them, (in the ſame manner as Chriſt prays to his Father, to glorifie him with that glory which he had before the world was.) And this is a very diſtant thing from that prayer which is now uſed in the Romiſh Church for deliverance from temporal pains, founded in their doctrine of Purgatory, which would no way be concluſible from hence, though Oneſiphorus, for whom S. Paul here prays for mercy, had been now dead. Nay 'tis evident, that the mercy for which they which are conceived to be in Purgatory might be the better, muſt be beſtowed, and conſequently prayed for to befal them, before the day of doom, at which time all that are there are ſuppoſed by them to be releaſed. But neither is there any evidence of Oneſiphorus being then dead, nor probability of it here. For of this Oneſiphorus theſe two things may be obſerved from hence: firſt, That his family was now at Epheſus, and accordingly he ſalutes it there, c. 4. 19. and conſequently that there was his ordinary place of abode; and agreeably it is here ſaid of him, that he had relieved Paul when he was at Epheſus, v. 18. and that is the reaſon why in an Epiſtle to Timothy, reſiding in that city, this city, this mention is made of his family: ſecondly, That he was at this time (when Paul wrote this) abſent from his home, in all probability at Rome, (for ἦν must be rendred being, not when he was) at leaſt but lately departed, and ſo ſtill on his way from Rome, where Paul was a priſoner, and where Oneſiphorus had ſought and found him out, v. 17. and without fear viſited and relieved him. And this is a fair account, why Paul writing to Timothy, where his family was, mentioned them with ſo much kindneſs, but joins not him in that remembrance, becauſe he was at Rome, from whence, and not at Epheſus, to which he wrote. And ſo all the force of that argument is vaniſhed.

Roman rules of their militia, are forbidden to meddle with the employments of Tutors or Guardians of men's perſons or eſtates, or proctors of their cauſes, to undertake husbandry or merchandiſe, &c. becauſe every of theſe is ſo diſtant from, that 'tis incompetible with the waiting on their colours; ſo whatſoever employments of the world are not competible with the diſcharge of thy office, as thou art a miniſter of Chriſt (as while the Empire and ſtate of the world remains heathen, and not Chriſtian, moſt ſecular employments are far diſtant from the Chriſtian, and thy interpoſing in them will tend to no advantage of the ſociety of the Church) it is not fit for thee to meddle in them, but to apply thy ſelf to ſuch cares as may moſt conduce to the ſervice of thy General who hath put thee into this calling, and expects it from thee.

19. But let not theſe and the like falſe impious heretical teachers move any, for God

God will certainly perform his promiſe to us: his bill of contract with Chriſtians in Chriſt, his decree and purpoſe toward his faithful ſervants remains unchangable, being under ſeal; and the ſeal of this contract hath two impreſſes: on one ſide this, That God is ſure to all thoſe that are faithful to him, to reward them both in body and ſoul to all eternity, which is ſufficiently deſtructive of their doctrine v. 18. that there is no future ſtate, and ſo no bliſs for them who are perſecuted here: another on the other, That every Chriſtian obliges himſelf to a ſtrict life (quite contrary to the vicious practices of theſe men) by undertaking the faith of Chriſt.

22. But be ſure to keep thy ſelf from all thoſe carnal affections which younger men are moſt ſubject to; and not only thoſe of impurity, which the Gnoſticks indulge and allow to all, that they may inſnare them, but alſo contentions, and factions, and emulations, and love of glory, &c. And on the contrary, be thou an emulous and earneſt purſuer and follower of innocence, fidelity, and firm charity, conjunction and agreement with all thoſe that in purity and ſincerity adhere conſtantly to Chriſt.

24. And there is nothing more unlike a true Chriſtian than that; he that is ſuch, muſt be mild and quiet, and peaceable toward all others, and being in place as thou art, muſt be ready and induſtrious to inſtruct others in the truth, and not apt or forward to puniſh thoſe that do amiſs, (ſee Note on 1 Cor. 13. b.)

Annotations on Chap. II.

a. ὀρθοτομεῖν

V. 15. Rightly dividing] That ὀρθοτομεῖν, to divide aright, ſhould refer to the cuſtom in Sacrifices, which were to be cut after a certain preſcribed manner, and of them ſome parts given to the Prieſts, &c. may probably be imagined: But another notion of the phraſe here, as it is joined with the word of truth, may ſeem more probable. For in the Old Teſtament the Greek tranſlators uſe of the word belongs to a way or path to go in, which was wont to be cut out, that it might be fitter for uſe; thence the Latin phraſe, viam ſecare, to cut a way, that is, to go before and direct any in their journey. And with the word ὀρθὰς, right, joined with it, it is to go before one, and direct him the ſtraight way to ſuch a place. Thus ὀρθοτομῶν ὁδὸν Prov. 3. 6. and 11. 5. is the rendring of ישר, which ſignifies to ſet right, or rectifie: and ſo to cut a way right, is to put one, and keep one in the right way. We render it, direct thy paths and way, in thoſe places of the Proverbs; and then the Goſpel of Chriſt, the word of truth, being moſt fitly reſembled to a way (much better than to a ſacrifice) ὀρθοτομεῖν λόγον ἀληθείας, rightly to cut the word of truth, is to go uprightly and according to the truth before others in Chriſtianity. And that was Timothy's part, as a Doctor or Biſhop, to lead them both by his example and doctrine the right way that is preſcribed by Chriſt, without falling into any errors or ill practice.

b. περίϊσασο

V. 16. Shun] The Hebrew סבב circumdedit ſignifies alſo divertit, turning away, or back, as well as going round, and is by the Septuagint or Greek tranſlator of the Old Teſtament rendred not only κυκλόω often, to encompaſs, and περίϊστημι once, Joſ. 6. 3. but alſo ἐκκλίνω declino, to decline or avoid, 1 Kin. 18. 11. and twenty times ἀποστρέφω averto, to put from us, or fly from. From hence it is that one of theſe interpretations being ſet for the other (according to the frequent manner of theſe writers) or elſe by the power of the Paſſive or Mean, differing from the Active, περίϊστημι here, and Tit. 3. 9. ſignifies to avert, decline, avoid, fly from, the ſame with ἔκκλινε avoid, v. 22. for which, and in the ſame matter, the word περιΐστασο avoiding is uſed, 1 Tim. 6. 20. Thus doth Origen uſe the word againſt Celſus, ſpeaking of Chriſt's going aſide, when the Phariſees conſulted to kill him, Mat. 12. 5. οὐκ ἔστι δὲ ἀλλοίως τὸ μετ' οἰκονομίας περιϊσάμενον τοῦ κινδύνου μὴ ὁμοῦ αὐτοῖς χωρεῖν, It is no degenerous, or cowardly, thing to flie from dangers providently, and not to mix with them: where it ſignifies declining and ſo avoiding of dangers. And ſo Heſychius renders Περιΐσασο, not only κύκλωσον, (it ſhould be κύκλωσον) πεῖσθε, encompaſſing, but alſo πεῖσθε, ἀνάτρεπε, avoid, flie from, and σκόπησον look to, which is ſo to look to, to conſider, as to avoid, Rom. 16. 17. if there be danger in it. So Joſephus of Moſes, περίϊσασο, μὴ πολλοὶ τὰ τῶν λόγων ἀσθενείας αὐτοῦ, μιμήσαι γένωνται, He avoided, or took heed, leſt many ſhould imitate the impurity of his ſpeeches: and l. 2. De bell. Jud. c. 12. τὸ ὀμνύειν αὐτοῖς περίϊσται, ſwearing is avoided by them, in a paſſive ſenſe. Who they are which are here to be avoided and taken heed of, is not obſcurely ſet down in the following words, viz. the Gnoſticks, that dotlavies of Hereticks, conſiſting of divers branches, differing one from the other, but all agreeing in oppoſing the truth of the Goſpel, and pretending to great perfection of knowledge by the myſtical interpretations of Scripture. That theſe are they, may appear firſt, by the βέβηλοι κινοφωνίαι profane dotages, or vanities, or empty ſounds, which are imputed to the ψευδώνυμος γνῶσις, ſcience falſly ſo called, that is, the Gnoſticks, 1 Tim. 6. 20. Secondly, by the character ſet upon them, that they are a growing, ſpreading hereſie, their words ſpread as a gangrene doth, when 'tis gotten into any part of the body, for that is the meaning of νομὴν ἕξει. So in S. Chryſoſtome, T. 3. p. 631. l. 13. ἐνδεδοίκει δὲ μὴ ὑπερπλέον νομεθῇ τὸ κακὸν, καὶ ὁδῷ βαδίζον ὅλῳ ἕξει. καταλάβῃ δὲ ἐκκλησίαν, he feared leſt the miſchief would ſpread farther, and going along ſhould ſeize on the whole Church. The word is uſed of ſheep, &c. feeding, and by little and little going over a whole paſture; whence among the Antients the Νομάδες a wandring people, which had no certain habitation; vagi & incertis ſedibus errantes, ſaith Saluſt of the Numidæ, and ſo Seneca calls the Scythians and Getes vagos, wanderers, that is, νομάδας. And it is uſed of fire alſo, ſpreading and devouring as it goes. So in S. Chryſoſtom, T. 3. p. 712. l. 30. ὁλόκληρον τὴν Γαλατῶν ἔθνος τοῦτο τὸ πλάνης ἐπενέμετο πῦρ, the flame of this error ſpread over all the Galatians. And ſo of many other things, —— Ἐπέων δὲ πολὺς νόμος ἔνθα καὶ ἔνθα, in Heſiod, words wander here and there unreſtrained. And Chryſoſtom, T. 4. p. 710. l. 1. κύων μὴ πεφεύγατον νέμει, the dog wanders, goes about, with the ſheep, for ſure he eats not graſs with them. And ſo Num. 14. 33. οἱ ἡμῖν ὑμῶν ἔσονται

And an inſtance of this follows in Hymenæus and Philetus and ſome others, who affirmed the Reſurrection to be paſt already, and ſo denied any future Reſurrection: which very thing is by Tertullian imputed to the Valentinians, (Id de ſe Valentiniani aſſeverant) which though they were not yet riſen, yet when they came, were a ſpawn of theſe Gnoſticks, and took up all the hereſies which they found among them, and accommodated them εἰς ἴδιον χαρακτῆρα, to their own manner of expreſſion, as Irenæus ſaith.

V. 25. If God peradventure] The notion of μήποτε here is not rightly expreſs'd by if ſo be without any negation in it; for that is the notion of ἔπως, the direct contrary to this. The beſt underſtanding of it will be by obſerving the force of it, Luk. 3. 15. προσδοκῶντος τοῦ λαοῦ, καὶ διαλογιζομένων πάντων ἐν τοῖς Ἰωάννῃ, μήποτε αὐτὸς εἴη ὁ Χριστὸς, The people being in an expectation, and all diſputing in their hearts of John, not if he were, but, whether he were not the Chriſt. Where, in a matter of expectation or diſpute about a thing, which they looked on as poſſible, but knew it not, the word μήποτε is uſed, not as if it were to them a matter of fear that it ſhould be ſo, but plainly the contrary, of hope and joy that it might. And ſo here the Biſhop is to proceed in the mildeſt, and moſt winning, and not exaſperating, way, as conſidering hopefully, whether it be not poſſible that God may at length be pleaſed to give them repentance, that is, to bleſs the Biſhops inſtructions, that they may be a means or inſtrument to work upon them. As for the phraſe δῷ μετάνοιαν give repentance, the grounds of explaining that have been elſewhere laid, by obſerving the force of ſome Verbs, both Active and Paſſive, in theſe books, to denote the effect or reception of the virtue in the Patient, and not only the operation of the Agent. Thus Iſa. 53. 1. God's arm is ſaid to be revealed, when the revelation of it is aſſented to and obeyed by men, and ſo 'tis all one with believing their report, in the former part of the verſe. And to omit many more, thus is God's giving them an heart to perceive, and eyes to ſee, Deut. 29. 3. which ſignifieth their receiving this gift of God, making uſe of the miracles and ſigns and wonders, v. 3. being effectually wrought on, having their hearts affected by them, which they that had not there, it is ſaid of them, that God had not given them hearts to perceive, that is, that thus it was in the event or effect, they did not really perceive. For that any thing ſhould be required on God's part towards their perceiving which had not been performed by him, is unreaſonable to imagine, when the catalogue is ſo punctual and ſo large v. 2, 3. of what God had done among them. So God's giving men to Chriſt Joh. 6. denotes their receiving and embracing of him. And ſo here God's giving repentance is their making uſe of God's grace and mercy and long-ſuffering (and the Biſhops mildneſs, as an inſtrument of working on them,) their being wrought on by that means, and actually repenting, or reforming their lives upon it.

V. 26. His will] That τὸ θέλημα, will, refers not to the Devil, which is the immediate antecedent, but to God, which is the remote, v. 25. may be conjectured by the word ἐκείνου joined with it; for if it belonged to the Devil, the αὐτοῦ, his, immediately precedent would have ſerved the turn, and the addition of this other Demonſtrative, not ejus, but illius (though our Engliſh hath no diverſity or variety of words to expreſs it,) clearly divides it from αὐτοῦ, him. The only difficulty will be, whether εἰς τὸ θέλημα ἐκείνου ſhall be thought to denote the Impulſive cauſe, God's will or pleaſure in giving repentance, (and ſo the words be rendred, according to his will) or the terminus to which their recovering tendeth. To this latter the context ſeems to incline, by comparing this verſe with ver. 25. for there God's giving repentance εἰς ἐπίγνωσιν, to the acknowledgment, makes εἰς, to, a note of the term to which that repentance tended, to wit, the acknowledgment of the truth, and then by Analogy, ἀνανήψωσιν εἰς θέλημα, recover to the will, will make θέλημα (the will of God) the term again to which, (as the ſnare of the devil was the term out of which) they recover; and accordingly θέλημα Θεοῦ, the will of God, is his will to be obeyed, or practiſed, Epheſ. 6. 6. and ſo our ſanctification is ſaid to be the will of God. As for a third poſſible rendring of it, that they ſhould be ſaid to be taken and caught by the Devil, at or according to the will of God, permitting them ſo to be, that is made improbable by the punctation, the comma's before and after, ἐζωγρημένοι ὑπ' αὐτοῦ, taken, or caught, by him, putting thoſe words as in a parentheſis, and connecting εἰς τὸ ἐκείνου θέλημα, to the will of him, to the Verb precedent ἀνανήψωσιν recover, thus, whether they may not recover to his will, that is, to that ſtate, thoſe practices, which God requires: As for the diſtance betwixt ἐκείνου of him here, and Θεὸς God v. 25. which may make this interpretation leſs probable, it is very ordinarily to be obſerved, and in the very next chapter, ver. 8, 9. we have an example of it, where the ὡς καὶ ἡ ἐκείνων as alſo their's in the end of the ninth verſe, is as far diſtant from Jannes and Jambres in the beginning of the eighth verſe, (to which it certainly refers) as ἐκείνων is diſtant here from Θεὸς. Theophylact goes farther yet, and will have the phraſe, caught and taken by him, refer to God alſo. But that cannot well be admitted, becauſe in all reaſon they muſt be conceived to be caught by him who lays the ſnare, and that is the Devil in the former part of the verſe.

CHAP. III.

Paraphraſe.

* hard χαλεποὶ

1. THis know alſo, that in the laſt days * perilous times ſhall come.] 1. But you are to take notice of the prediction of Chriſt, Mat. 24. 9, 12. that in theſe times preceding that famous coming of Chriſt, to puniſh the crucifiers and perſecutors, and relieve the faithful Chriſtians (ſee 1 Tim 4. 1. Jam. 5. 3.) there ſhall approach very ſharp perſecutions from the Jews cauſed by the Gnoſticks, whoſe character is made up of theſe ſo many vices following,

† impure or irreverent ἀνόσιοι

2. For men ſhall be lovers of their own ſelves,] covetous, boaſters, proud, blaſphemers, diſobedient to parents, unthankful, † unholy, 2. That inſtead of Chriſtian charity, that takes care for the good of others, they conſider only and intend themſelves,

* cruel, not lovers of the good ἄστοργοι, ἀφιλάγαθοι

3. Without natural affection, truce-breakers, falſe accuſers, incontinent, [* fierce, deſpiſers of thoſe that are good,] 3. fiercely and bloodily diſpoſed, haters and perſecutors of all good men,

† petulant, puft up, προπετεῖς τετυφωμένοι

4. Traitors, † heady, high-minded, lovers of pleaſures more than lovers of God,] 4. Betraying their fellow-Chriſtians into the perſecutors hands, Mat. 10. 21. and 24. 9, 10. inſolent perſons (ſee Note on 1 Cor. 13. d.) that pretend great depth of knowledge, but prefer their luſts before Chriſt,

* ſhew or image μόρφωσιν

5. Having a * form of godlineſs, but denying the power thereof; from ſuch turn away.] 5. Pretending Chriſtianity, but doing nothing like Chriſtians: Theſe do thou avoid, converſe not with them.

† and pleaſures, for the King's MS. adds καὶ ἡδοναῖς

6. For of this ſort are they which creep into houſes, and lead captive ſilly women laden with ſins, led away with divers luſts †,] 6. See Note on Rev. 2. n.

7. Ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth.] 7. Who being diſciples of the Gnoſticks (which undertake to know ſo much) pretend to be learning that deep knowledge of them, but certainly never learn any thing that is good or Chriſtian of them.

a.

8. Theſe being given to ſorcery (ſee v. 13. and Rev. 9. c.) and making uſe of it to contend with the Apoſtles, and to draw men from Chriſt, cannot better be compared than to thoſe famous magicians Jannes and Jambres, who undertook to do as great miracles as Moſes, Exod. 7. 11. men that are drawn quite from the Goſpel, very far from being true Chriſtians.

8. * Now as [a] Jannes and Jambres withſtood Moſes, ſo do theſe alſo reſiſt the truth: men † of corrupt minds, reprobate concerning the faith.]

* But
† that have their underſtanding perverted, καλεφθαρμένοι τὸν νοῦν

9. But they are almoſt at an end of their work of deceiving, and perſecuting, and oppoſing Chriſtianity, for they ſhall be diſcovered to be impoſtors, as thoſe Magicians were.

9. But they ſhall * proceed no farther, for their † folly ſhall be manifeſt unto all men, as theirs alſo was.]

* not proceed much farther ἐ περοκόψουσιν ἐπὶ πλεῖον † or intention, for the King's MS. reads διάνοια

10. Thou haſt another pattern to follow, quite contrary to theirs, that which by my preaching I have taught, and by the conſtant form of all my actions exemplified to thee, viz. my reſolution of propagating the Goſpel where ever I was able, my fidelity in diſcharge of my office, my induring many neglects and affronts, before I would give over my endeavours to reduce impenitent ſinners, my zeal to the glory of God and good of ſouls, and my perſeverance in all this in deſpight of perſecutions,

10. But thou haſt * fully known my doctrine, manner of life, purpoſe, faith, long-ſuffering, charity, patience,]

* followed παρηκολούθησας

11. at Piſidia, Act. 13. 45. at Iconium, Act. 14. 2. at Lyſtra, Act. 14. 18.

11. Perſecutions, afflictions, which came unto me [at Antioch, at Iconium, at Lyſtra,] what perſecutions I endured: but out of them all the Lord delivered me.

12. Yea, and at ſuch times as theſe, when Chriſtianity is ſo violently oppoſed by the unconverted Jews, it is to be expected by all that reſolve on a true conſtant Chriſtian courſe, that it ſhall infallibly bring perſecution upon them.

12. Yea, and all that will live godly in Chriſt Jeſus, ſhall ſuffer perſecution.]

13. But ſuch impious godleſs ſorcerers (ſee v. 7.) and deceivers as theſe ſhall grow every day worſe and worſe, and more pernicious than other, deceiving others, and themſelves at laſt moſt ſadly deceived and miſtaken of any, when all their arts of ſecuring ſhall but deſtroy themſelves, or being delivered up to be deceived themſelves, as a juſt judgment for their deceiving of others.

13. But evil men and † ſeducers ſhall wax worſe and worſe, deceiving and being deceived.]

† ſorcerers γόητες

14. But do thou hold faſt that form of ſound doctrine which was taught thee to teach others, and remembring from whom thou hadſt it, thou wilt have no reaſon to doubt or ſuſpect the truth of it;

14. But continue thou in the things which thou haſt learned, and * haſt been aſſured of, knowing of whom thou haſt learned them;]

* with which thou haſt been inſtructed ἐπιστώθης

15. And having been inſtructed in the underſtanding of the holy Scriptures of the Old Teſtament, ever ſince thou wert a child, thou wilt certainly, by the help of the Chriſtian doctrine which thou haſt received, be able to diſcern and underſtand the truth, and diſtinguiſh it from their falſe doctrines.

15. And that from a child thou haſt known the holy Scriptures, which are able to make thee wiſe unto ſalvation, through faith which is in Chriſt Jeſus.]

16. For all thoſe writings which, either by God's ſpirit of propheſie, or by any other afflation or incitation from God, have at any time been written by the prophets, &c. and, as ſuch, received into the Canon of the Jewiſh Church, may by us be profitably made uſe of, to teach us many things that Chriſt hath taught us, to convince us of the groſneſs of many ſins which are confidently practiſed among men, to reduce thoſe that fall through error or ignorance, to build up thoſe that have begun, and ſet out in the way of righteouſneſs:

16. All Scripture * is given by inſpiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for † correction, for inſtruction in righteouſneſs:]

* being inſpired by God, is alſo profitable θεόπνευστος, καὶ ὠφέλιμος † reformation ἐπανόρθωσιν

17. That the teacher or preacher of the Goſpel, ſent and authorized by God, may by the ſtudy of the Scripture be furniſhed for all turns, enabled to diſcharge his whole duty toward the ſouls of others.

17. That the man of God may be perfect, throughly furniſhed * unto all good works.]

* for every good work, πρὸς πᾶν

Annotations on Chap. III.

a. Ἰαννῆς καὶ Ἰαμβρῆς

V. 8. Jannes and Jambres] Theſe names of Jannes and Jambres are not to be met with in the ſtory of the Old Teſtament, but are here taken out of other records of the Jews (as divers other things mentioned in the New Teſtament; for example, Moſes's being brought up in the Ægyptian learning Act. 7. 22. and ſo likewiſe his age of forty years v. 23. when he went to viſit his brethren, which is not in Exod. 2. but in Midraſh Rabba Bereſchith, and ſo his having beforehand ſome either inſtinct or revelation from God that he ſhould be a deliverer of his people, which ſeems to be referred to Act. 7. 25. but is not in the Old Teſtament) they are queſtionleſs the names of the chief Magicians who did the miracles before Pharoah Exod. 7. Thus in the Babyloniſh Talmud, tr. Menachoth cap. 9. it is ſhewed how Johanne and Mamre reſiſted Moſes, ſaying to him in the words of the proverb Affers tu ſtramen in Afraim? which is in effect, Doſt thou caſt water into the Sea? that is, ſhew miracles here in Ægypt, which is ſo full of Magicians? So in the Chaldee Paraphraſe of Jonathan, Exod. 7. 11. Janis and Jambres are named, and Exod. 1. 15. are ſaid to be Princes, or chief, of the Magicians. In the Talmud they are called Jochanne and Mambre, in the life of Moſes, Jane and Mamre, in Zohar upon Num. 22. 22. Jones and Jambres, in Shalſhelet, John and Ambroſe, and in Tanchuma Jonos and Jombros. Of theſe and what is ſaid of them in the Hebrew writers ſee Buxtorf. Lex. Talmud. Col. 9. 545. And among the heathens, in Pliny (Nat. Hiſt. l. 30. c. 1.) there is talk of Moſes, Jannes and Cabala (or, as other copies read, Jotape) which he mentions as Jews that uſed Magick. So in Numenius the Philoſopher, in Euſebius Præp. Evang. l. 9. c. 8. Ἰαννῆς καὶ Ἰαμβρῆς Αἰγύπτιοι, ἱερογραμματεῖς ἄνδρες, δεινὸς ἥτις μαγεῦσαι κεκθένναι τὰ, &c. Jannes and Jambres skill'd in the holy things among the Ægyptians, inferiour to none in the art of Magick. So * Artabanus calls them τοὺ ἱερεῖς τοῦ Μέμφιν the prieſts above Memphis. So Origen contra Celſum l. 4. p. 205. citing out of Celſus τὰ περὶ Μωϋσέως καὶ Ἰαννᾶ καὶ Ἰαμβρᾶ ἱστορίαν, the ſtory of Moſes and Jannes and Jambres; and Palladius in the life of Macarius, that ſpeaks of a κηπολάφιον τῆς Ἰαννῆ καὶ Ἰαμβρῆ τῶν μάγων ἐπὶ τῆς Φαραώ a monument in a garden of Jannes and Jambres magicians in Pharoah's time: but this cannot well be, if it be true which is ſaid by an old Midraſh, on Exod. 15. 10. that John and Mamre were drowned in the red Sea. And to that a MS. Arabick Catena on the Pentateuch agrees in theſe words, Theſe are the names of the Magicians which ſtood up againſt Moſes, Dejannes, Jambarus, and Sarudas, and God deſtroyed them with Pharoah and his hoſt in the red ſea. And therefore it is reaſonable to conjecture, that the κηπολάφιον or garden-ſepulchre in Palladius, ſhould be κενολάφιον, an empty monument, without either of their bodies encloſed in it, to record their ſin, but not to preſerve their aſhes. To theſe Apuleius ſeems to refer, Apol. 2. where among the chief Magicians names he reckons Johannes. And to theſe S. Paul here very fitly compares the Gnoſticks, their chief founder Simon (and Menander and others after him) being a known ſorcerer, (ſee Note on Rev. 9. c.) and reſiſting the truth by lying wonders, as thoſe Magicians did. And of him we find that fulfilled in the event, which is here foretold v. 9. that he ſhould meet with the like fate and diſcovery that thoſe Magicians met with, Simon came to Rome (a ſecond time about the tenth of Nero) grew into a great eſteem with him by his ſorceries, contended there with Saint Peter as the Magicians with Moſes; (ſee Proſper de dimid. temp. c. 13. Duo Magi Pharaonis Jamnes & Jambres reſiſtentes Moiſi——& contra Neronem Petrus & Paulus Apoſtoli, at contrariò Simon Magus, qui & ſe perdidit & Neronem decepit, Moſes and Aaron came to Pharoah, Jamnes and Jambres two Magicians of Pharoah reſiſted them. Peter and Paul the Apoſtles came againſt Nero, but Simon Magus was on the other ſide, and both deſtroyed himſelf and deceived Nero, making Simon parallel to theſe Magicians) and accordingly Suetonius mentions one to fly in the air, in the eleventh of Nero. But then, as the Magicians were confuted and diſcovered, when Aaron's rod ſwallowed up their rods, Exod. 7. 12. and when they acknowleged the miracle fol. 40.

* ap. Euſeb. Præp. p. 254.

miracle of Moſes to be the finger of God, Exod. 8. 19. and the boil was upon the Magicians, Exod. 9. 11. So was the madneſs of Simon, and his Sectaries, manifeſted to all men, when he was caſt down by the prayer of Saint Peter. And of this theſe words of Saint Paul are a direct propheſie in this place. This hiſtory of Simon is thus mention'd by Arnobius l. 2. cont. Gent. ſpeaking of Rome, In qua cùm homines eſſent Numæ regis artibus atque antiquis ſuperſtitionibus occupati, non diſtulerunt tamen res patrias linquere, & veritati coaleſcere Chriſtiana. Viderant enim currum Simonis Magi, & quadrigas igneas Petri ore diſſlatas, & nominato Chriſto evanuiſſe. Viderant fidentem diis falſis & ab iiſdem metuentibus proditum, pondere præcipitatum ſuo cruribus jacuiſſe præfractis, pòſt deinde perlatum Brundam, cruciatibus & pudore deſeſſum ex altiſſimi culminis ſe rurſum præcipitaſſe faſtigio, They that had been uſed to Numa's arts, and antient ſuperſtitions (the heathen Romans) forſook all and followed Chriſt, having ſeen Simon Magus's Chariot and fiery horſes diſpell'd with Peter's † mouth, and vaniſh at the name of Chriſt, and ſeeing him that relyed on his falſe gods betray'd by them and fall headlong on the ground, breaking his legs with the weight, and after that being brought to Brunda, being tormented and aſhamed, he caſt himſelf down again from the top of a high houſe, and ſo periſhed. So Saint Cyrill in his ſixth Catechiſm; Επλάνησέ τε, &c. He ſo deceived the city of Rome that Claudius ſet him up a ſtatue, and after his hereſie diſfuſing it ſelf, Peter and Paul Governours of that Church deſtroyed him, ſetting himſelf out, and being by others eſteemed and worſhip'd as a God; for when Simon undertook to flie, and was carried up in the air by a chariot of the Devil's, theſe ſervants of God falling on their knees caſt againſt him that dart which Chriſt directs to, Mat. 18. 19. that weapon of agreement of two in prayer, and thereby caſt him to the ground. So Sulpitius Severus hiſt. l. 2. Saint Auguſtin Serm. 3 in Natali S. Petri & Pauli, and Iſidore Peluſiote, Ἐξ ὕψους καταπήχθη ὁ δείλαιος πρὸς ἣ πολυθρύλλητον θάνατον, &c. miſerable creature he was thrown down from aloft to a notorious infamous death. And that this warning of S. Paul to Timothy belongs to thoſe that then lived, and not to ſome that were to come toward the end of the world, theſe latter days of ours, may appear, ver. 5. by the exhortation to him to turn away from ſuch. And upon this conſideration Theophylact confeſſeth, that by the laſt times may be meant thoſe immediately following S. Paul's death, wherein Timothy ſhould ſurvive.

CHAP. IV. Paraphraſe.

1. I Charge thee therefore before God and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who ſhall judge the quick and the dead [at his appearing and his kingdom:] 1. when he appears in his kingdom.

2. Preach the word, [* be inſtant in ſeaſon, out of ſeaſon, reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long-ſuffering and doctrine.] 2. urge them, preſs them, call upon them both when they are at leiſure to hear thee, when thou haſt ſome ſpecial opportunity or vacancy to faſten any thing upon them, and at other times, when thou haſt not ſuch probable opportunities, hoping that at ſome time or other it will ſucceed, convince the evil doers of their wicked courſes, reduce by reprehenſion thoſe that are fallen, but not ſo foully, through error, &c. confirm thoſe that have begun well, and let all this be done with lenity and diligent inſtructing of them.

* urge them ἐπίσηθι

3. For the time will come when they will not endure ſound doctrine, but after their own luſts ſhall they heap to themſelves teachers, having itching ears,] 3. This I preſcribe, as the method proper for the preſent condition of thoſe under thee, that thou mayſt gain as many as is poſſible, as foreſeeing that the number of obſtinate hereticks will ſo increaſe within a while, that there will be little for thee then to do, little hope of working on them, when men begin to advance to the higher pitch of hereſie, and (to get patrons for their baſe luſts and vicious practices) betake themſelves to falſe teachers, any that will pleaſe or gratifie their humor,

4. And ſhall turn away their ears from the truth, and ſhall be turned unto fables.] 4. And refuſe and reject all true doctrine, and betake themſelves to the fabulous divinity of the Gnoſticks, made up of Gentiliſm and Judaiſm, an odd mixture of both.

† endure patiently κακοπάθησον ch. 2. 3.

5. But watch thou in all things, † endure afflictions, do the work of an Evangeliſt, * make full proof of thy miniſtery.] 5. But do thou watch over thy flock with all diligence and warineſs, be not diſcouraged with any preſſures or dangers, hold out in deſpight of them all, do that which belongs to one that is by the Apoſtles of Chriſt intruſted (under them) with the propagating of the Goſpel, and maintaining it, where it is taught, which being a task of ſome weight and largeneſs, ſee thou perform all the parts of it.

* fulfil πληροφόρησον

6. For I am † now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure * is at hand.] 6. And this the rather, becauſe I have been in great danger, brought out to be tryed for my life, (ſee title of this Epiſtle Note a. and Phil. 2. Note e.) and my death hath been very nigh at hand.

† already poured out, ἤδη σπένδομαι

Which I can mention cheerfully, as having the teſtimony of my conſcience, that I have behaved my ſelf faithfully in my combate, run all the hazards, and paſs'd through them, and never fallen off from the diſcharge of my duty according to my Chriſtian profeſſion, and office Apoſtolical.

* hath been nigh at hand ἐφέστηκε

8. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteouſneſs, which the Lord the righteous judge ſhall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them alſo that † love his appearing.] 8. For this I doubt not but God will give me my reward, when he comes to crown his combatants, even that eternal bliſs and felicity, which as the judge or rewarder in the Olympick games or combates, he will certainly adjudge to me, as one who have endured much therein. And the ſame will he adjudge to all others, who ſhall have ſo ſpent their time, and continued in a Chriſtian courſe, as that Chriſt's coming to reward the faithful, and to deſtroy all oppoſers and unfaithful, may be matter of deſire and not terror to them, who if they live not to enjoy his deliverances here, will be abundantly recompenſed by death.

9. * Do thy diligence to come ſhortly unto me.] 9. I deſire with all poſſible ſpeed that thou come hither to me.

10. For Demas hath forſaken me, having loved this preſent world, and is departed unto Theſſalonica, Creſcens to Galatia, Titus unto Dalmatia.] 10. There being theſe motives to haſten thee, Firſt becauſe Demas, that did aſſiſt me in preaching the Goſpel, Philem. 24. and Col. 4. 14. hath now left me, betaking himſelf to his worldly affairs, (ſee Note on 1 Tim. 3. a.) and is gone to Theſſalonica, whether to his home there, or to trade, and get wealth in that place. As for Creſcens, though he be gone into Gallia, (or France, ſaith Epiphanius, Hær. Ἀλογ.) yet that is not for any ſuch worldly end, but to preach the Goſpel there, and ſo Titus is gone another way to Dalmatia.

11. Only Luke is with me. Take Mark, and bring him with thee: for he is profitable to me for the miniſtery. 11. By which means I am almoſt alone, no body but Luke remaining with me, which makes me ſtand in need of thy help and preſence. 15. Of whom be thou ware alſo, for he hath greatly withſtood our words.]

16. At my coming to Rome, when I was to plead for my ſelf, all my acquaintance (all that were able to have ſtood me in any ſtead, either by their power at Rome, or by their teſtimonies in my defence) forſook me, for fear of ſuffering, (I pray God to pardon them for it.)

16. At my firſt anſwer no man ſtood with me, but all men forſook me: I pray God that it may not be laid to their charge.]

17. Yet God aſſiſted and vindicated my innocence, that the Goſpel might be preached by my means, and ſo the Romans, the Gentiles might receive it (ſee Phil. 4. 22.) and to that end I was at that time delivered from a moſt conſiderable preſent danger, though not freed from priſon.

Annotations on Chap. IV.

a. Αγών

V. 7. I have ſought ——] Theſe two verſes are wholly Agoniſtical. Ἀγών is any of the four famous games, Olympick, &c. (and of that, as it ſignifies ſuffering of afflictions, ſee 1 Theſſ. 2 b.) Δρόμος is one ſort of combat in either of thoſe four, that of racing. The ἀγών is called καλὸς good, either as being in a good cauſe, or as νόμιμος c. 2. 5. according to the laws of the agones; and ſo his fighting a good fight is ſuffering Chriſtianly and valiantly. Τελεῖν is to perform, and ſo τελεῖν δρόμον to run, or perform the race, (ſee Note a. on Act. 21.) Then τηρεῖν πίστιν not referring to his whole life, but this one combat here inſiſted on, his danger at Rome. And then τηρεῖν πίστιν, to keep the faith, is to obſerve the Goſpel rules, and ſo not to offend againſt the νόμοι laws of the combat, (ſee Note on the title of this Epiſtle.) Thus in thoſe writings that go under Triſmegiſtus's name we have Κλεῖδ. l. 4. p. 2.) ἡ ψυχὴ ἡ τὰ τῆς εὐσεβείας ἀγῶνα ἠγωνισμένη, the ſoul that hath undertaken and performed this ſtrife, or combat, of piety. Then the στέφανος crown, that is, the βραβεῖον, the reward, and that is here called στέφανος δικαιοσύνης, crown of righteouſneſs, poſſibly in the notion that the Hebrew צדקה (to which δικαιοσύνη righteouſneſs is anſwerable) is taken Iſa. 48. 18. Nehem. 2. 20. Pſal. 35. 27. that is for felicity. As Prov. 8. 18. where wealth and righteouſneſs are put together. Abenezra interprets it felicity, or proſperity; and ſo δικαιοσύνη is uſed Rom. 6. 16. and oppoſed to death, by which it there appears to ſignifie eternal life. But it may alſo ſignifie a righteous life, which is thus rewarded and crowned by God. Then δίκαιος κριτὴς the righteous judge is the βραβευτὴς who gives the crown to the conquerour.

b. φελόνης

V. 13. Cloak] The authority which I have for rendring φελόνην the roll, is from the antient Gloſſaries. Thus Phavorinus, φελόνης εἰλητὸν τὸ μάλιον βιβλίαριον, which without queſtion ſhould be written thus, τομάλιον μεμβράνου, and ſo the explication of φελόνης will be, a little piece of parchment folded up, which perhaps may be all one with the μεμβράνα hereafter mentioned, becauſe they being added with a μάλιστα δὲ, but eſpecially, ſeem to denote ſomewhat which had been formerly mentioned, rather than any new thing. See S. Hierom Ep. 125. ad Damaſ. q. 2.

c. Ἀποδώσῃ

V. 14. The Lord reward] Of this form of ſpeech Ἀποδώσῃ Κύριος, 'tis not here amiſs to note that the full importance of it is no more than a Prophetical denunciation or prediction that ſhould in the juſt judgment of God befal. Thus ſome of the beſt MSS. read Ἀποδώσει, the Lord ſhall reward; others of the antients who read ἀποδώσῃ reward, yet expound it ἀποδώσει ſhall reward. So the Author of the queſtions and anſwers, aſſigned to Juſtin, making it προφῆτευσιν a prediction. So Chryſoſtom and Theophylact ἀποδῷ, ἀντὶ τοῦ ἀποδώσει, it is inſtead of the future, ſhall render, adding that pious men do not rejoice in, or deſire to haſten the puniſhments of the wicked, but that they foretel them, the Goſpel and weak believers having need of ſuch comforts. To this may be added, that it is a vulgar Hebraiſm for the Imperative and Future tenſe to be uſed promiſcuouſly, the one for the other. יגמר Pſal. 7. 9. in the future, complebitur or conſumetur, ſhall be conſumed or fulfilled, is yet by the antient Interpreters rendred in the Imperative; συντελεσθήτω, ſay the LXXII. Let it be accompliſh'd; and ſo the Chaldee, Syriack, Arabick, and Æthiopick, and only the Vulgar Latin retains conſumetur, ſhall be conſumed. Thus on the other ſide, Mat. 10. 13. εἰρήνη ὑμῶν πρὸς ὑμᾶς ἐπιστραφήτω, Let your peace return to you, is a ſure promiſe from Chriſt, or prediction, that their peace ſhall return to them; and thus is it innumerable times in the ſacred dialect of theſe Books.

d. λέοντος στόμα

V. 17. The mouth of the Lion] Στόμα λέοντος, the mouth of the Lion, is commonly thought here to ſignifie Nero, ſo ſtyled becauſe of his cruelty. But as there is no reaſon to believe that Paul was now admitted to Nero's own hearing, but may more probably be thought to have been heard before ſome inferior Judge at Rome; ſo it is very reaſonable to expound the mouth of the Lion, as a Proverbial form, to ſignifie ſome preſent, devouring danger, from the gaping of the Lion after his prey, and the direfulneſs of that.

THAT Titus a convert of Paul's, after imployed by him, was at length ordained by him the Archbiſhop of the Iſland of Crete, there to ordain Biſhops in every city, is intimated c. 1. 5. and cleared by all antient writers. So Euſebius l. 3. c. 4. affirms him τὸν ἐπὶ Κρήτης Ἐκκλησιῶν ἐπισκοπῶν εἰληχέναι to have been Biſhop of the Churches of Crete. So Chryſoſtom*, that Titus was without doubt an approved perſon to whom was committed ὁλόκληρον νῆσον, an intire Iſland, καὶ τοσούτων Ἐπισκόπων κεῖσις, and the juriſdiction of ſo many Biſhops, So †Theodoret, that he was by Paul ordained Biſhop τῆς Κρήτης μεγίσης οὔσης, of Crete being very great, τοὺς ὑπ' αὐτὸν Ἐπισκόπους χειροτονῆσαι, to ordain Biſhops under him. So the Scholiaſt, Ἀπόστολος Τίτον ἐπὶ τὸ καθαιρῆσαι ἐπισκόπους καθέλιπεν, ἐπίσκοπον πρότερον ποιήσας, The Apoſtle left Titus to ordain Biſhops, having made him Biſhop firſt. And S. Jerom in Catal. Titus Epiſcopus Cretæ in eadem & in circumjacentibus inſulis prædicavit Evangelium Chriſti, Titus was Biſhop of Crete, and in it and the ambient Iſlands he preached the Goſpel of Chriſt; making him Biſhop in that Iſland, and extending his charge to other Iſlands alſo. The time when Paul thus left him at Crete ſeems to be rightly ſet by Baronius, when Paul went into Greece from Macedonia, Act. 20. 2. which he conceives he did not by land, but by ſea, in which journey, ſaith he, by the Ægean ſea he came to Crete. And this was about An. Chr. 54. Soon after this an. 55. when he came into Greece, he is ſaid to have written this Epiſtle to him, to inſtruct and direct him in the diſcharge of his office; but whether it were at Nicopolis that he wrote it, or whether it were before the beginning of the winter, which he determined to ſpend there, is left uncertain, c. 3. 12.

3. And hath in that ſeaſon which he thought fit to deſign for it, moſt clearly now revealed by the preaching of the Goſpel, that which was committed to me as an Apoſtle by Chriſt's immediate appointment,

4. To Titus mine own ſon after the common faith,] Grace, mercy, and peace from God the Father, and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt our Saviour.

4. To Titus whom I firſt converted to the faith, preaching it according to Chriſt's appointment, to Gentiles (ſuch was he) as well as Jews.

5. For this cauſe left I thee in Crete, that thou ſhouldſt ſet in order the things that are wanting, and ordain Elders in every city, as I had appointed thee,]

5. In our paſſage through Crete, I conſtituted thee Biſhop there, that thou mighteſt diſpoſe and ſettle thoſe things there, which I by the ſhortneſs of my ſtay omitted to ſettle, and to ordain Biſhops in each city of that Iſland (ſee Note on Act. 11. b. and 14. b.) according to the directions which I then mentioned to thee, how they ſhould be qualified.

To wit, that thou ſhouldſt ordain none but ſuch as ſhould be approved by teſtimony of the Church, (ſee Note on Act. 6. b.) to be under no ſcandalous ſin, which live not with a ſecond wife after putting away the firſt (ſee Note on 1 Tim. 3. b.) whoſe children, if they have any, have all received the faith (for if he bring not up his own children to be Chriſtian, what hope is there that he will be fit to convert others, and to rule in the Church?) and live temperately and regularly.

7. For a biſhop muſt be blameleſs, [as the ſteward of God:] not ſelf-willed, not ſoon angry, not given to wine, no ſtriker, not given to filthy lucre;

† deceivers of ſouls φρεναπάται

10. For there are already many unruly perſons that reſiſt our doctrine, and vent idle fanſies of their own, and ſeduce and corrupt others from the truth to their corrupt ways, which will be the ruining of them: And theſe are thoſe eſpecially that ſtand up as advocates for the obſervation of the Jewiſh Law.

11. Whoſe mouths muſt be ſtopped, who ſubvert whole houſes, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucres ſake.]

11. And theſe are not to be permitted to vent their deceits, for they ſeduce, where they come, whole families at once, and infuſe abominable doctrines into them, and thereby make advantage to themſelves.

* idle ἀργαὶ

conſcience, all kinds of meats, are lawful: but to impure unchriſtian Gnoſticks, every thing they do (though it were in it ſelf lawful) would become a matter of ſin to them, their wicked life hath ſo blinded their judgment, that they cannot judge aright, what is lawful, what not.

16. They call themſelves Gnoſticks, aſſuming to themſelves eſpecial knowledge of God;

16. They profeſs that they know God, but in works they deny him, being abominable and diſobedient, and unto every good work reprobate.]

but their lives are quite contrary to all piety, and acknowledgment of God, guilty of all deteſtable unnatural ſins, diſobedient to all that are placed over them in the Church, not wrought on by any admonition, and quite contrary to all Chriſtian practice.

Annotations on Chap. I.

1. πρὸ χρόνων αἰωνίων

V. 2. Before the world began] Of the word αἰὼν that it ſignifies an age, or long ſpace of time, ſeè Note on Luk. 1. p. by analogy with which αἰώνιος ſignifies antient, or long ago, but not always eternal; and χρόνοι αἰώνιοι here being ſpoken not of a decree, but of a promiſe of God's, and ſuch as cannot be broken without lying (which muſt therefore ſignifie ſuch a promiſe which was made to ſome body, and not only his ſecret unrevealed purpoſe) cannot well be interpreted of eternity, but of ſome long time ago, under the times of the Old Teſtament, ſuch as was made to Abraham, Gen. 15. 1. And thus the phraſe πρὸ αἰώνιων χρόνων is all one with ἐκ γενεῶν ἀρχαίων from antient generations, Act. 15. 21. ſpeaking of Moſes's time. And accordingly αἰώνιον is oft uſed in the Old Teſtament, either for that which is likely to laſt long, or whoſe beginning is long ago. So Prov. 22. 28. αἰώνιον for antient, Iſa. 58. 12. and 61, 4. αἰώνιον old, Ezech. 36. 2. αἰώνια antient. And ſo 2 Tim. 1. 9. though the ſcope of the place will allow it to ſignifie eternity, God's mercy being decreed to us in Chriſt before all time, yet the phraſe of it ſelf ſignifies no more than before antient times, long while ago.

b. Προφήτης

V. 12. Prophet of their own] of Epimenides the author of this verſe, it is known that he took upon him to teach men how the judgments of Heaven, when at any time they fell on a city, peſtilence, famine, &c. were to be averted. A ſtory of this is notorious in Diogenes Laertius, and is ſet down Note on Act. 17. g. And ſo ſaith Theophylact of him, that as he was one of the wiſeſt men among the Grecians, ſo he was θειασμοῖς καὶ ἀποτροπιασμοῖς περισχών, one that ſet himſelf to find out and teach others what ceremonies were to be uſed to avert the anger of the Gods (which they that did, are called among the heathens prieſts and diviners, 1 Sam. 6. 1, 2.) He farther ſaith of him, that he did ſeem μαντικὴν καλλιθῦσαι, to rectifie divination, and accordingly, ſaith Laertius, θεοφιλέστατον, one very much in the favour of the Gods; but this, as it is elſewhere ſhewn at large, (Note on Luk. 1. n.) not referring only to prediction of things to come, but directing them in their duty for preſent actions. This gives an account of the reaſon why he is here called a prophet of their own, one ſo deemed by them. And as moſt ſuch were among them, ſo was he, a Poet alſo. Of him ſaith Chryſoſtom and Theophylact, that ſeeing the Cretians build a Sepulchral monument to Jupiter, and worſhip him as one that was or had been but a man, ζηλώσας in zeal, and jealouſie, and rage, for that God of his, he writes theſe verſes to Jupiter, beginning,

Ἴδιος αὐτῶν Προφήτης

Κρῆτες ἀεὶ ψεῦσαι

Which Chryſoſtom makes up into a Diſtich,

——— σὺ γὰρ τάφον, ὦ ἄνα, σεῖο
Κρῆτες ἐτεκτήναντο, σὺ δ' οὐ θάνες, ἐσσὶ γὰρ αἰεί.

The Cretans are always liars, for they have built thee a tomb, but thou haſt never died, but ſhalt continue for ever. But it muſt here be obſerved, that theſe verſes are in Callimachus's hymn πρὸς Δία, which that they are the very lines here referred to in Epimenides, doth no way appear but by Chryſoſtom's conjecture; nay the contrary muſt be concluded by the κακὰ θηρία that here follows, but not in Callimachus. It is then moſt probable that Callimachus borrowed thence the firſt words, and added the reſt of his own, and ſo applied it to his purpoſe. And then it remains that this was not the occaſion of theſe words of Epimenides cited by S. Paul, and then all S. Chryſoſtom's ſuppoſed difficulties are at an end, which he raiſed on ſuppoſal that the verſe here cited by S. Paul referred to Jupiter (for it was no lie that Jupiter was mortal and had died.) However this were, Epimenides his words, as far as S. Paul cites them, are true, and the matter notorious, even to a proverb that the Cretans were liars, and accordingly in Cebes's table, οἱ δὲ κεῖθι, is juſtly deemed to be falſly written for οἱ δὲ κρῆθι in this notion of κρηθίζειν for ψεύδεσθαι and ἀπατᾶν, lying and deceiving. See Petiti Miſcell. l. 4. c. 4. And ſo in that more general account, and not in this particular reſpect, Saint Paul here calls them liars, for to that the ἀεὶ ψεῦσαι always liars, in Epimenides, belonged, and not to one act of theirs. So in like manner doth S. Paul take out of Arratus, and apply to the true God, thoſe words which that heathen applied ψευδωνύμῳ Θεῷ τῷ Διΐ, to Jupiter falſly ſtyled a God, by this means ſtopping their mouths with teſtimonies out of their own authors; as to the Jews he elſewhere argues out of the Prophets of the Old Teſtament, which were of force with them, and not out of the Goſpels.

Ἀεὶ ψεῦσαι

c. γασέρες ἀργαὶ

Ib. Slow bellies] What is here meant by γασέρες ἀργαὶ is matter of ſome queſtion. Phavorinus ſeems to have read it γασέρεως ἀργοὶ, and renders it γασείμαργοι, great eaters; and ſo indeed that word, proverbially uſed for gluttons, ſeems to be made of γαστὴρ belly, and ἀργὸς, not in the notion of βραδὺς ſlow or idle, but of ταχὺς ſwift (ſo ſaith Heſychius, ἀργὸς ταχεῖς, and in Homer κύνες ἀργοὶ, are ſwift, eager dogs;) and ſo ſignifies greedy devourers. And to this ſenſe hath Guil. Canterus with full confidence interpreted the phraſe, Nov. Lect. l. 1. c. 15. But that which to me ſeems more facile, is to render γασέρες bellies, as Heſychius doth τερπῆς μόνας ὀπτηδήμιον, they that take no care but for food: and ſo the word bellies will be proverbially taken for gluttonous perſons, as in Heſiod's Theogonia, from whence the latter part of this verſe ſeems to be imitated, and lightly changed,

Ποιμένες ἀργεσταὶ, κακὴ ἐλέγχεα γαστέρες οἷον

And then ἀργαὶ idle annex'd to it will ſignifie all thoſe ſins of uncleanneſs conſequent to gluttony, which are alſo proverbially expreſs'd by idleneſs, as in Sodom, Ezech. 16. 49. and ſo ſeem to ſignifie here among the Gnoſtick hereticks in Crete.

d. V. 15. Unto the pure——] The meaning of this verſe will be diſcerned by conſidering the doctrine of the Gnoſticks (which here, and through this whole Epiſtle, he arms them againſt) that talked much of Chriſtian liberty, and extended it to the partaking of idol feaſts, and to all the filthineſs of the fleſh, calling themſelves the Spiritual and Perfect, to whom all theſe things were lawful and indifferent or free. Theſe are they that pervert the truth, ver. 14. teach things which are not lawful,

v. 11. and are μεμιασμένοι polluted, in the latter end of this verſe. Now the notion of lawful or indifferent is here expreſs'd by pure, that is, that hath no impurity or turpitude in it, defileth not the conſcience. Of which ſort of things the Apoſtle here pronounceth that to them that live pure lives, and unſpotted from the pollutions of the fleſh, theſe indifferent things may thus freely be uſed. And this he thus expreſſes, To the pure all things καθαροῖς καθαροῖς are pure, that is, They that ſtrictly abſtain from unlawful freedoms may with a ſafe conſcience uſe any lawful liberties; but to them that are defiled and unfaithful, that is, to polluted, filthy, Apoſtate Gnoſticks, nothing is pure, there is no place for ſuch pretences as theſe, that what they do they do with a good conſcience, their mind and conſcience is defiled, they are far from thoſe faithful and knowers of the truth, 1 Tim. 4. 3. who have this liberty there allow'd them, their mind is polluted with peſtilent errors, and their conſcience with knowledge and memory of their foul ſins, and ſo Chriſtian liberty belongs nothing to them. That this is the meaning of καθαροῖς to the pure, and not only to them that count theſe indifferent things lawful, may appear by the latter part of the verſe, where μεμιασμένοις the polluted are ſet oppoſite to the καθαροῖ pure, to whom nothing is pure or lawful; that is, the things that are in themſelves moſt indifferent, are by them done in a polluted manner, their eating things offered to idols is far from being lawful or indifferent in them, Chriſtian liberty can never excuſe them, or be pretended for them.

14. Who came into this world in form of fleſh, and delivered himſelf up to a ſhameful death, on purpoſe that he might ranſom us out of the power of Satan, from that courſe of vicious living in which men were before engaged, Rom. 8. 20. and cleanſe us in an eminent manner to be an holy pious people, moſt diligent to advance to the higheſt pitch of all vertue.

Annotations on Chap. II.

a. πρεσβύτας V. 2. Aged men] It is not certain here what is meant by πρεσβύτας. The word may denote the antienter ſort of men, and no more: But the Context ſeems to incline it to Church-officers. For this Epiſtle being written to Titus a Biſhop, who was to ordain ſuch, and that which is here ſaid being the enumerating the qualifications of ſuch, it is evident that it refers to ſome ſuch order, unto which, upon choice and approbation of their qualifications, ſome were to be received, and not others. Whereas of the νεώτεροι or juniors, that is the ordinary Chriſtians aſſumed to no office, the ſtyle is altered, no more than this, that he ſhould admoniſh them to be ſober, ver. 6. Thus the Commentaries under S. Hierom's name, Senes ætate & ordine poſſunt intelligi, Thoſe antient men may be here underſtood that are ſuch both for age and order. But what order is here noted is uncertain ſtill. The word πρεσβύτης may ſeem to be that which is turned into the Latin Presbyter, the σ being ordinarily turned into r, as μάρτυς, martyr, λίσυς, ligur, κέλης, celer, and the like; and ſo the Commentaries under S. Hierom's name interpret it, Eccleſiæ Seniores, the Elders of the Church. But it is much more likely that it is the order of Deacon; firſt, becauſe the comparing of the inſtructions which are here given to Titus for his Province with thoſe to Timothy for his, 1 Tim. 3. 1. doth infer this. There the qualifications of a Biſhop are firſt ſet down, that he ſhould be blameleſs, the husband of one wife, &c. and ſo here chap. 1. 6, 7, 8, 9.

almoſt in the ſame words: Both after the example of Jethro's direction to Moſes for the chooſing of rulers over the Iſraelites, Exod. 18. 21. And proportionably as after the Biſhops the Apoſtle gives Timothy directions for Deacons, the Deacons likewiſe muſt be grave, &c. ver. 8. ſo here the directions are given for πρεσβῦ, that they be ſober, grave, &c. By which it may reaſonably be concluded, that the πρεσβῦ here are the Deacons there. And accordingly they that are here called πρεσβύτιδες in the Feminine, but to Timothy γυναῖκες women only, are generally in the antient Church called διακονίσσαι deaconeſſes. Secondly, It is formerly cleared, Note on Phil. 1. a. that at the firſt in every city the Apoſtles and Apoſtolical men inſtituted none but a Biſhop and Deacons, and that there never was any Biſhop inſtituted, but there were Deacons alſo to attend upon him. To which it is conſequent that here being mention of no other ſtyle which can belong to Deacons, this of πρεσβῦ ſhould denote them. As for the title of πρεσβῦ, ſenes, antient men, it is not improper to ſignifie theſe: for as πρεσβύτεροι the Elders in the Comparative are the Governours of the Church, and νεώτεροι the younger, the ordinary believers under Government; ſo πρεσβῦ is the middle betwixt thoſe, the Poſitive to πρεσβύτεροι, and ſo inferior to them, and yet ſuperior to νεώτεροι, as the Deacons are under the Biſhop, but over the brethren, or ordinary believers.

b. Καλάσημα

V. 3. In behaviour] Καλάσημα the Noun cometh from the Verb καλασῆσαι, which we find uſed chap. 1. 5. and Act. 6. 3. for ordination or conſecration of Church-officers, according to that which Grammarians have obſerved; Καλασὰς, (perhaps it ſhould be καλασαθεὶς) πεγχειρισθεὶς, in Suidas, noting office or function committed to any. And therefore in all reaſon it muſt ſignifie the rank of thoſe who are thus conſtituted Officers of the Church, in the ſame manner as from καλαλέσειν, uſed for chuſing officers of the Church, the Eccleſiaſtical word κάλλογος the catalogue, and ἱερὸς κάλλογος the ſacred catalogue, doth frequently ſignifie the liſt of Eccleſiaſtical perſons. This is that which in aftertimes was called κανὼν, when οἱ ἐν κανόνι, they in the rule, is the ſtyle of the Officers of the Church. Thus it may firſt appear by the Context here. Saint Paul giving directions to Titus for the ordaining of Biſhops chap. 1. 5. paſſes orderly to the next degree of Church-officers chap. 2. 2. under the name of πρεσβῦ· and then after thoſe ſucceeds πρεσβύτιδες, as ſeveral ſorts of Church-officers under one another. Secondly, by the qualifications which are here ſet down both for the πρεσβῦ and πρεσβύτιδες (in like manner as for the διάκονοι and γυναῖκες, that is, ſaith Theophylact, the deaconeſſes, 1 Tim. 3.) which ſure cannot be applied to them under the notion of aged men or women, but only as ſuch as Titus was to ordain in each city. Whereas the younger women are mentioned in another manner, thus, ver. 4, 5. the πρεσβύτιδες muſt σωφρονίζειν τὰς νέας, diſcipline the young women to be ſober, &c. which is again an intimation of a part of the function of the πρεσβύτιδες, to be as σωφρονισαὶ among the Athenians (of which ſee Note c.) Thirdly, by the word ἱερόπρεπεῖς, compounded of ἱερὸς, which is the word peculiar for ſacred, whether perſons or things, that is, for thoſe which are ſet apart to the ſervice of God (as ἱερομάρτυρες are peculiarly the clergy martyrs; ſee Note on Rev. 3. c.) and ſo ſignifies ſuch as having taken a ſacred habit upon them, (ἐν τῷ σχήματι κελαζομένῳ, Concil. Nic. cap. 19.) behave themſelves worthy of it. Fourthly, by the nature of the word, which denotes dignity as well as age, and differs little from the word Presbyteræ, by which the Deaconeſſes are expreſs'd by Baronius, out of ſome of the Antients. Thus do the Commentaries under S. Ambroſe's name underſtand it, Annus in ſtatu religione digno, reading it in the Greek ἱερόπρεπεῖ, where religio ſignifies thoſe that are in ſome ſacred function. And thoſe under S. Jerom's name, on 1 Tim. 3. 11. Similiter eas ut Diaconos eligi jubet, unde intelligitur quòd de his dicat quas adhuc hodie in Oriente Diaconiſſas appellant, He commands them to be choſen in like manner as the Deacons, from whence 'tis to be underſtood that he ſpeaks of thoſe which now in the Eaſt they call Deaconeſſes. And the words are clear in the 11th. Canon of the Council of Laodicea, Μὴ δεῖν τὰς λεγομένας πρεσβύτιδας ἤτοι πρεσκαθημένας ἐν ἐκκλησίᾳ καθίσαι, thoſe that are called antient women, to wit, thoſe that preſide in the Church, muſt not be ordained. Where 'tis clear that the πρεσβύτιδες are ſaid to be Præſidentes, a note of ſome function over which they were ſet in the Church, as the addition of ἐν ἐκκλησίᾳ in the Church demonſtrates, (and not only of age.) And although the Canon there appoints μὴ δεῖν καθίσαι, that they ſhould not be ordained; yet firſt that very prohibition is an argument that they were in the Church: and to that Epiphanius agrees Hær. 79. Φαῖνεσθαι δ' ὅτι ἄχει διακονισσῶν τὸ ἐκκλησιαστικὸν ἐπεδεήθη τάγμα, χήρας τε ὠνόμαζε, καὶ τούτων τὰς ἔτι χειροτέρας πρεσβύτιδας, It is to be obſerved that the Eccleſiaſtical order (τάγμα there and κατάστημα here being all one) wanted Deaconeſſes, and called them widows, and the elder of them πρεσβύτιδες· and ſecondly for the prohibition it ſelf, it ſignifies no more than this, that they ſhould not be ordained by that impoſition of hands which belonged to the other ſuperior orders in the Church. For there is a double χειροθεσία or impoſition of hands, ſaith Tharaſius, εὐλογίας and χειροτονίας, or καθιερώσεως, of bleſſing, and of ordination or conſecration: theſe were received by the firſt, not ſecond way. To the ſame purpoſe is the Concil. Epaunenſe, Can. 21. Viduarum conſecrationem, quas Diaconas vocant, penitus abrogamus, ſolùm eis pœnitentiæ benedictionem imponendo, that they were not to be ordained, but only received with a benediction ſuch as is uſed in the abſolution of a penitent. And this was firſt done againſt the Hereſie of the Cataphrygæ, which would have them ordained, and teach, or preach in the Church (in favour of Montanus's Propheteſſes) as appears by the Commentaries affix'd to Saint Ambroſe, on 1 Tim. 3. Cataphryges erroris occaſionem captantes, propter quod Diaconas mulieres alloquitur, & ipſas mulieres Diaconas ordinari jubere deſcendunt, &c. ſed Apoſtoli verbis contra ſenſum utuntur Apoſtoli, ut cùm ille mulierem in Eccleſia in ſilentio eſſe debere precipitat, illi è contra etiam authoritatem in Eccleſia vindicent miniſterii, The Cataphrygæ taking occaſion of their error from Saint Paul's ſpeaking to the Deaconeſſes, defend that they are to be ordained, &c. but they uſe his words againſt his ſenſe, and when he will not permit a woman to ſpeak in the Church, they aſſert their authority of miniſtery in the Church. By which it appears what was forbidden by thoſe Canons, the Deaconeſſes having authority or power of officiating in the Church, of preaching, in oppoſition to Saint Paul's precept of their keeping ſilence, of adminiſtring the Sacrament, *ſaith Epiphanius, (and conſequently they received ordination which belonged to ſuch;) not their being conſtituted officers in the Church, ſo as to ſerve in it: Which is all that I ſuppoſe here meant by καλάσημα. By what hath been ſaid, it will ſufficiently appear how perfectly parallel this place is to 1 Tim. 3. where ἐπίσκοπος, διάκονοι, and γυναῖκες, Biſhop, Deacons, and women, v. 11. are juſt all one with ἐπίσκοπος, πρεσβῦ and πρεσβύτιδες ἐν καλασήματι, Biſhop, antient men, and antient women in the liſt, here.

* ἀχ ἱερεῖ δὲν τι ἐπιχειρεῖν ἐπίσκοπ. Hær. 79.

c. Σωφρονίζειν

V. 4. Teach the young women to be ſober——] There were in Athens ſome choſen perſons to whom the education of youth was intruſted, and theſe are called σωφρονισαί· Ἄρχοντές τινες χειροτονηθοὶ (ſaith Phavorinus) δέκα τὸ ἀριθμὸν ἑκάστης φυλῆς, ἐπιμελοῦντο ἢ τὰ τῶν ἐφήβων σωφρονιστήρια, choſen magiſtrates, ten in number of every tribe, whoſe office it was to take care of the education of the young people: ſuch were the ἁρμόσωοι to the female ſex among the Lacedemonians (ſee Note on 2 Cor. 11. 2. a.) And proportionably with theſe, it was the office of theſe Deaconeſſes to inſtruct and take care of the younger women, and infuſe all Chriſtian practices into them.

d. Οἰκουρεῖν

V. 5. Keepers at home) Οἰκουρεῖν, to keep at home, is the office of wives. See Artemidorus Ὀνειροκ. l. 1. ὡς γὰρ ἐπὶ τὸ πολὺ οἰκουροῦσιν αἱ γυναῖκες, wives for the moſt part keep at home. This Phidias expreſſed by the Tortoiſe that carries her houſe about with her, Pauſan. Eliac. 2. See Faber's Semeſtria, p. 29. And therefore Plutarch in his γαμ. παραγγελμ. ſaith 'twas the cuſtom for women among the Ægyptians to uſe no ſhoes, ὅπως ἐν οἴκῳ διαγεμάσωσι, that they might live quietly at home. Thus the Dogs being called οἰκουροὶ, which are uſed ἐπὶ τῇ φυλακῇ χρημάτων, κλημάτων, to keep our goods, do, ſaith Artemidorus, ſignifie women, in the Oneirocriticks, or the interpreting of dreams. So in Euripides in Oreſte οἰκουρήματα ſignifies wives,

l. 2. p. 95.

εἴτ' ἔνδον οἰκουρήματ' οἱ λῃμμένοι
φθείρουσιν,

they that are left within doors corrupt their wives. Under this word οἰκουρεῖν are contained two things, both ſtaying at home and taking care of the family, as in Naumachius,

Σοὶ δ' οἰκωφελίη μελέτω, οἶκόν τε φυλάσσειν, thou art to take care of the profit of the houſe, and to look to the family. So Hector to Andromache in Homer, Ἰλιαδ. ζ.

Ἀλλ' εἰς οἶκον ἰοῦσα τὰ σαυτῆς ἔργα κόμιζε,
Ἰστόν τ' ἠλακάτην τ' ——

Go home and fall to thine own works —— on which ſaith Euſtathius, Ἐνταῦθα ἡ καλὸν οἰκεῖον εἶδος γυναιξὶ τὴν οἰκείαν γνωμαλδεῖν ὁ ποιητὴς, the Poet in thoſe words delivers a moral ſentence, that it is the proper imployment for women to keep home, and follow their domeſtick affairs. Contrary to theſe are the περιερχόμενοι τὰς οἰκίας they that go about to houſes, 1 Tim. 5. 13.

V. 14. Peculiar people] The notion of περιούσιος is ſet down by the Gloſſaries: περιούσιος λαὸς, ὁ ἐκλεκτὸς, ſaith Phavorinus, ὡς τὸ Ἰσραὴλ εἰς περιουσιασμὸν ἑαυτῷ, ἀντὶ τοῦ εἰς κλῆμα, it ſignifies acquired or purchaſed, as, Iſrael from an acquiſition, that is a poſſeſſion, to himſelf. So περιούσιος· περιποίητος, ſaith Heſychius, a purchaſed people; but eſpecially as that referreth to the richneſs, plentifulneſs, excellency of the poſſeſſion, περιουσία, πλοῦτος, πλῆθος, it denotes wealth, plenty, and περιουσιασμὸς, πλήθος, multitude, and περιούσιον, πολὺ, περισσὸν, abundant and περιούσιος· πλούσιος, πολὺς, rich, much, all in Heſychius. The full notion of it muſt be fetch'd from the Hebrew סגל, from whence סגלה ſignifies peculium, proprium, theſaurus, facultates, res chara, that which is a man's own, his treaſure, his eſtate, any thing dear unto him; and ſo עם סגל, which is generally rendred λαὸς περιούσιος, Exod. 19. 5. Deut. 7. 6. and 26. 18. is 14. 2. and 26. 18. rendred by the Targum חביב, dilectus, beloved; and ſo in Exodus alſo; and accordingly here it ſignifies, a beloved, pretious, excellent people, (for which Symmachus puts ἐκλεκτοὶ) as Mal. 3. 17. סגל is rendred by us jewels; and by Aquila περιούσιος.

CHAP. III.

Paraphraſe.

1. PUT them in mind to be ſubject to principalities and powers, to obey magiſtrates, to be ready to every good work,]

1. And let it be thy frequent and ſpecial care, to exhort all Chriſtians under thee to yield all honeſt obedience to the Kings and Governours under whom they live, and to be ready and chearful to the practice of all acts of charity,

* peaceable ἀμάχους

2. To ſpeak evil of no man, to be * no brawlers, but [gentle, ſhewing all meekneſs unto all men.]

2. very mild (ſee Note on 2 Cor. 10. a.) and patient toward thoſe that oppoſe them and truth it ſelf.

† various ποικίλαις

2. For we our ſelves were ſometimes fooliſh,] diſobedient, deceived, ſerving † divers luſts and pleaſures, living in malice and envy, hateful, and hating one another.

3. As remembring that we our ſelves, before our converſion to Chriſt, were as oppoſite to the truth, and as perverſly ſo as any can be now ſuppoſed to be.

4. But after the kindneſs and love of God our Saviour toward man appeared,]

4. But when Chriſt, of his great mercy and bounty to mankind, was pleaſed to reveal himſelf to us,

5. Not by works of righteouſneſs which we have done, but according to his mercy he ſaved us by the waſhing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghoſt,]

5. Then out of his free undeſerved mercy toward us, not in reſpect of, nor by way of return unto, any good action of ours, he reſcued and delivered us out of our ſinful courſes, put us into a ſtate of ſalvation upon our giving our ſelves up in baptiſm his vowed reformed ſervants, ſealing unto us the pardon of all our ſins, and then beſtowing his Spirit upon us, to bring forth in us all fruits of new life,

6. Which he ſhed on us abundantly through Jeſus Chriſt our Saviour;]

6. Which Spirit moſt plentifully deſcended on us from God the Father, Chriſt Jeſus his Son obtaining that mercy from him;

* by hope heirs of eternal life, κληρονόμοι— κατ' ἐλπίδα ζωῆς αἰωνίου † make it their care to ſet up good works

7. That being juſtified by his grace, we ſhould be made * heirs according to the hope of eternal life.]

7. That having our lives amended, and our ſins pardoned by his grace and mercy, we ſhould become, as children of God, his heirs (at preſent in hope) of eternal life.

8. This is a faithful ſaying, and theſe things I will that thou affirm conſtantly, that they which have believed in God might † be careful to maintain [a] good works: theſe things are good and profitable unto men.]

8. This is an important ſpecial Chriſtian doctrine, which I would have thee be earneſt in telling men, and convincing them of the importance of it; that all that have profeſſed to be Chriſtians, ſhould make it their principal care, to ſee that all that belong to them, together with themſelves, do not only live in the univerſal duties of Chriſtians, but alſo particularly follow ſome honeſt labour or vocation, v. 14. and Epheſ. 4. 28. for theſe are the things that are good in themſelves, and uſeful to mankind, of good report in the actors, and beneficial to the community, keep others from being burthened with the ſlothful, and enable them to be themſelves helpful to others.

9. But avoid fooliſh queſtions, and genealogies, and contentions, and ſtrivings about the law, for they are unprofitable and vain.]

9. As for the Gnoſticks, that employ themſelves in compiling a new model of divinity, made up of fooliſh diſputes, and of heathen notions of poetical genealogies (ſee 1 Tim. 1. 4.) and contentions about the obſerving the Moſaical Law, (that Chriſtians be circumciſed, Gal. 6. 12.) and by ſo doing put themſelves out of their calling, live idly, diſorderly, 2 Theſſ. 3. 6, 11. theſe ſpend their time upon vanities, that neither themſelves nor others are the better, but the worſe for.

10. A man that is an [b] heretick, after the [c] firſt and ſecond admonition reject:]

10. Whoſoever maketh any diviſion in the Church, that teacheth any doctrine contrary to that which hath been taught by Chriſt and the Apoſtles, and, that he may get followers, ſeparates from the Church, from the communion of Chriſtians there; it is thy office and duty toward ſuch an one, firſt to admoniſh him once or twice (Mat. 18. 16.) and if that will not work upon him, or reduce him, then to ſet a mark upon him, as on one which is under the cenſures of the Church, and to appoint all men to break off familiar converſe with him;

* ſelf-condemned

11. Knowing that he that is ſuch, is ſubverted and ſinneth, being * [d] condemned of himſelf.]

11. Knowing that ſuch a man is a perverſe, wilful ſinner, inflicting that puniſhment on himſelf which the governours of the Church are wont to do on malefactors, that is, cutting himſelf off from the Church, of which he was a member.

† make haſt σπούδασον

12. When I ſhall ſend Artemas unto thee, or Tychicus, † be diligent to come unto me to Nicopolis: for I have determined there to winter.

* ſet forth carefully σπουδαίως πρόπεμψον † ſet up

13. * Bring Zenas the lawyer and Apollos on their journey diligently, that nothing be wanting unto them.]

13. Furniſh Apollos and Zenas the lawyer, that are coming to me, with all things neceſſary for the journey, (ſee Note on 1 Cor. 16. a.)

14. And let [e] ours alſo learn to † maintain good works for [f] neceſſary uſes, that they be not unfruitful.]

14. But let not only the Gnoſticks v. 8. be thus admoniſhed and convinced, but let all thoſe alſo that continue with us, all the orthodox Chriſtians, be taught by you to ſet up (in themſelves and families) ſome honeſt labours among men, to ſupply their wants, and provide for themſelves neceſſaries of victuals, &c. that they live not like drones on others ſweat, maintained out of the treaſure of the Church, but earn every one their own livings, 2 Theſſ. 3. 12.

15. All that are with me ſalute thee. Greet [them that love us in the faith.] Grace be with you all. Amen.

15. all our loving fellow-Chriſtians.

It was written to Titus, ordained the firſt Biſhop of the Church of the Cretians, from Nicopolis of Macedonia.

Annotations on Chap. III.

a. καλὰ ἔργα — V. 8. Good works] That καλὰ ἔργα both here and v. 14. ſhould ſignifie honeſt trades, or callings, there will be ſmall doubt or difficulty, when 'tis obſerved how ἐργάζεσθαι to labour is uſed 1 Cor. 4. 12. and 9. 6. of S. Paul's working in his calling, and ſo 1 Theſſ. 2. 9. and 2 Theſſ. 3. 8, 10, 11, 12. then by comparing Epheſ. 4. 28. ἐργαζόμενος τὸ ἀγαθὸν τῇ χερσὶ, working with his hands that which is good, where bodily labour is called working of good. Thus a very antient Greek author Palæphatus περὶ ἀπίστ. ſpeaking of Actæon that ſpent all his time upon hunting, he adds, τὸ δ' ἀγαθὸν προσῆκεν ἠμέλει, he neglected the good thing, that is, his buſineſs, all men being then, ſaith he, αὐτουργοὶ, having no ſervants, but doing their own buſineſs themſelves, tilling the ground, &c. and he being the richeſt ὃς ἐγεώργει καὶ ἐργασιμώτατος ὑπῆρχε, who was moſt laborious in his husbandry; whereas this man, ſaith he, ἠμέλει τῶν οἰκείων neglected his domeſtick, or his own, affairs. Where ἀγαθὸν πρᾶγμα the good thing, and οἰκεῖα his own or domeſtick affairs, are all one, and ſignifie the buſineſs of the calling. Thus Act. 9. 36. Tabitha is ſaid ἀγαθῶν ἔργων to be full of good works, that is, a very laborious work-woman, that wrought or made many garments, v. 39. and by that means, as it follows, was a very liberal, charitable alms-giver, gave the garments, when ſhe had made them, to old widows, &c. Thus in Cicero vitæ actio ſignifies a trade, or the whole buſineſs of the life, l. 1. De nat. Deor. De actione vitæ multa dicuntur. So Gen. 47. 3. τί τὸ ἔργον ὑμῶν; what is your occupation? to which they anſwer that they are ſhepherds. So in Sophocles's Oedipus, when the queſtion is,

Ἔργον μεμιμνῶν ποῖον, ἢ βίον τίνα;

What is your trade or manner of living? the anſwer is,

Ποιμνᾶς τὰ πλεῖστα τῷ βίῳ ξυνεπόμην,

I have ſpent moſt of my time in keeping of ſheep, So Jonah 1. 8. τίς σου ἡ ἐργασία; What is thy occupation? This περίεστιν may farther appear by περίεστιν which is here uſed with it; for that ſignifies to profeſs, or work in, any art or calling. So Syneſius Ep. 2. περέσῃ τῇ τέχνῃ λαμπρῶς, ſhe hath followed her trade bravely. So in Cicero Pro Domo; Qui ſacerdotis præfuerant, the Prieſts. In Chryſoſt. Hom. 31. in Rom. οἱ ἀπὸ χειρῶν ζῶντες, καὶ ἐργασιεῖς περεσηκότες, they live by their hands, and profeſs, or work, in the ſhop. And this is inforced by what here follows, for theſe things are profitable to men; anſwerable to what is added Eph. 4. 28. that he may be able to give to him that needeth, out of the fruits and earnings of his labour; and ſo here, v. 14. (where the ſame exhortation is repeated) he addeth πρὸς τὰς ἀναγκαίας χρείας for neceſſary uſes, (ſee Note f.) that they be not ἄκαρποι unfruitful, that is, that they may give to others, which he calls καρπὸς fruit, Philip 4. 27. and the fruits of righteouſneſs, c. 1. 11.

b. αἱρετικὸς — V. 10. Heretick] The literal notation of the word αἱρετικὸς may beſt be taken from the Verb αἱρετίζω, from which it immediately comes, as from δογματίζω δογματικὸς, and the like. What that is, will be ſeen by theſe ſeverals in Heſychius: Αἱρετιεῖ με, προτιμωτέραν ἡγήσεταί με, to prefer before others; Αἱρετίζειν, αἱρεῖσθαι, ἀρέσκεσθαι to chuſe, to be pleaſed; Αἱρετιῶ (it ſhould be Αἱρετίζω) προσλαμβάνω, αἱρῶ αὐτὸς πρὸς ἑμαυτὸν, to take or receive others to ones ſelf. All which put together will make up this compound, to take up an opinion upon ones own choice or judgment, and prefer it before the doctrine eſtabliſhed in the Church, and to gather and receive diſciples or followers to himſelf, in oppoſition to, or ſeparation and diviſion from, the Church, according to which the heretick is defined by that learned Grammarian, ὁ ἄλλο τι παρὰ τὴν ἀλήθειαν αἱρούμενος ἔχειν, He that chuſeth to have ſome other opinion (or doctrine) beſides (or in oppoſition to, or preferring it before) the truth, (for ſo παρὰ ſignifies.) Where as αἱρετίζειν and αἱρεῖσθαι are all one: ſo, αἵρεσις coming from the latter of thoſe, αἱρεσιώτης that comes from αἵρεσις, and αἱρετικὸς that comes from the former αἱρετίζω, are all one alſo; and both denote a leader of a faction, a teacher of ſome new doctrine, which, that he may get diſciples to him, makes a rent or diviſion in the Church. Such were thoſe falſe teachers, that crept in among them, and led ſilly women captives, removed them from that union of the Church in which before they were, and (as captives are carried by the Conqueror into his own quarters, ſo) took them off from the ſociety of Chriſtians in which they had been, and led them into ſeparated aſſemblies or congregations. Not that the name Heretick is competible to none but thoſe that are the firſt in diſſeminating a falſe doctrine, but that it belongs to all that endeavour to corrupt others and draw them into the faction with them. Such were all the Gnoſticks whereſoever they came, and thoſe were principally here meant.

c. Μίαν καὶ δευτέραν νουθεσίαν

Ib. Firſt and ſecond admonition] The firſt and ſecond admonition here refers to the method preſcribed by Chriſt in proceeding againſt Chriſtian offenders, Mat. 18. 15. but in ſome circumſtances differs from it. There is mention of a threefold admonition, one by the injured perſon alone, a ſecond by two or three taken with him, the third by the Church: But here only a firſt and ſecond admonition. The cauſe of this difference is to be taken from the quality of the perſon to whom this Epiſtle is written, Titus a Biſhop; whereas there the ſpeech was addreſs'd to every private Chriſtian that is injured by any. Here the firſt admonition of the Biſhop carries an authority along with it far above that of the private perſon and the two or three with him, and ſo may well ſupply the place of both thoſe; and then the ſecond here will be parallel to the third there; and ſo after that is deſpiſed or proved uneffectual, it is ſeaſonable to proceed to Cenſures, to excommunicate the contumacious, which is the meaning of the παραιτοῦ here, the avoiding of him. Thus 2 Cor. 13. 2. immediately after the ſecond admonition delivered by S. Paul, προεῖπον τὸ δεύτερον, I foretel you the ſecond time (characterized v. 1. by, in the mouth of two or three witneſſes) he tells the offenders, οὐ φείσομαι, I will not ſpare, but proceed to Cenſures. And v. 10. he tells them that this admonition is, ἵνα μὴ ἀποτόμως χρήσωμαι, that he may not proceed to exciſion, or cutting off, which he there calls καθαίρεσις taking away, the word ordinarily uſed in the Canons for excommunication.

προεῖπον τὸ δεύτερον

d. Αὐτοκατάκριτος

V. 11. Condemned of himſelf] Αὐτοκατάκριτος, ſelf-condemned, ſignifies not the man's publick accuſing or condemning his own doctrines or practices; for that ſelf-condemnation, being an effect and part of repentance, would rather be a motive to free any from the cenſures of the Church which were already under them, than aggravate their crime, or bring that puniſhment upon them. Nor yet 2dly, can it denote him that offends, and yet ſtill continues to offend againſt conſcience, and though he know he be in the wrong, yet holds out in oppoſition to the Church. For, (beſides that there are very few that do ſo, and thoſe known to none but God, and if that were the character of an heretick, then none but hypocrites could be hereticks, and he that through pride and opinion of his own judgment ſtood out againſt the doctrine of Chriſt and his Church in the pureſt times, ſhould not be an heretick,) this inconvenience would farther be incurred, no heretick could poſſibly be admoniſhed or cenſured by the Church; for no man would acknowledge of himſelf that what he did was by him done againſt his own conſcience, nor could any teſtimony be produced againſt him before any human tribunal, no man being able to ſearch the heart. It is rather an expreſſion of his ſeparation from, and diſobedience to the Church, and ſo an evidence of the ἐκτραπῆναι καὶ ἁμαρτάνειν being perverted and ſinning wilfully, and without excuſe, for he that thus diſobeys and breaks, off from the unity of the Church, doth in effect inflict that puniſhment on himſelf which the Church uſeth to malefactors, that is καθαίρεσις 2 Cor. 13. 10. and ἀποκόπτω cutting off from the Church, which he being an heretick, (and therein a Schiſmatick alſo) doth voluntarily, without the Judge's ſentence: his very αἵρεσις hereſie is a ſpontaneous καθαίρεσις or exciſion. So ſaith S. Hierom, Whereas fornicators, &c. are turned ned out of the Church, the heretick inflicts this on himself, ſuo arbitrio ab Eccleſia recedens, departing from the Church out of his own choice; which departing, ſaith he, propriæ conſcientiæ videtur eſſe damnatio, ſeems to be a condemnation of his own conſcience. So in the Council of Laodicea, Can. 42. after an order that no Biſhop ſhall diſobey a citation from the Councel, 'tis added, εἰ δὲ καταφρονήσει, ἑαυτὸν αἰτιάσεται, if he do deſpiſe it, he ſhall be conceived to accuſe himſelf, which is the next degree to ſelf-condemnation. So in the African Codex Can. 22. 'tis ſaid of a Biſhop that appears not on citation, αὐτὸς καθ' ἑαυτὸν τὸ καταδίκης τὸ ψῆφον ἐκπεφωνηκέναι κεισθήσεται, he ſhall be judged to have pronounced ſentence of condemnation againſt himſelf, according to that of Apollonius Tyaneus in Philoſtratus l. 7. c. 7. Ὁ δ' ἐκλιπὼν τὸ δικάζειν, πῶς ἂν διαφύγοι τὸ μὴ οὐκ ἐφ' ἑαυτῷ ἐψηφίσθαι; He that declines a judicature, how ſhall he avoid the being thought to have condemned himſelf? So in the 12 Tables, Præſenti litem addicito, he that appears not is always caſt: and ſo moſt nations have obſerved it, ut abſens cauſàs caderet, ni ſonnia nunciaſſet, that the abſent ſhould always loſe the cauſe, unleſs he gave his juſt cauſe of being abſent. So Regulæ ab Abbat. Floriac. conſtitutæ, Qui non comparuerit, tanquam convictus judicabitur, He that appears not, ſhall be judged convict, that is αὐτοκαταδίκειτο. The like phraſe we have on another occaſion in Joſephus, l. 2. c. 12. de Bell. Jud. Oaths, ſaith he, were wholly avoided, and counted worſe than perjury; Ἤδη γὰρ λελεῦσθαι φασι τὸ ἀπιστούμενον δίχα Θεοῦ· For he, ſay they, that is not believed without ſwearing, is already condemned. His uſing an oath condemns him of lying. See Marculf. form. l. 1. c. 37. and Hieron. Bignonius on them, Steph. Forner. Rer. Quotid. l. 6. c. 21. Juſtell. in the Notes on Cod. Can. Eccl. Univ. p. 38. By all which it appears, that every one which ſubmits not to, but ſeparates from the orthodox Church, whoſe member and ſubject he is (and this every Heretick and Schiſmatick doth) is properly ſaid to be ſelf-condemned. His receding from the Church is an evidence that his doctrine or practice is contrary to that which the Church approves, and that being received from Chriſt and his Apoſtles, this ſingular doctrine or practice of his is condemned by the contrariety to that, and himſelf by his non-ſubmiſſion to the Governour of the Church. And therefore though to ſuch an one, as to any other malefactor, the firſt and ſecond admonition ver. 10. be due, which in all that are not reformed by thoſe, is wont to bring on the ſentence of Excommunication; yet there is no need to proceed to that, becauſe he by contumacy, and non-ſubmiſſion to the Church-ruler, inflicts this upon himſelf. The appointment therefore is more agreeable to his caſe, that men avoid him, v. 10. as one that is already excommunicate by his own, and ſo needs not the Judge's ſentence.

V. 14. Our's] The ἡμέτεροι here are all one with οἱ ἐξ ἡμῶν they that are of us, 1 Joh. 2. 19. of which he ſaith μεμενήκεισαν ἂν ἡμῖν, they remained with us, contrary to the Gnoſticks that broke off and ſeparated from them. Thoſe are deſcribed ver. 8. and in reſpect to them peculiarly he commands the doctrine here ſpoken of, of following the buſineſs of their callings, to be earneſtly preſs'd, becauſe thoſe προϊσταμένοι there, the Gnoſticks that had been profeſſors of the faith, wanted that leſſon ſo much. But now he extends it to thoſe that are not fallen off to that Sect, that they be taught it too, that none live idly upon the ſcore of being a Chriſtian, or make that advantage of the liberality of other Chriſtians, but every man labour to earn his own living.

Ib. Neceſſary uſes] What ἀναγκαῖα χρεία, neceſſary uſe, ſignifies, is manifeſt by this place of S. Baſil in his Ἀσκητ. p. 560. Edit. Baſil. Ἄνθρωποι ὄντες δίκαιοι καὶ εὐσεβεῖς, πένητες δὲ, καὶ τῶν ἀναγκαίων ἐκ εὐπορίας, πόνοις σώμασι περισσοτέροις διωκῶς, τὴν ἀναγκαίαν χρείαν ταύτην ἑαυτοῖς συμπορίζοντες, Thoſe that were righteous and pious men, but poor, and not furniſhed with neceſſaries, continually laboured, that they might earn neceſſary uſe for themſelves. Where it diſtinctly ſignifies all thoſe things which are neceſſary for life, meat, drink, cloaths, &c. And ſo Act. 6. 3. the Deacons are ſet ἐπὶ τῆς χρείας ταύτης over this uſe, that is, the providing for the neceſſaries of life for them that wanted, out of the flock of the Church.

THE EPISTLE of PAUL TO [a] PHILEMON.

a. Φιλήμων

Philemon, to whom this Epiſtle was written, is ſaid to have been an eminent perſon in Coloſſæ; and ſo that of Col. 4. 9. inclines to believe, where Oneſimus, Philemon's ſervant, is ſaid to be one of them. S. Paul had converted him to the faith, ver. 19. but that not at Coloſſæ, (for he had not been perſonally there, Col. 2. 1.) but in ſome other place, where he had alſo contracted a friendſhip with him. Oneſimus had been his ſervant, and had ſtoln and run away from him, and coming to Rome while Paul was priſoner there, was converted by him, v. 10. and is now returned to his Maſter with this Epiſtle of commendation, to obtain a pardon and reception for him; which conſequently was written and ſent from Rome, where he now was in priſon, An. Chr. 59. And this at the ſame time that the Epiſtle to the Coloſſians was ſent, as may be conjectured by theſe characters common to them: 1. Timothy joined with Paul in the beginning; 2. the ſame ſalutations in the concluſion, Epaphras, Marcus, Ariſtarchus, Demas and Lucas; and 3. Archippus called upon in both to take care and look to the truſt committed to him.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. I.

1. PAUL a priſoner of Jeſus Chriſt and Timothy our brother, unto Philemon our dearly-beloved, and fellow-labourer,

2. And to our beloved Apphia, and Archippus our fellow-ſouldier, and to [the Church in thy houſe:]

3. Grace to you and peace from God our father, and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

4. I thank my God, making mention of thee always in my prayers,

2. thoſe Chriſtians that are with thee.

5. Hearing of [thy love and faith, which thou haſt toward the Lord Jeſus and toward all ſaints,]

5. thy charity to all the ſaints, and thy faith in Chriſt, (ſee Note on Mat. 7. d.)

6. That the communication of thy faith may become effectual by the acknowledging of every good thing, which is * in you † in Chriſt Jeſus.]

6. That your liberality and charity to others that are in want, flowing from thy faith in Chriſt Jeſus, (ſee Note on Act. 2. e.) may be able to demonſtrate to all the zeal of your charity and kindneſs toward Jeſus Chriſt.

* among ἐν
† toward εἰς

7. For we have great joy and conſolation in thy love, becauſe the bowels of the ſaints are refreſhed by thee, brother.]

7. This liberal charity of thine is matter of great joy and comfort to me, to conſider how many Chriſtians are in their wants refreſhed and comforted by thee, my beloved Philemon.

8. Wherefore though I might be much bold in Chriſt to injoin thee that which is convenient,]

8. And therefore though from my experience of thee I have great freeneſs of behaviour toward thee in or through Chriſt (ſee Joh. 7. a.) and am not ſhie or backward to lay it upon thee as an Apoſtolical command, knowing that thou wilt readily obey it,

9. Yet for love's ſake I rather beſeech thee, being ſuch an one as Paul the aged, and now alſo a priſoner of Jeſus Chriſt.]

9. Yet I chuſe rather to make it my requeſt upon the ſcore of thy love toward me, who as an old man and a priſoner, ſhall obtain ſome kindneſs and affection from thee.

10. I beſeech thee for my ſon Oneſimus, whom I have begotten in my bands;]

10. And my requeſt is not for my ſelf, but for Oneſimus, one whom I have converted to the faith ſince I was a priſoner;

11. Which in time paſt was to thee unprofitable, but now profitable to thee and to me;]

11. A perſon that formerly injured thee, when he ran away from thee, but is now, if thou wilt receive him again (according to the ſignification of his name) likely to be profitable to thee, and, if thou pleaſe, to me alſo, (ſee v. 13.)

12. Whom I have ſent again: thou therefore receive him that is mine own bowels.]

12. He is thy ſervant, and therefore I have remitted him to thee. I pray receive him, and entertain him with all kindneſs, as one dearly beloved by me.

13. Whom I would have retained with me, that in thy ſtead he might have miniſtred unto me in the bonds of the Goſpel.]

13. Had it not been for the reaſon ſpecified v. 14. I would have kept him here with me, that he might attend and do me all thoſe good offices, while I am in priſon for the doctrine of Chriſt, which I know thou wouldſt do, if thou wert here.

14. But without thy mind would I do nothing: that thy * benefit ſhould not be as it were of neceſſity, but willingly.]

* good deed τὸ ἀγαθὸν

14. But I would not do ſo, till thou hadſt given thy conſent, that thy charity to me may be perfectly free, and ſo thy kindneſs in affording him to me, if thou thinkeſt meet.

15. For perhaps he therefore departed for a ſeaſon, that thou ſhouldſt receive him for ever;

15. And for his leaving thee ſo injuriouſly, there may come advantage to thee thereby: it is very poſſible that he was by God's ſpecial providence thus permitted to run away from thee for a little while, that by the reformation and converſion now wrought on him by me, he may be an uſeful ſervant to thee for ever;

16. Not now as a ſervant, but above a ſervant, a brother beloved, ſpecially to me, but how much more unto thee, both in the fleſh, and in the Lord?]

16. Being now ſo improved, that he will not only deſerve to be looked on as a ſervant, uſeful to thee ſo, but more than ſo, as a fellow-Chriſtian, and uſeful to thee in thoſe beſt things; one very uſeful to me, and therefore in any reaſon to be ſo much more to thee, who haſt a double relation to him, as one of thy family, and one of thy faith.

17. If thou * count me therefore a partner, receive him as my ſelf.]

* haſt ἔχεις

17. If therefore thou look-eſt on me as a friend, if all be common between thee and me, as between friends, treat him as thou wouldſt do me, if I ſhould come unto thee.

18. If he hath wronged thee, or oweth thee ought, put that on mine account.]

18. And if at his coming away from thee he purloined any thing from thee, or hath any thing of thine in his hands, I will be anſwerable to thee for it.

19. I Paul [a] have written it with mine own hand, I will repay it: albeit, I do not ſay to thee how thou oweſt unto me even thine own ſelf beſides.]

19. I give thee this bill under my hand, whereby I oblige my ſelf to pay it; though I might put thee in mind, that a greater debt than that need not be ſtood on between me and thee, who oweſt thy converſion, and ſo thy ſoul and well-being, and ſo thy ſelf, to me.

20. † Yea,

† I pray thee Nal

20. † Yea, brother, let me have joy of thee in the Lord: [refreſh my bowels in the Lord.]

20. give me cauſe of rejoicing to ſee thee, do as becomes a true charitable Chriſtian to do.

21. Having confidence in thy obedience I wrote unto thee, knowing that thou wilt alſo do more than I ſay.

22. But withal prepare me alſo a lodging: for I truſt [that through your prayers I ſhall be given unto you.]

21. that by the benefit of the prayers of you and others for me, I ſhall have liberty from my bonds, and be permitted to come and viſit you.

23. There ſalute thee Epaphras my fellow-priſoner in Chriſt Jeſus, 24. Marcus, Ariſtarchus, Demas, Lucas, my fellow-labourers.
25. The grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt be with your ſpirit. Amen.

Annotations on Philemon.

a. ἐγὼ Παῦλος ἔγραψα τῇ ἐμῇ χειρὶ

V. 19. Written it with my own hand] Theſe words are to be explained by the Roman laws: that of Ulpian among their Axioms, Si quis ſcripſerit ſe fide juſſiſſe, omnia ſolenniter acta videri, If any one write that he hath undertaken a debt, this is a ſolemn obliging of him; and that of Juſtinian, Ut quodcunque ſcriptum ſit quaſi actum, etiam actum fuiſſe videatur, That whatſoever is written as if it were done, ſeems, and is reputed, to have been done. Both to this purpoſe, that a man is bound as much by his own hand, or confeſſion under it, as if any other teſtimonies or proofs were againſt him of a fact or debt, or himſelf under a ſolemn obligation. So Anianas paraphraſing on Paulus lib. 5. Collect. t. 7. Si ſcribat aliquis ſe quamcunque ſummam redditurum, ita habetur quaſi ad interrogata iſta, Dabis? Promittis? reſponderit, Dabo, Promitto. Ideóque ad redhibitionem tenetur, If any one write that he will pay ſuch a ſum, he is as much obliged as if he had anſwered to the ordinary interrogatories, Wilt thou give? Doſt thou promiſe? I will give, I do promiſe. And therefore he is bound to make payment. So in the Novels Διαταξ. ϱλϛ'. the diſtinction is put between thoſe who in Contracts γραμματεῖα καὶ λογοθέσια ποιοῦσιν, ἃ ἐπ' ἀγορᾶς τίθεν), enter in bands and obligations, which are done in courts, and thoſe who συγγράφουσι τῇ ἰδίᾳ χειρὶ, write it under their own hands; and preſently 'tis added, that he is as much bound who οἰκεῖα γράφει χειρὶ writes with his own hand, (whence are all thoſe three words, ἰδιόγραφον, and χειρόγραφον, and συγγραφὴ,) as he who σύμβολον ἀγορᾶιον ποιήσας, ἢ ὑπογράψειεν ἐν τοῖς παρ' ἑτέρων γραφεῖσιν, ἢ γραμματείοις, ἢ λογοθεσίοις, hath entred an obligation in the court, or ſubſcribed bills written by others, or bands and obligations, ſuch as are mentioned in the Goſpel, Luc. 16. 6. δέξαι σου τὸ γράμμα, take thy bill, that is, the obligation, (wherein he was bound to the Stewards Maſter, which being in the Steward's keeping he reſtored to him) and by Chryſoſtom expreſs'd by γραμματεῖον ἐκδοῦναι, to give bond. And to this kind of obligation, which is not done by any legal contract, but only per chirographum, or ἰδιόγραφον, refer theſe words of S. Paul here, ἐμῇ (that is, ἰδίᾳ) χειρὶ ἔγραψα. THE

a. a EPISTLE of PAUL the APOSTLE

HEBREWS.

a. Ἐπιστολὴ πρὸς Ἑβραίους

WHether this Epiſtle were written by Saint Paul hath not only of late but antiently been doubted. And as the Title or Superſcription which is in our Copy, pretending not to be a part of the Epiſtle, is not ſufficient to conclude any more than that it was in that time when this title was prefix'd believed to be Saint Paul's; ſo there is no doubt but that it went without any Superſcription or known Author more antiently; and ſo hath left ſome place to variety of conjectures, who the Author ſhould be. Saint Chryſoſtom in his Proem to the Epiſtle to the Romans expreſſeth his opinion of it, that it was by Saint Paul written at Rome in his bands; (but that cannot well be imagined, when he tells them c. 13. 23. that with Timothy, if he come ſhortly, he will ſee them; for that ſignifies the Author to be at liberty when he thus purpoſed.) Long before him Clemens Alexandrinus (as we ſee in Euſebius l. 6. c. 11.) renders reaſons why Saint Paul prefix'd not his name in the front of it, as in all other Epiſtles of his he had done, Paul an Apoſtle, &c. which though it be an evidence of that antient writers opinion, yet it is alſo of its being queſtioned in that time, and is alſo an acknowledgment that it was not own'd by S. Paul at the time of writing it, or then publickly acknowledg'd to be his. Others were antiently inclinable to father it on Barnabas, others on Clemens Romanus, others on Luke; which is a farther argument of the uncertainty of it. And for the laſt of them, there is a paſſage c. 2, 3. which is conceived to make it more probable to be written by him than by Saint Paul: For ſpeaking of the ſo great ſalvation, whether that be the Goſpel and doctrine of Chriſt, or whether the deliverance of the faithful out of their perſecutions, (ſee c. 2. Note b.) he ſaith of it, ὑπὸ τῶν ἀκουσάντων εἰς ἡμᾶς ἐβεβαιώθη, it was confirmed to us by them that heard it; whereas it is known of Saint Paul, Gal. 1. 12. that he profeſſeth not to have received the Goſpel by man, nor to have been taught it, but by the revelation of Jeſus Chriſt; and ſo likewiſe of the deliverance of the faithful, of which he ſo often ſpeaks ſo confidently, there is no doubt, but among the many revelations which he had received 2 Cor. 12. 7. this was alſo revealed to him. But to this the anſwer is eaſie. Firſt, that ἡμᾶς us is not to be reſtrained to the writer only, but ſo as to comprehend thoſe to whom he writes, as we ſee it uſed Tit. 3. 3. and Eph. 2. 5. we being dead in treſpaſſes, &c. for it follows immediately, by grace, ye are ſaved; and ſo we is all one with ye. And ſecondly, it is no new or ſtrange thing for Saint Paul to confirm the truth of the Goſpel by the teſtimony of others, and tradition from them which ſaw and heard. See 1 Cor. 15. 3, &c. Other κεφάλαια are added by the learned Hugo Grotius, from the obſervation of the ſtyle and idiom, which render it probable to be written by Saint Luke. But as all which can be ſaid in this matter can amount no higher than to probable or conjectural; ſo is it not matter of any weight or neceſſity that it be defined who the Author was, whether Saint Paul, or Saint Luke, a conſtant companion of his for many years, the author of two other books of the ſacred Canon. That which * Theophylact conceives in this matter, is not improbable, viz. that S. Paul wrote it in Hebrew, as being to the Hebrews, but that S. Luke, or, as ſome ſay, Clement, tranſlated it into Greek; and conſequently that there is not ſo much force in the Argument taken from the difference of the ſtyle, to conclude againſt its being written originally by S. Paul, as there is in the ſublimity of the ſenſe and matter, to conclude that none but S. Paul was the Author of it. And as for the Author, ſo for the place from whence it was written, it is uncertain alſo, the ordinary Copies reading, in the Subſcription, ἀπὸ τῆς Ἰταλίας, from Italy, but the King's MS. ἀπὸ Ῥώμης, from Rome. And the argument which is produced in favour of the former, becauſe chap. 13. 24. in the ſalutations are mentioned οἱ ἀπὸ τῆς Ἰταλίας, which is ordinarily rendred, they of Italy, is not of much force; becauſe that may more fitly be rendred, they from Italy, that is, thoſe that came from thence to Rome, or to any other place where the Author now was at the writing of it. So again that Timothy was the bearer of this Epiſtle, (as is affirmed in the Subſcription) it is not certain, nor, if we will judge by c. 13. 23. probable: for there mentioning Timothy's being ſet at liberty, it is added, with whom, if he come ſhortly, I will ſee you, which refers to the Author's intention to bear Timothy company to them, which is not well reconcilable with Timothy's carrying this Epiſtle from him. So that in all theſe circumſtances there is very little certainty. As for thoſe to whom it is written, the Hebrews, they are the Jews Chriſtian, which the Author had known in Judæa and Syria, (which all belonged to Jeruſalem as the chief and principal Metropolis) who being perſecuted by the unbelieving Jews, were by the infuſions of the Gnoſticks inclined to great caution and compliances, and conſequently began to forſake the Chriſtian aſſemblies, and to fall off from the profeſſion of the faith: which being the occaſion of this monitory Epiſtle, the ſubject of it conſequently is, to confirm them in the truth of the Goſpel againſt the Jewiſh pretenſions, to repreſent the great danger and ſin of falling off, and to fortifie them with conſtancy and perſeverance by many examples of faith and patience, putting them in mind of the deliverance from their perſecutors, which ſhould now very ſhortly befal them, c. 10. 37. That this Epiſtle was written in Hebrew is phanſied by ſome, but without any reaſon; the Hebrews to whom it was written, underſtanding and ſpeaking Greek, from whence they are called Helleniſts in many places. And accordingly the places of the Old Teſtament, which are cited in this Epiſtle, are generally ſet down in the words of the Septuagint's tranſlation, which was in uſe with the Helleniſt Jews, and read in their Synagogues.

All thy doctrine and practice, thy words and thy example, have been deſigned for the advancing of all kind of vertue; and by way of reward for that, God hath entertained or treated thee more liberally than any other, (ſee Note on Mat. 26. c. and on Act. 10. c.) preferred and dignified thee before all Angels and men.

10. And thou, Lord, in the beginning haſt laid the foundation of the earth: and the heavens are the works of thine hands.] 10. Another place, Pſal. 102. 25. applies that which is ſaid of God, Gen. 1. 1. about the creation of the world, to the Meſſias, calling him Lord and Creator of heaven and earth, (which is a proof of what is added in the end of v. 2.) and adding,

11. They ſhall periſh, but thou remaineſt; and they all ſhall wax old as doth a garment:

12. And as a veſture ſhalt thou [c] fold them up, and they ſhall be changed: but thou art the ſame, and thy years ſhall not fail.] 11, 12. They ſhall at laſt be deſtroyed, and in the mean time decay daily, be put off like cloaths, and worn no more. But the Meſſias ſhall continue immutable and immortal.

13. But to which of the Angels ſaid he at any time, Sit on my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footſtool?] 13. And accordingly thoſe words ſpoken of him Pſal. 110. 1. to this plain ſenſe, that he ſhould reign till all his enemies were ſubdued, and brought to the acknowledgment of him, that he ſhould act a ſignal revenge upon his crucifiers, were never delivered, or applied unto any the moſt dignified Archangel, but only to this eternal Son of God.

*for miniſtery for their ſakes who are ready to inherit ſalvation, or deliverance, εἰς διακονίαν διὰ τοὺς μέλλοντας κληρονομεῖν σωτηρίαν

14. Are they not all miniſtring ſpirits, ſent forth * to miniſter for them who ſhall be heirs of ſalvation?] 14. The higheſt dignity that is beſtowed on them is, that they are ſervants under God for the uſe of men or Chriſtians, thoſe eſpecially who are now under perſecution, and ſhall ſhortly be reſcued out of it by a ſignal deliverance, and upon their conſtancy and perſeverance ſecured of eternal ſalvation, (ſee c. 2. Note b.)

Annotations on Chap. II.

a. φέρων

V. 3. Upholding] The Hebrew נשא ſignifies two things, fero, to bear, and rego, to rule; and from the latter of them it is that נשיא is the ordinary word for a Prince. Agreeably to this, φέρων, which is ſometimes the rendring of the Hebrew נשא, as Num. 11. 14. Deut. 1. 9. may accordingly ſignifie to rule, to govern, διοικῶν, to adminiſter, as a Commander, or Governour, or Procurator of a Province; and ſo 'tis here taken, to denote the Regal power of Chriſt, to which he is advanced by his Reſurrection.

b. Κρείττων ἀγγέλων

V. 4. Better than the Angels] When we read Iſa. 52. 13. Behold my ſervant ſhall proſper, he ſhall be exalted, and extolled, and be very high, the Chaldee reads, my ſervant the Meſſiah. And Abrabaneel a Jew confeſſes, that the antient wiſe men of the Jews did interpret that place of the Meſſiah, after this manner; that the Meſſiah ſhould be exalted above Abraham, above Moſes, and that he ſhould be higher than the Angels themſelves. And agreeably to this known doctrine of theirs it is, that the Apoſtle here writing to them thus ſpeaks, ſignifying Chriſt to be indeed the Meſſiah, and ſo ſuperior to the Angels themſelves.

c. εἱλίξεις

V. 12. Fold them up) That this whole Text is cited out of Pſ. 102, 25, 26, 27. 'tis evident. In that place of the Pſalmiſt, the Septuagint or Greek tranſlation in the ordinary Copies read, ἑλίξεις, thou ſhalt fold; and from that 'tis ſtill continued here, at leaſt our Copies read it ſo. But there is little doubt but that the reading of the Greek there was not ἑλίξεις thou ſhalt fold, but ἀλλάξεις thou ſhalt change; for ſo the καὶ ἀλλαγήσονται, and they ſhall be changed, that follows, doth manifeſt; and ſo alſo the Hebrew תחליפם clearly ſignifies: For חלף, mutavit, is thus ordinarily applied to changing of garments, 2 Sam. 12. 22. ויחלף שמלתו and he changed his clothes; and Gen. 35. 3. change your garments, the ſame word is again uſed. By which it is clear, that either the Copy here is by tranſcribers corrupted (as it is eaſie to ſuppoſe, when we remember that the Copies of the Greek-Pſalterie reading ἑλίξεις, might very eaſily occaſion their conforming that which here they found to what was before them in the place from whence 'twas manifeſtly cited) or elſe that the Author himſelf, following the Septuagint, tranſcribed this teſtimony verbatim as the words then lay in the Copies of the Greek Bible, and did not reform it by the Original, the ſenſe indeed, though a little changed, being not much diſturbed by this other reading; it being the manner, when a man ſhifts or changes his ſuits, to fold and lay up that which is put off. If in the time of writing this Epiſtle the Septuagint were thus corrupted in the Copies, then this is likely to be the truth of it, it being ordinary for the Apoſtles to cite Scriptures as they were found then in the Greek Bibles, though they varied from the Hebrew, becauſe thoſe Greek Bibles, and not the Hebrew, were in uſe among thoſe to whom they wrote. But if the corruption in the Pſalms were of a later date, then 'tis probable that the tranſcriber of the Epiſtle corrupted it from ἀλλάξεις to ἑλίξεις. That one of theſe is the truth, there will be little ground of doubting, though which it is it be not certain. Mean while the meaning of the place is clear, that the heavens ſhall be changed, after the manner of mens changing their clothes, putting off the old and putting on new, that is, that there ſhall be new heavens, a new ſort of world. The heavens having no more ſervice to do to the earth, by inlightning and ſhining on it, ſhall be changed into a form which ſhall be moſt agreeable to the preſent imployment or uſe of them.

Paraphraſe. CHAP. II.

1. Wherefore Chriſt being a prophet ſo much ſuperior to all before him, c. 1. 2. and now elevated above Angels to his regal office in heaven, whereby he is certainly able to perform what he foretold, we ought in all reaſon to heed his predictions, which have been delivered to us from him, (ſee v. 3.) and to make uſe of them as means to fortifie us, that we be not tempted to apoſtatize and fall off from Chriſt, miſcarry, and be loſt after all this.

a. 1. THerefore we ought to give the more earneſt heed to the things which we have heard, leſt at any time we * [a] ſhould let them ſlip.] * fall away

2. For if the Law were given only by the mediation or miniſtery of Angels, and yet the threats on the breaking of that did come to paſs (ſee Note on 2 Pet. 1. d.) and all the ſins committed by the Iſraelites againſt that were ſeverely puniſhed in the wilderneſs, and they that had provoked were not permitted to enter into the promiſed land of Canaan;

2. For if the word ſpoken by Angels † was ſtedfaſt, and every tranſgreſſion and diſobedience received a juſt recompence of reward;] † became ἐγένετο βε-βαιος

b. 3, 4. How ſhall we avoid that puniſhment, or the like, being involv'd with the crucifiers in their deſtruction, if we do not now by conſtancy and perſeverance make our ſelves capable of that deliverance, which Chriſt firſt at his being on earth, and the Apoſtles that heard it from him, have aſſured us of, and which God himſelf hath teſtified both by many prodigies and ominous preſages of it, and by giving them that have foretold this, power to do miracles, and other extraordinary abilities of his Spirit, as he hath thought fit to diſpenſe them, to one man one ability, to another another; by this means giving authority to their predictions.

3. How ſhall we eſcape, if we neglect ſo great * [b] ſalvation, which at the firſt began to be ſpoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him;

4. God alſo bearing them witneſs both with ſigns and wonders, and with divers miracles and † gifts of the Holy Ghoſt, according to his own will?] * or deliverance † diſtributions μερισμοῖς

5. And that ye may know that what Chriſt hath thus foretold he is able to perform, ye are to know that all power is given to him in heaven and earth, which is a dignity far above that of the Angels; for God gave not them any regal power to exerciſe now under the Goſpel (ſee Note on c. 6. a.)

5. For unto Angels hath he not put in ſubjection the world to come, whereof we ſpeak.]

6. But this was given to Chriſt only. And accordingly of him are thoſe words to be underſtood in the diviner ſenſe, which the Author of Pſal. 8. hath, that he is a mean and vile man in outward appearance, not worthy to be conſidered or regarded by God,

6. But one in a certain place teſtified of him, ſaying, What is man, that thou art mindful of him; or the ſon of man, that thou † viſiteſt him?] † regardeſt ἐπισκέπτῃ

c. 7. Who for the ſpace of 33 years was ſubjected to a condition inferiour to that of Angels; but then after his ſuffering in our fleſh, he was by God moſt honourably advanced to the higheſt dignities, made the ſupreme ruler and King of heaven and earth.

7. * Thou madeſt him [c] a little lower than the Angels, thou crownedſt him with glory and honour, and didſt ſet him over the works of thy hands.] * Thou haſt leſſened him a little while below ἠλάτ-τωσας αὐ-τὸν βραχύ τι παρ'

8. And all his enemies and the perſecutors of his Church ſubjected to him, and he advanced above all created beings. This prophecy of the Meſſias cannot be fulfilled, if any enemy be left which is not brought under him: and from thence it is manifeſt, that there is a yet future ſubduing of his enemies to be expected; for as yet the Jews and Gnoſticks do perſecute the Orthodox Chriſtians, and are not ſubdued or deſtroyed, and the Chriſtians delivered by that means.

8. † Thou haſt put all things in ſubjection under his feet. For in that he put all in ſubjection under him, he left nothing that is not put under him. But now we ſee not yet all things put under him.] † Thou haſt put all things under his feet: for in putting all things under him, he left nothing unſubjected to him, Πάντα ὑπέταξας ὑποκάτω τῶν ποδῶν αὐτοῦ· ἐν γὰρ τῷ ὑποτάξαι αὐτῷ τὰ πάντα, οὐδὲν ἀφῆκεν αὐτῷ ἀνυπότακτον.

9. Only this we ſee already, that the Meſſias that was humbled for a while, even to the death of the croſs, for the benefit of all mankind and every man in the world, is now after, and for that humiliation of his, rewarded and crowned with glory and honour, and a throne erected for him in heaven, of which this is but conſequent that his enemies ſhall be made his footſtool,

9. But we ſee Jeſus, who was * made a little lower than the Angels, for the ſuffering of death, crowned with glory and honour, that he by the grace of God ſhould taſte death for every man.] * a little while leſſened below, v. 7.

10. For God, the univerſal deſigner of all, in his wiſdom foreſeeing the oppoſitions and ſufferings that would befall his people, believers, in this world, thought it fit that Chriſt his own Son, the author of their deliverance, ſhould through ſufferings come to his reward and crown, (ſee Note on Phil. 3. 13.) that ſo he might after his own example deliver thoſe that ſuffer conſtantly and patiently.

10. For it became him for whom † are all things, and by whom * are all things, in bringing many ſons unto glory, † to make the captain of their ſalvation perfect through ſufferings.] † were all things τὰ πάντα * were † to conſummate τελειῶσαι

11. For as among the Jews both the firſt-fruits and the whole harveſt are of the ſame nature; and as the prieſt that wrought expiation, and the people for whom it was wrought, were of one beginning: ſo are Chriſt and all mankind of one making, and Chriſt and the Jews from one original, (to wit, of Abraham, v. 16. who was called One, Mat. 2. 15.) and therefore we muſt expect in our way to exaltation or deliverance, to paſs through the like condition of afflictions: In which reſpects Chriſt and we are brethren, and we ſo owned by him,

11. For both he that ſanctifieth and they that are ſanctified are all * of one: for which cauſe he is not aſhamed to call them brethren,] * from ἐξ

12. According to that of the Pſalmiſt, ſaying,

12. Saying,] I will declare thy name unto my brethren, in the midſt of the Church will I ſing praiſe unto thee:

13. Another proof alſo of the ſame (viz. that both Chriſt and we are brethren in this, both to paſs by ſufferings, v. 10.) is that of Iſa. 8. 17, 18. where firſt he ſpeaks of waiting on the Lord that hideth his face, and withal truſting in him, being confident of his uncovering his face, giving deliverance, in whatſoever adverſity relying and depending on him, thereby noting that he is to paſs through ſuch, and after ſpecifying and inſtancing in himſelf and his children given him by God, that is, (in the antitype to Iſaiah and his children, given him by God for a ſign) Chriſt and all faithful Chriſtians, which are his children ſpiritually begotten to him by God.

13. And again, I will put my truſt in him: and again, Behold I and the children which God hath given me.]

d. 14. Seeing therefore that Chriſtians or believers, thoſe that are to be brought to heaven by Chriſt, are here in humane fleſh and ſufferings, and ſeeing that brethren or fellow-children are of like natures, Chriſt therefore, who is called our brother, is to be ſuppoſed to have part with us in fleſh and ſufferings, and ſo to ſuffer alſo: And by ſo doing he was to fruſtrate and make void the devil's deſign, (which was to keep men for ever under the power of death) to rob death of its ſting, and to reſcue men from the bands or power of death, by a reſurrection from death to life.

14. For as much then as the children are partakers of fleſh and blood, he alſo himſelf likewiſe took part of the ſame: that through death he might † [d] deſtroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil,] † evacuate, fruſtrate

15. And ſo take away all that fear of perſecutions and

15. And deliver them who through fear of death were all their life time ſubject to bondage.]

death

death it ſelf, which makes men ſo cowardly, and keeps them in ſuch awe, that is, in a moſt unchriſtian and ſervile condition, whilſt they ſee no hope of deliverance.

16. * For verily he [e] took not on him the nature of Angels; but he took on him the ſeed of Abraham.]

16. For 'tis not ſaid any where, that he catches hold of c.

* For he doth not any where lay hold on Angels, but he layeth hold on the ſeed of Abraham

Angels as they are falling, or running, or carried captive from him, to ſave or reſcue them from ruin, or to bring them out of captivity; but only to men doth he this favour peculiarly.

17. Wherefore in all things it behoved him to be made like unto his brethren, that he might be a merciful and faithful high prieſt, in things pertaining to God, † to make reconciliation for the ſins of the people.]

17. And therefore he was not to come in an Angelical glorious guiſe, but in an humble ſuffering condition, whereby he is the better qualified to have compaſſion on thoſe that are in any ſad eſtate, and we thereby ſecured that he will diſcharge his prieſtly office faithfully, and negotiate for us in all affairs between God and us, (ſee Note on Act. 13. i.) but eſpecially by ſuffering obtain pardon for us.

† to expiate ἱλάσκεσθαι

18. For in that he himſelf hath ſuffered, being tempted, he is able to ſuccour them that are tempted.]

18. For by the ſorrows which himſelf ſuffered, 'tis very proper and agreeable that he ſhould become compaſſionate, and willing to relieve thoſe that fall into the ſame or the like evils, that are under the ſharpeſt perſecutions in this life.

Annotations on Chap. II.

Παραῤῥυῶμεν

V. 1. Should let them ſlip] Παραῤῥυῶμεν is a phraſe uſed from the water, which when 'tis not kept within limits, falls away, runs about. Heſychius, Παραῤῥυῶμεν, ἔξολισθῶμεν, and Phavorinus, ἀποπέσωμεν, it ſignifies to be loſt, or fall away; and ſo Prov. 3. 21. when μὴ παραῤῥυῇς, fall not away, is ſet oppoſite to τήρησον δέ, but keep; and ſo here to προσέχειν, take heed, and therefore the Syriack render it leſt we fall, and ſo the Arabick Interpreter alſo. And accordingly Theophylact hath μὴ ἐκπέσωμεν, μὴ ἀποκωλύθα, let us not fall away, let us not periſh; to note, ſaith he, τὸ εὔκολον ὀλισθεῖν, καὶ τὸ χαλεπὸν τῆς ἀπωλείας, the eaſineſs of the fall, and heavineſs of the ruin.

b. σωτηρία

V. 3. Salvation] It may here be matter of ſome queſtion, what is the meaning of the word σωτηρία ſalvation, or deliverance. Three notions of the Verb σώζειν have been oft mention'd: one for eſcaping out of the vitious cuſtoms of the world, repentance and converſion to Chriſt, receiving the faith (ſee Note on Luk. 13. b.) the other for deliverance out of calamities, (from whence comes a third notion, for eternal bliſs in heaven, as an eternal deliverance from all evil, whether of ſin or puniſhment:) and accordingly σωτηρία is oft taken for that eminent deliverance from perſecutions, which was to befal the faithful at the time of the utter deſtruction of the Jews, (ſee Note on Rom. 13. c.) If the word be here uſed in the firſt notion, then it muſt ſignifie the preaching of the Goſpel, the means of converting and bringing men to good life. And ſo it may poſſibly be, comparing the Goſpel here delivered by Chriſt with the Law delivered by Angels. The ſecond notion alſo having two parts, one to ſignifie a ſignal deliverance here, another to ſignifie eternal ſalvation, it is not impoſſible that both here and c. 1. 14. it ſhould belong to the latter of theſe, eſpecially there where there is mention of inheriting it. But yet the former of theſe two latter notions, that for the ſignal deliverance of the faithful, long promiſed, and at the writing of this now approaching, and 1 Pet. 1. 5. call'd the deliverance ready to be revealed in the laſt ſeaſon, may very probably be it that is here meant in both places. In the former, c. 1. 14. where the Angels are ſaid to be ſent εἰς διακονίαν, for miniſtery, διὰ τοὺς μέλλοντας, for them that are ready to inherit this deliverance, that is very agreeable to the manner of expreſſing it elſewhere, by his coming with his angels, or holy miriads, to puniſh the Jews and reſcue the faithful Chriſtians; and accordingly in the 7th. of the Revelations the Angel is ſent to ſeal the faithful, when the reſt are to be deſtroyed by the four Angels. And this deliverance being a fatherly act of mercy in God, made over by promiſe to all that ſhould perſevere, may well be ſaid to be inherited by ſuch; and the nearneſs of it at that time, every where ſpoken of, may be denoted by the μέλλοντας, their readineſs to receive it, as in Peter it was ready to be revealed. And ſo for the τηλικαύτη σωτηρία here, if we will judge by the Context, it muſt moſt probably ſignifie this. For firſt, this will by the conſequents appear to be the deſign of the whole Epiſtle, (See Note on the Title a.) to fortifie the believing Jews by the approach of this deliverance: Secondly, the Epiſtle beginning with God's ſpeaking in theſe laſt times by Chriſt, as he had formerly by ordinary Prophets, c. 1. 1. and the reſt of that Chapter being ſpent in the ſetting out the dignity of this Prophet above all, even Angels themſelves, he applies it to this very matter c. 2. 1. that they give heed to what hath been thus foretold by Chriſt, leſt they ſhould fall away, and this inforced by the danger of ſo falling, v. 2, 3. and by the greatneſs of this deliverance, ſuch as was thought fit to be foretold by Chriſt and his Apoſtles, who were furniſhed with power of working miracles to confirm their prophecy. Where, as the σωτηρία that began to be ſpoken of, v. 3. is all one with the ἀκοὰς ἐνθέσθαι the things heard, v. 1. ſo both are fitly appliable to this matter, which we know Chriſt ſolemnly foretold, Mat. 24. and the Apoſtles in their preachings, and in their Epiſtles. (See Note on the Title of the Epiſtle to the Romans, a.) And thirdly, the conſequents in this Chapter agree to this interpretation, where Chriſt is ſet out as a King, v. 5. all things to be ſubjected to him, which being not yet fulfilled, as long as his enemies proſper and prevail againſt the Chriſtians, that is there uſed as an argument that ſome farther exerciſe of this power of his, ſome deliverance of the faithful, was yet to be expected. So again v. 9. where he is exalted by way of reward for his ſufferings, that by the ſame way as he paſs'd they might paſs alſo, that is, through perſecutions to deliverance, v. 10, 11. and ſo be as his brethren, v. 12, 13. which in the laſt verſe of the Chapter is expreſs'd by his ſuccouring them that are tempted, that is, relieving them that are perſecuted (for ſo πειρασμὸς temptation ſignifies:) and ſo on in the next Chapter, where by occaſion of the mention of the Iſraelites provoking, and being excluded Canaan, he re-inforceth his exhortation of not falling off, that they may enter into God's reſt, which reſpects the Chriſtians; which that it belongs to this matter of their deliverance from perſecutions, and Halcyonian days attending it, ſee Note c. on ch. 3. So likewiſe may the phraſe εἰς σωτηρίαν be interpreted ch. 9. 28. Where the mention of Chriſt's ſecond appearing or coming, and that quite contrary to the firſt, (when he came to die for our ſins) a coming in power to deſtroy his crucifiers, may very fitly determine it to that deliverance which the perſecuted Chriſtians that held out conſtantly, in expectation of his making good this his promiſe to all ſuch, ſhould reap by it: But not ſo in any of theſe as to exclude, but farther to comprehend, that eternal deliverance which we ordinarily call ſalvation.

V. 7. A little lower] the Hebrew מעט hath a double notion, in reſpect of quantity, or of time. Pſal. 8. 5. whence this verſe it taken, as the compariſon is ſet betwixt Enoch, or Ben Adam, the loweſt man on earth, and the heaven and Angels; ſo the words will bear the firſt ſenſe, that man is little lower than the Angels: but as thoſe words were a prophecy, and the application of them here an enunciation concerning Chriſt, ſo מעט is an Adverb of time, and ſignifies a little while.

c. Βραχύ τι

V. 14. Deſtroy) That καταργεῖν ſignifies to fruſtrate, evacuate, invalidate, take away all force or power from any, hath been formerly ſaid, Rom. 7. Note a. And ſo it muſt be taken here; and καταργεῖν διάβολον will be to evacuate or fruſtrate the devil's deſign, and cancel that deed by which, upon ſins coming into the world, men were bound over to death. For by Chriſt, though death temporal be not quite taken away, yet it is robb'd of the ſting and victory, or reigning power over man, who

d. καταργήσῃ

κράτος θανάτου by Christ is rescued from death, that is, from the κράτος or power of it here, (as of Christ it is said Act. 2. 24. that it was not possible κρατεῖσθαι αὐτὸν ὑπὸ θανάτου for him to be held under death) and raised to eternal life; and mean while, while the body lies in the grave, 'tis but as in a still, quiet sleep, a freedom from the pressures of this life, and so hath nothing of evil or formidable in it. This notion of the phrase doth fitly belong to it here, where it is laid as the foundation of comfort to them that dread persecutions, because they fear death, v. 15. by assuring them that Christ hath taken away the sting of death, and that consequently, if they that are now under pressures for Christ do not outlive them, or enjoy the promised deliverance here, yet death shall be no loss or diminution to them, they shall rise to eternal life.

c. ἐπιλαμβάνεται ἀγγέλων V. 16. Took not on him] The notion of ἐπιλαμβάνεται is best express'd by Chrysostom in these words φάσις ἀπ' αὐτῆς τῆς πόρρω φάσης ἀνθρωπίνῳ φύσει χριστὸς καταδιώξας καθέλαβεν, when mankind fled, fled far from him, Christ pursued and caught hold of it. The word is interpreted by Cicero cont. Pison. by retinere ad salutem, i. e. manu, aut lacinia, prehendere ac retinere eum qui se it perditum, to hold one back, by that means to save him, to catch by the hand or garment, and hold him that is about to destroy himself. And this Christ did by fastning on our nature in his Incarnation, wherein the Angels were not concerned; for he did not so to them, but only to us, according to that of the Antients, that that which was not assumed was not ransomed by him, that the nature of man being only assumed by Christ, and not the nature of Angels, man only had the benefit of it; all his coming and preaching designed to bring sinful man to repentance, but not to recal or recover the laps'd Angels.

Paraphrase.

CHAP. III.

1. Upon these grounds I may most reasonably exhort you, my Christian brethren, who are called and admitted to the same common faith, disciples of this crucified Saviour, to consider and imitate Jesus Christ, who was sent with commission by his Father to preach that Gospel to us which we profess, and to ratifie it with his own blood, the effusion of which denominates him our high priest, who sacrificed himself for us,

1. WHerefore holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling, consider the Apostle and high priest of our profession Christ Jesus,]

2. And hath with all fidelity discharged his office, to which he was designed by God in every particular, in like manner as is affirmed of the fidelity of Moses, who governed and administred not any one part, but all the house of Israel.

2. Who was faithful to him that appointed him, as also Moses was faithful in all his house.]

3. Nay, Christ's condition is much more honourable than that of Moses, as far as that of the master of the family above any the most eminent servant in the house.

a. 3. For this man * was counted worthy of more glory than Moses, in as much as he who hath [a] builded the house hath more honour than the house.]

4. For every house is builded by some man; but he that built all things is God.]

5. And indeed Moses's fidelity was only as that of a servant, or officer, in giving or promulgating those commands which God commanded him to promulgate;

But Christ was as the eldest son, who is the master and ruler of the family, and that family of his are we, if we continue our Christian profession couragiously, in despight of all fear (see Note on John 7. a.) and our chearfulness in all that befalls us here be founded on our hope of deliverance and relief from Christ, on those terms on which he hath promised it.

† therefore ὡς * If they shall εἰ εἰσελεύσονται)

12. And therefore let the terrors of that Scripture move you, and from the example of those murmurers and complainers (that were perpetually mutinying against God when any hardship approached them, ready to turn back into Ægypt upon every slight fear and discouragement, and for so doing were excluded from the promised land and rest) do you take heed, lest the present discouragement and pressures, meeting with covetous or fearful hearts, make you fall off from the Christian profession or practice.

12. Take heed, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, in departing from the living God.]

13. But daily cheer up one another with incitations and exhortations to persevere, that none of the baits that are now abroad in the world, those of the Gnostick heresie, which undertake to secure your fears, and gratifie your lusts, be able to gain in upon you.

13. But exhort one another daily, while it is called to day, lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin.]

14. For all our Christian profession hitherto will stand us in no stead, unless we persevere constant unto the end, in the courage and patience which himself hath exemplified to us, (see Note on c. 11. a.)

14. For we are made partakers of Christ, if we hold the beginning of * our confidence stedfast unto the end.]

* or, his confidence, for the K.'s MS. reads ὑπαρξεως ὡς αὐτῶ

15. And thus the words in the Psalmist lye, To day, &c.

15. While it is said, To day if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts, as in the provocation.]

16. Whence it appears that some that were first obedient, that heard and received the Law from heaven, did after rebel, and fall off, and murmur against God: but Caleb and Joshua did not so, and consequently not all that by the conduct of Moses came out of Ægypt: which may be matter of admonition to you, that you imitate those few that adhered to, and not the many that fell off from God.

16. For some when they had heard, did provoke: howbeit, not all that came out of Ægypt by Moses.]

17. And so when it is said that he was provoked and wearied with them fourty years, 'tis apparent it was with those disobedient murmurers that would have gone back to Ægypt, and never a man of them came to Canaan, but died every one of them in the wilderness; and that may be a warning for us.

17. But with whom was he grieved fourty years? was it not with them that had sinned, whose carcasses fell in the wilderness?]

18. Lastly, when 'tis said that he swear they should not come into Canaan, 'tis apparent who they are that do not come, the contumacious murmurers, v. 10. which gives us this matter of observation,

18. And to whom swear he that they should not enter into his rest, but to them that † believe not?]

† were disobedient ἀπειθήσασι

ſervation, that thoſe that would not truſt God with their preſervation, ſhall be ſure to be deſtroyed by that means by which they expect to be preſerved, by going back, renouncing God's conduct; and ſo will it be with you, falling off from Chriſt will bring certain ruin on you.

19. So we ſee that they could not enter in becauſe of unbelief.] 19. And ſo the ſhort is, that unbelief and falling from God upon our carnal fears, or impatiences, or murmurings at the preſent perſecutions and hardſhips that befall Chriſtians, will deprive us of all reward of our faith, as it did the Iſraelites, that followed Moſes for a time, but afterwards fell off.

Annotations on Chap. III.

a. Καλασκευάζειν οἶκον οἰκος ri

V. 3. Builded the houſe] Καλασκευάζειν οἶκον, to build a houſe, is here an Hebrew form of ſpeech, in which language, as οἶκος houſe ſignifies not only the material houſe, but thoſe that inhabit it, the houſhold or family, ſo καλασκευάζειν, to prepare or build, is anſwerable to בנה, which as it ſignifies to build, ſo it is vulgarly uſed for begetting, ſo far that Ben בן, which is the ordinary word for a ſon, comes from thence; and ſo to build a houſe is to beget, or raiſe a family, and καλασκευάσας οἶκον here is but a periphraſis of a Pater familias, the father or maſter of a family.

b. Καύχημα Ἐλπὶς

V. 6. Rejoicing] That glorying and rejoycing are one in the New Teſtament is ſufficiently known, and that there is no difference unleſs of degrees, the glorying being the higher of the two. And ſo again that hope ſignifies the hope in God, reliance on him in expectation of the performance of his promiſe in the moſt improbable ſeaſon, even when all things in reſpect of this world are moſt improſperous and adverſe. And therefore that hope being the foundation of all a Chriſtian's rejoicing, eſpecially of that which is in time of affliction (and accordingly the phraſe uſed Rom. 12. 12. rejoyce in hope) this will clearly be the meaning of this phraſe; The rejoicing in all that befals us here, founded in a ſure hope of receiving abundantly from God both here and in another world. And this is here joined with παῤῥησίαν free confeſſion of Chriſt in time of perſecution. Thus Rom. 5. 2. καυχώμθα we glory, or rejoyce, in hope of the glory of God; which is there attended with οὐ μόνον δὲ, and not only ſo, but we glory in afflictions, v. 3. which the Apoſtle really doth, 2 Cor. 11. 23. boaſting diſtinctly of his toils and ſtripes and impriſonments, and 2 Cor. 12. 9. moſt gladly will I glory in my weakneſſes, that is, the afflictions that have befallen me. Contrary to which is ſorrowing as they that have no hope, 1 Theſſ. 4. and forſaking or falling off through perſecution.

c. Καλάπαυσίς μυ

V. 11. My reſt] What is meant by Καλάπαυσίς μυ, God's reſt, in this place is evident, both as it reſpects Moſes's time, and David's: One reſt there was expected in Moſes's time, the coming into Canaan, another in David's, the bringing the Ark (to which the publick ſervice of God was conſequent) to Jeruſalem. So ſaith R. Solomon on Pſ. 95. the land of Iſrael, and alſo Jeruſalem, which is called a Reſt, as 'tis ſaid, This is my Reſt for ever, here will I dwell. According to which there muſt be in that Pſalm a double reſt literally underſtood: Firſt, that peaceable, proſperous poſſeſſion of the promiſed land of Canaan, which after all their expectation and indurance they ſhould at laſt enjoy, (all that obeyed God) whereas God's oath is gone out againſt the diſobedient murmurers, (that revolted from God, and in their hearts returned to Ægypt again) that they ſhould never enter into that reſt. Secondly, the enjoyment of the privileges of God's preſence in the Ark, and afterwards in the Temple, God's publick and ſolemn worſhip. That the phraſe doth certainly belong to both of theſe may appear by the original of it, which we have Deut. 12. 9. Ye are not as yet come into the reſt, and to the inheritance which the Lord your God giveth you: where the reſt is the quiet poſſeſſion of that inheritance ſo long promiſed them by God, (as Ruth 3. 1. ſeeking her reſt is getting her a quiet, proſperous condition, and belongs there to getting her an husband which was childleſs, that it may be well with thee, as there it followeth) and it is more fully explained v. 10, 11. When ye go over Jordan, and dwell in the land which the Lord your God giveth you to inherit, and when he giveth you reſt from all your enemies round about, ſo that you dwell in ſafety; Then there ſhall be a place which the Lord your God ſhall chuſe to cauſe his name to dwell there, thither ſhall ye bring your burnt offerings, &c. Where 1. the reaſon is manifeſt why it is called God's reſt here, becauſe God giveth it them, it is an eminent act of his power and mercy that they ever come to it; 2dly, it is clear that the reſt conſiſts in the expulſion of their enemies, their quiet and ſafety, an immediate conſequent of which is their peaceable publick aſſembling to the ſervice of God at Jeruſalem. Now as 'tis the judgment of the learned Jews, David Kimchi, &c. that the ſtate under the Meſſias is foretypified by that reſt of God's, העולם חבה שכולו שבת the age to come which ſhall be all Sabbath, ſaith Solomon Jarchi on Pſ. 92. ſo here it appears by this author's application of it. And accordingly we may diſcern what is the meaning of God's reſt, which c. 4. 1. is ſaid to be promiſed the Chriſtians, even that which is moſt literally expreſs'd by that deſcription of that reſt in Deuteronomy, viz. a quiet and ſafety from the perſecutors, proſperous, peaceable days for the publick worſhip and ſervice of God, which ſhould now ſhortly befal the Chriſtians by the deſtruction of their perſecutors, the unbelieving Jews, who, as the Canaanites, when they had fill'd up the meaſure of their iniquities, ſhould ſhortly be rooted out. The only thing farther to be obſerved, (and wherein the parallel was to hold moſt remarkably, and which is the ſpecial thing that is preſſed in this place) is the fate of the diſobedient, murmuring Iſraelites, which were ſo impatient of the hardſhips that befel them in their paſſage toward this reſt, that they frequently and foully fell off from God, and returned to the ſins and idolatries and villanies of heathen Ægypt, from whence they were reſcued by God; all theſe were excluded from this reſt of God's giving, their carcaſſes fell in the wilderneſs, and of that whole generation only Caleb and Joſhua, which were not of the number of theſe provokers, attained to that reſt, were allowed entrance into Canaan. And juſt ſo the Gnoſtick Chriſtians, thoſe that in time of perſecution forſook Chriſt, and returned to the heatheniſh, horrid villanies from which Chriſtianity was deſigned to reſcue them, were never to enter into this reſt of God's, were certainly to be deſtroyed with the Jews, with whom they ſtruck in and complied, and deſiring to ſave their lives, ſhould loſe them, uſing their own ways to attain their reſt or quiet, ſhould miſcarry, and never have part in God's reſt: whereas all that have believed, c. 4. 3. that is, that have or ſhall adhere and cleave faſt to Chriſt in the preſent perſecutions, and never murmur, nor provoke, do certainly enter into this reſt; (as many as ſurvive theſe perſecutions,) happy, Halcyonian days of a peaceable, proſperous profeſſion of Chriſtianity were very ſhortly to attend them. And this is a ſufficient means of explaining and underſtanding that whole 4th Chapter of the καλάπαυσις and σαββατισμὸς, the Reſt, and the Sabbatiſm (as that is diſtinctly ſevered from the ſeventh days ſabbath ver. 4.) which ἀπολείπε) remaineth (and is now ſhortly to be had) to the people of God, the faithful, ſincere, conſtant Chriſtians, the true Iſraelites, v. 9. and ſo v. 10, 11. where alſo the parallel is obſerved betwixt this reſt of God's giving, and that Sabbatick reſt, which God is ſaid to have reſted on the ſeventh day. For as that was a ceſſation from all the works of the ſix days creation, v. 10. ſo is this reſt that is now to befal the Chriſtians a remarkable, diſcernible ceſſation from all the toils and labours that their perſecutions under the Jewiſh unbelievers had brought upon them, and is accordingly ſtyled ἄνεσις θλιβομένοις reſt, or releaſe, to the perſecuted, 2 Theſſ. 1. 7. and ἡμέραι ἀναψύξεως, days of refreſhment, or breathing, from theſe toils. See Act. 3. Note a. According as it fell out in Veſpaſian's time, immediately after the deſtruction of the Jews. See Note on Rev. 1. d. And thus when death is mention'd as the releaſe of the Confeſſors from their ſufferings, Rev. 14. 13. it is expreſs'd by ἀναπαυσονται ἐκ τῶν κόπων αὐτῶν, their their reſting from their toils, or labours. See Rev. 14. e. And it is farther obſervable to this purpoſe, that the inſtitution of the Sabbath among the Jews, though it be in Exodus 20. tranſcribed as a copy of God's ſeventh days reſt, yet Deut. 5. where that commandment is again repeated, 'tis ſet parallel to, and commemorative of, the deliverance out of Ægypt, Remember thou waſt a ſervant in the land of Ægypt, and that the Lord thy God brought thee out thence with a mighty hand and ſtretched out arm, therefore the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the ſabbath day, v. 15. By which it appears how fitly, and with what analogie to Scripture ſtyle, this deliverance from perſecutions, and days of peaceable ſerving of God, are here ſtyled a reſt, that had long been promiſed, and now approached the Chriſtians. For as the Jewiſh Sabbath in ſome things reſembled the reſt after the Creation, (in being a ceſſation from works of weight and difficulty with which formerly the perſon was exerciſed, and ſo alſo in reſpect of the time of obſerving it, the ſeventh day) but in other things is the repreſentation and commemoration of the deliverance out of Ægypt, in reſpect of the tasks and ſtripes from which they were freed, and of the plentiful condition to which they were brought; ſo may the word reſt, propheſied of by the Pſalmiſt, both as it concerned the Jews in David's time, as ſtill future, both after the Creation, and after the entring into Canaan ſo many years, and as it yet farther reſpected the times of Chriſt, be fitly interpreted reſt from perſecutions, and have one eminent completion in this, the Chriſtians peaceable enjoying of Chriſtian aſſemblies, which was now through the conduct of God approaching them.

CHAP. IV.

Paraphraſe.

1. Upon thoſe words of God, c. 3. 15. (an ominous admonition, if it be not heeded) we have great reaſon to fear, leſt that promiſe of coming to God's reſt, (as for thoſe others, to Canaan) being made to us, a promiſe of deliverance from our perſecutors, and peaceable days of profeſſing the Goſpel attending it, (ſee c. 3. c.) we may yet (ſee Note on Mat. 3. f.) by our diſobedience miſs of attaining to it.

1. LET us therefore fear, leſt a promiſe being left us of entring into his reſt, any of you ſhould ſeem * to come ſhort of it.]

* to miſs ὑςερηκέναι

2. For as they had the Law of God, the Decalogue, delivered unto them, ſo we have the Goſpel, the new Law of God, preached by Chriſt on that other mountain, Mat. 5. 6, 7. But as then, ſo here, this word of God being only heard, and not digeſted by faith, will not be profitable, or ſtand them in any ſtead that have heard it, it being the practice of the Goſpel-precepts, patience and conſtancy, &c. which will advantage any. Or, we muſt to our hearing God's word, add both obedience and Communion with all Orthodox Chriſtians, or elſe the word will benefit us nothing.

2. For unto us was the Goſpel preached, as well as unto them: but the word † preached did not profit them, a ‖ not being mixed with faith in them that heard it.]

† of hearing, or which was heard ἀκοῆς

‖ who are not by faith united to them that have heard

3. For as there is ſuch a thing as a reſt yet future, for us to hope for, ſo it is moſt certain, that this is only for conſtant perſevering believers to enter into; and ſuch muſt we be, if we mean to enter into God's reſt. By God's reſt, I mean not that which is ſo oft called by that name, the Sabbath of the ſeventh day after the creating of the world in ſix days; there are more reſts of God beſide and after that. That mentioned in the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. 95. 8. is called God's reſt, though it were many years after the creation of the world: And ſo there is now a yet future reſt for us, happy, peaceable, Halcyonian days here in the Church of Chriſt now perſecuted, which ſhall ſhortly come, after the deſtruction of Chriſt's enemies, quiet ſeaſons of worſhipping of God (anſwerable to that Canaan that the Iſraelites (all but the murmurers) poſſeſs'd, after the expulſion of God's enemies, the Canaanites, &c.) which they that hold out, and are not diſcouraged by the preſent preſſures, ſhall attain to, if they live ſo long, and however an eternal reſt in heaven. And it nearly concerns us now to attempt to enter into that, and to be very careful to do ſo.

3. For * we which have believed do enter into reſt, as he ſaid, As I have ſworn in my wrath, if they ſhall enter into my reſt: although the works † were finiſhed from the foundation of the world.]

* or let us which have believed, enter into the reſt, for the King's MS. reads εἰσερχόμεθα

† had been done γενηθέντων

4. For one place of Scripture ſpeaks of that firſt ſabbath immediately after the creation, thus, And God, &c.

4. For he ſpake in a certain place of the ſeventh day on this wiſe, And God did reſt the ſeventh day from all his works:]

5. And in this place again, If they ſhall enter into my reſt.]

5. And another in the Pſalmiſt, long after, mentions this other reſt as ſtill future: which as it cannot refer to that after the creation, ſo neither can it to that of the Iſraelites in Canaan, being written after them both; but in the firſt ſenſe, to David's time, being a promiſe to them of that age, that if they would then come in and hearken to the voice of God, after all their former rebellions, their land ſhould be truly what it was promiſed to be, a reſt to them, no Midianite, Philiſtine, or Canaanite ſhould diſturb them, their ark ſhould be no more captive, but reſt with them for ever in Jeruſalem: and in a ſecond myſtical ſenſe, to theſe times of the Goſpel, to which the Jews acknowledge that Pſalm to belong, and wherein God by Chriſt was preſent among them, (the higheſt completion of what was adumbrated by the Ark or Temple) but ſhould be taken away from them, if they did not timely believe on him.

6. Seeing then there is ſuch a thing as a reſt for ſome to enter into, and the Iſraelites that came out of Ægypt, through their diſobedience, failed of entering into it,

6. Seeing therefore it remaineth that * ſome muſt enter therein, and they to whom it was firſt preached enter not in, becauſe of † unbelief;]

* ſome enter τινὰς εἰσελθεῖν

† diſobedience, ἀπειθείαν

7. And again ſeeing the Pſalmiſt, ſo long after the Iſraelites entring into Canaan, ſpeaks of a ſet time of entring into his reſt, and that at that time ſtill future, and yet farther typical of ſomewhat under the Goſpel,

7. Again, he * limiteth a certain day, ſaying in David, To day, after ſo long a time, as it is ſaid, To day if ye will hear his voice harden not your hearts:]

* defines ὁρίζει

8. (For if Jōſhua, which is in the Syriack dialect call'd Jeſus, (ſee Act. 7. 45.) had compleated that propheſie by leading them into it whom Moſes had not led, the Pſalmiſt would not then have ſpoken of another future,)

8. For if † Jeſus had given them reſt, then would he not * afterward have ſpoken of another day:]

† Joſhua Ἰησοῦς

* have ſpoken of another day after theſe things μετὰ ταῦτα ἡμέρας ἄλλης ἐλάλει

9. It from all theſe premiſſes clearly follows, that there is now for Chriſtians a reſt ſtill behind, which all that adhere faſt to Chriſt ſhall now have their parts in, and of which that place in the Pſalm is a typical prediction, ſee Note c. on c. 3.

9. There remaineth therefore † a reſt to the people of God.]

† a ſabbatizing σαββατισμὸς

10. And this reſt is a reſt from toil and labour, a quiet repoſe of the Church, as of the Ark at Jeruſalem, in a free exerciſe of the true religion, ſuch as will be had after the deſtruction of the perſecutors, parallel to that ſabbath wherein God reſted from his labours, and hallowed it a day unto his ſervice.

10. For he that is entred into his reſt, he alſo hath ceaſed from his own works, as God did from his.]

11. Let us then ſet careſully about this deſign of getting our parts in this reſt, and that muſt be, if we fall not from theſe promiſes and hopes through diſobedience, as the Iſraelites fell from their reſt in the promiſed Canaan.

11. Let us labour therefore to enter into that reſt, leſt any man fall off after the ſame example of * unbelief.]

* diſobedience, ἀπειθείας

b.

12. And let us not think to deceive or eſcape that vengeance that expects all that fall off from Chriſt, how cloſely and cunningly ſoever they do it: For what Chriſt hath foretold, that he that will ſave his life ſhall loſe it, and that they only that hold out and endure to the end ſhall eſcape, is ſure to prove ſo true, that there is no hope by the moſt artificious dextrous managery to avoid the force of it, the word of God being like God himſelf, vital and operative, piercing into the depths and ſecrets of men, diſtinguiſhing between thoſe which are the hardeſt to be diſcriminated, the true and the hypocritical Chriſtian, and when the actions do not diſcover, ſearching into the thoughts and moſt cunning contrivances (as the prieſt in diſſecting the ſacrifices, obſerves and ſeparates thoſe things which are moſt ſecret, and cloſeſt joined together.)

12. For [b] the word of God is † quick, and powerful, and ſharper than any two-edged ſword, piercing even to the dividing aſunder of ſoul and ſpirit, and of the * joints and marrow, and is a diſcerner of the † thoughts and intents of the heart.]

† living and active ζῶν καὶ ἐνεργὴς

* nerves ἁρμῶν

† imaginations and thoughts ἐνθυμήσεων καὶ ἐννοιῶν

c.

13. And no man ſhall be able to diſguiſe himſelf ſo cunningly, but he ſhall be diſcovered, diſcloſed, layed open and bare, as the ſacrifice when 'tis firſt flay'd, then cut down the back, and all laid open and diſcernible before the prieſt.

13. Neither is there any creature that is not manifeſt * in his ſight: but all things are naked and [c] † opened unto the eyes of * him with whom we have to do.]

14. Seeing then that we have a great high prieſt, that is paſſed into the heavens, Jeſus the Son of God, let us hold faſt our profeſſion.]

14. On theſe conſiderations therefore, (the reſt which is promiſed upon our conſtancy, and the certain ruin if we do not perſevere) and withal having ſuch an example before our eyes, Chriſt, that having ſuffered, aſcended through the clouds unto the right hand of the Father in the ſupreme heaven, which is a token to us, that ſufferings are the way to exaltation, let us take heed, and be ſure, that whatever oppoſition or afflictions we meet with in the way, we be not diſcouraged from our courſe of Chriſtianity, and the acknowledging and profeſſing it publickly.

† have compaſſion on συμπαθῆσαι

15. For we have not an high prieſt, which cannot † be touched with a feeling of our infirmities, but was in all points tempted, * like as we are, yet without ſin.]

15. For Chriſt our high prieſt, that is entred into heaven before us, hath alſo ſuffered before us all that we can ſuffer, and ſo will be ſure to be ſenſible of our condition, and to aſſiſt, and aid, and relieve us, that if we be not wanting to our ſelves, we ſhall be able to ſtand.

16. Let us therefore come † boldly unto the [d] throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace * to help in time of need.]

16. And accordingly let us adhere to him, and pray confidently to him, make an open free diſcovery of all our wants and requeſts to God, who though he ſits upon a throne, yet ſits there to hear our requeſts moſt freely, (ſee Joh. 7. a.) to relieve us in a fit ſeaſon, and will do ſo, when we moſt want and leaſt look for it.

Annotations on Chap. IV.

a. μὴ συγκεκραμένους

V. 2. Not being mixed] If συγκεκραμένοις be the right reading, then queſtionleſs that being joined with λόγος, the Engliſh rendring is proper, being not mix'd with faith——But it is certain that S. Chryſoſtom read it συγκεκραμένους in the Accuſative caſe Plural, ſo as to be joined with ἐκείνους them, who are ſaid not to have been profited. This is clear by that paſſage in him, ἐν γὰρ τῷ μὴ συγκεκρᾶσθαι ἐκ ὠφελήθησ, for by not being mix'd they were not profited, which ſuppoſes the not mixing and not profiting to belong to the ſame perſons. And ſo Theophylact expreſly reads it, μὴ συγκεκραμένους, and upon that reading proceeds all his interpretation. If therefore this be the right reading, as not improbably it is, then the rendring is evidently this; But the word that was heard did not profit thoſe who were not by faith joined, or united, to them which heard. Thus Theophylact interprets, μὴ συγκεκραμένους, τουτέστι μὴ ἑνωθέντας μηδὲ συμφρονήσαντας διὰ τ πίστεως τοῖς ἀκούσασιν, ἀλλ' ἀπῤῥαγέντας αὐτῶν, not mix'd, that is, not united or agreeing by faith with them that heard, (that is, ſaith he, that believed, οὗτοι γὰρ τῷ ὄντι ἀκούσαντες ἂν λέγοιντο, for theſe are ſaid to be hearers indeed) but breaking off from them. To this S. Chryſoſtom accords in theſe words, ὃ δὴ λέγει τοιοῦτόν ὅτιν— This is that which he ſaith, They heard, ſaith he, as we hear, but they received no profit: do not you therefore think that by the hearing the word preach'd ye ſhall be profited, ſeeing they alſo heard, but were profited nothing, becauſe they believed not. What there follows in S. Chryſoſtom of thoſe that were with Caleb and Joſhuah, that ἐπειδὴ μὴ σωνεκράθησ τοῖς ἀπιστήσασι, διέφυγον τ κατ' ἐκείνων ἐξενεχθεῖσ τιμωρίαν, ſeeing they were not joined with the unbelievers, that is, agreed not with them, they eſcaped the puniſhment which went out againſt them, Theophylact profeſſeth not to underſtand; This, ſaith he, Chryſoſtom ſaith according to his great and deep wiſdom, ἐμοὶ γὰν τῷ ἀναξίῳ ἐκ ἔδωκε νοῆσαι πῶς αὐτὸ εἶπεν, but he hath not given me, unworthy man, to underſtand how he ſaid it. Where yet I ſuppoſe the riddle not ſo inextricable, viz. that that paſſage of S. Chryſoſtom was rather delivered ex abundanti, over and above what was neceſſary to the interpreting of the words, than deſigned to ſet down who were the συγκεκραμένοι. That he had ſet down clearly before, viz. that the diſobedient or unbelieving Jews were they: which being ſaid, he farther adds on the other ſide, that Caleb and Joſhuah, and thoſe that were with them, aſſociated not with the unbelievers, &c. which certainly was true alſo; for as the unbelievers joined not with them, ſo neither they with the unbelievers. Having thus expatiated, he retires again, and obſerves ſomewhat from the Critical notation of the word; He ſaith not (ſaith he) ἐ συνεφώνησ they conſented not, but ἐ συνεκράθησ they mix'd not, joined not with them; in which words he ſpeaks not of Caleb and Joſhuah, as in the laſt period he had done, but of thoſe of whom S. Paul ſpake, that is, of unbelievers; and ſo I doubt not but that which follows, τουτέστιν ἀσταθείας διέστησ is corrupt, and ſhould be read, τουτέστι στασιαστικῶς διέστησ, that is, they ſeditiouſly differed, or departed, from them, who (as he adds) were all of one and the ſame mind; which he obſerves on purpoſe to make the parallel more complete betwixt thoſe provoking Iſraelites then, and the Gnoſtick hereticks, referred to in that Epiſtle, who brake union, divided ſchiſmatically and ſeditiouſly from their Biſhops, as thoſe from their leaders Caleb and Joſhuah. That this was his meaning, appears by his concluſion, ἐν ταῦτα δέ μοι δοκεῖ χ στάσιν αἰνίττεσθαι, In this word he ſeems to me to intimate a ſedition; which I ſuppoſe a competent evidence that στασιαστικῶς, was the right reading. The corrupting of which word was it (as appears) which made S. Chryſoſtom's meaning ſo unintelligible to Theophylact, it being indeed by this means wholly miſtaken by him. Mean while it is not eaſie to divine what cauſed the Author of the Annotations on that place of S. Chryſoſtom to expreſs his wonder whence that Father took that phraſe ἐ σωνεκράθησ, adding that it was neither in S. Paul, nor in the place of Numbers, where μὴ σωνκεκραμένους the Participle was viſible before him, in that place, Heb. 4. 2.

b. ὁ λόγος τῦ Θεῦ

V. 12. Word of God] That ὁ λόγος τῦ Θεῦ, the word of God, ſhould ſignifie Chriſt, the eternal Word, is not impoſſible, it being among the Jews the known title of the Meſſias (ſee Luk. 1. Note b.) and to that the mention of eyes v. 13. doth ſomewhat incline it. But this phraſe being not elſewhere found in this ſenſe in the New Teſtament, ſave only in Saint John's writings, who is therefore called Θεολόγος, it is more reaſonable here to take it for the word of God, that is, that which had been delivered by Chriſt, and particularly that ſevere ſanction and denunciation of judgment againſt all that hold not faſt to him in time of temptation, thoſe that openly or clancularly deny him by their words or actions. For it muſt be obſerved, that this Epiſtle being accommodated to the preſent condition of the Chriſtians in Judæa, who were now daily ſolicited by the Gnoſticks, and drawn off from their conſtancy and purity, doth labour by all arguments to fortifie them. And in this Chapter doth it by two arguments, one depending on the other. Firſt, from the advantages which they ſhall reap by a conſtant adhering to Chriſt; not only eternal reſt in heaven, an ample reward for all their perſecutions, whatever they are, but even in this life more peaceable days of profeſſing and worſhipping Chriſt, when the unbelieving Jews the perſecutors ſhould be deſtroyed, and that time was now at hand, c. 10. 37. And this hath formerly been explained to be meant by the ἀνάπαυσις reſt, that is here ſpoken of, a reſt from the labours, that is, wearyſome perſecutions and preſſures that lay upon them. This he reſembles to the Iſraelites Canaan, as in the refreſhment that it yielded the people of God after a ſad travail in the wilderneſs, ſo in the propriety that the faithful ſervants of God had in it, none but they admitted to it; when they that had been brought out of Ægypt and received the Law from God's mouth at Sinai, and ſo were highly favoured and dignified by him, yet upon their murmuring and falling back toward Ægypt in their hearts, through impatience of hardſhips and the like (herein directly parallel to the Gnoſticks, and thoſe that were ſeduced by them, who either ſecretly or openly forſook Chriſt in time of perſecutions) were cut off and deſtroyed in the wilderneſs, and not a man of them entred into Canaan. And accordingly the ſecond argument is here taken from the ſeverity of Chriſt's denunciations againſt theſe (every where in the Goſpel) which ſhall thus fall off from him, the ſeed on the ſtony ground, and they that are ſcandalized in him, and they that ſeek to ſave their lives, &c. which denunciation, ſaith the author here, ſhall like a divine vengeance (ſharper, ſaith Theophylact, laſt, than war or ſword was to the rebellous Iſraelites,) certainly find out every one that is obnoxious to it, how ſecretly ſoever he have contrived it. This is here rhetorically and figuratively expreſs'd by the reſemblance of a prieſt's knife cutting up the ſacrifice, proceeding and entring into the leaſt and the moſt ſecret parts of it, the nerves the leaſt, and the marrow the inmoſt parts. And all this meant but to aſſure them that they which thus fall off ſhall never be concealed. This vengeance foretold will find them out, if they be not careful to make good their conſtancy, and ſo to be of the number of thoſe to whom the reſt is promiſed; which is the meaning of that exhortation ver. 11 which this is ſet to back, as the reaſon of it ζῶν γὰρ ὁ λόγος τοῦ Θεοῦ, for the word of God is living, &c. Upon which it follows ver. 14. that we ſhould therefore hold faſt our profeſſion, or avowed confeſſion and acknowledgment of Chriſt, conſidering what he hath ſuffered before us, by which we may be ſure that he will aſſiſt and relieve us if we ſtick faſt to him.

c. τραχηλίζειν

V. 13. Opened] The notion of τραχηλίζειν here hath been much doubted of. I conceive it is moſt clearly that which Phavorinus thus expreſſes, Τραχηλίζειν, διχοτομεῖν λέγει, ἤγουν τὰ διὰ τῆς ῥάχεως σχίζειν, it ſignifies to cut in two, to divide down the Spina dorſi (τοῦ τραχήλου ſignifying, ſaith he, τοὺ σπονδύλους τῆς κοιλίων, the ſpondyls of the back-bones;) and ſo it belongs clearly to the cuſtom of the Prieſts, in examining the ſacrifices whether they were intire and without blemiſh or no. This is called δοκιμάζειν and ἐξετάζειν ἱερεῖα, to try and ſearch the ſacrifices, (as in Lucian περὶ θυσ. Οἱ θύοντες στεφανώσαντες τὸ ζῶον, καὶ πολύ γε πρότερον ἐξετάσαντες εἰ ἐνήγεις εἴη, &c. περσάσσει τῷ βωμῷ, the prieſts put a crown on the beaſt's head, and having firſt ſearched it a great while, if it be perfect, they bring it to the altar,) and among the Fathers μωμοσκοπεῖν to look as a Momus or Cenſor, and conſider whether there were in the ſacrifice any מום or blemiſh, whether all were ἄμωμα καὶ ἀσινῆ, immaculate and unhurt. They that did this were the μωμοσκόποι, who to that end uſed to flay the body firſt, and then cut it down the neck or back-bone called τράχηλος, and being ſo cut to lay it upon the Altar, that the Prieſt might ſearch and look into the inwards, and, as Philo ſaith, ὅσα ὑπὸ γαστέρα καὶ μηρίς ἀνακέκρυπται, whatſoever is hid in the belly, &c. To which refers that of Solomon Prov. 20. 27. The ſpirit of the man is the candle of the Lord, ſearching the hidden parts of the belly. As therefore the entrails of the ſacrifice and the moſt ſecret parts are conſpicuous to the Prieſt by the help of the μωμοσκόπος and by cutting the ſacrifice thus down the τράχηλος neck, or back-bone; ſo are all before the word of God, the moſt ſecret things, diſcerned and ſeen into: and that is the meaning of γυμνὰ and τετραχηλισμένα, naked, in reference to flaying, taking off the skin with which the fleſh was clothed and covered, and cut down the back alſo. Thus ſaith Iſidore Peluſiote, Ep. l. 1. 94. that the phraſe here uſed is ὡς μεταφορᾷ τῶν ἱερείων τῶν εἰς θυσίαν προσαγομένων, by a metaphor of conſecrated beaſts brought to ſacrifice, ὥσπερ γὰρ ἐκεῖνα τῶν δορῶν ἀφαιρεμένων πάσης τῆς φαινομένης ἀπευμενοῦς πτοιολῆς, καὶ τῶν κεκρυμμένων ἔνδοθεν ἐπιδείκνυσι διάθεσιν, καὶ τραχηλίζεται εἰς ἔρευναν παντὸς ὀστέου καὶ μέλους, πρὸς τὸ πάντα ἐκκαθαρθῆναι, ἕτω, &c. For as they being flay'd are made naked and deveſted of all the viſible covering, and ſhew the placing of thoſe things which were hid within, and are cut down the back-bone, to the end that he may ſearch and look into every bone and part, that all may be cleanſed (or found to be pure) before they are ſacrificed; ſo, &c. Hence is that of Heſychius, Τελειοχηλισμένα, πεφανερωμένα, and Phavorinus, ἀνακεκαλυμμένα· the word ſignifies diſcovered, and made manifeſt.

V. 16. Throne of grace] The Jews mention a double throne of Gods, כסא רחמים the throne of pity or mercy, and כסא הדין the throne of judgment: and they add that, when ſitting in the throne of judgment he ſees the multitude too great of thoſe that deſerve puniſhment, he then removes to the throne of mercy, or pity, that is, of pardon.

d. θρόνος χάριτος

Paraphraſe. CHAP. V.

1. To this purpoſe of Chriſt's being our high prieſt, and, as ſuch, working deliverance for us, c. 4. 15. it will not be amiſs to inlarge a while, by comparing the chief things obſervable in an Aaronical prieſt with the like which are obſervable in him, every one of them. They are chiefly three. Firſt, the Aaronical high prieſt is ſevered and ſet apart from the common multitude, and appointed to act inſtead of them in all things between them and God, and particularly in matter of burnt-offerings, which are by men given to God, and ſo ſpent by the Prieſt wholly in God's ſervice, and of ſin-offerings, ſuch as Lev. 4. 3.

1. FOR every high prieſt * taken from among men is † ordained for men in things pertaining to God, that he may offer both gifts and ſacrifices for ſins:]

* being taken from men ἐξ ἀνθρώπων λαμβανόμενος

† conſtituted καθίσταται

2. Both which he offers for the ſins of the people, thoſe which they commit without deliberation, through ignorance, ſurreption, or ſudden paſſion. And this ſecondly, he can do affectionately, and with a fellow-feeling of thoſe infirmities which have betrayed them to ſuch ſins, through incogitancy, without malice or preſumption, as conſidering that he himſelf is ſubject to the like infirmities as well as others, and ſo the more inclinable in all reaſon to mildneſs toward them.

2. * Who can have compaſſion on the ignorant, and on them that † are out of the way, for that he himſelf alſo is compaſſed with infirmity:]

* Being able to συμπαθεῖν

† are in error πλανωμένοις

3. And becauſe the Prieſt is ſubject to thoſe infirmities, 'tis therefore appointed that he ſhall offer alſo for himſelf, not only in caſe of any actual commiſſion of this kind, of which he is at any time guilty, Lev. 4. 3. but alſo becauſe ſuch ſins may paſs by him undiſcerned, he is therefore on the great day of expiation, when he offers for the ſins of the people, to offer for himſelf alſo, Lev. 16. 6.

3. And by reaſon hereof he ought, as for the people, ſo alſo for himſelf, to offer for ſins.]

4. And thirdly, the nature of this office was ſuch, that no man might legally aſſume it to himſelf, but only he that was of Aaron's line, and ſo called to it by God that had aſſigned it to that line.

4. And no man taketh this honour unto himſelf but he that is called of God, * as was Aaron.]

* as Aaron alſo was καθάπερ καὶ ὁ Ἀαρών

5, 6. Now of theſe three things propounded of a legal high prieſt, the firſt v. 1. the ſecond v. 2, 3. and the third v. 4. every of them are directly appliable to Chriſt. As firſt the laſt of them (ſee Note on Mat. 7. b.) that Chriſt did not intrude himſelf upon this office, but God called him to it. And that is the meaning of two places in the Pſalms: firſt Pſal 2. This day have I begotten thee, O my ſon, that is, beſtowed this ſpecial dignity upon thee to be a King and Prieſt after thy reſurrection, that is, upon the aſcending of Chriſt, which was his going into the Holy of holies, whither none but the high prieſt went; the ſecond, Pſal. 110. Thou art ſuch a Prieſt as Melchiſedek was, that is, a King and a Prieſt together, and that never to ceaſe or to be ſucceeded by any, 'till all be delivered up to God the Father, 1 Cor. 15. 24.

5. So alſo Chriſt glorified not himſelf to be made an high prieſt, but he that ſaid unto him, Thou art my Son, to day have I begotten thee.

6. As he ſaith alſo in another place, Thou art a prieſt for ever after the order of Melchiſedek.]

7. The ſecond parallel betwixt Chriſt and the Prieſt in his offering for himſelf now follows; For ſo did Chriſt alſo in the time of his loweſt eſtate of infimities and deſtitution, (when upon the croſs he cryed out, My God, my God, &c.) offer up prayers and very ſubmiſſive petitions to his Father, that he would, if he died, yet deliver him out of death, preſerve his ſpirit, and reſtore it again, ſaying, Father, into thy hands I commend my ſpirit, and cryed with a loud voice (Mat. 27. 50. Mar. 15. 37. Luk. 23. 26.) at the delivering thoſe words, and it ſeems (though it be not mentioned in the Goſpel) added tears therewith; and accordingly he was delivered from that which he feared, and according to his ardent prayer he was thus preſerved by God, and though he died, was yet reſtored from death by God, and not ſuffered to lie under the power of it;

a. b.

7. Who in the days of his fleſh, when he had offered up prayers and ſupplications, with ſtrong crying and tears, unto him that was able to † ſave him from death, and was * [a] heard [b] in that he feared;]

† preſerve him out of death, σώζειν αὐτὸν ἐκ —

* hearkned to, delivered from his fear

8. And having paſs'd through ſo much of ſufferings, even to the higheſt degree of death it ſelf, in obedience to his Father's will, and ſo having found how dear obedience coſt him, though he were the Son of God in an eminent manner, he could not but learn from thence, what an hard thing it is to perform conſtant obedience, when death it ſelf ſometimes muſt be taken in the way to it, and conſequently he could not but learn learn to have compaſſion on thoſe that ſin out of weakneſs v. 2. though in that he were unlike the prieſt, that he was not ſubject to ſin like him, which taught the prieſt his compaſſion to ſinners.

8. Though he were a ſon, yet learned he obedience by the things which he ſuffered.]

† conſummate or conſecrated *being pronounced by Πεοσαγοοευθεὶς ὑπὸ

9. And being † [c] made perfect he became the author of eternal ſalvation unto all them that obey him :

9, 10. After this third and ſecond part of the parallel, the firſt now follows in the laſt

10. * Called of God an high prieſt after the order of Melchiſedek.]

place, that as the prieſt is taken from among men, and advanced to that office to negotiate between God and man, in the things belonging to God, eſpecially in offering ſacrifices, ſo Chriſt is parallel to the prieſt alſo, though in an higher manner, not taken from the common multitude of men, as the prieſt was (in that unlike) but yet negotiating in the whole buſineſs of ſouls, as the prieſt did, conſecrated by his ſufferings, as the prieſt by the ceremonies of his conſecration, and being ſo conſecrated, he offers up himſelf unto his Father (as the prieſt did gifts and ſacrifices v. 1.) preſents himſelf now at his right hand in heaven by way of interceſſion for us, for pardon and for grace, and by that means, if we live ſincerely, though not perfectly obedient to him, becomes unto us the author of eternal ſalvation, being after his reſurrection from the grave pronounced or declared by God an high prieſt, ſuch an one as Melchiſedek was, a king and a prieſt together, the prieſt to pray for bleſſings on us, as Melchiſedek did on Abraham, and the king to do that with power, actually to beſtow thoſe bleſſings on us.

* Corcerning which † much matter, and which would not

11. * Of whom we have † many things to ſay, and hard to be uttered, ſeeing ye are dull of hearing.]

11. Of which reſemblance alſo between Chriſt and Melchiſedek I might ſpeak very much, which would not eaſily be underſtood if I ſhould ſpeak it: For I cannot boaſt much of the quickneſs of your underſtanding or perception in divine things, or your forwardneſs to hearken to what is thus ſaid unto you, the perſecutions that are fallen on the Church have diſcouraged you; Theoph.

12. For when for the time ye ought to be teachers, ye have need that one teach you again, * which be the firſt principles of the oracles of God, and are become ſuch as have need of milk, and not of ſtrong meat.]

12. For ſome of you that have been long employed in the Church, and in that reſpect might be fit to be Biſhops, (ſee Note a. on ch. 6.) inſtead of that have indeed need that the firſt doctrines and principles of Chriſtianity, neceſſary for all the youngeſt and tendereſt Chriſtians to know, ſhould be taught you again, and 'tis unfit to give you ſuch myſterious abſtruſe doctrine, concerning the prieſthood of Chriſt and Melchiſedek, who want inſtruction in the plaineſt parts of Catechiſtical doctrine.

† partakes of ὁ μετέχων * taſtes not of ἄπειρος

13. For every one that † uſeth milk, * is unſkilful in the word of righteouſneſs, for he is a babe.]

13. For he that is gotten no higher than milk, will be hurt, not fed, by having more ſolid food given him; and ſo they that are not gotten beyond the loweſt, moſt neceſſary part of Chriſtian knowledge, muſt not be burthened with higher doctrines, ſuch as belong to proficients, for they are as children which have neither teeth nor ſtomach to overcome ſuch harder food.

14. But [d] ſtrong meat belongeth to them that are of full age, even thoſe who by reaſon of uſe have their ſenſes exerciſed to diſcern both good and evil.]

14. But theſe higher doctrines, like ſtronger meats, are for thoſe that are perfect men of full growth, (and anſwerable to them, thoſe that are of full knowledge in Chriſtianity) that by long cuſtom and converſation in the ſacred writings, have ſo exerciſed and improved their faculties that they can diſcern between good and bad, true and falſe doctrines (which children and raw rude perſons cannot do.) See Origen. cont. Celſ. l. 6. p. 262.

Annotations on Chap. V.

a. Εἰσακουσθεὶς

V. 7. Heard] Εἰσακούειν to hear is uſed by the Greek tranſlators of the Old Teſtament to expreſs הושיע to preſerve or deliver; ſo Pſ. 55. 18. (to which the Greek σώζειν, which we ordinarily render to ſave, is directly anſwerable, and ſo is here joined with εἰσακούειν in the ſame ſenſe:) and it is alſo uſed in other places for ענה reſpondit, anſwered, which is in effect the ſame, the anſwering a prayer for deliverance being all one with delivering; ſo Pſ. 22. 22. Thou haſt heard, or anſwered, me from the horns of the Unicorn, that is, delivered me from that great danger.

b. εὐλάβεια

Ib. In that he feared] Εὐλάβεια noting ordinarily a pious fear, doth in S. Luke (whom ſome think to be the Author of this Epiſtle) denote any other kind of fear alſo: ſo Act. 23. 10. where in the commotion the εὐλαβηθεὶς Commander is ſaid to be εὐλαβηθεὶς, afraid, that Paul would be torn in pieces. So מוראה φόβος fear, from ירא timuit, is rendred εὐλαβεῖσθαι Exod. 3. 6. And being here taken alſo in the ſame ſenſe, it is yet with ſome difference being here uſed (as many other words which denote the affections) to ſignifie not the affection, but the object, or thing it ſelf which is feared. So 1 Pet. φόβος 3. 14. τὸν φόβον αὐτῶν μὴ φοβηθῆτε, fear not their fear, that is, the puniſhments which they threaten; and ſo Iſa. 8. 16. (from whence the place is taken) the Hebrew, which is rendred φόβον αὐτοῦ his fear, is מוראו, which ſignifies the terrible thing, the object of fear, nor fear it ſelf, which is יראה, and therefore it follows in that very place Κύριος ἔσται φόβος, The Lord ſhall be thy fear, that is, ſurely, the object of it, he ſhall be feared by thee. And ſo the Hebrew is in other places rendred by ὁράματα, Deut. 26. 8. terrible ſights, or appearances, and c. 34. 12. θαυμάσια τὰ μεγάλα, the great wonders, or terrible things that were done before them. So פחד fear is ſometimes rendred πόλεμος war, Job. 22. 10. ſometimes ὄλεθρος deſtruction, Prov. 1. 26. ſo Jude 23. ἐν φόβῳ σώζετε σώζεσθε, whom ſave in fear, that is, in time of danger, as it follows, ſnatching out of the fire: ſo πτόησις terror is uſed for the thing that is feared, Prov. 3. 25. πτόησις ἐπερχομένη, the fear approaching, explained by ὁρμαὶ ἀσεβῶν ἐπερχόμεναι, the aſſaults, or violences, of the wicked that come upon them. Of theſe and the like words ſee Note on Luk. 1. g. And thus εὐλάβεια will be anſwerable to θάνατος death, preceding, as εἰσακουσθεὶς heard to σωζόμενος being ſaved. As for the other interpretation of the ἀπὸ τῆς εὐλαβείας, taken from the notion of ἀπὸ in that place, where 'tis ſaid they could not ſpeak ἀπὸ ἀπὸ χαρᾶς for joy, or in that they were ſo full of joy, by analogy with which ſome would render this, that he was heard in that he was ſo much afraid, there will be little reaſon for that, even according to that analogy; his joy being the cauſe (and that noted by ἀπὸ) of what they did or abſtained from doing, but his fear being not in like manner the cauſe of what another did, or of what he ſuffered, but the pleaſure or mercy of him that did hear him, that is, of God; of which this hearing was the effect, and not of his fear.

c. τελειωθεὶς

V. 9. Made perfect] Τελειοῦν in the Agoniſtical notion we have formerly explained, Note on Phil. 3. d. Another notion there is of it not far diſtant from thence. uſual among the Greek tranſlators of the Old Teſtament, to ſignifie the conſecration of a Prieſt, who was to perform and paſs through ſome ceremonies, and thoſe being done, and he actually conſecrated, he was ſaid τελειοῦσθαι to be conſummate. The Hebrew word to which this is anſwerable is מלאה, from מלא implevit, to which τελείωσις is not unfitly accommodated, becauſe τελειοῦν and πληροῦν, to be perfected and filled, are ſo near Synonyma. The applying of this word to the conſecration of a Prieſt was perhaps from that cuſtom of filling the hands of him that was conſecrated with fleſh and bread, Exod. 29. 24. Hence the ram that was offered at the conſecration of the Prieſt is called המלאים of impletions, and the fleſh again, the fleſh of impletions, or fillings, but in Greek θυσία τῆς τελειώσεως, the ſacrifice of conſecration, in the Septuagint, Exod. 29. 34. That it is taken here in that notion, may appear by the προσαγορευθεὶς ὑπὸ Θεοῦ ἀρχιερεύς, that follows, as an explication of it, v. 10. pronounced, or proclaimed, or declared, high prieſt, which belongs to Chriſt after his Reſurrection, and not before, that being the time wherein all power was given unto him, viz. that power of bleſſing wherein the Melchiſedek-Prieſthood conſiſts. As for the ſacrifice on the Croſs, that was the ceremony of his conſecration, anſwerable to that which was preſcribed Exod. 29. 11. after which he was aſſumed ſolemnly to this office of Prieſthood, according to that of Menander in Artemidorus Oneirocrit. l. 4. who dreamed in Greece that he was crucified ὑπερθεν ἀγορᾶς Διὸς πόλεως, before the temple of Dioſpolis, or the city of Jupiter, upon which, ſaith he, ἱερεὺς ἀποδεχθεὶς ἐκείνου τοῦ Θεοῦ, λαμπρότερος ἐγένετο καὶ εὐπορώτερος, he was appointed, or conſtituted, prieſt of that God, and ſo became more ſplendid and wealthy than he was.

d. στερεὰ τροφή

V. 14. Strong meat] What στερεὰ τροφὴ, ſolid food, literally ſignifies, hath no doubt or difficulty in it; 'tis that which is agreeable to healthy men's ſtomachs, and tends moſt to the nouriſhing of ſuch, but is too hard and heavy for children or weak ſickly perſons, and doth rather deſtroy than advantage ſuch. What 'tis here figuratively applied to is clear alſo, viz. the explication of figures or types in the Old Teſtament, ſo as to diſcover Evangelical truths in them. As for example, the comparing of the Prieſts under the Old Teſtament, whether Aaron or Melchiſedek, with that which the Goſpel teaches us of Chriſt, and ſhewing what thoſe typically or myſtically, or in a ſpiritual ſenſe, ſignifie. That theſe are here meant by ſolid food, appears by the diſcourſe which this Author had now in hand, though he tell them that they are ſcarce fit to receive it. And on that occaſion, by way of Parentheſis, that which is here ſaid, and at the beginning of the next Chapter, comes in, after which he returns to this kind of diſcourſe again, at the end of c. 6. and beginning of c. 7. This Melchiſedek, &c. The only difficulty here to be explain'd is, why or how the Author here falls off into this long digreſſion, interſerting this ſtrange parentheſis in the midſt of his diſcourſe about Chriſt's Melchiſedekian Prieſthood, on which he was entred here in this c. 5. v. 10. and returns not perfectly to it again till the beginning of c. 7. To this the ſolution is, that on occaſion of this myſtical explication of ſome paſſages in the Old Teſtament, he began to think of the Gnoſtick leaven among them, which conſiſted much in giving figurative myſtical interpretations of the Old Teſtament, which being called γνῶσις knowledge, they aſſumed that title of Gnoſticks or knowing men to themſelves, upon this ground of their dealing ſo much in theſe interpretations, and gathering and confirming all the branches of their hereſie from places of Scripture perverted by that means. Upon this occaſion he therefore thinks fit to tell them firſt, that as the interpreting Scripture after this manner is a difficult task, and if it be undertaken by unskilful raw teachers, it may do a great deal of hurt; ſo if the auditors be ignorant, and not well and habitually ſetled in the truth of Chriſtianity, and ſomewhat converſant in the Scriptures, ſo as to be able to judge between true and falſe, Chriſtian and heretical doctrine, this way may do them a great deal of hurt, may ſeduce, and corrupt, and deſtroy them, as ſtrong meat doth weak ſtomachs. Secondly, that this is the caſe of many of theſe Hebrews, even thoſe that have been Chriſtians long enough to be better proficients, and judges of true and falſe doctrine, meaning no doubt thoſe that had received ſome of theſe Gnoſtick hereticall infuſions, and either were already fallen off into their abominable practices, or elſe were very much in danger of doing thus. And of theſe he reſolves that (though he doth not now mean to do it, chap. 6. 1. but may perhaps at ſome other opportunity, v. 3. yet) it were moſt proper to begin with them, as with new converts, or children, nor yet ſufficiently catechiſed in the principles, and to inſtruct them in the nature of Faith and Repentance from wicked abominable works, of Baptiſm and the vow of it (to forſake all carnal ſins, and to ſtick cloſe to Chriſt in deſpite of all temptations) of impoſition of hands in the abſolution of thoſe that were laps'd (as many either were already, or were likely to be) and in like manner of the reſurrection of the dead and everlaſting judgment (which theſe Hereticks began to doubt of; ſee 2 Tim. 2. 18. and 1 Cor. 15. 12.) upon which he farther thinks fit to warn them of the danger of ſuch apoſtaſie from the Chriſtian faith, c. 6. 4. And that enlargeth the Parentheſis. And that having reſolved them thus unfit to have this ſolid food allowed them, he yet proceeds, ch. 7. to give it them, entring there into this myſtical divinity concerning Melchiſedek's Prieſthood: the reaſon is clear; firſt, becauſe this touch here given might be ſufficient to avert the danger; and ſecondly, becauſe of the generality of them he was perſuaded better things, c. 6. 9. though of ſome he had reaſon to paſs this ſeverer cenſure.

1. And that we may diſcourſe at large of this high point of Chriſt's Melchiſedek Prieſthood, c. 5. 10. it is neceſſary (though ſome mens ſtupid ignorance and impenitent lives, or relapſes to their former unchriſtian ſins after their receiving of Chriſtianity, would tempt one to return and plant again the firſt principles among them, ſee c. 5. 2. Of the doctrine of Baptiſms, and of laying on of hands, and of reſurrection of the dead, and of eternal judgment.]

2. And theſe are referr'd to ſix heads, as ſo many ſtones in the foundation; firſt, Repentance or change of mind, a reſolute forſaking of all ſinful works; ſecondly, Faith on Chriſt, or embracing the Goſpel; thirdly, the Doctrine of Baptiſm now among Chriſtians, as before among the Jews the ceremony to receive Proſelytes into the Church; fourthly, Impoſition of hands for thoſe that were fallen after Baptiſm, after the example of Chriſt, who laid his hands on the ſick when he healed them, to which abſolution is anſwerable, (the cure of the ſick being the looſing from that band, Luke 13. 16. See Note on 1 Tim. 5. f.) fifthly, Reſurrection from the dead; and ſixthly, eternal judgment.

3. And this we will do, if God permit.]

3. Of which, if God ſee fit, I may have another ſeaſon to inſtruct others Catechiſtically that ſtand in need of it, (but at this time I ſhall not do it, but aſcend to higher parts of Chriſtian knowledge, the underſtanding of the figures and types of the Old Teſtament applicable to Chriſt under the Goſpel) the danger being ſo great to them that do not underſtand them aright, and order themſelves accordingly.

4. For it is impoſſible for thoſe who were once inlightned, and have taſted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the holy Ghoſt,

5. And have taſted the good word of God, and the powers of the * world to come,

6. † If they ſhall [a] fall away, to [b] renew them again unto repentance, ſeeing they crucifie to themſelves the Son of God afreſh, and put him to an open ſhame.]

4, 5, 6. For as for thoſe that have been received into the Church by Baptiſm, and ſo by oath obliged themſelves to continue in the true faith and Chriſtian practice to their lives end, and having done ſo have for ſome time enjoyed the privileges of Chriſtians, pardon of ſin, and peace of conſcience, a conſequent of the mercy ſealed in Baptiſm, and yet farther have had ſome of thoſe extraordinary gifts of the holy Ghoſt poured out upon them, (ſee Note on Acts 6. c.) and by their continuance in the Church for ſome ſpace, have had experiences of the promiſes of Chriſt, and the wonderful works of mercy wrought for us by him under the Goſpel, Eph. 1. 19. if thoſe, I ſay, ſhall through the Gnoſtick infuſions apoſtatize from the faith, after all theſe engagements to continue in it, they muſt never be received to the peace of the Church again, and thoſe conſequent advantages and privileges from which they are fallen, being guilty of the ſame ſin that the Jews were in denying and crucifying of Chriſt, and making an Impoſtor of him: (for thus did all they that fell off to the Gnoſtick hereſie, in which Judaiſm and denying of Chriſt was a ſpecial ingredient.)

8. But that which beareth thorns and briars is * rejected, and is nigh unto curſing, whoſe end is to be burnt.]

7, 8. For as the ground that, being ſowed and watered from heaven, fructifies proportionably for the benefit and advantage of them to whom it is deſigned to be uſeful, is commended by God as good ground, on which the rain from heaven is beſtowed to ſome purpoſe, and as far as it is capable, rewarded by him with more rain, more fructifying ſhowers and beams, that it may bring forth more fruit (like the good tree and the good ſervant in the parable;) but contrariwiſe that ground or field which, after the like ſowing and irrigation, brings forth only thorns inſtead of fruit, is given over, rejected by God and man, and may juſtly expect to be curſed as the fruitleſs Fig-tree; and is finally fit for nothing but to be burnt and deſtroyed (like that of Sodom) never to bear fruit again: So he that hath been baptized, and made partaker of the holy Ghoſt, and hath extraordinary gifts of the Spirit beſtowed upon him, on purpoſe for for the benefit of others, if he renounce and apoſtatize from Chriſt, he is never to be reſtored to his dignity again, but is to be look'd on as one that, inſtead of edifying, hath endeavoured and done his worſt to ruin the Church, and ſo is to be caſt out of it irreverſibly, the curſe of a fruitleſs Tree or Field to fall upon him. And ſo generally the Gnoſtick Apoſtatizers, eſpecially thoſe that from any extraordinary gifts have fallen into this foul noiſom hereſie, are to look for an heavy curſe, for fierce judgments approaching them, and in the concluſion for utter deſtruction.

16. Annotations on Chap. VI.

a. παραπεσόντας

V. 6. Fall away] What παραπεσόντας, falling away, here notes, may beſt be collected from the Context: and that firſt from the Antecedents, the illumination, and taſting the heavenly gift, and partaking of the Holy Ghoſt, and taſting the good word of God, and the powers of the future age; and ſecondly by the Conſequents, crucifying again, and putting to an open ſhame the Son of God. The former ſhews from whence it is that they are ſaid to fall, and the latter how deep the fall is that is here ſpoken of. The former conſiſts of ſeveral degrees; firſt, φωτισθέντας, thoſe that have been inlightened. That certainly ſignifies Baptiſm, which among the Antients was generally call'd φωτισμὸς, illumination. And this contained under it not only the acknowledgment of the truth, c. 10. 26. but farther alſo the vow of Baptiſm, that of forſaking all wicked ways, and adhering conſtantly to Chriſt to their lives end. Now all that were thus baptized, and thereby entred into the Church, were received to abſolution of all their ſins paſt, admitted to be members of the Church and to enjoy the privileges of Chriſtians, the mercies afforded men there, called the gift of God, Joh. 4. 10. And they that have enjoyed the benefit and comfort of this for ſome time, may here fitly be expreſſed by γευσάμενοι τ δωρεᾶς τ ἐπουρανίου, that have taſted the heavenly gift; and that phraſe being annex'd to the φωτισθέντες, illuminate, with the Conjunction τε, and, may fitly be reſolved to belong to the ſame matter, as a fuller expreſſion of the φωτισθέντες enlightened, thoſe that by being baptized have been admitted to theſe privileges of Chriſtians, and have taſted, enjoyed them for ſome time. But then, as beſide theſe of Baptiſm, and pardon of ſin, there were other χαρίσματα, extraordinary powers and gifts in the Church; ſo here, beſide the mention of being inlightned, and taſting the heavenly gift, are added theſe other phraſes, that ſeem to be ſet on purpoſe to denote thoſe higher endowments: firſt, Μέτοχοι γενηθέντες πνεύματος ἁγίου, made partakers of the Holy Ghoſt, thoſe which have the Holy Ghoſt, which deſcended on the Apoſtles, Act. 2. communicated to them, for ſo had many believers at that time in the Church of Judæa, (ſee Note on Act. 2. d. and on Act. 6. c.) and ſecondly, καλὸν γευσαμένους θεοῦ ῥῆμα, δυνάμεις τε μέλλοντος αἰῶνος, having taſted the good word of God, and the powers of the future age; where firſt, μέλλων αἰὼν, the future age, is the very phraſe uſed in the Septuagint, Iſa. 9. 6. for the ſtate of Chriſtianity, where Chriſt is called πατὴρ μέλλοντος αἰῶνος the father of the future age, there being in the Jews account two Ages, the one before, the other after the coming of the Meſſias, and the ſecond in reſpect of the former called μέλλων future, (and ſo οἰκουμένη μέλλουσα, the future world, ch. 2. 5. that after the coming of the Meſſias,) and אחרים ימים the after, or later, days, ἐσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ, often mentioned in the New Teſtament; ſecondly, δυνάμεις powers, is the ordinary word to denote miracles, and ſo δυνάμεις μέλλοντος αἰῶνος will be either thoſe miraculous powers, extraordinary

Μέτοχοι πνεύματος

δυνάμεις μέλλοντος αἰῶνος

dinary gifts, which were beſtowed on believers by the coming of the Holy Ghoſt upon them, for the confirming themſelves, and converting of others, (and ſo were generally the conſequents and effects as of the Holy Ghoſt descending on the Apoſtles, ſo of their impoſing hands on others, and their receiving the Holy Ghoſt; for of ſuch we oft read, that they ſpake with tongues, &c. which were theſe δυνάμεις powers, miraculous gifts here ſpoken of,) or elſe more ſimply, and ſo as to agree with the good word of God, (whereby the Evangelical promiſes are denoted) the miraculous tranſcendent mercies enjoyed under the Goſpel. And then that will be the importance of theſe ſeveral ſorts of phraſes here put together, thoſe that are not only baptiſed Chriſtians, but furniſhed with extraordinary gifts and graces, and ſuch as have had experience of the wonderful mercies and performances of Chriſt to Chriſtians under the Goſpel. And ſuch as were ſo, will be the Subject of this Propoſition. Then for the Conſequents, they expreſs the degree of the fall here ſpoken of; They that are here ſuppoſed to have fallen from this ſtate, are ſaid ἀνασταυροῦν παραδειγματίζειν to crucifie Chriſt a ſecond time, and παραδειγματίζειν, that is, to inflict open-puniſhment upon him, (ſee Note on Mat. 1 h.) That muſt needs include renouncing and denying of Chriſt, the looking on him as ſuch as the Jews pretended him to be when they crucified him, that is, as an impoſtor; and accordingly the Hebrew נפל, anſwerable to παραπίπτειν, falling away, ſignifies with them Apoſtaſie, and ſo מעל, which is oft rendred παραπίπτειν to fall away, doth denote alſo, 2 Chron. 29. 19. and elſewhere, and ſo the Gnoſtick hereticks (which are in the Apoſtles eye) are ſuppoſed by S. John to deny Chriſt, and thereupon are called Ἀντίχριστοι Antichriſts. And both theſe put together ſeem to make up the full importance of this place, That they that being baptized illuminate Chriſtians, endowed with extraordinary gifts, and having continued ſo for ſome time (and ſo for their time ought to be Doctors, c. 5. 12.) fall off after all this not only to ſome waſting ſin, but to denying of Chriſt, renouncing of him, apoſtatizing from him, could not poſſibly be again renewed to repentance; and what that ſignifies will be ſeen Note b.

καλὸν Θεοῦ ῥῆμα

ἀνασταυροῦν παραδειγματίζειν

b. ἀνακαινίζειν εἰς μετάνοιαν

Ib. Renew them again unto repentance] What ἀνακαινίζειν ſignifies, may, I ſuppoſe, be beſt concluded by the notion of ἐγκαινίζειν to dedicate, from whence we have ἐγκαίνια the feaſt of the dedication of the Altar, in the book of the Maccabees, mentioned in the Goſpel. Agreeably when men, which by their creation after God's image were dedicated to his ſervice, had fallen away from him into idolatry, or ſin, the receiving them to Baptiſm, upon vow of new life, was the ἀναχαινίζειν εἰς μετάνοιαν, dedicating them anew to repentance, or new life. And accordingly to prepare them for Baptiſm, they uſed to confeſs their ſins, and the Catechiſt to lay hands on them, and pray for abſolution; as it is ſaid of Conſtantine, Ἐξομολογούμενος τὰ διὰ χειροθεσίας εὐχὰς ἠξιοῦτο, He confeſs'd, and obtained the prayers by impoſition of hands, Euſeb. de vit. Conſt. l. 4. Conſequently πάλιν ἀνακαινίζειν εἰς μετάνοιαν again to renew to repentance, is to uſe ſome new courſe of dedicating and conſecrating them anew, after ſome foul fall or waſting ſin after Baptiſm, and that was wont to be by Penance and Abſolution. For μετάνοια repentance is ſometimes taken for admiſſion to pardon, or the whole proceeding of the Church with the penitent in order to his abſolution from the Cenſures. So μετάνοιαν αἰτεῖν to ask repentance is to demand or beg admiſſion to that courſe which ſhould prepare them for Abſolution, Conc. Neocæſ. Can. 52. and elſewhere frequently. And ſo in our 16th. Article, the grant of repentance is put to explain that which had been before, in King Edward's Articles, the place for penitents, and in the Auguſtian confeſſion, Abſolutionem impertire, to afford abſolution, Art. 12. and this according to Scripture-ſtyle, where to preach repentance is to proclaim admiſſion to pardon upon repentance. And therefore when it is here ſaid that it is ἀδύνατον impoſſible (not to be hoped for, or attained) again to re-dedicate ſuch an one to repentance, the meaning will be, that ſuch as are here ſpoken of, Apoſtate Gnoſticks, that from ſo high a ſtate of Chriſtians, ſo long continued in, ſhall fall off, and joyn with the Jews in denying of Chriſt, and perſecuting Chriſtians, are never to hope to be received to the peace of the Church again, to have the benefit of their publick prayers, as c. 10. 26. it is ſaid of ſuch, that there remains no more ſacrifice for ſin. For although for other foul acts of ſin, ſacrificing to Idols, &c. the antient Church, eſpecially of the Roman Communion, allowed place for reconciliation and abſolution after a firſt offence, (ſome denying it to a ſecond, amplius nunquam, ſaith Tertullian De pæn.) yet to Apoſtates, and thoſe which turned open, obſtinate enemies, after the acknowledgment of the truth, this was not allowed. (And accordingly we read of Julian the Apoſtate, that in ſtead of praying for him, they prayed againſt him.) And this or the like underſtanding of theſe words ſeems to be the reaſon that the Roman Church, which at firſt received not this Epiſtle, thinking it to oppoſe admiſſion to the peace of the Church, for any act of known and groſs ſin after Baptiſm, did after receive it into the Canon, obſerving ſome other interpretation (reconcilable with their doctrine) of which the words were capable. And if this be not thought to come home to the force of the word ἀδύνατον impoſſible, becauſe though the Church will not receive ſuch, yet it is ſtill poſſible they may; that is eaſily anſwered by obſerving, that that word is uſed ſometimes to ſignifie that which by law may not be done, though naturally it may. So Joſephus againſt Appion, l. 2. ſpeaking of great offenders, ſaith, Ἀδύνατόν ἐστι κολάσεως παραίτησις, 'tis impoſſible to obtain remiſſion of the puniſhment, that is, the law permits it not. One other notion there is that this place may be capable of, by applying it yet more peculiarly to the Gnoſticks at that time; that they that ſo foully fell off from Chriſtianity through the Jewiſh perſecutions, ſhould in the iſſue never be capable of repentance, the deſtruction that, as a thief in the night, ſhould come ſo unexpectedly on the Jews, ſhould alſo involve them, and ſweep them ſuddenly away. And to this belongs that which is added v. 8. that they were near a curſe, whoſe end was to be burnt: and to that the place Heb. 10. 26. very well accordeth. But the words here have generally been conceived by the antient Church to belong to the Cenſures, and admiſſion to Penance and Abſolution; and to that the phraſe ἀναχαινίζειν εἰς μετάνοιαν, renewing to repentance, hath a propriety, and that other may be the interpretation of v. 8. and preſuppoſe, and fitly be ſuperadded to this, and not be excluſive of it.

V. 7. Bleſſing] What εὐλογία bleſſing here ſignifies is ſomewhat uncertain, the word being capable of ſeveral acceptions. That which is moſt commodious to the matter in hand, and contrary to κατάρα curſing, which follows, is, that it ſignifie praiſe or approbation, by way of reward, the well done good and faithful ſervant, and the bliſs attending it. And then, as any that doth his duty is ſaid to be approved, and any that brings in fruit to be commended by God (eſpecially when it is conſidered that the ſimilitude of the earth is here uſed to ſignifie Men, who are capable of ſuch payments by way of reward from God, if the earth be not,) and becauſe the ſimilitude is not here applied, the ἀνταπόδοσις being left out, it was therefore more reaſonable to uſe this phraſe, (which belongs more properly to the man than the earth) more ſignally to note, that what is ſaid of the Earth, is meant of the Man. It is here farther obſervable of this earth, that the thing for which it is rewarded, (and for want of which the reprobate earth is curſed) is the bearing fruit meet for them, δι' οὓς γεωργεῖται for whom it is plowed, not for God that ſends it the rain; which notes the perſons which are meant under the repreſentation of the earth to be thoſe which had gifts given them by God for the uſe of others, and ſo ſignally denotes thoſe that had received the Holy Ghoſt, and the extraordinary graces thereof, (parallel to the rain from heaven) in order to the inſtructing and profiting of others: to which end they that make uſe of thoſe gifts as they ought, bring a great bleſſing on others, convert many to righteouſneſs, and withal themſelves reap the fruit of it, ſhine like ſtars, ſee Jam. 5. 20. And ſo this is a farther evidence, that it is not the fall of an ordinary Chriſtian, but the Apoſtaſie of one that had been partaker of extraordinary gifts, which is ſpoken of in the former verſes. And that may be matter of admonition to the most perfect, not to be high-minded, but fear, lest he thus fall after all this.

c. εὐλογία

d. ἐχόμενα σωτηρίας

V. 9. Accompany salvation] That ἐχόμενος signifies adjoining, and that proportionably to the Septuagint, who render אחר next after by ἐχόμενα, hath been said Note on Mar. 1. b. and then so it must signifie here, things that join near upon deliverance, or salvation. The only difficulty will be, what notion belongs to σωτηρία deliverance or salvation in this place. And that will most probably be the temporal deliverance here, preparative to the eternal rest hereafter, this being the interpretation of the promises, v. 12. which by Faith and endurance are possessed; whereas they that now for persecutions fall off, lose both their present and future reward, are destroyed here with the Jews the persecutors, and are lost eternally.

e. Κατὰ τάξιν

V. 20. After the order] Κατὰ τάξιν after the order may here signifie no more than sicut or quemadmodum, even as, or after the manner of: for the words in the Psalmist are על דברתו, which Aben Ezra explains by after the manner, or like as. Not that τάξις should signifie here, as it would do being spoken of the Aaronical Priest, for there it should signifie a natural succession in that line from Aaron, observed among all the Levitical high Priests; but only a similitude or agreement, in so many particulars nominated, with Melchisedek (see Cunæus De Rep. Heb.) particularly that of being a King and a Priest together, which was so solemnly presignified of Christ by the Prophets, and perhaps from thence taken into the heathen Oracles, that about that time among the Romans the dignity of the Pontificate was joined with the Imperial, first by Augustus, and afterwards by the rest of the Emperors. See Sueton. in August. and in Galba c. 8. and in Claud. c. 22. And thereupon saith Tacitus An. l. 3. Nunc Deûm munere summum Pontificem summum hominem esse, Now by the gift of the gods the chief priest is the supreme man, or Emperour.

CHAP. VII.

Paraphrase.

1. FOR this Melchisedek, King of Salem, Priest of the most high God, who met Abraham returning from the slaughter of the Kings, and blessed him,

2. To whom also Abraham gave a tenth part of all, first being by interpretation King of righteousness, and after that also King of Salem, which is King of peace,]

1, 2. Now that Christ was not only an Aaronical Priest, but of a much higher kind, appears by the nature of the Priesthood of Melchisedek, after the manner of which Christ's Priesthood was. For this Melchisedek, who in his name [King of righteousness] and in his title [King of Salem, or Peace] resembled Christ most absolutely, and is called Gen. 14. 18. a Priest of the most high God, and so a King and Priest both, and who as such, when Abraham came from his victory over Kederlaomer and the other Kings, came out and treated him civilly, as a King, and as a Priest blessed him, and received from him the tenth of all he had there,

* pedegree ἀγενεαλόγητος

3. Without father, without mother, without * descent, having neither beginning of days nor end of life; but made like unto the Son of God, abideth a Priest continually.]

3. One, of whose father, or mother, or pedegree there is no mention in the story in Genesis; as being indeed of another race, not of that which is recorded in Scripture, see v. 6. (which notes him to be no Priest by descent, as the Levitical Priests were, and accordingly their genealogies and pedegrees both on the fathers and mothers side were preserved exactly) as neither of his birth nor death, the time of his entring on, or leaving his office, and so stands in the story as a kind of immortal Priest without any successor mention'd in his Priesthood (nay, perhaps the last Priest of the true God that was in Phœnicia, Idolatry presently coming in) this Melchisedek, I say, is in all this an emblem of Christ, (and so is set down Psal. 110. (who is such a Priest as he, in respect of the conjunction of Priesthood and Regal office, of the no predecessors or successors in the line, of the title of King of righteousness and Prince of peace, and of his continuing for ever in that office, that is, as long as there should be need of any (as Melchisedek did, as long as the worship of God continued in Phœnicia.

† out of the prime of his store

4. Now consider how great this man was, unto whom the Patriarch Abraham gave the tenth † of the [a] spoils.]

4. And ye will soon discern what an eminent person this Melchisedek was, when ye but remember that the Patriarch Abraham, that had undertaken the service of the true God, and was the stock from whence all the Aaronical Priesthood sprang, did himself give him a tithe out of the choicest of the spoils which he took in the victory over the Kings.

5. And verily they that are of the sons of Levi, who receive the office of the Priesthood have a commandment to take tithes of the [b] people according to the Law, that is, of their brethren, though they come out of the loins of Abraham.]

5. Now the Levitical Priests had commission by Law to receive tithes of all Jews that came from Abraham, as Levi did, that is, from their own Countrymen.

6. But he whose descent is not counted from them, received tithes of Abraham, and blessed him that had the promises.]

6. But Melchisedek, who was no kin to Abraham, nor of that people, a stranger to him, received tithes from him, which is an argument of greater dignity than to receive it only from his own people) and blessed him who was so special a favourite of God's, as to receive promises of such a nature, so oft repeated to him.

7. And without all contradiction, the less is blessed of the better.]

7. And this is a clear argument that Melchisedek was a greater person than Abraham.

8. And here men that die receive tithes: but there he receiveth them, of whom it is witnessed that he liveth.]

8. And in the Levitical Law they that receive tithes, die, succeed, and are succeeded, their succession of one after the death of another is recorded in the Scripture, and so their death punctually set down: but in that place of Genesis, Melchisedek hath no other mention made of him, but that he liveth, no kind of mention of his death.

9. And as I may so say, Levi also, who receiveth tithes, paid tithes in Abraham.]

9. So again, if you compare it, you shall find that Levi also, who under the Law hath the privilege of receiving all the tithes, did in Abraham's person (as the sons are included in the parents) pay tithes to Melchisedek; which shews again the dignity of that Priesthood above the Levitical.

10. For he was yet in the loins of his father when Melchisedek met him.]

10. For Levi was in the loins of his great grandfather Abraham, and as it were included in him, and so may be said in some sense to have done what he did, and paid what he paid.

* about that ἐπ' αὐτῇ † what need now is there τίς ἔτι χρεία * be raised ἀνίστασθαι † named or said λέγεσθαι * translated μετατιθεμένης † translation μετάθεσις

11. If therefore perfection were by the Levitical Priesthood (for * under it the people received the Law) † what farther need was there that another Priest should * rise after the order of Melchisedek, and not be † called after the order of Aaron?]

11. This is an argument that the Levitical Priesthood was not so perfectly able to make a perfect expiation of sin, (although it be true that it was instituted by the Law of God for that time;) for if it were, there would then have been no need, as it seems there was, that God should institute another sort of Priest, to wit, his own Son, to be such a Priest as Melchisedek was, and not such an one as Aaron.

12. For the Priesthood being * changed, there is made also of necessity a † change of the Law.

13. For he of whom these things are spoken pertaineth to another tribe, of which no man gave attendance at the altar.]

12, 13. And the truth is, the Priesthood being a thing about which the Mosaical Law was principally conversant, the changing of the Law about that, and translating it to a tribe or family, that of Judah and David, of which none by the Law were to be Priests, is an evidence that the Law is abolished, and consequently that necessity of legal observances, or continuing in all the words of that Law, and of the Mosaical yoke.

* another Priest is raised up ἀνίσταται ἱερεὺς ἕτερος † indissoluble ἀκατάλυτος

14. For it is evident that our Lord sprang out of Judah, of which Tribe Moses spake nothing concerning Priesthood.]

14. Now this is clear by our Saviour's being of the Tribe of Judah, a Tribe from whence the Priests were not to come.

15. And yet it is far more evident: for that after the similitude of Melchisedek * there ariseth another Priest,]

15. And more clear by the distinct words concerning him, of his being such a Priest as Melchisedek was, not as Aaron.

16. Who is made not after the Law of a carnal commandment, but after the power of an † endless life.]

16. For by that it is manifest, that Christ, who is now now our Prieſt, and inſtalled to it after his reſurrection, was not made a Prieſt by any law that provides for the mortality of Prieſts, and ſo appoints them in a ſucceſſion, as the Aaronical Prieſthood was, but by that Spirit that powerfully raiſed him from the dead, never to die again, and ſo to be a Prieſt for ever.

17. According as the Pſalmiſt teſtifieth, Thou art a Prieſt for ever, &c.

17. For he teſtifieth, Thou art a Prieſt for ever after the order of Melchiſedek.]

18. And indeed that this Moſaical Law ſhould be evacuated, there was reaſon, becauſe it was ſo unable and uneffectual to do that which was deſigned, viz. the expiating of, or cleanſing from ſin.

18. For there is verily a diſanulling of the commandment going before, for the weakneſs and unprofitableneſs thereof.]

19. For the Moſaical Law got no man any freedom from ſin, was able to give no man ſtrength to fulfil the will of God, and could not purchaſe pardon for any that had broken it. This therefore was to be done now afterwards by the Goſpel, which gives more ſublime and plain promiſes of pardon of ſin, which the Law could not promiſe, of an eternal and heavenly life, to all true penitent believers: which gracious tenders now made by Chriſt, give us a freedom of acceſs to God, and confidence to come and expect ſuch mercies from him, to lift up pure hands, &c. 1 Tim. 2. 8. and in all reaſon we are to make that uſe of it, and not to fall off from Chriſt to Moſaical obſervances.

19. For the Law made nothing perfect, but the † bringing in of a better hope did; by the which * we [c] draw nigh unto God.]

† ſuperinducing of better ἐπεισαγωγὴ κρείττονος

* or let us, for the King's MS. reads ἐγγίζωμεν

20, 21, 22. And 'tis likewiſe added by the Pſalmiſt, that God ſware, and will not repent, interpoſed his oath in this matter, which is an argument of the immutability and weightineſs of the matter, and of the eternal continuance of this Prieſthood of Chriſt, and ſo of the preeminence of it beyond the Aaronical, which was not eſtabliſhed by God by oath: And ſo as much as a durable, immutable, eternal Prieſthood is more excellent than a tranſitory, mutable, finite Prieſthood (ſuch as the Levitical, being fixt in mortal perſons, one ſucceeding the other, and ſuch as was it ſelf mortal, not to laſt any longer than the coming of Chriſt) ſo much was that Covenant, wherein Chriſt was Sponſor and Surety for God, that it ſhould be made good to us on God's part (on condition we performed that which was required of us) viz. the Covenant confirmed to us by Chriſt in the Goſpel, a better Covenant than the Covenant of the Law, wherein Moſes undertook for God to us.

20. And inaſmuch as not without an oath he was made Prieſt,

21. (For thoſe Prieſts were made without an oath; but this with an oath, by him that ſaid unto him, The Lord ſware, and will not repent, Thou art a Prieſt for ever after the order of Melchiſedek)

22. By ſo much was Jeſus made a ſurety of a better * Teſtament.]

* Covenant διαθήκης

23. And the Levitical prieſts are a number of men ſucceeding one another, by whom proviſion is made for the mortality of the men, which otherwiſe will bring it to an end.

23. And they truly were many prieſts, becauſe they were not ſuffered to continue by reaſon of death.]

d.

24. But Chriſt being now no longer mortal, hath no ſucceſſor in his Prieſthood, his Prieſthood paſſes not from him to any other.

24. But this man, becauſe he continueth ever, hath * an [d] unchangable prieſthood.]

* a prieſthood that paſſeth not away

25. By all which evidences it appears, to our preſent comfort, that he living for ever can intercede for ever for us, beſtow on us whatever we ſtand in need of, and ſo from time to time relieve and ſuccour againſt all temptations thoſe that are true ſincere Chriſtians, that ſerve Chriſt with all their hearts, that adhere conſtantly to him.

25. Wherefore he is able alſo to ſave them to † the uttermoſt that come unto God by him, ſeeing he ever liveth to make interceſſion for them.]

† perpetuity εἰς τὸ παντελὲς

26. And this was a ſort of high prieſts that we ſinful weak creatures had need of, one that being mercifully diſpoſed, is alſo uncapable of ſuffering any hurt, of being defiled or corrupted, or conſequently of dying, v. 25. and to that end is advanced to a pitch above our ſinful corruptible condition here;

26. For ſuch an high prieſt became us, who is holy, * harmleſs, undefiled, ſeparate from ſinners, and made higher than the heavens;]

* free from evil, undefilable, ἄκακος, ἀμίαντος

27. Who hath no neceſſity oftentimes, as upon the great day of expiation once a year (ſee ch. 10. 11.) to offer ſacrifice firſt for his own, then for the peoples ſins, as the high prieſt did under the Law. All that was neceſſary for him to do, in proportion to thoſe offerings of the Levitical prieſt, was performed by him at once, by his death upon the croſs, by which he both offered for himſelf, that is, made expiation as it were, (not to deliver himſelf from ſin, for he was never guilty of any, but from the infirmities aſſumed by him, but eſpecially from death it ſelf, and ſo is now never likely to die, and determine his Melchiſedek-prieſthood) and for others alſo, offered one ſacrifice for the ſins of the whole world, which will ſerve the turn without ever repeating it again.

27. Who needeth not † daily, as thoſe high prieſts, to offer up ſacrifice, firſt for his own ſins, and then for the peoples: for this he did once, when he offered up himſelf.]

† upon a day καθ' ἡμέραν

28. For the Levitical Law makes ſuch men prieſts, and none elſe, which are ſubject to mortality; but the oath of God, Pſal. 110. concerning the immutable prieſthood, makes Chriſt the chief prieſt, whoſe life, and ſo whoſe prieſthood, was never to determine, whoſe offering for himſelf, that is, for the putting off his infirm, mortal body, was complete at that once, and needed never to be offered again by him, any more than the ſame offering of his as it was for the ſins of the world. See ch. 10. 11, 12.

28. For the Law maketh men high prieſts which have infirmity; but the word of the oath which was ſince the Law, maketh the Son, who is conſecrated for evermore.]

a. ἀκροθίνια

V. 4. Spoils] The true notion of ἀκροθίνια will be beſt diſcerned by conſidering the parts of it, ὄθινες, and ἄκρα. ὄθινες ſignifies properly σωροὶ heaps, whether of ſand or corn, or any other goods. And Phavorinus obſerves that in the Feminine gender it ſignifies (from that of heaps of ſand) αἰγιαλὸς the ſea ſhore, but in the Maſculine it is taken for χρημάτων ἢ λίθων an heap of goods or ſtones, and the like: ſo again, ſaith he p. 110. ὄθινες δέ εἰσιν οἱ σωροὶ τῶν πυρῶν ἢ κριθῶν, the word ſignifies heaps of wheat or barley; where, by the way, the ἢ πᾶσα ἀπαρχὴ that follows in the author, muſt not be taken as an interpretation of ὄθινες, but ſubjoined to ἀπαρχὴ τῶν ὀθνῶν before, and accordingly the punctation muſt be altered from what it is in the printed copy, thus, Ἀπαρχὴ τῶν ὀθνῶν (ὄθινες δέ εἰσιν οἱ σωροὶ τῶν πυρῶν ἢ κριθῶν ἢ πᾶσα ἀπαρχή.) Then for the word ἄκρον, it ſignifies the top, or prime, or choice part of any thing (as ἀκρόδρυα are the prime part of the trees, viz. the fruits upon them, οἱ καρποὶ δενδρικοί.) And then theſe two put together in compoſition are the prime, or chief part of whatſoever it is that is meant by ὄθινες, and what that is particularly in any place, the matter ſpoken of muſt determine. Thus when the notion of ὄθινες is that of corn or fruits, &c. then ἀκροθίνια are in the Grammarians αἱ ἀπαρχαὶ τῶν καρπῶν, the prime, or choice, of the fruits, or firſt-fruits, ſuch as among all men were wont to be conſecrated to the gods (not in order of time the firſt that are gathered, but) for quality the faireſt or beſt of the heap. So when the notion of ὄθινες is the heaps of goods taken in war, τὰ ἀπὸ τῶν πολέμων, be it gold or other pillage, χρυσία or σκῦλα, then the ἀκροθίνια are the prime and choice of thoſe, ἀπαρχαὶ λαφύρων the prime part of the prey, which generally was dedicated and preſented to God (ſuch as is mentioned 1 Sam. 15. 21. under the title of the chief things of the ſpoil, ſheep and oxen, &c. to ſacrifice unto the Lord in Gilgal.) And this is by Herodotus, Thucydides, Xenophon and Euripides called ἀκροθίνια. And there is a memorable place in Arrian's Κυνηγ. χῶ, ſaith he, ἐπὶ θήρᾳ ἀρχέσθω ἀπὸ θεῶν, &c. καὶ ἀπαρχὰς ἁλισκομένων ἀναθλώσω, ἃ μεῖον ἢ ἐν τῇ νίκῃ πολέμου ἀκροθίνια, Men ought in hunting to begin from the gods, and to preſent to them the firſt-fruits of what they have taken, no leſs than in a victory in war the chief of the ſpoils. So when ὄθων ſignifies the ſea-ſhore, then ἀκροθίνια are the prime of thoſe rarities ἃς ἀναθέασιν οἱ ἐμποροι, which the merchants, when they return from a voyage, offer up as ἀναθήματα to the gods. From theſe ſo many notations of the word, it comes not only to ſignifie any or each of theſe, but in general, πᾶσα ἀπαρχὴ, all the prime, or choice, of any kind; but this καταχρηστικῶς, ſaith he, by way of abuſe, not in the firſt propriety. Agreeably hereunto, δεκάτη τῶν ἀκροθινίων will here ſignifie a tith or tenth given to Melchiſedek, as to the Prieſt of God (not of the ἀκροθίνια a tenth part only of them, for that were δεκάτη ἀκροθινίων, but) tenth of all, Gen. 14. 20. and that tenth paid ἐκ τῶν ἀκροθινίων, out of the choice, or prime, or beſt of the ſtore, for that was wont to be pick'd out and dedicated to God. The whole difficulty then remaining will be, be, not whether he paid a full tithe of all the ſpoils, for that is already cleared by Geneſis, he gave him tithes of all, and by this chap. v. 2. δεκάτην ἀπὸ πάντων, a tithe from all, to which ἐκ τῶν ἀκροθινίων is added, not to deny what was before ſaid, but to ſpecifie that this tithe of all was choſen out of the beſt and choiceſt; but, I ſay, the only remaining difficulty will be, whether this tithe then paid by Abraham were of all his own poſſeſſions, and ſo that the notion of ἀπὸ πάντων, ver. 2. and paid tithes of all, Gen. 14. 20. or whether it were only of the tithes of the ſpoils taken in that war againſt the four Kings, and ſo that the notion of ἐκ τῶν ἀκροθινίων here. To which I anſwer, firſt, That there is little doubt but that ἐκ τῶν ἀκροθινίων here, and ἀπὸ πάντων ver. 2. refer to the ſame thing exactly, to wit, that which Gen. 14. 20. is called the tithe of all; and if that be the tithe of the ſpoils only, then πάντα muſt be interpreted (with this reſtraint from the matter in hand) not all his own goods, but all that he had there with him, all that he had then acquired, all the ſpoils. Or if ἀκροθίνια ſhould ſignifie his other ſtore, his corn and fruits at home (as according to the notion of the word, 'tis clear it may do) then πάντα ſhall ſignifie all his tithable poſſeſſions of any kind. But then ſecondly, It muſt be conſidered that Abraham was not now at his own home, but in his return from the conqueſt over the Kings, v. 1. and that, if it ſhould be doubted of, farther appears, becauſe Melchiſedek King of Salem came out to meet him, as a ſtranger in his paſſage, which ſignifies that he was then paſſing through Melchiſedek's dominions. And he, that is, Melchiſedek, brought him forth bread and wine, Gen. 14. 18. not offered bread and wine to God, as ſome would have it, but, ſaith Cyril of Alexandria, ἐξήνεγκεν αὐτῷ brought it out to Abraham. And Philo Judæus mentions this act of Melchiſedek as an act of bounty and hoſpitality, oppoſite to what Amalek after did to Iſrael: Amalek, ſaith he, met not Iſrael with bread and water, but Melchiſedek met Abraham with bread and wine, and preſented it to him, and bleſſed him. And Joſephus, Ἐκομίσατο ὁ Μελχισεδήκης τὸν Ἀβραμον στρατὸν ξενικὸν, καὶ πολλὴν ἀφθονίαν τῶν ἐπισιτείων παρέσχε, καὶ δεῖπνα τοῖς εὐωχίαν αὐτῷ τε ἐπαινεῖν ἤρξατο, καὶ τὸν Θεὸν εὐλογεῖν ὑποχείους αὐτῷ ποιήσαντα τοὺς ἐχθρούς.

He brought forth gifts, and abundance of victuals to Abraham's Army, and at the feaſt began to commend Abraham, and bleſs God that had ſubdued his enemies.

All agreeing to make this bringing forth bread and wine to Abraham an act of Regal liberality in that King of Salem toward that ſtranger or paſſenger, as his bleſſing him was of his Prieſtly office. And therefore thirdly, It cannot be imagined that Abraham had all his poſſeſſions there with him at that time, but only the ſpoils which his conqueſt had afforded him, and nothing elſe, unleſs there were ſome ſmall remainders left of proviſion which he had carried out for his march. Nay fourthly, The manner of paying tithes being not ordinarily thus, that a man ſhould give the tenth of all his poſſeſſions, but only the tenth of his increaſe, much leſs that he ſhould give a tenth of that all, whenſoever, or as oft ſoever as he meets a Prieſt, but only at the time of harveſt, or whenſoever he receives from God's hand any kind of increaſe; it will not appear reaſonable that Abraham ſhould at this time pay to Melchiſedek a tithe of all his poſſeſſions, nor indeed of any thing but what he had now reaped by way of harveſt, that is, of the increaſe that God's proſpering hand had given him in the victory over thoſe Kings. And of that it is that it is here ſaid, he preſented the tithe to Melchiſedek, and having done that, and allowed a portion to them that went with him, Gen. 14. 24. he reſtored all the reſt (but what was eaten in the war, v. 24.) to the King of Sodom, from whom it had formerly been taken: and ſo the truth is, of the whole tithe which Abraham gave Melchiſedek, no part was of his own poſſeſſions, but only of the King of Sodom's goods, which Abraham had taken as lawful reprizal from the four Kings, on whom he avenged the cauſe of his nephew Lot and the King of Sodom, formerly conquered by them. All which notwithſtanding, it ſtill ſtands good in the fifth place, That Abraham did pay full tithe, and that of the choiceſt of this increaſe of his, that is, of the ſpoils taken in that war; and that will be a ſufficient example and teſtimony of the cuſtom in Abraham's time of paying tithes to the Prieſt of all our increaſe, of what kind ſoever it is. Though that this was paid to a Prieſt of another country, ver. 6. was a peculiar dignity and honour to Melchiſedek, as 'tis there intimated, the due being only to receive tithes of their own country-men, ver. 5.

V. 5. People according to the law] Τὸν λαὸν here ſignifies the Jews, that people, called oft τὸ ἔθνος the nation, and ὁ λαὸς the people, as when Caiaphas propheſies that it was expedient that one man ſhould die for the people, and that the whole nation periſh not, and many the like; and ſo here, with an addition, ἡ λαὸν κατ' ἐξ νόμον, the people that were under the Moſaical Law, that is, punctually the Jews. And this is more probable than that κατ' ἐξ νόμον ſhould belong to ἀποδεκατῶν, tithe, according to the Law. For that had been ſaid before in εἰρηκὼς ἐντολὴν ἔχουσιν, they have commandment, and needed not again be ſo ſuddainly repeated; and ſecondly, the τέλος, that is, that follows, ſeems to ſet τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς αὐτῶν, their brethren, as an interpretation of what went immediately before, which cannot be of the κατὰ νόμον ἀποδεκατῶν, tithe according to Law, but will very readily be ſo of the ἡ λαὸν κατ' ἐξ νόμον, the people according to Law, in this notion of it, that people to which the Law was given, the legal people, the people of the Jews.

V. 19. Draw nigh] What is the importance of ἐγγίζειν here, will appear by the Hebrew קרב, which ſignifies promiſcuouſly to draw nigh, and to offer. From it comes the ordinary word Corban, which the Evangeliſts render a gift, viz. that which is preſented and conſecrated to God in the Temple, and the place where the offerings were laid up was alſo called by that name, and τὰ δῶρα τὰ δῶρα gifts Luk. 21. 4. So נגש ſignifies alſo both to draw nigh, to offer. From the firſt notion of it the word ἐγγὺς near ſeems to be derived, the Conſonants or Radicals in both being the ſame, and accordingly 'tis fitly rendred by ἐγγίζω to draw near. So Exod. 19. 22. Οἱ ἐγγίζοντες ἱερεῖς Κυρίῳ, the Prieſts that draw nigh unto the Lord, and Lev. 21. 21. ἐκ ἐγγιεῖ τοῦ προσενεγκεῖν θυσίας, He ſhall not draw nigh to offer ſacrifices. And this and the other ſignification of the Hebrew words are here both contained under the word ἐγγίζω to draw nigh, which is here anſwerable to either of thoſe Hebrew: For that is the meaning of it here, that we by our high Prieſt Chriſt are made a kind of Prieſts our ſelves, enabled to draw nigh to God, and offer up our ſelves to him, to preſent our bodies to him a living ſacrifice, Rom. 12. 8. to lift up pure hands, 1 Tim. 2. 8. that is, to do as the Prieſts were wont to do. This the vulgar Latin ſeems to have conſidered, when he renders ἐγγίζειν here offerre, to offer; not, as Lucas Brugenſis conjectures, as if he had read προσενέγκαι, but out of the exact critical notation of the word and προσεγγίζειν among theſe writers and the tranſlators of the Old Teſtament.

V. 24. Unchangeable] That ἀπαράβατος here ſignifies that which doth not paſs from father to ſon, from one ſucceſſor to another, is from the nature of the word παραβαίνειν tranſire, to paſs; and ſo they are the words of Athanaſius concerning Chriſt, ἀπαράβατον καὶ ἀδιάδεκτον ἔχων τὴν ἀρχιερωσύνην, he hath a pontificate, or Prieſthood, that paſſeth not away, or doth not go by ſucceſſion to others.

CHAP. VIII.

Paraphraſe.

1. NOW of the things which we have ſpoken, this is the ſum: We have ſuch an high Prieſt, who is ſet on the right hand of the throne of the Majeſty in the Heavens,]

1. Now to recapitulate all that we have ſaid in this matter of Chriſt's being our high Prieſt: The high Prieſt which intercedes for us Chriſtians, is one that is entred into heaven, and there ſits at the right hand of God, that is, reigns there, hath all power given unto him, and ſo is a King and Prieſt together, actually beſtows upon us all thoſe things for which he intercedes for us, grace and pardon to all obedient ſincere Chriſtians, and is able and ready to help us in time of need,

2. A Miniſter

2. A Miniſter of the Sanctuary, and of the true Tabernacle, which the Lord * pitched, and not man.] * hath built ἔπηξεν

2. One that miniſters and officiates in his Church, that hath the ordering of the true, not typical, figurative Temple and Tabernacle, that which is not built by human workmen, but by God, (all power being given unto him in Heaven and in Earth, having dominion inſtated on him over his Church to deliver them, and over his enemies to deſtroy them.)

3. For every high Prieſt is ordained to offer gifts and ſacrifices: wherefore it is of neceſſity that this man have ſomewhat alſo to offer.]

3. A Miniſter, I ſay, for ſo every Prieſt is, his buſineſs being peculiarly to ſacrifice, and offer burnt-offerings and ſin-offerings, &c. c. 5. 1. and agreeably Chriſt was to have ſome ſacrifice to offer to God as a Prieſt, and that was himſelf, preſenting himſelf in Heaven, the true Sanctuary, after the ſlaying him upon the croſs, c. 9. 12.

4. For if he were on earth, he † ſhould not be a Prieſt, * ſeeing that there are Prieſts that offer gifts according to the Law.] † ſhould not have been ἦν * thoſe being Prieſts ὄντων ἱερέων

4. And for his being a miniſter not on earth only, but now more eſpecially in Heaven, and there exerciſing his Prieſthood, 'tis clear, becauſe here on earth there be ſtore of Prieſts which officiate according to the preſcription of the Moſaical Law, viz. thoſe that offer the Levitical ſacrifices, and ſo there is no need that Chriſt ſhould take that office upon him, if it were to be exerciſed only here, becauſe that legally belongs to others.

5. Who † ſerve unto the example and ſhadow of heavenly things, as Moſes was admoniſhed of God when he was about to make the Tabernacle: For ſee (ſaith he) that thou make all things according to the pattern ſhewed to thee in the Mount.] † wait upon the image λατρεύουσι τῷ ὑποδείγματι καὶ σκιᾷ

5. And thoſe Prieſts which officiate here on earth, do attend on and perform none but that figurative typical ſervice, which ſignified and repreſented this offering of Chriſt, preſenting himſelf to God in Heaven, and there interceding for us. (So that that which was by God himſelf ſaid to Moſes, when he was to make the Tabernacle, that he ſhould take care to make it according to the pattern ſhewed him in the Mount, may fitly be applied by way of accomodation to this matter; this offering of Chriſt's in Heaven being indeed that ſubſtantial Idea, of which all the ſervice of the Tabernacle was but a type or ſhadow, and ſo fitly ſtyled an heavenly pattern.)

6. But now hath he obtained a more excellent Miniſtery, by how much alſo he is the Mediator of a better covenant, which was * eſtabliſhed upon better promiſes.] * enacted νενομοθέτηται

6. But as for Chriſt's office or Miniſtery that he thus exerciſeth, it is above that of the Levitical Prieſts, which conſiſted only in typical obſervances, and as much above them, as the Covenant which Chriſt mediated between God and man was above the Moſaical œconomy. Of this Covenant it is obſervable, firſt, That it is now ſetled as a Law, in which both parties are mutually bound to each other, God to man, and man to God; and ſecondly, That it is a much more excellent, perfect, beneficial Covenant than the former, the duties now required more ſpiritual and ſublime, and the promiſes now propoſed infinitely better promiſes than thoſe which were under the Law, (viz. not only legal impunity, which the ſacrifices under the Law yielded, but pardon and remiſſion, that pardon not only for light faults, ſins of error, &c. for which thoſe ſacrifices were deſigned, but even for wilful ſins, if forſaken and repented of, yea and the pouring out the Spirit on all fleſh, giving ſpiritual gifts for the building up of the Church, not only to a few, as to one or two Prophets under the Law, but to many, even to all, Gentiles as well as Jews, yea to all Chriſtians in ſome meaſure; and laſtly, inſtead of the promiſes of a temporal Canaan, the plain promiſes of eternal life and bliſs.)

7. For if that firſt covenant had been faultleſs, then ſhould no place have been ſought for the ſecond.]

7. For if the Covenant under the Law had been ſo perfect, that it could not have been improved or bettered, there would have been no need of a ſecond covenant.

8. For finding fault † with them, he ſaith, Behold, the days come, (ſaith the Lord) when I will make a new Covenant with the houſe of Iſrael and the houſe of Judah; † he ſaith to them αὐτοῖς λέγει

9. Not according to the Covenant that I made with their fathers in the day when I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Ægypt, * becauſe they continued not in my Covenant, and [a] I regarded them not, ſaith the Lord.] * for ὅτι

8, 9. Which appears by this, becauſe when he ſpeaks in the Prophet Jeremy c. 31. 31. of making a new Covenant, he doth it by way of complaint, or finding fault with the weakneſs and imperfection of the former, (ſee c. 7. 18.) after this manner, or form of ſpeech, The Covenant which I will now make, is not after the rate of the Covenant which I made with the Iſraelites by Moſes (a Covenant made up of external carnal commandments) when I brought them out of Ægypt; for that was not effectual to them, was not able to attract them to obedience, or perſeverance, but they fell off from me, and conſequently I forſook them, ſaith the Lord.

10. For this is the Covenant that I will make with the houſe of Iſrael after thoſe days, ſaith the Lord; I will put my Laws into their mind, and write them † in their hearts: and I will be to them a God, and they ſhall be to me a people.] † on ἐπὶ

10. But this is the Covenant which I will make in the latter days, or age of the Meſſiah, in time of the Goſpel; I will inſtead of thoſe external carnal ordinances and obſervations, give them ſpiritual commands for the regulating their affections, precepts moſt perfectly agreeable to all rational minds; and by the exceeding greatneſs of that grace and mercy, in this and many other particulars, ver. 12. I ſhall incline their affections willingly to receive my Law, as well as convince their underſtandings of their duty, and ſo I will take pleaſure in them, and they ſhall perform obedience unto me, live like a people of God, worthy of ſuch a Leader.

11. And they ſhall not teach every man his neighbour, and every man his * brother, ſaying, Know the Lord: for all ſhall know me from the leaſt to the greateſt.] * or citizen, for the King's MS. reads πολίτου

11. And there ſhall be no need of ſuch pains in teaching men what they are to do, as under Moſes's Law, (which conſiſted of many outward performances which had no ſuch inward eſſential goodneſs in them, as that a man's own reaſon ſhould prompt him to them, and approve them as beſt and moſt excellent, if they were not taught by the Law-maker, and kept ſtill in their minds by inſtruction in the Law:) but the precepts now propoſed being ſo agreeable to human reaſon, they ſhall be found written by every man in his own heart (as it were) able of themſelves to approve themſelves to men, ſee Deut. 30. 11.

12. For I will be merciful to their unrighteouſneſs, and their ſins and their iniquities will I remember no more.]

12. Eſpecially when that part of the Covenant is conſidered, promiſe and aſſurance of pardon for all forſaken ſins, as alſo for frailties and weakneſſes daily continuing upon us: For in all reaſon ſuch a Covenant as this, giving us aſſurance of ſuch gracious uſage, will have great efficacy to move any man to devote himſelf wholly to God's ſervice, that eaſie and bleſſed yoke.

13. In that he ſaith, A new covenant, he hath made the firſt old. Now that which decayeth and waxeth old, is ready to vaniſh away.]

13. And this form of ſpeech, A new Covenant, is an argument that the former was old, and an evidence, that ſo indeed that legal Covenant or Moſaical Law was: and being now perfectly old and decayed, 'tis not likely to live long, but with the Jewiſh Church and Common-weal, within few years (within ten after the writing of this Epiſtle) 'tis ſure enough to be deſtroyed.

Annotations on Chap. VIII.

V. 9. I regarded them not] The whole place being by this writer cited out of Jeremy chap. 31. 32. ſome difficulty there will be to accord this part of the citation, ἐμέλησα αὐτῶν, I regarded them not, with that which we now find in the Hebrew there. For the words בעלתי בם, as our Hebrew copies now read, ordinarily ſignifie ἐκυρίευσα αὐτῶν, I ruled over them, which is very far diſtant both from the deſigned ſenſe of that place, if we will judge by the Context, and from the words, I regarded them not, as they are here recited. The unfitneſs of that rendring in that place in the Prophet is viſible to any reader that obſerves the words immediately precedent, which my Covenant they brake, to which theſe other cannot connect, (but rather the contrary) and I ruled over them, or I was their Lord. Here our Engliſh have put husband for Lord, and although for and, and yet farther altered it in the Margent, Should I have continued an husband unto them? by way of interrogation; which as it makes the ſenſe directly contrary to what it would be without the interrogation, ſo it is a confeſſion that that contrary ſenſe is (in the truth) it which alone is agreeable to the place. It is therefore far more reaſonable to conſider, that the words which are here recited in this Author, and are exactly agreeable to the Context in the Prophet, (which is deſigned to ſet down the Iſraelites breaking of Covenant, and God's dealing with them by way of puniſhment) are the very words by which the Greek Tranſlator had rendred that place in

ἠμέλησα αὐτῶν

in the Prophet, which makes it neceſſary to conclude, that either the Hebrew Copy now is in this particular varied from what it was when they tranſlated it, or that בעל hath ſome other ſignification than that which is ordinarily taken notice of. That all Copies tranſcribed from hand to hand ſhould be ſubject to ſome light changes, is nothing ſtrange; nay, 'tis evident, by comparing 2 Kin. 20. 12. with Eſay 39. 1. that ſuch miſtakes have been committed: for there in a ſtory, which in both thoſe places is exactly the ſame, we now read ברארך Berodach in the former place, and מראך Merodach in the latter, which muſt needs be imputed to the hand of the Scribe, and not to any other original. So in the ſame ſtory, in the very next verſe, 2 Kin. 20. 13. we read וישמע, And Hezekiah heard, or hearkned, but Iſai. 39. 2. it is וישמח, And Hezekiah was glad of them; where the light change of ח into ע is viſibly the error of the Scribe. And ſo the eighteenth Pſalm, which was certainly delivered by David in one fix'd, certain form, is yet varied in many particulars, 2 Sam. 22. which cannot be imputed to any cauſe but that of the Tranſcribers; and the Maſorites pains, coming long after theſe changes were come in, can give no ſecurity or fence againſt them. And then it is not impoſſible but that thus it hath happened in that place of Jeremy which is here cited. Accordingly the Annotations under the name of Hugo Grotius conceive, that the Septuagint read it בחלתי, not בעלתי, and accordingly rendred it ἠμέλησα, I forſook them, regarded them not, continued not my defence unto them, but permitted them to be often worſted by their enemies: but Mr. Meade from Capellus ſuppoſeth it to have been געלתי (which is as light an alteration, only ב for ג, as in the other ע for ח) which is alſo ἠμέλησα, ἀφέσηκα, ἐβδέλυξα, I neglected them, departed from them, deteſted or abomin'd, and accordingly forſook them. Other examples of this nature we have in the New Teſtament, which may here fitly be taken notice of. Mat. 15. 9. we have theſe words, μάτην σέβονταί με Καὶ μάτην σέβονταί με διδάσκοντες διδασκαλίας ἐντάλματα ἀνθρώπων, In vain they worſhip me, teaching doctrines, the ordinances of men. This verſe is taken out of Iſa. 29. 13. where yet the Hebrew reading now, ותהי יראתם אתי מצות אנשים מלמדה, hath nothing that can be duly rendred καὶ μάτην and in vain. But by the Septuagint there, (and the Evangeliſt here it is to be believed that it was otherwiſe read when they ſo rendred it; and if for ותהי in the beginning of the verſe we read ותהו, and only change the points of the laſt word, without change of any letter, and read מלמדה, docens, teaching, in ſtead of מלמדה taught, it will then be exactly as the Septuagint render, and the Evangeliſt cites it from them: For that תהו ſignifies μάτην in vain appears by the uſe of it in that ſenſe, Iſa. 45. 18, and 19. and c. 49. 4. and from thence it is that the Idols are oft in this Prophet called תהו vanity. So Mat. 27. 9, 10. we have theſe words cited out of Jeremy the Prophet, Καὶ ἔλαβον τὰ τριάκοντα ἀργύρια, καὶ ἔδωκαν αὐτὰ εἰς τὸν ἀγρὸν τοῦ κεραμέως, καθὰ συνέταξέ μοι Κύριος. Wherein there are many difficulties. As firſt, how theſe words come to be cited out of Jeremy, which are found in Zachary only. But that may be ſalved, either by ſaying that this was firſt in Jeremy's prophecy (ſomewhat of his not now extant, but by tradition delivered down to have been originally his) and afterward in Zachary's according to a ſaying of the Jews, that the ſpirit of Jeremy reſted on Zachary; or elſe by affirming that thoſe latter (the 10, 11, 12.) chapters of Zachary were really the prophecies of Jeremy, though, as other mens Pſalms are annex'd to David's, and Agur's Proverbs to Solomon's, ſo theſe Chapters of Jeremy's prophecy (perhaps not coming to light till after the Captivity) are affixed to the former chapters of Zachary. A ſecond difficulty there is, how ἔλαβον and ἔδωκαν, they received and gave, can here connect with συνέταξέ μοι the Lord commanded me. And that may be anſwered alſo by obſerving that ἔλαβον, being anſwerable to ואקחה in the Hebrew, muſt neceſſarily be rendred in the firſt perſon Singular, I received, not in the third Plural, they, and conſequently that the ν in ἔδωκαν is to be look'd on as a miſtake of the Scribe, (conceiving that ἔλαβον had been the third perſon Plural, and ſo according this unto it) whereas both the Syriack in Matthew reads it I gave, and the Hebrew in Iſaiah ואשליך I gave, or ſent. And that this muſt be ſo read, appears by the μοὶ retained in all, as the Lord commanded (not them, but) me. But then there is a third difficulty, which can no way be ſalved, but by making uſe of the obſervation which we are now upon. For inſtead of thoſe words in Matthew, καθὰ συνέταξέ μοι Κύριος, according as the Lord appointed me, the Hebrew reads in Zachary בית יהוה the houſe of the Lord, and the Septuagint agrees, with a little change (the addition of εἰς into) εἰς τὸν οἶκον Κυρίου, into the houſe of the Lord, rendring ואשליך I gave, or ſent, (which belongs to laying down the price in the purchace of the field) καὶ ἐνίσαλον and I caſt, as if it referred to the caſting it down in the Temple. For ſalving of which, it muſt firſt be obſerved that the thing to which this prophecy is applied in Matthew, is the high Prieſt's buying the potter's field, v. 7. with that money which Judas returned to them, v. 3. caſting it down in the Temple, v. 5. which accordingly they take up λαβόντες, v. 6. which is an evidence that the teſtimony applied to that matter muſt be interpreted of thoſe High prieſts, repreſented prophetically in the firſt perſon Singular, ἔλαβον I received, καὶ ἔδωκα, and I gave, or parted with them, אל היוצר εἰς τὸ χωνευτήριον in the Septuagint, and εἰς τὸν ἀγρὸν τοῦ κεραμέως for the potter's field. Secondly, the phraſe בית יו ורה ſeems to be a miſtake for ſomewhat elſe, and that Mr. Meade hath very probably conjectured to be (by an eaſie change of כ for ב, and ד for י) כדת יהוה according to the word of the Lord, as the phraſe is uſed, Heſt. 1. 8, 15. and often in that book, and ſo that will be exactly rendred by the καθὰ συνέταξέ μοι Κύριος, according as the Lord appointed. And unleſs ſome ſuch change be imagined, there will be no ſenſe in the Hebrew: firſt, becauſe בית יהוה, without any prepoſition before it, is to be rendred the houſe, not into the houſe, of the Lord; and ſecondly, becauſe the place belonging to the High-prieſt's buying the field, hath nothing to do with Judas's caſting down the money in the Temple, or houſe of the Lord, which act of his was precedent to the High prieſt's ἔλαβον, and ἔδωκα, taking, and giving that money for that purchaſe. Thus again Act. 15. 17. where we read Ὅπως ἂν ἐκζητήσωσιν οἱ κατάλοιποι τῶν ἀνθρώπων τὸν Κύριον, that the reſidue of men may ſeek the Lord, &c. the words are evidently taken out of Amos 9. 12. And yet there the Hebrew words, as now we read them, are ſomewhat diſtant, למען יירשו את־שארית אדום that they may poſſeſs the remainder of Edom. And therefore both by the Septuagint's tranſlation, and the citation in the Acts, learned men have adventured to reſolve, that the Hebrew was then diſtant from what now we find in the Copies, moſt probably thus, למען ידרשו אל שאירית אדם that the reſidue of men may ſeek the Lord, and all this by light changes of ו for ר, ח for ל, and אדום Edom for אדם man or men, the Singular number collective being oft put for the Plural. So when Hoſ. 14. 2. we find in the Hebrew Copy which we now uſe, פרים שפתינו the calves of our lips, but in the Greek tranſlator, and from thence Heb. 13. 15. καρπὸν χειλέων ὁμολογούντων, the fruit of our lips, 'tis poſſible and eaſie to conjecture that the antienter and true reading was פרי (not פרים) which ſignifies καρπὸς fruit. Theſe examples according in this matter (and many more diſcernible in the Old Teſtament, by comparing the Hebrew, as now we have it, with the Greek) make it not unreaſonable to receive this account which hath here been given of ἠμέλησα, on occaſion of which theſe others have been here mention'd, becauſe omitted in their proper places. But Mr. Pocock hath given me ſome reaſon to depart from theſe conjectures, and adhering to the ordinary reading, to take notice of another notion of the word בעל, where it is in conſtruction with ב. In moſt other places the word is uſed either with an Accuſative caſe after it, or with the prepoſition ל, and then conſtantly it ſignifies dominari, but in this place of Iſaiah, and Jer. 3. 1. it is uſed in a peculiar different manner with ב; and then 'tis Kimchi's obſervation, as his ſon tells us, that whereſoever בעל is uſed with ב, it is taken in an ill ſenſe; and accordingly he interprets it in Jeremy מקצתי בכם, I have loathed you: and ſo Rabbi Tanchumi, It ſignifies, ſaith he, to ſcorn, or reject, in the ſame ſenſe as the word בחל is uſed, which is but a light change from

ἔλαβον καὶ ἔδωκαν

ע to ח. And thus in the Arabick, which is but a Dialect of the Hebrew, the word בעל signifies not only dominari, and maritum esse, but perturbari, separari, fastidire, nauseare, and in that sense is used in conjunction with ב, as here it is, and with alla. So Ebn Jannahius, whom David Kimchi commonly follows, and cites by the name of R. Jonah. And so this is a fair account of this place. The like also hath he given of that other last mentioned, Heb. 13. 15. making καρπὸς καρπὸς fruit to be there taken in the notion of κάρπωμα, which the Septuagint use for an holocaust, which being ordinarily of Bullocks, the Hebrew פרים calves may well be rendred by it. Of this see Note on Heb. 13. e.

Paraphrase.

a. 1. That first covenant indeed had ceremonial laws, peculiar ways of worshipping God, and a tabernacle. And first for the latter of them, (see Mat. 7. Note b.) the Tabernacle, (that was a type of the whole world, of earth and heaven, this made by Moses, but that by God, ch. 8. 2.) this consisted of two parts.

1. * THen verily the [a] first covenant had also ordinances † of divine service, and a worldly sanctuary.]

* the first therefore † worship λατρείας

2. For as this world consists of two parts, this lower world, and the highest heavens, so also the Tabernacle had two regions in it; the first was called the Holies (or the Sanctuary) wherein was the candlestick (with six branches, and one in the midst, to signifie the planets) and the bread, or twelve loaves set upon the table (to signifie the fruits of the earth, brought forth by that inlivening influence of the heavens, saith Philo:)

2. For there was a Tabernacle made, the first wherein was the candlestick, and the table, and the shew-bread: which is called the sanctuary:]

3. And the second was a place of more sanctity than the former, which was beyond the former, answerable to the place where the Oracle was in the former Temple, and is the image of the highest heaven,

2. And after the second vail, the Tabernacle which is called the holiest of all.]

b. 4. Having a golden censer belonging to it, not always kept in it, but carried in when the priest went in, who was not to go without incense, and the Ark covered round about with gold, and in this the pot of Manna, and Aaron's rod, and the tables of the Commandments, in respect of which it is called the ark of the covenant,

4. Which had the golden censer, and the ark of the covenant overlaid round about with gold, wherein was the [b] golden pot that had Manna, and Aaron's rod that budded, and the tables of the covenant,]

c. d. 5. And over it the images of the Cherubim, by which God is wont to appear, and shew himself, Exod. 25. 22. and these shadowing the covering of the Ark from whence God was wont to speak with Moses, to give him answers, and shew that he was propitious to the people.

5. And over it the cherubims of [c] glory, shadowing the [d] mercy-seat:] of which we cannot now speak particularly.

6. And this being thus described, we may ascend to the former things mentioned v. 1. the priests officiating, and the statutes about that: and that service of the priests was of two sorts, the daily service, and that was in the former outward part of the tabernacle;

6. Now when these things were thus ordained, the priests went always into the first tabernacle, accomplishing the service of God:]

e. 7. But into the inner part of the tabernacle, or the Holy of holies, none entred but the high priest, and he only one day in the year, on the fast, or great day of expiation, and then always he carried with him blood of calves and of goats, of calves to offer for himself, and of goats to offer for the people, (by which it appears that the offering of Christ which is answerable to this, is, after his passion, performed at his going into heaven, which was signified by the Holy of holies:)

7. But into the second went the high priest alone once every year, not without blood, which he offered for himself, and for the [e] * errors of the people:]

* ignorances

8. By which the Holy Ghost typically signified, that no man by the power of that first covenant could go to heaven, or that the way to heaven was not there revealed, none being then admitted thither but the high priest once a year, who was a type of Christ; but now that that Holy of holies is destroyed, and therewithal the Judaical Law, there is now admission for all true Christians or worshippers of God, who now have promises and right to heaven, though till after death they are not admitted to their possessions.

8. The Holy Ghost this signifying, that the way into the holiest of all was not yet made manifest, while as the first tabernacle was yet standing.]

9. And the parabolical, typical meaning of this will be appliable to those of this time, that still observe and contend for the observation of the Judaical forms of worship, and think it is still in force: For all these performances will not be able to give any man confidence to pray to God, to bring any man to heaven, or to obtain for him the pardon of any wilful or presumptuous sin in the sight of God, to free him from any sin that hath wasted his conscience, or give him grace to purge himself from such sin (see Note on 1 Joh. 3. c.)

9. † Which was a figure for the time then present, * in which † were offered both gifts and sacrifices, * that could not make him that did the service perfect, as pertaining to the conscience,]

† Which parable belongs to the time approaching, Ἥτις παραβολὴ εἰς τὸν καιρὸν τὸν ἐνεστηκότα

* according to which (parable) for the King's MS. reads καθ' ὧν † are offered * being not able to perfect the worshipper μὴ δυνάμεναι τελειῶσαι τὸν λατρεύοντα.

10. But only to purge him from legal uncleannesses or pollutions, as having eaten any unclean meat, drinking wine at any unlawful time, (Lev. 10. 9.) or out of any unclean vessel, omitting any washing commanded by the Mosaical Law, and neglecting any of those external carnal ordinances, upon which they were to be punished here, or to be separated from the congregation, (to gain them impunity for sins of ignorance, &c. v. 7. for to this end only these sacrifices were instituted, and so only in order to this life, and meant only to continue till the time of Christ, wherein the whole service was to be reformed, and the whole course of bringing men to justification and salvation, a true and spiritual purity, to be introduced, and a better covenant to be made with them.

10. † Which stood only in meats and drinks and divers washings, and carnal ordinances imposed on them until the time of reformation.]

† Being only imposed for meats μόνον ἐπὶ βρώμασιν ἐπικείμενα.

11, 12. But when Christ came to enter on the high-priesthood to obtain for us all those blessings (of purging the conscience, which could not be had by the Law, of bestowing on us our great reward, which is not to be had in this life, and so) which were future in respect of the Law and of this life, and to that purpose made use of a tabernacle that was of a more honourable nature than that under the Law, to wit, his own body, not made with hands as that was, but formed by the Holy Ghost in the Virgin's womb, after an extraordinary manner, (and so differing not only from that tabernacle as flesh from wood, but also from other human bodies, as that which was conceived by the Holy Ghost, from that which was begotten after the ordinary manner,) when, I say, Christ entred on his high priesthood, he ascended into heaven, instead of the Holy of holies, and did this once for all, instead of the once a year of the high priest, and this with his own blood, or having laid down his own life, instead of that blood of goats for the people, and of bullocks for himself, which the priest took with him to the Holy of holies, having thus found out a way of purchasing eternal redemption for us from the guilt and power of sin, by his death and resurrection.

11. But Christ being come an high priest of good things to come, by a greater and more perfect tabernacle not made with hands, that is to say, not of this building,

12. Neither by the blood of goats and calves, but by his own blood, he entred in * once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us.]

* for once, or, once for all, ἐφ' ἅπαξ

f. are much ish 13. For if the legal pollutions, the eating or touching of unclean things, &c. be expiated by blood and ashes, so far as to keep them that are polluted so from being turned out of the Congregation, and from any legal punishment:

13. For if the blood of bulls and goats, and the ashes of an heifer sprinkling the unclean, [f] sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh:]

14. How how more shall Christ's death, the shedding of his blood for you, and after that, his presenting himself to his Father in heaven in a body that shall never die any more, raised from the dead by the Spirit and power of God, and now being not only alive, but immortal, deliver you from the guilt of sin, and fit you to serve God in a vital Christian course, giving over all the sins of the former life?

14. How much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God?]

15. And for this end was Christ made use of to intercede between God and us,

15. And for this cause he is the Mediator of the New * Testament, that by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first † Testament, they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance.]

* Covenant: see Note on the Title of these books † Covenant and eſtabliſh and ſeal a new Covenant with us, that by the intervention of his death for the expiation of all ſins and tranſgreſſions, even ſuch as could not be expiated under the old Covenant, they which are effectually called, the truly penitent reformed believers, may have heaven and eternal bliſs made over to, and poſſeſſed and inſtated on them, by way of inheritance.

16. For where a Teſtament is, there muſt alſo of neceſſity * ᵍ be the death of the Teſtator.]

16. He ſhed his blood, I ſay, becauſe that a Teſtament ᵍ.

be valid, or that any man enjoy any thing by the death of another, the death of the Teſtator is required neceſſarily, and muſt be avouched or produced by him.

17. For a Teſtament is † of force after men are dead, otherwiſe it is of no ſtrength at all, while the Teſtator liveth.]

17. There being no ſtability in a Will as long as the Teſtator liveth, becauſe he may change it if he will, and beſides it is to be ſuppoſed of him, that he meant not the benefit of it to his heir till after his own death.

18. Whereupon neither the * firſt Teſtament was dedicated without blood.]

18. And therefore agreeably to this nature of Covenants,

* firſt was conſecrated πρώτη ἐγκαίνισται which are among the Eaſtern Nations ſtill ſigned with blood, and of Teſtaments which are not in force till the Teſtator's death, we read in the Law, that the ceremony of blood was uſed in the ſanction of the firſt Covenant, that under the Law.

19. For when Moſes had ſpoken every precept to all the people according to the Law, he took the blood of calves and of goats, with water and ſcarlet wool and hyſſop, and ſprinkled both the book and all the people,]

19. For when the Commandments, Exod. 20, 21, 22, 23. were by Moſes recited to all the people according to God's appointment, then, as it follows Exod. 24. 6. he took, &c. and ſprinkled, &c. (which noted this ſanction of Covenants (as of Teſtaments by death) by the ceremony of blood, and fore-ſignified the ſhedding of the blood of Chriſt for the making of a new Covenant with us,)

20. Saying, This is the blood of the † Teſtament which God hath * enjoined unto you.]

20. Saying, This blood is the Ceremony of eſtabliſhing the Covenant which God hath made with you.

† Covenant * commanded for or toward you, ἐνετείλατο πρὸς ὑμᾶς

21. Moreover he ſprinkled with blood both the Tabernacle and all the Veſſels † of the Miniſtery.]

21. And ſo likewiſe he ſprinkled the Tabernacle, and all the utenſils that were uſed in the worſhip of God, with blood.

† of ſervice λατρείας

22. And almoſt all things are by the Law purged with blood; and without ſhedding of blood is no remiſſion.]

22. And generally under the Law the courſe was, that all things that were purified ſhould be purified by that ceremony of ſhedding blood, and ſo in like manner, that when any ſin was committed, a beaſt ſhould be ſlain for a ſacrifice, by way of confeſſion that that ſin deſerved death.

23. It was therefore neceſſary that the patterns of things in the heavens ſhould be purified with theſe, but the heavenly things themſelves with better ſacrifices than theſe.]

23. And therefore the Law commanding that the Tabernacle which (in reſpect of the two parts of it, but eſpecially the inmoſt part) is an image of the higheſt Heavens, ſhould thus be purified with the blood of bullocks or goats, that is, that the Prieſt ſhould never enter in thither without ſuch blood-ſhedding, it is moſt agreeable and proportionable to theſe types, that Chriſt ſhould die, ſhed his own blood, and ſo enter into Heaven to be our high prieſt (and in like manner that we through many ſufferings ſhould enter into the kingdom of God.)

24. For Chriſt is not entred into the holy places made with hands, which are the * figures of the true; but into Heaven it ſelf, now to appear in the preſence of God for us:]

24. For Chriſt was not ſo an high Prieſt as to enter

* copies ἀντίτυπα

into any holy place built by men, the image or repreſentation to ſignifie Heaven, (ſee Wiſd. 9. 8.) but into Heaven it ſelf, there to appear before God, as the Prieſt was ſaid to do in the Holy of holies, and to recommend our wants and affairs to him, and negotiate for us, and ſo to relieve us when we ſtand in need of him:

25. Nor yet that he ſhould offer himſelf often, as the high Prieſt entreth into the holy place every year with blood of others:]

25. Nor was the ſimilitude betwixt him and an high

Prieſt to hold in this, that as the Prieſt enters into the holy place every year with the blood of bullocks and goats, ſo Chriſt ſhould enter every year into that which was ſignified by the Holy of holies:

26. (For then muſt he often have ſuffered ſince the foundation of the world) but now once † in the end of the world * hath he appeared ʰ to put away ſin by the ſacrifice of himſelf.]

26. (For then he ſhould from time to time ever ſince the beginning of the world ʰ.

* hath he manifeſted by ſacrificing of himſelf for the putting away of ſin, εἰς ἀθέτησιν ἁμαρτίας διὰ τῆς θυσίας αὐτοῦ πεφανέρωται condition of Chriſt like to the condition of other men, that as they muſt die but once, and then be judged to all eternity:

28. So Chriſt was once offered to bear the ſins of many; and unto them that look for him ſhall he appear the ſecond time without ſin * unto ſalvation †.]

28. So Chriſt having yielded up himſelf for a ſacrifice for us, and ſo born our ſins up to the croſs with him (died as our ſurety or proxy) ſhall do this but once: when he comes again it ſhall be in another manner, he ſhall not come to this earth to die again, but ſhall come in glory and power, (quite unlike that ſtate wherein he was when he bare our ſins) to the relieving and beſtowing deliverance on thoſe who expect and wait for him, and conſtantly adhere to his commands.

Annotations on Chap. IX.

a. ἡ πρώτη

V. 1. Firſt covenant] That it muſt be read ἡ πρώτη the firſt without σκηνὴ tabernacle, will appear by the authority of antient MSS. (as, beſides others taken notice of by other men, in an antient one in Magd. Col. Library in Oxon) and of the Syriack, and old Latin Tranſlation, and of Saint Chryſoſtom, and the Greek Fathers, who read it not: And then there is little doubt but the Subſtantive to it muſt be διαθήκη Covenant, mentioned in the former Chapter, and called ἡ πρώτη, the firſt, in the verſe immediately preceding this, c. 8. 15. which antiently was conjoined with this, before the diviſion into Chapters. Beſides the addition of σκηνὴ tabernacle, will not be very congruous; for then the Tabernacle muſt be ſaid to have in it τὸ ἅγιον κοσμικὸν the worldly holy, that is, the Tabernacle, as appears v. 3. where σκηνὴ tabernacle is called ἁγία ἁγίων the Holy of holies. As for δικαιώματα ordinances, ſee Rom. 8. d. and λατρείας is in any reaſon to be taken not in the Genitive, but the Accuſative plural, and ſo will note ſacrifices and other inſtitutions for God's worſhip, which belonged to that Moſaical Covenant.

V. 4. Golden pot] It is a matter of ſome difficulty to determine, whether it were the Ark, in which the Pot of Manna and the rod are here ſaid to be kept, or more generally the Holy of holies, wherein, as in a common place, both they and the Ark were. For firſt, the phraſe, ἐν ᾗ in which, may equally refer to σκηνὴ λεγομένη τὰ ἅγια τῶν ἁγίων the tabernacle called the Holy of holies, and to κιβωτὸς the Ark: and ſecondly, it is poſitively affirmed, 1 King 8. 9. that there was nothing in the Ark but the tables of ſtone. But then on the other ſide it is apparent that thoſe Tables of the Law were in the Ark, and therefore the mention of thoſe being immediately ſubjoyned to the mention of the Pot and the Rod, and connected diſtinctly with a καὶ, the pot and the rod and the tables, in all reaſon they muſt be thought affirmed to be in the Ark, where it is certain the Tables were; and 2. It is as manifeſt that the ὑπεράνω αὐτῆς, over it, v. 5. denotes the Ark, on the covering of which, and not of the Holy of holies, the Cherubim were. To this difficulty that which Theophylact hath affirmed is moſt ſatisfactory, that though at that

b. Σταμνὸς χρυσῆ time which is referred to 1 King 8. 9. that is, in Solomon's time, there was nothing in the Ark but the Tables, yet in after-times the Pot and the Rod were put there, viz. in Jeremy's time, when the Ark was to be hid by him: and all this, saith he, S. Paul may be supposed by tradition to have had from Gamaliel his Master, a Pharisee; and accordingly, saith he, ϰ᾽ νυῦ οἱ Φαρισαΐζοντες τ῀ Ἑβραίων σωλίθεν) τῦτο ὕτως ἔχειν, the Hebrews, or Jews, of his time, which were of the Pharisees sect, affirmed it to be so.

c. Δόξα — V. 5. Glory] Δόξα glory, is here set to signifie the Schechina, or appearing of God, which was wont to be by Angels, of which these Cherubims were the representations. See Note on Mat. 16. n. and on Mar. 1. a.

d. Ἱλαστήριον — Ib. Mercy seat] The word Ἱλαστήριον is answerable to the Hebrew כפרת. Now the word כפר signifies two things, first, to cover, (and indeed the English word cover seems to come from it) and that either simply to cover, or to cover with pitch, &c. and secondly in Piel to cleanse, expiate, and to be propitious. Hence it is rendred sometimes ἀσφαλῶσαι to plaister, or cover, with bitumen or pitch, and sometimes, most ordinarily, ἱλάσκομαι, ἐξιλάσκομαι, ϰαθαιρίζω, to propitiate, or cleanse. And accordingly כפרת is rendred sometimes ϰαλαπέτασμα a covering, Exod. 26. 36. sometimes ἱλαστήριον propitiatory; and ἱλαστήριον propitiatory, when the sense is ϰαλαπέτασμα covering. See note on Rom. 3. h. And so in this place, where it notes a part of the Ark, it must be taken in the notion of the Hebrew, and rendred in that sense of ϰαλαπέτασμα, covering, as 'tis Exod. 26. 34. and 30. 6. or as the Hebrew כפרת, if it had been here retained, would have imported.

e. Ἀγνοήματα — V. 7. Errors] The word ἀγνοεῖν, though it signifies peculiarly ignorance, yet is taken among the Greek Writers in the Old Testament for sinning indifferently. So Tob. 3. 3. Judith 5. 20. Ecclus. 51. 26. 1 Mac. 13. 39. 2 Mac. 13. 37. Ecclus. 23. 2. and 3 Mac. σύϛημα μηδὲν ἡγνοηϰὸς, a company that had not sinned against the King, according to the notion of the Hebrew שגה, which as it signifies ignoravit, erravit, ignorance, error, so also it signifies defecit, recessit, falling off, failing; and so here it signifies all those sins for which there was allowed expiation and sacrifice under the Law, that is, all sins but those of Presumption, or Will.

f. Ἁγιάζειν — V. 13. Sanctifieth] Ἁγιάζειν to sanctifie in this place signifies to purifie, in the notion that belongs to the Hebrew טהר, which is sometimes rendred ϰαθαρὸς pure, sometimes ἅγιος holy; and accordingly ἀϰάθαρϛα and ἅγια, impure and holy, are set opposite 1 Cor. 7. 14. So also the Hebrew קדש which is vulgarly ἁγιάζειν to sanctifie is used for washing among the Jews. See Note on 1 Cor. 7. d. Thus it appears to be used here, not only by the ϰεϰοινωμένους unclean, or polluted, immediately precedent, and the ϰαθαρότηϛα cleansing, or purity, following; but by the evidence of the matter here spoken of. For that was the design of the legal sacrifice, blood and ashes, to cleanse them that were legally polluted, which is the meaning of πρὸς τ῀ τ῀ σαρϰὸς ϰαθαρότηϛα for the cleansing of the flesh, that is, to make them legally clean, such as might come into the congregation again. But this still in a Metaphorical signification, as cleansing signifies expiation, or obtaining pardon of sin, freeing from the inconveniences or Censures that belong'd to it. In this same sense the word is used c. 10. 10. Through which will we are sanctified, ἡγιασμένοι ἐσμὲν, that is, our sins are expiated, through the offering of the body of Christ once for all, which v. 26. is expressed by another phrase, that he hath now once appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself. ἡγιασμένοι ἐσμὲν

g. Φέρεσθαι — V. 16. Be the death ——] What the word φέρεσθαι signifies here, will be best guest by the Context, which looks to the validity of Wills and Testaments, and to the pleading of them in Law, to receive benefit from them. This is expressed v. 17. by βεβαία and ἰσχύει, and of this it is sufficiently know in all Laws, what is here said, that as long as the Testator lives there is no validity in his will, no pleading any thing from it, because voluntas est ambulatoria, say the Lawyers, a man as long as he lives may change his will. In this sense may this 16. v. be thus interpreted, Ὅπου διαθήϰη, where there is a Testament, that is, where a Testament is produced or pleaded, or, where a Testament is a Testament, or, to the confirming of a Testament, to the proving of a will, ἀνάϒϰη, it is necessary, φέρεσθαι θάνατον τ῀ διαθεμένου, that the death of the Testator be brought, produced, alledged, brought into the Court, testimony brought of it; for otherwise the Will will not be βεβαία firm, nor ἰσχύειν of force, ὅτε ζῇ, &c. as long as the Testator is alive, or as long as there is no constat of his death. Thus is the word φέρειν and φέρεσθαι used sometimes in the New Testament, in a Forensical sense, as ϰαθηγορίαν φέρειν, to bring an accusation, 1 John 18. 29. αἰτιάματα φέρειν, Act. 25. 7. to bring accusations or charges against any, and φέρειν ϰείσιν to bring, or enter, a suit against one. βεβαία φέρεσθαι

h. Ἀθέτησις — V. 20. To put away] Ἀθετεῖν properly signifies to frustrate, as ἀθετεῖν βυλὴν Θεῦ, to frustrate God's counsel, that is, deprive it of (evacuate) the end of it: and so here Christ's death is ἀθέτησις ἁμαρτίας, depriving sin of it's end or design, which was first to get us into its power, to reign in our mortal bodies, and then malitiously to bind us over to punishment eternal; from both which Christ's death was designed to redeem us, from living in sin, and from being punished for it, according to the two benefits of Christ's death, signified in the Sacraments, grace and pardon.

CHAP. X.

1. For the Mosaical Law, which contained no more than an imperfect shadow or rude first draught of those mercies made over to us by the Gospel, eternal life, &c. and not the lively representation or effigies of them, such as the Gospel now affords us, is no way able by sacrificing every year, as long as the temple lasts, bullocks and goats, that is, by repeating often those same kinds of sacrifices, to work that great benefit for the worshippers which the Gospel is designed to do, viz. to give men full pardon of sin, and purifie their consciences.

1. FOr the Law having a shadow of * good things to come, and not the very image of the things, can never † with those sacrifices, which they offered year by year continually, make the comers thereunto perfect.]

* τ῀ ἀγαθ῀.

† by the same sacrifices every year ϰαθ᾽ ἐνιαυτὸν ταῖς αὐταῖς θυσίαις

2. For then they would not need to be offered again continually, when the work for which they were offered was once wrought, as if the cure were wrought, the medicine need not be any more applied.

2. For then * would they not have ceased to be offered, because that the worshippers once purged should have had no more conscience of fin.]

* Sure they would have ceased, for many other copies read ἐπεὶ ἂν ἐπαύσαντο, leaving out οὐϰ, others read the οὐϰ not but by way of interrogation: so Theophylact

3. Whereas now being only a commemoration of sins, not a purging them away, they are offered every year anew on the day of expiation, thereby commemorating not only the sins committed that year, since the last day of expiation, but their former sins again, for which they had formerly sacrificed, at the time of committing of them, and to typifie that one true sacrifice of Christ, that alone is able to do the work for all our sins.

3. But in those sacrifices there is † again remembrance of sins made every year.]

† a commemoration ἀνάμνησις

4. For the truth is, it is not in the power of any sacrifice of any beast to take away the guilt of sin, or purifie the conscience.

4. For it is not possible that the blood of bulls and goats should take away sins.]

5. And therefore in the Prophetick Psalm concerning Christ's coming into the world, God's despising of those legal sacrifices is mentioned, and all that is thought fit to be depended on in order to obtaining pardon for sin, is the body of Christ, God giving him a body, and designing that to crucifixion, fitting it for the Cross, as the servants ear for the door-post, Deut. 15. 17. to which it was to be nailed, (on which ground of similitude it is, that instead of opening or boaring my ear, in the Psalmist, 'tis here framing him or fitting him a body, see Note on 2 Cor. 13. c.) and so decreeing that to be the perfect and complete sacrifice, which was to supply the defects of all the rest.

5. Wherefore when he cometh into the world, he saith, Sacrifice and burnt-offering * thou wouldst not, but a body hast thou † prepared me.]

7. Then ſaid I, Lo, I come (in the * volume of the Book it is written of me) † to do thy will, O God.]

8, 9. By which place of the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. 40. it is clear, that the ſacrifices appointed by Moſes's Law are not of any force with God, but only the ſufferings and death of Chriſt, the firſt being in that place wholly renounced and diſclaimed, and only the ſecond ſet up.

10. And by this gracious will of God (which Chriſt came to perform in the body which God prepared for him, v. 5.) by offering that body once for all, and not by thoſe legal ſacrifices, which were oft repeated, all our ſins are expiated, (ſee Note on c. 9. c.) and we received into God's favour, as many of us as by performing the condition of ſincere obedience, ſtill required of us, are rendred capable of that great benefit purchaſed for us by the ſufferings of Chriſt.

12. But Chriſt having by his own death made one complete ſacrifice, which will ſuffice for the ſins of all the world, without need of repeating it, (ſealing to all that ſhall ever live a covenant of mercy and remiſſion upon repentance) hath ever ſince continued at the right hand of God, and ſhall do ſo for ever,

14. For by one offering he hath perfected for ever them that are ſanctified.]

14. For that one offering of his in his death hath done the whole work, once for all completely, for all obedient Chriſtians, all ſanctified diſciples of his (that having the interceſſion of Chriſt in heaven, the ſending the Spirit, &c. adjoined with it, which are the grounds of furniſhing us with all grace, &c.)

15, 16, 17. And of this the Scriptures of the Old Teſtament do teſtifie; for after he had premiſed, as the firſt thing promiſed, in his covenant, the writing his laws in their hearts and on their minds, and revealing his will, and giving them his ſanctifying grace for the reforming of their wicked lives, he then adds as a ſecond part of his covenant, the free pardon of all the ſins and tranſgreſſions of their former life, whatſoever they have been.

18. Now where remiſſion of theſe is, there is no more offering for ſin.]

The doctrine then of the ſuperlative excellence of Chriſt's prieſthood above the Moſaical being thus evidenced, and the benefit of it being to us ſo great, even to give us liberty (ſee Joh. 7. a.) to approach unto God in prayer, and apprehenſion of his promiſes, to have title to heaven it ſelf, through what Chriſt hath purchaſed for us,

22. * Let us draw near with a true heart, in full aſſurance of faith, having our hearts ſprinkled from an evil conſcience, and our bodies waſhed with pure water.]

22. Let us ſerve and worſhip him unfeignedly, being fill'd with faith (ſee Note on Luk. 1. a. and h.) and having reformed our wicked lives in ſincere reſolution of heart, (without which there is no more reception to be hoped for at God's hands, Iſa. 1. 15. than under the law there was liberty to come into the congregation for them that had touched any impure thing, till they were ſprinkled with water by the prieſt) and having our actions waſhed and pure alſo.

23. Let not all the afflictions and dangers that can approach us, move us ſo much as to waver in our Chriſtian profeſſion, which having the hope of eternal life joined with it, is fortification enough againſt all the terrors of this world, having God's fidelity engaged to make good the promiſe to us.

24. And let us conſider one another to provoke unto love and unto good works;]

24. And let us weigh and conſider all advantages that we can have upon one another, to provoke and excite one another to charity, and all actions of piety, (ſuch as are joining in the publick ſervice, ver. 25.) whenſoever we ſee any thing of fainting or growing cold in any;

25. Not forſaking the aſſembling of our ſelves together, as the manner of ſome is, but exhorting one another: and ſo much the more, as ye ſee the [a] day approaching.]

25. And not ſuffer our ſelves to proceed ſo far toward defection, as to give over the publick aſſemblies, (the forſaking of which is not only deſerting of the publick profeſſion of Chriſt, but alſo of the means of growth in grace) but ſtir up one another to the performance of this and ſuch other duties of confeſſion toward Chriſt, by this argument among others, that now their deliverance from the perſecutions which ſo diſcouraged them is near at hand, (by reaſon of the deſtruction of the enemies of the croſs, the Jews and Gnoſticks, that have cauſed all theſe perſecutions) which therefore would make it unreaſonable for them now to give over their conſtancy, and loſe all, when they are ſo near the end of their voyage, (ſee Rom. 13. 11. and Jam. 5. 7, 8.)

V. 25. Day approaching] The notion of ἡμέρα Χριστοῦ, the day of Chriſt, and ἡμέρα, day, and παρουσία Χριστοῦ, coming of Chriſt, and βασιλεία Θεοῦ, kingdom of God, and many the like, ſignifying that famous deſtruction of the Jews, hath been often mentioned. The other phraſes have been gathered together from their diſperſions through this book. Note on Mat. 3. c. Mat. 24. b. c. &c. Now for this of ἡμέρα, day, or ἡμέρα Χριστοῦ, day of Chriſt, although ſomewhat hath been ſaid on Rom. 13. Note d. yet now more fully it muſt be explained. The force of the phraſe may appear Zach. 14. 1. Behold the day of the Lord cometh, and I will gather all nations againſt Jeruſalem to battel, and the city ſhall be taken, &c. and ſo in many places of the Old Teſtament: and accordingly in the New, Luk. 17. 24. The ſon of man ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ αὐτοῦ, in his day, that is, when he comes to deſtroy Jeruſalem; ſo Mat. 24. 36. περὶ δὲ ἡμέρας ταύτης of that day and hour, that is, the punctual time of this deſtruction (not of the day of the laſt judgment, but of ſomewhat that was to come in that age, v. 34.) knows no man. So Luk. 17. 30. ἡμέρᾳ the day wherein the Son of man ſhall be revealed; and v. 31. ἐν ἐκείνῃ ἡμέρᾳ in that day; and c. 19. 40. ἡμέραι the days ſhall come in which thy enemies ſhall caſt a trench. So Act. 2. 20. ἡμέρα Κυρίου μεγάλη καὶ ἐπιφανὴς, the great and conſpicuous day of the Lord, from which none of the Jews ſhould eſcape, but only the believers: In which place, as 'tis cited out of Joel, 'tis obſervable that there is firſt mention of the laſt days, v. 17. (which as the Jews render the days of the Meſſias, ſo Peter interprets the time after the reſurrection of Chriſt, in which the Spirit was poured out) then of this great day v. 20. which is as it were ἐσχάτων ἐσχάτη the laſt of the laſt, fourty years after his reſurrection, in which Judæa was to be laid waſt. So 1 Cor. 1. 8. the day of the Lord Jeſus, agreeable to the ἀποκάλυψις Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ, revelation of the Lord Jeſus, ver. 12. both of them denoting this time of judgment on unbelievers, and deliverance of the faithful: See alſo chap. 3. 13. So 1 Theſſ. 5. as χρόνοι and καιροὶ times and ſeaſons, v. 1. refer to this matter (as, the time is come, Ezech. 2. 7.) ſo ἡ ἡμέρα Κυρίου, the day of the Lord cometh as a thief (the ſame that is ſaid of it 2 Pet. 3. 10.) belongs to this matter alſo. So 2 Theſſ. 1. 10 In that day. So here ἐγγίζουσα ἡ ἡμέρα, the day approaching, as Luk. 21. 8. ὁ καιρὸς ἤγγικε, the ſeaſon approacheth, or as Joel 2. 1. ὅτι πάρεστιν ἡμέρα Κυρίου, ὅτι ἐγγύς, the day of the Lord is come, it is nigh at hand. So the ἡμέρα διαυγάζουσα day dawning is that day of judgment to the Jews, and deliverance to the believers among them, 2 Pet. 1. 19. (ſee Note g.) And that this phraſe ſhould thus ſignifie will not be ſtrange, when it is conſidered that in all languages and idioms, the word Day ſignifies judgment here on earth. So ἡμέρα 1 Cor. 3. 13. the day ſhall declare, that is, the judgment or trial; and ἀνθρωπίνη ἡμέρα, man's man's day, 1 Cor. 4. 3. that is, the judgment of men: ſo dies in Latin, diem dicere, to implead, and in Engliſh a Hays-man, an umpire or judge (ſee Note on Mat. 3. c. and Mat. 24. b.) That this is the meaning of this place will appear by the ſcope of the place, which is, to comfort them which were ready to fall off from Chriſtianity, upon the continued perſecutions of the Chriſtians by the Jews, among whom theſe Hebrew Chriſtians lived, as will appear in the ſtory, Act. 11. 19. and 1 Theſſ. 2. 14. the approach of whoſe deſtruction muſt conſequently be matter of comfort to them that had ſuffered long, and ſo of keeping them from falling away, (ſee Note on Rom. 13. c.) And ſecondly, 'twill appear by the plain words that follow to this very purpoſe, to ſuſtain their patience, v. 37. Yet a little while, and he that cometh, ὁ ἐρχόμενος, that is, Chriſt, which hath promiſed to come to their puniſhment and your relief, will come, (and that notes this particular, the deſtruction of the Jews, which is called his coming, Mat. 24.) καὶ οὐ χρονιεῖ, and he will not tarry, that notes the ἐγγίζειν, the approach of that day. And to this purpoſe to confirm men in patient expectation of this, without all diſhearming by the delay, follow all thoſe examples of Faith, c. 11. in which it appears that many depended by faith on performances of promiſes to their poſterity, which were never performed to themſelves perſonally, and ſo might very well fortifie the Hebrews for an expectation of a far ſhorter time, it being now very near at hand. The ſame is expreſſed, when it draws nigher at hand, by ἐγγὺς ὥρα, 1 John 2. 18. the laſt hour.

V. 26. For if we ſin wilfully——] What is meant by this phraſe, Ἑκουσίως ἁμαρτάνοντες, ſinning wilfully after receiving the acknowledgment of the truth, muſt be collected by a brief ſurvey of every part of the phraſe. Firſt, ἁμαρτάνειν to ſin, as it ſignifies in general any kind or ſort of ſin, not only deliberate, but of ignorance, or paſſion, or ſurpriſe, and again not only an act, but habit or courſe of ſin, (and is to be determined to either by the Context in any place,) ſo in many places it appears to ſignifie the great ſin of Apoſtaſie: ſo c. 3. 17. and is applied to the Apoſtate Angels, 2 Pet. 2. 4. And ſo here ſure it muſt ſignifie the ſin here ſpoken of, ver. 23, and 25, being the not retaining, that is, forſaking, the profeſſion of their hope, that is, the Chriſtian profeſſion, and ἐγκαταλείποντες ἑπισωναγωγὴν ἑαυτῶν, forſaking the aſſemblies of publick worſhip, &c. which though done upon the motive of fear, to avoid perſecution, yet was an Apoſtatizing from the Chriſtian courſe, and that no ſuddain, paſſionate, but weighed deliberate act and courſe, and is therefore defined ver. 38. to be an ὑποστολὴ εἰς ἀπώλειαν a drawing back to perdition, an Apoſtaſie from the Chriſtian profeſſion, a preferring the advantages of the world, the preſerving their own preſent ſafety, before the ſervice and worſhip of God, and privileges belonging to it; and accordingly this ſin of theſe forſakers is elſewhere ordinarily expreſs'd by loving the world, and the things of the world, in oppoſition to, and excluſion of the love of the Father, loving of pleaſures more than of God, ſerving of the belly, &c. and 'tis known of theſe Gnoſticks, that as they renounced the Chriſtian profeſſion, ſo they joined with the enemies (called here ὑπεναντίοι adverſaries v. 27.) againſt the Chriſtians, and to ſave themſelves calumniated and perſecuted others. Now this ſin thus conſidered is here farther expreſs'd to be ſo by the mention of their former acknowledgment of the truth, and by their continuing in this courſe ἑκουσίως wilfully after the acknowledgment of the truth. That may be taken in a double notion: Firſt, to ſignifie the commiſſion of this ſin after the acknowledgment of Chriſtianity in general, after having received the faith, and obeyed it (which muſt neceſſarily deprive them of all excuſe of Ignorance or Involuntarineſs) as 2 Pet. 2. 21. ἐπεγνωκέναι τὴν ὁδὸν τῆς δικαιοσύνης, having acknowledged the way of righteouſneſs, and then ἐπιστρέψαι to turn, clearly ſignifies. And this 'tis certain is contained here: for they that thus forſook the aſſemblies, and drew back, were the δίκαιοι the juſt, v. 38. But, I ſuppoſe, there is yet a farther notion of it, which muſt be added to this, the doing this contemptuouſly againſt the Apoſtles doctrine and admonition, concerning the infuſions of the Gnoſtick-hereticks, and conſequently a caſting off the authority of the Apoſtles and Governours of the Church, who acted in power of the Holy Ghoſt; and they that thus diſobeyed, were look'd on and dealt with as heathens and Publicans, deſperate and incorrigible, Mat. 18. 17. Thus ſaith Photius, Πολλὴ ἡ διαφορὰ τῆς ἐξ ἀγνοίας ἁμαρτημάτων πρὸς τὰς ἐν γνώσει καὶ μετὰ καταφρονήσεως πονηρίαν ἀθεμίτως πραχθείσας, There is great difference between ſins committed out of ignorance, and wicked practices committed in knowledge and with contempt, Epiſt. p. 386. And that this was it, appears, not only by the exhortations and admonitions of the Apoſtle through this whole Epiſtle, Take heed, brethren, that there be not in any of you an evil heart of unbelief in departing, or apoſtatizing, from the living God, ch. 3. 12. and by his laying before them the examples of the murmuring and provoking Apoſtatizing Iſraelites, which loſt their Canaan, and by foretelling the like vengeance that would ſuddainly fall on them, if they did thus depart; but alſo by one end or conſequent of their forſaking their Church-meetings, contemning and rejecting the exhortations and admonitions of their Governours, for which, among other things, theſe meetings were ordained. And this ſeems to be here noted by mention of the ἀλλὰ παρακαλοῦντες, but exhorting, which was eſpecially the Governours office, and which they that forſook the aſſemblies did forſake alſo, and did not ſubmit themſelves to it. And then they that thus ſinn'd ἑκουσίως wilfully after the having received this acknowledgment of the truth, were they that did contemptuouſly forſake and caſt off the Chriſtian yoke, which they had once ſubmitted to, and that is the character of Apoſtates. Add to this the conſideration of v. 28. where, parallel to the ſtate of the perſon here, is ſet Ἀθετήσας τις τὸν νόμον Μωσέως, Any one that deſpiſeth, or ſetteth at nought, Moſes's Law, the man that will do preſumptuouſly, and will not hearken to the Prieſt, or to the Judge, Deut. 17. 12. ſuch an one, as when his fact is competently proved againſt him, he muſt die without mercy: And that is alſo the meaning of the οὐκ ἔτι ἀπολείπεται θυσία, there remains no longer any ſacrifice for ſin. It is ſuch a ſin for which the High-prieſt among the Jews was not allowed to offer ſacrifice for expiation. Ἀδωσία τοῦ κολάσεως παραίτησις, ſaith Joſephus, l. 2. cont. Appion, there was no deprecating, no poſſibility of averting the puniſhment of death which belonged to ſuch. Accordingly we ſee the practice in Maimonides (in the title of dreſſing oblations, cap. 3. num. 3, 5.) that no ſacrifice ſhould be made for Apoſtates, though for Ethnicks there might. So again appears v. 29. by ὁ καταπατήσας τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ, trampling on the Son of God, that is, contemptuouſly uſing him, as theſe Apoſtatiſing deſertors did, counting the blood of the covenant an unholy thing, (as Ezech. 22. 26. to the Prieſts ἀθετοῦν violating God's Law, is added their profaning God's holy things) contemning the Covenant ſealed by the blood of Chriſt, by which they have obliged themſelves to adhere to him, and contumeliouſly uſing the Spirit of grace, that is again, deſpiſing and throwing away thoſe pretious advantages of the Spirit of God which had been beſtowed upon them, but now are repell'd, and rejected by them, as in the Canons of the Councils, they that have undertaken the office of Church-widows, and after-marry, are ſaid to do deſpite to the grace of God: (ſee Conc. Wormac. cap. 45.) for which S. Paul hath caſting off their firſt faith, 1 Tim. 5. 12. By all which appears what the nature and aggravations of this ſin was, A forſaking the Chriſtian orthodox, and going over to the heretical Gnoſtick way, which was a downright Apoſtaſie from Chriſt to Antichriſt. And for ſuch an one the puiſhment is figuratively expreſs'd by, there remains no farther, or no longer ſacrifice for ſins: that is, either the blood of Chriſt trampled on by him, v. 29. will not prove beneficial to him, and ſo, becauſe there is no other ſacrifice, he is capable of no mercy, or elſe the prayers and oblations of the Church, which are uſed for thoſe that they have any hopes of, belong not to him. See Note on chap. 6. b. and 1 John 5. c.

the word in the few other places of the New Testament: Act. 20 20. οὐδὲν ὑπεστειλάμην τῶν συμφερόντων τοῦ μὴ ἀναγγεῖλαι ὑμῖν, I did not withdraw, or hold back, from declaring to you any of those things that were profitable for you, and almost in the same words and sense v. 27. οὐ γὰρ ὑπεστειλάμην τοῦ μὴ ἀναγγεῖλαι, &c. I did not withdraw, or withhold, my self from declaring to you the whole counsel of God. So in Phavorinus, ὑποστειλάμενος, ὑποκρυψάμενος hiding himself, getting out of the way, and ὑπεστειλάμην, παρητησάμην, the word used, c. 12 25. for detractare, to get off from any employment, to be unwilling to enter upon it, to hang back, to refuse; so ὑπέστειλεν ἑαυτὸν, Gal. 2. 12. he slunk away, withdrew himself, got out of their company, and that as an effect of fear, φοβούμενος, &c. fearing the Jewish Christians. So Phavorinus again, ὑποστειλάμενος, φοβηθεὶς, and ὑποστέλλεσθαι, φοβεῖσθαι, fearing, running away. And so here the matter of the discourse being exhortation and encouragement to constancy in the Christian profession, in despight of all the terrors and assaults that lay on them from the Jews at that time, and that upon constant expectation of receiving a rich reward, deliverance here within a while, if they live and continue constant, and eternal bliss in another world, for all that they could suffer here, which is the meaning of the παῤῥησία confidence, &c. ver. 35.) it will be most agreeable that the just man's living by faith in the beginning of v. 38. should be his patient, chearful, constant continuance in the Christian profession, meerly upon the strength of the promises that are made to courage and constancy, the promised deliverance in this, v. 36, and 37. and eternity in another world: and contrary to that the ὑποστέλλεσθαι drawing back here, and ὑποστολὴ v. 39. must needs be a fainting in the course, a pusillanimous falling off, a detractation or failing in point of perseverance, caused by fear or pusillanimity. And this will likewise appear by a second medium, by looking into the prophet Habakkuk, ch. 2.4. from whence 'tis clear those words immediately precedent are cited, ὁ δίκαιος ἐκ πίστεως ζήσεται, the just shall live by faith. If that place of Habakkuk be observed carefully, in the Septuagint and the Hebrew, it will not be improbable which some have surmised, that the Septuagint read the Hebrew words a little otherwise than now we read them; not עפלה, arrogans fuit, was lifted up, as we read in the beginning of the verse, nor נפשו his soul, but עלפה for the former, and נפשי my soul for the latter. Now the word עלף which they are surmised to have read there, is perfectly answerable to the ὑποστέλλεται here (as the נפשי my soul is rendred here ψυχή μου my soul, otherwise than the Hebrew there will regularly bear it, for the Hebrew signifies primarily texit, covered, (and so ὑποστέλλεσθαι was rendred by ὑποκρύπτεσθαι being hidden, out of Phavorinus) and then also it signifies turbatus fuit, was frighted, or troubled, (which they that are, slink, or hide themselves out of the way.) So Isa. 50. 20. Thy children עלפו, the Chaldee reads, were troubled, the Septuagint, ταραχώδεις were in distress or great fear; and Jonah 4. 8. 'tis rendred ἐλιποψύχει, was ready to faint; and so Dm. 8. 13. the Targum explain it by ישתרהון, they shall be weary, or faint, and so in other places, the Septuagint render it by ἐκλείπειν fainting, or failing: and so the Septuagint, if they read as is surmised, will seem to have taken it in Habakkuk, He that falls off, or faints, the cowardly or fearful, my soul doth not like him. But others that have considered that place in Habakkuk, conceive the ordinary Hebrew reading may be well retained, the word עפל being of the same signification with עלף Jonah 4. 8. & defecit, and so Isa. 51. 20. בניך עלפו thy sons have fainted. Thus Rabbi Tanchum renders it by withdrawing himself, being far removed, and that is all one with our notion of ὑποστέλλεσθαι. And the Arabick word which is answerable to it signifies negligere, alio animum avertere, to neglect, to turn away his mind; and so that is agreeable also. Thus ישר, which in the latter part of the verse ordinarily signifies right, is frequently rendred ἀρέσκειν pleased, and so is all one with εὐδοκεῖ· and then נפשו his soul may be retained also, meaning God's soul, from whom he averts, which therefore the Septuagint thought fit to express by ψυχή μου, my, that is, God's soul, in like manner as they have done Psal. 5. 9. where the Hebrew hath, his strength, and they read τὸ κράτος μου, my strength. See Mr. Pocock Miscell. p. 45. And all this sets down the true notion of the word in this place, thus; But if he that should live by his faith, shall cowardly withdraw himself from the publick worship of Christ, v. 25. (as Ignatius saith they did which had received the infusions of the Gnosticks, Εὐχαριστίας καὶ προσευχῆς ἀπέχονται, Ep. ad Smyrn. they abstain from the Eucharist, and from prayer, that is, publick assemblies, and exhorts them to mend that fault, πυκνότερον σωμασθαι γενέσθωσαν, ad Polyc. Let there be more frequent assemblies, and so again ad Ephes.) If they withdraw from the ἄθλησις παθημάτων, the patient, magnanimous encounter of afflictions, v. 32. from the παῤῥησία or confident profession of the truth, v. 35. (in expectation of the future reward) from the ὑπομονὴ patience, and doing the will of God, v. 36. and from the faith, v. 38, whereby we depend securely on the promises of Christ, with confidence that they shall be performed to us, If, saith the Author, the just, the Christian prove thus pusillanimous, hang back from this performance of his duty, if by afflictions he be disheartned and terrified, God's soul hath no pleasure in him, he is utterly rejected and disliked by God. And thus v. 39. ὑποστολὴ cowardise is directly set opposite to πίστις faith, as περιποίησις ψυχῆς, saving the soul, or life, to the ἀπώλεια destruction or losing of it.

ἄθλησις παθημάτων

ὑποστολὴ

V. 39. Saving of the soul] The word περιποίησις signifies acquiring, purchasing, getting, possessing. So περιποίησις δόξης, purchasing of glory, 2 Thess. 2. 14. περιποίησις σωτηρίας, purchasing, or acquiring, of salvation, 1 Thess. 5. 9. But Phavorinus, who hath that notion of it, gives us also περιποιήσασθαι ἀντὶ διασώσασθαι, saving, delivering; and so being here set opposite to ἀπώλεια destruction, and joined with ψυχῆς of the soul, or life, it seems most probably to signifie as κτᾶσθαι ψυχὴν to possess the soul, Luk. 21. 19. (which is the same with περιποίησις ψυχῆς saving the soul here; so saith Phavorinus, Κτῆσις, περιποίησις, possessing is purchasing) is σῴζειν ψυχὴν to save or preserve the life, Mar. 8. 35. Luk. 9. 24. See Note on Eph. 2. d. 1. Pet. 2. c.

Paraphrase. CHAP. XI.

1. NOW Faith is the * [a] substance of things hoped for, the † evidence of things not seen.]

a. 1. And that you may know to what your being Christians, and your professing the faith of Christ, obligeth you in this matter, you may consider what Faith is, a confident dependance on God for the performance of his promise, a being convinced of the truth of those things of which we have no ocular or sensible demonstration.

* confident expectation † conviction, ἔλεγχος

2. For by it the Elders * obtained a good report.]

2. And that you may not look on this faith as a new and a strange thing, ye may through all times see the examples of it among pious men, which may excite you to the practice and exercise of it at this time, now you have so much need of it, ch. 10. 36. For indeed ye may observe that this was it by which the Antients or Fathers of the Old Testament received a testimony of God's approbation of, and respect unto them.

* received a testimony ἐμαρτυρήθησαν

3. Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen † were [b] not made of things which do appear.]

3. One act of faith it is, b. by which we rightly apprehend the omnipotent power of God in creating the whole world, heaven and earth, meerly by a word, saying, Let there be light, &c. and there was light: and so by the same act of faith we see God can and doth produce effects quite distant from the ordinary course of nature, for so all this visible world was framed, not out of things conspicuous to our eyes, as now a man of a man, a tree from a kernel, &c. but by the meer command of God out of nothing, or out of the earth, which is described as an invisible Chaos of confusion, Gen. 1. 2. (And then why may we not believe God's promise in the like manner at this time, that he is able to bring you deliverance out of your present persecutions, upon your continuing constant unto him, by those ways that are least discernible to you, meerly by acts of his own power and wisdom?)

4. By faith Abel offered unto God * a more excellent ſacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained witneſs that he was righteous, God teſtifying of his gifts: and by it he being dead, yet ſpeaketh.]

4. Another act of faith it was (appliable alſo to your preſent purpoſe) which was diſcernible in Abel, who offered to God the firſtlings and the fat, Gen. 4. 4. that is, the beſt and faireſt that he had in all his flock, whereas Cain did not proportionably, but only brought of the fruit of the ground (without any choice of the beſt) an offering to God, v. 3. This Abel certainly did upon a belief of God's eſſence and attributes, and a conſequent love of him, willing to give him that which is moſt precious; (and parallel to that is the faithful conſtant Chriſtian now, that will lay down his life for Chriſt's ſake, ſuffer any thing, part with all that is moſt precious) and from this faith it was that God pronounced him a righteous perſon, and expreſſed his approbation of his ſacrifice; and from this it was that God ſaid of him that his blood cried from the ground, when he was dead, intimating that he had then a life with God, who was able to ſpeak to him (ſee Philo, lit. Pejorem inſidiari meliori) and that God would avenge his blood, and the blood of all ſuch upon their perſecutors.

* a ſacrifice exceeding that of Cain πλείονα θυσίαν

5. By faith Enoch was tranſlated that he ſhould not ſee death, and was not found, becauſe God had tranſlated him: for before his tranſlation he had this teſtimony, that he pleaſed God.]

5. By faith Enoch did that which was acceptable in the ſight of God, and was rewarded by God by being tranſlated to heaven, inſtead of dying: (And that ſignifies that they that walk and perſevere in the ways of God, when they go out of this world, they are never the worſe for it, they are removed to a place of endleſs bliſs.)

6. But without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe him: for he that cometh to God muſt believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently ſeek him.]

6. And this acceptation of God was a proof that he had faith, for otherwiſe his actions could not have been acceptable to God; for without believing the power, and wiſdom, and juſtice of God, 'tis impoſſible to do any thing that can pleaſe God, or be rewarded by him: For he that undertakes the ſervice or worſhip of God in any kind, muſt believe that he is God, and that he rewards all his faithful ſervants, that do what they are enabled to do toward the ſearch and performance of his will. And he that doth believe this, what ſhould ever tempt him to forſake or diſobey him, when his ſincere, faithful performances, how dear ſoever they coſt him here, are ſure to be abundantly rewarded by God, and his forſaking and falling off to bring judgments and ruin upon him?

7. By faith Noah being warned of God of things not ſeen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an Ark to the * ſaving of his houſe; by which he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteouſneſs which is † by faith.]

7. A like example of faith we have in Noah, who believing the threats, and heeding the warning of God that foretold the drowning of the world, and aſſuring himſelf that God would deſtroy and drown the wicked of that age, and preſerve him and his family (an emblem of the Church of faithful obedient Chriſtians) did accordingly ſo fear the judgment of God denounced againſt the wicked, and believe God's command of making an Ark for himſelf and his family, that he ſet preſently to making of that Ark, by that means to ſave both himſelf and his family from the Flood (Parallel to which is your belief of God's threats and commands, and making uſe of that way of ſecuring your ſelves which Chriſt hath directed you, a careful obedience, and cloſe adhering to the commands of Chriſt in this time of approaching deſtruction;) and thus as a Prophet he foretold, and brought upon the whole world of ſinful men an univerſal deſtruction, and himſelf was left the only poſſeſſor of the earth, had it all for an inheritance to him and his poſterity, and no queſtion had the happineſs of another world, as a reward of his pious fear and faith in God, and the actions which he did out of that principle.

* delivering of his houſhold σωτηρίας τῆς οἴκου αὐτοῦ

† according to κτλ

8. By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he ſhould afterward receive for an inheritance, obeyed, and he went out, not knowing whither he went.]

8. A like act of faith was Abraham's obedience to God's command of leaving his Country, and going whitherſoever God ſhould direct him, not knowing whither it was, only receiving a promiſe from God, that his poſterity ſhould be the poſſeſſors of that place whither he was appointed to go, but no way aſſured that himſelf ſhould ever be owner of any part of it.

9. By faith he ſojourned in the land of promiſe, as in a ſtrange country, dwelling in Tabernacles with Iſaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the ſame promiſes.]

9. And accordingly a like act of faith it was in him, that though he ſojourned in that land which was promiſed him, in the ſame manner as he ſhould if he and his ſeed had had nothing to do with it (he and his ſons and his ſons ſons dwelling in it in Tabernacles, erected for a tranſitory paſſage through it, and not in houſes, as in a place of poſſeſſion, and thus they lived all their lives long till Jacob was removed into Ægypt) yet he firmly believed that his ſeed ſhould poſſeſs that land, and was himſelf very well ſatisfied without it;

10. For he looked for a City which hath foundations, whoſe builder and maker is God.]

10. Upon this ground of Chriſtian faith, that God had for him an abiding firm building, which after a pilgrim's life expected him in another world, (ſee 2 Cor. 5. 1. and Heb. 12. 28.) and would plentifully reward all his obedience, though he had no other reward to receive in this life.

† even καὶ

11. Through faith † alſo Sarah her ſelf received ſtrength to conceive ſeed, and was delivered of a child when ſhe was paſt age, becauſe ſhe judged him faithful who had promiſed.]

11. By the like belief and relying on God's power and promiſe, againſt all probabilities to the contrary, Sarah being both barren, and of an age paſt child-bearing, did not only by her handmaid Hagar, but of her own womb, and that by Abraham, when he was very old alſo, receive ſtrength to conceive and bring forth a ſon, having no ground to believe this, or hope it poſſible, but that God had promiſed it, and ſhe was confident he would not break his promiſe, but perform it.

* dead in theſe reſpects τοῦτο νενεκρωμένου

12. Therefore ſprang there even of one, and him * as good as dead, ſo many as the ſtars of the ſky in multitude, and as the ſand which is by the ſea ſhore innumerable.]

12. And as the reward of their faith of this, they became ſo fruitful, that from one Abraham (called by that title of One, Mal. 2. 15.) and that at a time when he was paſt power of getting children, there yet came a moſt numerous progeny, according to the promiſe of God made to him, and laid hold on and depended on by his faith.

* By or according to faith all theſe died κατὰ πίστιν ἀπέθανον — † ſojourners on the land παρεπίδημοι ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς

13. * Theſe all died in faith, not having received the promiſes, but having ſeen them afar off, c and were perſuaded of them, and embraced them, and confeſſed that they were ſtrangers and † pilgrims on the earth.]

13. And this his numerous poſterity did not, till the time of Joſhua, come to enjoy this promiſed land of Canaan; only as Abraham went on chearfully, as believing that four hundred years after the promiſes ſhould be performed to his ſeed, ſo did they comfort themſelves with the aſſurance that their poſterity ſhould enjoy them if they did not, and meanwhile calling themſelves gueſts and ſtrangers in that promiſed land, Gen. 23. 4. and 47. 9. and not poſſeſſors of it: (which is an inforcement of that conſtancy which is now called for of Chriſtians in perſecution, upon ſtrength of that promiſe of the approaching coming of Chriſt to reſcue them, which in caſe it ſhould not come in their days, yet being ſo ſure to come to their poſterity, ſo much ſooner than the Canaan came to Abraham's poſterity, this may be matter of faith and encouragement to Chriſtians as reaſonably as the aſſured expectation of thoſe promiſes was to Abraham and his poſterity.)

14. For they that ſay ſuch things declare plainly that they ſeek a Country.]

14. And this language of theirs, calling themſelves ſojourners in Canaan, and not poſſeſſors of it, ſignifies that they did not think themſelves at home, but that they were in purſuit of a Country.

* if they had mentioned εἰ ἐμνημόνευον

† they might have had opportunity to have returned.]

15. And truly * if they had been mindful of that country from whence they came out, † they might have had opportunity to have returned.]

15. And that not their own Country Chaldæa, from whence Abraham firſt went out upon God's command, for he and his poſterity had many ſeaſons to have gone back thither, if that had been the Country they look'd after.

† they had εἶχον

16. But now they deſire a better country, that is, an heavenly: wherefore God is not aſhamed to be called their God; for he hath provided for them a City.]

16. But now 'tis clear that the Country which they profeſs'd to expect, was that promiſed to their poſterity, which being not come till after this life of theirs, was a type of heaven: and in having made this proviſion for them, God is moſt juſtly ſaid to be the God of Abraham, &c. for whom he made ſo rich a preparation, deſtining the land of Canaan, and in that a famous City Jeruſalem (though it was not yet imaginable how it ſhould be built) for their poſterity, and in that myſtically foreſhewing an eternal City and Kingdom, the Canaan and Jeruſalem above, which they ſhould have which continued conſtant to Chriſt, and obtained not the promiſes in this life.

* having admitted or entertained the promiſes he — τὰς ἐπαγγελίας ἀναδεξάμενος

17. By faith Abraham when he was tryed offered up Iſaac, and * he that had received the promiſes offered up his only-begotten ſon;

18. Of whom it was ſaid, that in Iſaac † ſhall thy ſeed be called:]

17, 18. Another eminent act of faith it was in Abraham, that upon God's command to ſacrifice his only ſon Iſaac, he preſently and readily obeyed, took him and carried him to the Mountain, and was ready to have offered him up, if God had not ſtop'd him: and having entertained and embraced, and firmly believed the promiſes of a numerous ſeed and

† ſhall the ſeed be called to thee, κληθήσεταί σοι σπέρμα

and people that ſhould ſpring from him, and having no other ſon but this from whom they ſhould ſpring, nor poſſibility in nature, nor promiſe above nature, that he ſhould have any more children, but a plain affirmation that this people, which ſhould be counted his ſeed, to whom the promiſes belonged, ſhould come from Iſaac, he did yet abſolutely obey that command of Gods, in reſolving to kill that ſon on whom all thoſe promiſes depended, and yet never doubted of the performance of the promiſes,

19. Reſolving with himſelf that rather than the promiſe ſhould not be performed, which was made to him of a numerous poſterity, to ſpring particularly from Iſaac, God, who was able to raiſe from the dead, would ſo raiſe Iſaac when he ſhould have killed him, having withal a kind of pledge to aſſure him that he would do that, becauſe when he was conceived and born to him, it was a kind of coming from the dead, viz. from Sarah's womb, when ſhe was paſt age of child-bearing, and from himſelf, who in this reſpect of getting children was mortified and dead alſo, v. 11, 12. (And this again is an example to encourage and confirm the faith of Chriſtians, that in obedience to Chriſt they continue conſtant to death it ſelf, or the utmoſt danger of it, knowing that God will perform his promiſes to them, yield them the promiſed deliverance, though they cannot imagine the manner how.)

19. Accounting that God was able to raiſe him up even from the dead; from whence * alſo he received him in a figure.]

* in a figure he had alſo received him, αὐτὸν ἐν παραβολῇ ἐκομίσατο

d. 20. An act of faith alſo it was in Iſaac that, after that manner that is ſtoried of him, he bleſſed his two ſons Jacob and Eſau, that is, prayed for bleſſings on them, nay, as a Prophet, foretold from God what ſhould befall the poſterity of each of them; firſt, aſſuring himſelf that the promiſe made to Abraham ſhould be fulfilled in Jacob, Gen. 28. 4, 5. and ſo that what he had done, though through error, miſtaking Jacob for Eſau, would yet certainly be performed to him by God, Gen. 27. 33, 37. And for Eſau, he foretold alſo of his poſterity, that at length they ſhould be freed from their ſubjection to the Jews, v. 39. which was a kind of bleſſing of him alſo, although it were not performed to him perſonally, but to his poſterity many years after. (And the like faith will it be now in the Chriſtians, that ſhall aſſure themſelves that God will now bleſs and preſerve the faithful conſtant believers, give them deliverances from their preſſures, although they be not yet preſent but future.)

20. † d By faith Iſaac bleſſed Jacob and Eſau concerning things to come.]

† by faith concerning things to come περὶ μελλόντων

e. 21. Thus Jacob, a little before his death, roſe and ſet himſelf up upon his bed, and leaning upon his ſtaff, (which was an emblem of faith) depending and relying firmly upon God's promiſe, he prayed and worſhipped God, and bleſſed prophetically Manaſſeh and Ephraim, foretold how God ſhould deal with them and the tribes that ſprang from them, after his and their death.

21. By faith Jacob, when he was a dying, bleſſed both the ſons of Joſeph, and * worſhipped leaning upon the e top of his ſtaff.]

* worſhipped upon προσεκύνησεν ἐπὶ

22. By the ſame faith, and aſſurance that God would make good this promiſe of giving Canaan to Abraham's ſeed, though 'twere not yet given, Joſeph, before his death a little, mentioned the Iſraelites going out of Ægypt, and commanded that when they went, his bones ſhould be carried with them; which argued his aſſurance, without all doubt, that they ſhould poſſeſs that promiſed land, and be delivered out of the Ægyptian thraldom that they were for ſome years to lye under.

22. By faith Joſeph, when he died, made mention of the departing of the children of Iſrael: and gave commandment concerning his bones.]

23. By the ſame faith it was in Moſes's parents to break through all fear, to hide the child, and endeavour to ſave him in ſpight of the King's bloody law, having been aſſured from God that there ſhould be born from among them one that ſhould deliver them out of Ægypt, and judging by ſomewhat extraordinary in Moſes's look, that he was that perſon thus promiſed them. (And a like act of faith it will now be, thus confidently to believe this promiſed deliverance, and to act accordingly.)

23. By faith Moſes, when he was born, was hid three months of his parents, becauſe they ſaw he was a † proper child, and they were not afraid of the King's commandment.]

† comely ἀστεῖον

24. By faith Moſes, * when he was come to years, refuſed to be called the ſon of Pharaoh's daughter;

* being grown big μέγας γενόμενος

25. Chuſing rather to endure any affliction that ſhould fall on the Iſraelites, than to enjoy all the pleaſures and advantages of a palace, with the guilt of that cruel ſin of perſecuting the children of God, which he could not eſcape doing, if he lived in that court, when he came to be of age;

25. Chuſing rather to ſuffer afflictions with the people of God, than to † enjoy the pleaſures of ſin for a ſeaſon;]

† to have the temporary enjoyment or delight of ſin πρόσκαιρον ἔχειν ἁμαρτίας ἀπόλαυσιν

26. And counting that reproach which Chriſt and Chriſtians endure now, and which the children of Iſrael, the anointed of the Lord, Pſal. 105. 15. then endured in Ægypt, (being moſt reproachfully afflicted and oppreſſed) a far more deſirable thing than all the wealth and power in Ægypt; looking upon the great difference of rewards between thoſe two ſtates in another world, wealth and greatneſs and perſecuting God's children being attended, as Dives, with flames, and affliction and reproach, with heaven and bliſs, like Lazarus. (And the like faith will be in the Chriſtian, to renounce all thoſe ſecular advantages that the Gnoſticks now promiſed men that will forſake the pure faith, and join with them in compliance with and aſſiſting the perſecutors; and rather to ſuffer any the ſharpeſt perſecutions from the Jews, than thus join and concur with them in perſecuting the Chriſtians.)

26. Eſteeming the reproach of Chriſt greater riches than the treaſures in Ægypt: for he had reſpect unto the recompence of the reward.]

μείζονα πλοῦτον ἡγησάμενος τῶν ἐν Αἰγύπτου θησαυρῶν

27. So after, it was alſo an act of his faith, and obedience to the word of God, delivered him in the buſh, that, being threatned by the King, if he ſhould ever any more mention the going out of the people of Iſrael, Exod. 10. 28. he went out from the King courageouſly, and having told Pharaoh that he would never treat with him more about it, he conducted the Iſraelites out of Ægypt, depending conſtantly on God, and as firmly, as if he had ſeen him preſent to ſecure and defend him. (And the like faith it is to confeſs Chriſt now, be the danger never ſo great and imminent of doing ſo.)

27. By faith he forſook Ægypt, not fearing the wrath of the King: for he * endured as ſeeing him who is inviſible.]

* was conſtant ἐκαρτέρησεν

28. Another act of faith it was and obedience to God, in Moſes, that he did that which he did about the Paſſeover, and ſprinkling the ſide-poſts of the door, to deliver by that means all the firſt-born of the Iſraelites: (by which was alſo typified the redemption wrought by Chriſt, and that which is now approaching foretold and promiſed by him, that he that endureth to the end ſhall eſcape, that the believers ſhall be ſealed and ſecured, before the deſtruction come out againſt this people, ſee Rev. 4. 7, &c.)

28. Through faith he kept the Paſſeover, and the ſprinkling of blood, leſt he that deſtroyed the firſt-born ſhould touch him.]

f. g. 29. And an act of faith it was in the people of Iſrael, that they ventured into the Erythræan ſea, and went through part of it, as if it had been firm ground; whereas the Ægyptians, perſecuting and trying to follow them, were drowned. (And the like faith will now ſecure the conſtant ſufferers, whilſt their perſecutors are overwhelmed and deſtroyed by the ſame means that gives them deliverance.)

29. By faith they f paſſed through g the Red ſea, as by dry land: which the Ægyptians aſſaying to do were drowned.]

30. An act of faith it was in Joſhua, and the people in obedience to him, to go about Jericho ſeven days together with the Ark before them, upon which followed the falling of the walls of it. (And the like in the Chriſtians now, to truſt confidently in God's deliverance, although they uſe no artifices, or ſecular policies, or means of their own to work it for them.)

30. By faith the walls of Jericho fell down, after they were compaſſed about ſeven days.]

31. An act of faith it was in Rahab, who had formerly been an Idolatreſs and an harlot, (and now kept an Inn or Victualling-houſe) to entertain the ſpies ſent by the Iſraelites ſafely, believing that God whom they worſhipp'd to be the true God, whereupon ſhe was ſaved alive, when the reſt of the incredulous idolatrous people of that land were deſtroyed. (And the like faith will it be in them now that ſhall uſe all kindneſs and fidelity to the perſecuted Chriſtians, and the doing thus will be much a more probable way to ſecure them that do it, than all the Gnoſtick treacheries and compliances with the perſecutors.)

31. By faith the harlot Rahab periſhed not with them that † believed not, when ſhe had received the ſpies with peace.]

† obeyed not ἀπειθήσασι

32, 33. What need I give you any more examples of this matter? 'Twere infinite to enlarge on this ſubject, to tell you all that might be ſaid for your encouragement to truſt God, and adhere conſtantly to him: ſuch were the great champions of God's people, who depending on God's ſtrength and bleſſing, conſtantly and fearleſly diſcharged their duty, and by God's eſpecial motion, and their obedience thereto, were raiſed up to govern the Iſraelites, and to fight their battels for them, and to make conqueſts, Gedeon over the Madianites, Barak over the Canaanites, Samſon and Samuel over the Philiſtines, Jephtha over the Ammonites, David over the Amalekites, Jebuſites, Moabites, Philiſtines, Idumæans,

32. * And what ſhall I more ſay? for the time would fail me to tell of Gedeon, and of Barak, and of Samſon, and of Jephtha, of David alſo, and Samuel, and of the Prophets;

* And why do I yet talk or ſpeak τί ἔτι λέγω

33. Who through faith ſubdued Kingdoms, wrought righteouſneſs, obtained promiſes, ſtopped the mouths of lions,] mæans, Syrians: and all theſe by faith, (not thinking they ſhould be able to vanquiſh them without fighting, but) fighting valiantly, and depending on God's promiſe and power to give them victories, with ſmall as well as with great numbers, who again by faith lived godly and righteous lives, received great mercies from God miraculouſly, only by the ſtrength of his having promiſed it. And ſome of them, Daniel by name, (contained under the word prophets, ver. 32.) obtained that miracle of mercy and deliverance from God, that the Lions, when he was thrown into their den, did him no hurt:

34. Quenched the violence of fire, eſcaped the edge of the ſword, out of weakneſs were made ſtrong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens.] 34. Others were ſo favoured by God, that the fire did them no hurt when they (that is, the three children) were caſt into it; others eſcaped preſent danger of being killed by the ſword, as David from Saul, Eliah and Michaiah from Ahab, the Jews in Heſter from Haman; others were recovered from deſperate diſeaſes, as Job and Hezekiah, others became wonderfully couragious in fighting, as Jonathan, &c. and routed the armies of the Heathen Canaanites, &c. very often.

35. Women received their dead † raiſed to life again: and others were [h] tortured not accepting deliverance, that they might obtain a better reſurrection.] 35. Some women (as the widow of Sarepta, 1 Kings 17. 21. and the Shunamitiſh woman, 2 Kin. 4.) had their children reſtored from death to life, upon their entertaining the prophets of God, cheriſhing and relieving God's ſervants, Elias and Eliſha: Others when rack'd and tormented for the acknowledgment of the truth, had no deſire to be ſpared, but refuſed to be delivered when they might, meerly by the ſtrength of faith, believing a reſurrection to life eternal after death, and looked upon that as much more deſirable than a preſent remiſſion of torments. Thus the mother and ſeven children, 2 Mac. 6. 19, 30. and ch. 7. 9.

* contumelies ὑπερασμῶν

36. And others had trials of * cruel mockings and ſcourgings, yea moreover of bonds and impriſonment.] 36. Others, as Michaiah and Jeremiah and the Maccabees, had patience tried by whipping, very reproachful and painful, others by ſhackles and impriſonment, and ſo Joſeph in Ægypt, and others.

† were burnt with hot irons * in want, diſtreſſed, ill handled, ὑστερούμενοι, θλιβόμενοι, κακουχούμενοι

37. They were ſtoned, they were ſawn aſunder, † [i] were tempted, were ſlain with the ſword; they wandred about in ſheep-skins and goat-skins, being * deſtitute, afflicted, tormented:] 37. Some were ſtoned, as Zacharias; others ſawn aſunder, (as Iſaiah by Manaſſes, ſay the Jews) others burnt alive, or broiled, or run through with hot irons, as the Maccabees; others, very many, kill'd by the ſword; others, the prophets that preached the coming of Chriſt, meanly arrayed in skins, as Ezechiel, John Baptiſt, &c. being very poor, in great dangers, and meeting with very ill uſage;

i.

38. (Of whom the world was not worthy) they wandred in deſerts, and in mountains, and in dens and caves of the earth.] 38. Uſed thus, as men that were too good to live in this wicked world, and accordingly others of them lived recluſe and retired from the world, in deſerts and hills, and caves of the earth.

† received teſtimony μαρτυρηθέντες

39. And theſe all having † obtained a good report through faith, received not the promiſe:] 39. And all theſe valiant champions and ſervants of God laſt mentioned v. 36, &c. and before v. 8, 13. being much commended for their faith, did not in their time receive the promiſes made to Abraham, had no deliverance in this life from their perſecutors:

* God foreſeeing ſomewhat better concerning us, that they might not be perfected without us, τοῦ Θεοῦ περὶ ἡμῶν κρεῖττόν τι προβλεψαμένου

40. * God having provided ſome better thing for us, that they without us ſhould not be [k] made perfect.] 40. God having determined this as the time moſt congruous in his wiſdom to give the utmoſt completion to all thoſe prophecies and promiſes to ſend the Meſſias into the world, and, as a conſequent of his reſurrection from the dead, to grant us thoſe privileges and advantages that the fathers had not enjoyed, a reſt after long perſecutions, a victory over all oppoſers of Chriſt's Church, that ſo what was promiſed to Abraham's ſeed, Gen. 22. 17. that they ſhould poſſeſs the gates of their enemies, being but imperfectly fulfill'd to the fathers, might have the utmoſt completion in the victory and flouriſhing of the Chriſtian faith over all the enemies thereof.

Annotations on Chap. XI.

a. ὑπόστασις

V. 1. Subſtance] The uſe of this word ὑπόστασις, both here and in the other places of the New Teſtament, will appear by obſerving the Greek rendring of the Hebrew יחל and חוחלת from it. The word ſignifies to hope, and in Piel to expect with ſome confidence, and ſo to ſtay and wait for any thing, generally rendred by the Targum ואורך and he expected, Gen. 8. 10, and 12. but ſometimes by מחצפין auſi ſunt, Exech. 13. 6. they took confidence. Now this word Mic. 5. 7. is by the Greek tranſlators rendred ὑπομονή, where the Hebrew ייחל לבני אדם he ſhall hope in the ſons of men, is by the Targum rendred מסכר he ſhall expect, we render it, wait for them. The ſenſe beareth depending on them for aid, and ſo ſubſiſting in them, and that is the literal notation of the ὑπόστασις. Thus likewiſe the Noun תוחלת ἐλπὶς, hope, Lam. 3. 18. expectation, waiting, is rendred ὑπόστασις Pſal. 39. 8. and ſo in the books of Eſdras, 2 Eſdr. 8. They who have not ὑπόστασιν καλῶν ἔργων the hope, or confidence, of good works (that μέγας παῤῥησίας θησαυρὸς in Plutarch) that great treaſure of confidence, that ariſeth from well doing. Agreeable to this notion of the word is the acception of it in every place of the New Teſtament, (ſave only that Heb. 1. 3. where ſpeaking of Chriſt he is called χαρακτὴρ ὑποστάσεως αὐτοῦ, the character of his ſubſiſtence.) Thus 2 Cor. 9. 4. μὴ καταισχυνθῶμεν ἐν τῇ ὑποστάσῃ ταύτῃ τῆς καυχήσεως that we be not put to ſhame in this confidence of boaſting, that is, in having had that confidence of their liberality and readineſs, as to boaſt of them in that behalf. For to that belongs that great ſhame, in caſe his confidence ſhould miſcarry, as that hope which is rightly grounded upon firm promiſes, ἡ καταισχύνει doth not put to ſhame, ſaith the Apoſtle, Rom. 5. 5. and to the ſame purpoſe c. 9. 33. To the ſame ſenſe is that in the ſame words c. 11. 17. which is explain'd after by ἐάν τις τολμᾷ, τολμῶ κἀγώ, If any have confidence, I alſo have confidence, according to that mentioned from the Targum, Ezech. 13. where the Hebrew anſwerable to ὑπόστασις is rendred daring; and ſo Polybius ſeems to have uſed the word ὑπόστασις for courage and valour or good aſſurance. So oft in * Diodorus Siculus, Ἐπῆρεν αὐτὸν πρὸς τὴν ὑπόστασιν ταύτην ὄνειρος, a dream raiſed him to this confidence, giving him a viſion of great advancement and glory, and παρώξυνε τηρεῖν τὴν ὑπόστασιν τῶν Φιλομήλου, he incited them to keep the conſtancy, or courage, of Philomelus. So in * Joſephus, ἀμεταλλακτον αὐτῶν ὑποστάσεως their immutable courage or conſtancy. Thus Cicero defineth Faith, Fides eſt dictorum conventorúmque conſtantia & veritas, It is a conſtancy and truth of all that hath been ſaid and agreed. And ſo the Hebrew and Chaldee word for faith אמן, and המנות, and ſo alſo the Arabick אמאנה ſignifies firmneſs, conſtancy, ſtability. So Heb. 3. that which is v. 6. ἐὰν περὶ τὴν παῤῥησίαν καὶ τὸ καύχημα τῆς ἐλπίδος μέχρι τέλους βεβαίαν κατάσχωμεν, if we hold faſt the confidence and the boaſting of hope firm until the end (as the condition of being Chriſtians or the houſhold of Chriſt) is expreſſed v. 14. in this other phraſe, little differing from it, ἐὰν περὶ τὴν ἀρχὴν τῆς ὑποστάσεως μέχρι τέλους βεβαίαν κατάσχωμεν, If we hold faſt the beginning of confidence, that is, that confidence exemplified to us by Chriſt, which we had from the beginning, firm unto the end. And ſo here faith is ἐλπιζομένων ὑπόστασις, the expectation (or dependence, or confidence, or the confident expectation) of things hoped for by us, (and this oppoſed to the ὑποστολὴ falling off, or cowardly behaviour, mentioned in the concluſion of the former Chapter;) the promiſe of Chriſt being the object as of our hope ſo of our faith alſo, and differing very little in that particular, but that faith ſeems to be the greater adherence, to have the leſs of doubting, the more of confidence in it.

d. πίστει εὐλόγησεν Ἰσαὰκ

V. 20. By faith Iſaac bleſſed Jacob] Some difficulty here is, where it is ſaid of Iſaac that by faith concerning things to come he bleſſed Jacob and Eſau, to what part of the ſtory in Geneſis it ſhall belong. In ch. 27. he bleſſeth Jacob, v. 28, 29. God give thee of the dew of heaven — Let people ſerve thee, and nations bow down to thee: be lord over thy brethren, and let thy mothers ſons bow down to thee —— But it will, firſt, be hard to affirm, that he here bleſs'd Jacob by faith, when it is evident he knew not that it was Jacob whom he thus bleſs'd; and ſecondly, Iſaac thinking verily that it was Eſau whom he thus bleſs'd, it could not be an act of faith in him, or reconcilable with that which God had revealed to Rebecca, c. 25. 23. (that the elder ſhould ſerve the younger) thus to pronounce or foretel of Eſau, that he ſhould be lord over his brethren. For theſe two reaſons it will not be fit to refer this of the Apoſtle to that part of the ſtory wherein blind Iſaac, contrary to his intention, thus bleſſed Jacob. The next paſſage in the ſtory will, I ſuppoſe, be much more commodious for the turn, when upon Eſau's coming with his veniſon, Iſaac finds himſelf to have been abuſed, and trembling very exceedingly, tells him that Jacob had brought him veniſon already, and he had eaten and bleſs'd him, yea and he ſhall be bleſſed, v. 33. and again, v. 37. that he had made Jacob his lord, and given him all his brethren for his ſervants. Where Iſaac diſcerning what he had done, though by miſtake, remembers the Oracle that God had delivered before their birth, and conſidering how punctually the bleſſing thus given to Jacob by him did agree to that, he doth now by faith reſolve, that ſo it ſhould certainly be, that what his affection had deſigned to Eſau, was by God promiſed to Jacob, and conſequently ſhould irreverſibly belong to him, and thereupon he confirms it anew to Jacob, Yea and he ſhall be bleſſed, and I have made him thy lord. And ſo this was the bleſſing wherewith by faith Iſaac bleſſed Jacob. Then for his bleſſing of Eſau, that viſibly follows, v. 39. Thy dwelling ſhall be the fatneſs of the earth —— (and in the body of it again inſerted a farther confirmation of Jacob's bleſſing, by telling Eſau, thou ſhalt ſerve thy brother, v. 40.) and it ſhall come to paſs that when thou ſhalt have the dominion, thou ſhalt break his yoke from off thy neck. Where it muſt farther be ſuppoſed that Iſaac, beyond that prediction before their birth, that the elder ſhould ſerve the younger, had received from God another Oracle concerning his two ſons, that as the poſterity of Jacob, the Jews, ſhould have the preeminence and dominion for ſome time over the Edumæans, the poſterity of Eſau, ſo in proceſs of time, the Jews ſhould be brought down, and ſo the Edumæans be quitted of that yoke; and accordingly Iſaac foretelling this is here as truly ſaid to have by faith bleſs'd Eſau. And this perhaps was it upon which Iſaac before had pronounced that bleſſing upon him which he took to be Eſau, Be lord over thy brethren — which though, in reſpect of the times next enſuing, it were true of Jacob (and accordingly was in God's providence thus directed to him) yet in reſpect of the latter times, when the Jews ſhould be brought low, was to be truly appliable to Eſau, and ſo might by faith be deſigned by Iſaac to him.

e. ἄκρον τῆς ῥάβδου

V. 21. Top of his ſtaff] The Hebrew מטה ſignifies both a bed and a ſtaff, perhaps antiently the very ſame word for both, though now Grammarians have pointed it diverſly, and made a difference of ſound alſo betwixt them. The Hieruſalem Targum reads it, Laudes Dei cecinit ſuper ſpondam ſuam, He ſang the praiſes of God upon his bed-ſtead. The Greek here follows the Septuagint's tranſlation, and there is no queſtion of the truth of it: and indeed it may well be that both notions of the Hebrew may here ſtand, and the truth be, that ariſing out of his bed, he ſate on it, and lean'd as ſick perſons do, upon his ſtaff, for we after read, that he gathered up, or returned again, his feet into the bed, Gen. 49. 33. which is a ſign that he was before riſen out of it, and ſate on the ſide with his feet on the ground, which was very fit for this poſture of leaning on his ſtaff.

f. Διαβαίνειν

V. 29. Paſſed through] Διαβαίνειν doth not here ſignifie to go from one ſide to the other, quite through, or croſs the ſea (for the Iſraelites journeying makes it appear that they did not ſo) but to go in into part of the channel, Exod. 14. 22 and paſs on there a good way in the midſt, v. 29. and then to come out again on the ſame ſide; for ſo the Iſraelites did, as appears by the ſtory. This is expreſſed Pſal. 137. 14, by God's dividing the Red ſea, and leading them בתוכו διὰ μέσου αὐτῆς, by, or through, the midſt of it, agreeably to what is now ſaid.

Ib. The Red ſea] That ſea through part of which the Iſraelites paſſed (and in which the Egyptians were drowned) is in the Hebrew ſtyled ים סוף mare algoſum, the ſea that was ſo full of weeds, &c. (See Pſal. 106. 7. and 137. 13.) By the ſide or ſhore of this ſea did the poſterity of Eſau or Edom dwell. Now Edom is by the Septuagint called Ἐρυθρὸς red, becauſe as that comes from the Hebrew אדם red, with a very little change of one letter ו inſerted אדום, ſo from ἐρυθρὸς red doth the word Ἐρυθρᾶς alſo vary as little. From hence alſo (and not from Erythræus a king drowned there, as Diodorus Siculus ſaith) it is that this ſea is by them rendred ἐρυθρὰ θάλασσα in thoſe places of the Pſalmiſt (and elſewhere,) where the Hebrew only have ים סוף the weedy ſea, and accordingly it is here retained ἐρυθρὰ θάλασσα, meaning that Edumæan ſea, which by analogy would rather be ſtyled Ἐρυθραία than Ἐρυθρὰ, the Erythræan or Edumæan, than the Red ſea. g. ἐρυθρὰ θάλασσα

V. 35 Tortured] What is here meant by τυμπανίζειν I ſhall propoſe by way of conjecture, by theſe ſteps and degrees. That this puniſhment was that inflicted by Antiochus on the Maccabees there is little queſtion, the many circumſtances here agreeing with thoſe there do make it manifeſt: as firſt, the word τυμπανίζειν here, and there; ſecondly, their not accepting deliverance here, ſet down there diſtinctly, 2 Mac. 6. 30. then thirdly, the mention of a better reſurrection here, compared with that their comfort there, c. 7. 9. and fourthly, the ἐμπαιγμοὶ contumelious uſages here, v. 36. and there 2 Mac. 7. 7. ſuch as are mentioned 1 Sam. 31. 4. and are defined by Sophocles in Antigona, Τὸν θανόντ' ἐπικλανεῖν, καὶ ἐναλλάσσειν πῆ κειμήλιον καὶ ἐφυβρίζειν, to kill and inſult on the dead, and uſe him contumelioufly; ſo fifthly, μάστιγες ſtripes here, and there v. 30, &c. ſixthly, the πεῖρα ἐμπαιγμῶν trial of contumelies here, and there the narration how thoſe ἐμπαιγμοὶ were to try whether they would perſiſt or no; ſeventhly, the word, whether ἐπειράσθησαν tried, or ἐπυρώθησαν ſcorched, here v. 37. If it be the former, then it refers to πεῖρα trial, forementioned; if the latter, then to the burning them alive, and frying them in a pan, τηγανισμὸς, 2. Mac. 7. 5. This being premiſed for the general explication of this word and thoſe that follow, 'tis in the next place obſervable that Ariſtophanes hath this paſſage, Ὦ τύμπανα καὶ κύφωνες, where the Scholiaſt hath obſerved two ſignifications of the word τυμπανον, which Phavorinus hath borrowed from him; firſt, for ξύλον ἐφ' ᾧ ἐτυμπάνιζον, an engine of wood upon which they puniſhed men in this manner, ἐχρῶντο δὲ ταύτῃ τῇ τιμωρίᾳ, for this was a kind of puniſhment, that is τυμπανισμὸς was ſo; ſecondly, ξύλα οἷς τύπτον δὲ ἐν τοῖς δικαστηρίοις οἱ τιμωρούμενοι, cudgels with which they were beaten in their judicatories, or as Heſychius and Suidas add, ἰσχυρῶς πλήττον δ', are ſtrucken very ſtrongly. Thirdly, it may be obſerved, that here κύφωνες is joined by Ariſtophanes with τύμπανα, and that κύφωνες are in that Scholiaſt, wooden yokes or clogs (for ſo χλοιὸς is turned into Engliſh by the change but of i into g which is an ordinary tranſmutation, and eaſie for the ſound, i and g having the ſame ſound in many words) hanged to the neck, and mentioned Jer. 28. 14. where it ſignifies ſuch a yoke of iron with ſuch a wooden clog faſtned to it, which both bound in the neck cloſe, and bowed the head down, and made it κύφειν (from whence 'tis named;) and 'tis mentioned alſo by Ariſtotle, Pol. 5. δεθλᾶσθαι ἐν ἀγορᾷ ἐν κύφωνι, to be bound in the market-place with this yoke. This being alſo obſerved, 'tis fourthly to be conſidered, that in * Lucian κύφωνες καὶ τροχοὶ are put together, as in Ariſtophanes τύμπανα καὶ κύφωνες· and therefore probably that τύμπανα in the former acception, for ξύλα ἐφ' οἷς, the wooden inſtruments on which they were puniſhed, are the ſame that τροχοὶ wheels in Lucian. To which purpoſe we find in antient Authors, that tympanum is machina ad aquam, lapides, &c. in altum ſubvehenda h. τυμπανίζειν * νεκυομαντεῖα vehenda parata, an engine to lift up water, ſtones, &c. mentioned oft by Vitruvius in this ſenſe, and Nic. Perottus Cornucop. p. 34. by which it appears, that it was a wheel with teeth, like that upper great wheel in a mill, which cauſes the going about of the mill-ſtone. After this form, with no great difference, 'tis moſt probable was the τύμπανον on which men were puniſhed, viz. a wheel on which the man was tied, and ſo fetched up on high; and therefore Suidas adds κρεμᾷ he is hanged, and Heſychius, Ἐτυμπανίσθης, ἐκρεμάσθης, ἐσφαιρίσθης, they were hanged, they were carried about in a ſphære. This wheel was a kind of engine on which any were tormented, and no queſtion that which is mentioned 2 Mac. 6. 28. ἐπὶ τὸ τύμπανον εὐθέως ἦλθε, he came preſently to the torment, and v. 19. αὐθαιρέτως ἐπὶ τὸ τύμπανον παρῆλθε, he came voluntarily to the torment. From this cuſtom of hanging malefactors upon the tympanum, it is that Celſus in Origen. p. 81. ſpeaking of Chriſt, calls him ἄνδρα ἀτιμότατον, καὶ ἐντυμπανισθέντα, a moſt infamous perſon, put to death upon the tympanum, thinking his hanging on the croſs to be that upon the tympanum. When the malefactors were thus hanged or faſtned to the tympanum, 'tis obſervable in the fifth place, that other puniſhments followed: firſt, flaying, whereupon in Heſychius ἀνδρεῖ is flay'd is ſet to the explication of it; and ſo 2 Mac. 7. 7. τὸ τὴν καλαδέσμης σὺν τῇ δεξιᾷ περισυρέντες, they pull'd off the ſkin with the hairs (and ſo in Agathias l. 4. p. 128. where he diſcourſeth of the antiquity of that puniſhment, and fetcheth it from Sapores King of Perſia:) then ſecondly, upon examination of the perſon, and not yielding, but ſtill holding out againſt the torment, they proceeded either to ἀκρωτηριασμὸς cutting off the extreme parts, hands and feet and tongue, or to βάσανος, rack, c. 7. 8. which was by blows inflicted with a cudgel or tympanum, c. 6. 30. (and therefore 1 Sam. 21. where the Septuagint read περιεποιεῖτο καὶ ἐτυμπάνιζεν, Aquila reads περιέχωσιν beat him) and theſe blows were to death, as in the Maccabees 'tis clear, μέλλων ἤδη τῇ πληγῇ τελεῖν, being ready to die with the blows, and again when he ſaith, ὑποφέρω καὶ τὸ σῶμα ἀλγηδόνας μαστίγωσι, I am grievouſly pained with thoſe blows, it follows preſently μετήλλαξεν, he died, v. 31. From this uſe of the cudgel in this puniſhment of τυμπανισμὸς, it is that Polybius for τυμπανίζειν ſets ξυλοκοπεῖν to beat with cudgels, in reſpect of this one part of that puniſhment, not but that it had much more in it beſide, as beſide βάσανος rack and ἀκρωτηριασμὸς cutting off the extreme parts, formerly mentioned, (it ſeems by the ſtory of the Maccabees) τηγανισμὸς frying or broiling. By what hath been ſaid it appears this puniſhment was, firſt, very Painful, ſecondly, Contumelious, thirdly, Capital. Firſt, very Painful; ſo Ariſtot. Rhet. 2. c. 5. mentions τοὺς ἤδη τυμπανιζομένους, men that are under that puniſhment, as thoſe that think themſelves δεινὰ πάντα πεπονθέναι, to have ſuffered all the ſad meaſure imaginable, and ἀνεψυχμένοι εἰς τὸ μέλλον, made ſoulleſs and ſenſeleſs for what is behind. Secondly, moſt Contumelious: for ſo l. 3. Mac. αἰσχίστοις βασάνοις ἐντυμπανισθήσεσθαι, that puniſhment was a moſt ſhameful torment. Thirdly, Capital; bringing death finally, though ſlowly, and therefore is named by Ariſtotle Rhet. 2. 5. among thoſe things which have no ἐλπίδα σωτηρίας hope of eſcaping, and he reckons Antiphon the Poet for one, c. 6. who ἐντυμπανιζόμενος, being thus puniſhed by Dionyſius, asked one of his companions jeſtingly, who of the ſpectators ſhould ſee them to morrow: ſo in Maccabes, τῇ πληγῇ τελοῦσι μαστιζόμενοι, c. 6. they die with it; and ſo the King of Babylon, the third after Nebuchadnezzar, as * Euſebius cites it out of Polybiſtor, ὑπὸ τῶν φίλων ἀπετυμπανίσθη, was ſo uſed by his friends, and then it preſently follows ἀπολιμπάνει ἑαυτόν, and dying, &c. which is repeated in like manner by Beroſus l. 3. Χαλδαϊκῶν in the Fragments ſet out by Joſ. Scaliger, where yet for Χαλδαιοπατέχου in Euſebius, we find Λαβροσσοαρχόδου, who, ſaith Scaliger, was certainly Belſhazzar, of whom ſaith Juſtin Martyr from Dan. 5. ἀπετυμπανίσθη τὸ θηρίον the beaſt was put to that death, for which we now read in the Greek copy ἀνῃρέθη he was killed, and no more. Megaſthenes out of Abydenus calls him Λαβασσοαρδοκὸς, and ſaith he died βιαίῳ μόρῳ, by a violent death, and adds no more. See Scaliger in thoſe Fragments in the end of the book De emend. Temp. p. 4. By all this it appears that this was a puniſhment uſed among the Grecians and Babylonians; and, it ſeems by the Romans too: for ſo in Euſeb. Eccl. Hiſt. l. 5. c. 1. we find, Ἀποστείλαντος τοῦ κατὰ Καίσαρος τοῦ μὴ ἐντυμπανισθῆναι, &c. of the Emperor's commanding the Chriſtians to be put to this torment; and if they renounced Chriſtianity, they were to be looſed.

* Præpar. Evang. l. 4. p. 267.

V. 37. Were tempted] Some Copies read ἐτυράσθησαν, others have ἐπυράσθησαν. The truth is, ἐπειράσθησαν, which is the ordinary reading, ſeems not to be agreeable, after πεῖραν ἔλαβον, they received trial, &c. and neither the Syriack, nor Chryſoſtom (and they that follow him) have this word, or any thing for it; ſo that it is likely it came out of the margin into the Text, and then 'twill be doubtful, but not much material, which reading is to be preferred. i. ἐπυράσθησαν

V. 40. Made perfect] What is the meaning of this κρεῖττόν τι ſomewhat better, which this Author ſaith was by God foreſeen, and reſerved for the faithful, conſtant Chriſtians, will beſt be underſtood by the former verſe 39. Theſe all μαρτυρηθέντες διὰ πίστεως, being commended, or having received teſtimony, or perhaps being martyred, by their faith, οὐκ ἐκομίσαντο τὴν ἐπαγγελίαν received not the promiſe. Where firſt it muſt be obſerved who οὗτοι πάντες all theſe were: moſt diſtinctly the Maccabees, mentioned immediately before, ver. 36, 37, 38. but not ſo as to exclude, or not to comprehend thoſe others which were ſet down as examples of Faith before them, for they alſo muſt be contained in the οὗτοι πάντες all theſe. For the Maccabees, next before mentioned, theſe are in the Jews ſtories commended for their conſtancy in adhering to God's commands, or the Jewiſh laws, in ſpite of the cruelleſt perſecutors and tormentors, and were really martyred, or put to death, loſt their lives, διὰ πίστεως by their faith, or, conſtancy; and of theſe it is ſaid, they received not the promiſe, God having foreſeen, or reſerved, ſomewhat better for us, that is, God having reſerved for the Chriſtian Church ſome performance of promiſe which he had not afforded thoſe former. By this it is already apparent that eternal bliſs in another world was not the matter of this promiſe, both becauſe this was not it that they could be evidenced to have miſs'd by their being tormented and put to death, but that which it was more ſure they received, becauſe they were ſo ill uſed here; and ſecondly, becauſe if it were ſuppoſed to be true, (as ſome vainly conceive,) that thoſe that died before Chriſt did not attain their bliſs till after Chriſt's reſurrection, yet it will be acknowledged by all that they then received it, and then it will follow that the ἡμεῖς, the Chriſtians, had not κρεῖττόν τι any advantage of them that lived before, in that reſpect, thoſe obtaining the bliſs ſooner than they, and no torment or temporary pains being ſuppoſable for ſuch Martyrs between the day of their ſufferings and their attaining to bliſs, wherein theſe latter can by any be thought to exceed them. It follows then, that as the promiſe which they by ſuffering received not, was ſome promiſe of this life, ſo the κρεῖττόν τι the ſomewhat better was ſomewhat which the Chriſtians ſhould enjoy in this life. In the next place then, we may have another way of finding out what this promiſe was wherein the Chriſtians were to have the advantage of the former, by looking on ver. 13. where of Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob it is ſaid, in like manner that they died receiving not the promiſe. That promiſe was clearly the promiſed land, that Canaan, the type of the Chriſtians reſt, or deliverance from their enemies, (ſee Note on Heb. 3. c.) which they received not in their life time; and though their poſterity afterward did receive it, yet ſome promiſes there were made unto Abraham and his ſeed, which even they that attain'd the promiſed land did not receive. And what were they? Among the promiſes made to Abraham (not perſonally to him, but to his ſeed) this is one, Gen. 22. 17. that his ſeed ſhould poſſeſs the gates of his enemies. This it ſeems was look'd upon by all the Jews as a ſpecial part of the promiſe to Abraham, repeated by all the Prophets, Luk. 1. 70. that they ſhould be ſaved from their enemies, and from the hands of all that hate them, v. 71. and this diſtinctly there mentioned by Zachary, as a ſpecial part of the Covenant and oath made to Abraham, κ. τ. λ. k. κρεῖττόν τι προβλεψαμένου τοῦ θεοῦ οὗτοι πάντες μὴ λαβόντες ἀπέθανον σωτηρίαν ἐκ ἐχθρῶν ham, ver. 72, 73. that he would grant them, that being delivered without fear from the hands of their enemies, they might ſerve God in holineſs, &c. ver. 74, 75. And this was it which, being not fully attained by Abraham's poſterity in Canaan, was ſtill by them expected to be perform'd by the Meſſias, and was the κρεῖττόν τι, the ſomewhat better, that was reſerved for theſe times of the Meſſiah. For of the reſt of the faithful, named after Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob, even thoſe that were poſſeſſors of Canaan, who did ſubdue enemies by their faith ver. 32, 33. and ſo are ſaid to have obtained promiſes there, yet this was not for a continuance, ſuch as might be called the poſſeſſing the gates of their enemies, and deliverance from the hands of all that hated them, but (as by the conſequents, eſpecially by the ſtory of the Maccabees, 'tis manifeſt) this Church or nation of the Jews fell under heavy perſecutions and oppreſſions, and was waſted and brought low by theſe means, and at laſt was delivered up to be finally deſtroyed by their enemies, their City, their Temple, and their whole ſervice and way of worſhip. Whereas the Chriſtian faith and profeſſion and Church was to endure and hold out, and both flouriſh the more for perſecutions, and finally get victory over all, and never be deſtroyed by the enemies thereof: which was the meaning of Chriſt's prediction, that the gates of "Αδης, that is, the power of deſtroyers, ſhould not prevail againſt it; which being all one in effect with the promiſe to Abraham, that his ſeed (ſpiritual ſeed, the Chriſtian Church) ſhould poſſeſs the gates of their enemies (for to poſſeſs the gates of their enemies is directly equivalent with the gates of their enemies not prevailing againſt them) it follows moſt properly here, that they without us ſhall not be perfected, that is, that they ſhould not have the promiſe to Abraham made good to them in the utmoſt extent, but that they were to want the higheſt part of the completion of the literal ſenſe of that promiſe, till it were accompliſh'd in the Chriſtian Church, which ſhould in this have the preeminence, a very conſiderable advantage above the Jews, that however it were perſecuted it ſhould never be deſtroyed. And this notion and interpretation of this place, as it agrees very well with the purport of the whole Epiſtle (deſigned on purpoſe to fortifie the Chriſtian Hebrews againſt the dread of perſecutions, upon this one ground, becauſe Chriſt was able and willing to deliver them, c. 4. 15. yea and would now ſpeedily come unto their reſcue, c. 10. 37. and though ſome reſiſted to blood, died in the cauſe, yet a ſignal deliverance they ſhould ſpeedily have by the deſtruction of their enemies the Jews, and in fine the Chriſtian Church ſhould not fail, but flouriſh the more for perſecutions) ſo it ſeems to be taken notice of by Procopius on Iſaiah (p. 683.) who interprets the place, περὶ τῶν παρ' Ἰουδαίοις θεοφιλῶν τὴν παρουσίαν χριστοῦ προμηνύόντων, of the pious Jews that expected the coming of Chriſt; and again, p. 701. when he ſpeaks of Chriſt's coming, he ſaith of it, καθ' ὃν τοῖς πιστεύσασι τὰς ὑπ' ἐλπίσι ἐπαγγελίας ἀπέδωκεν, by which God gave believers thoſe promiſes which they hoped for ſo long. As for the word τελειωθῶσι be perfected, that ſignifies to receive a reward or crown, to have the full of their hope or expectation beſtowed upon them: and accordingly Chriſt is ſaid to be τελειωτὴς τῆς πίστεως the perfecter of their faith, c. 12. 3. in giving them the full completion of the promiſes, the object of their faith, which was not done to the Jews (before Chriſt) χωρὶς ἡμῶν, without us, but had the full completion in the Chriſtian Church. According to which it is ſaid of theſe promiſes, that the fathers of old ſaw them, and ſaluted them, afar off, as thoſe that ſalute their friends at a diſtance, being not able to come near them, μὴ λαβόντες but received them not, ver. 13. that felicity being reſerved peculiarly to the Chriſtian Church, which was now to enter on theſe promiſes.

Paraphraſe. CHAP. XII.

a. 1. Wherefore we having ſuch a multitude of examples of faith and conſtancy in the antients, which may ſerve as ſo many encouragements and obligations to hearten and incite us to our courſe, let us lay aſide all worldly love and fear, that may hinder and encumber us in our way, and how fair pretences ſoever we may have to forſake Chriſt, yet let us not fall off from our conſtancy, but proceed chearfully, and perſevere in our Chriſtian race, whatſoever difficulties or afflictions we meet with, as they that hope not for any reward till they come to the end of their courſe, and there prove conquerors over all oppoſition.

1. WHerefore, ſeeing we alſo are compaſſed about with ſo great a cloud of witneſſes, let us [a] lay aſide every weight, and the ſin * that doth ſo eaſily beſet us, and let us run with † patience the * race that is † ſet before us.]

* that hath ſuch fair pretences † perſeverance ὑπομονῆς * exerciſe, game, † preſcribed, or propoſed to us, προκείμενον ἡμῖν

2. And for our encouragement let us look on our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, who in himſelf hath given an example of the enduring of the higheſt afflictions, and will be ſure to crown all thoſe that follow after him, hath led us as a captain in this march of faith, having in his eye that reward of his ſufferings, a numerous ſeed, Iſa. 53. a Church of pious livers, and an exaltation expected from God for himſelf, Phil. 2. 9. and in intuition of theſe, going before us couragiouſly through all aſſaults, and being now in the poſſeſſion of all power in heaven, hath undertaken to reward whatſoever we do or ſuffer for him.

2. Looking unto Jeſus * the author and finiſher of our faith, who for the joy that was ſet before him, endured the croſs, deſpiſing the ſhame, and is ſet down at the right hand of the throne of God.]

d. 4, 5. What ye have yet ſuffered in the combating with ſin, is but a kind of light skirmiſhing, you may well reſolve to prepare your ſelves for yet ſharper aſſaults. You have been exhorted and warned by Solomon, in the perſon of wiſdom ſpeaking to her ſons, Prov. 3. 11. neither to kick againſt God's puniſhments, without making that uſe of them for which they are ſent, (as they that are no way reformed by afflictions) nor to be diſcouraged and diſheartned by them.

4. Ye have not yet [d] reſiſted † unto blood, ſtriving againſt ſin.

6. For it is an effect in God of paternal love, that on his beloved children and ſervants he inflicts puniſhments for their farther amendment, and it is an argument of his approving and acknowleding them for his own, that he dealeth thus ſharply with them, permitting them to be perſecuted.

6. For whom the Lord loveth he chaſteneth, and ſcourgeth every ſon whom he receiveth.]

7. And therefore in that ye are afflicted or puniſhed, ye are to reckon your ſelves dealt with as children by their parents: for among men ye ſhall ſeldom ever hear of a child that hath not ſometimes been chaſtened by his parent.

7. If ye endure chaſtening, God dealeth with you as with ſons: for what ſon is he whom the father chaſteneth not?]

8. It were a ſadder condition on the other ſide, and an argument that though ye are in God's family, ye are not owned and acknowledged by him, (and ſo that ye have no title to, or expectation of the inheritance) if when all the faithful mention'd c. 11. did paſs through preſſures and perſecutions, ye ſhould now have immunity from them.

† have been made partakers μέτοχοι γεγόνασι

9. Furthermore, we have had fathers of our fleſh, which corrected us, and we gave them reverence: ſhall we not much rather be in ſubjection to the father of ſpirits, and live?]

9. Again, we know that when our carnal fathers, which begot us men, chaſtiſed us, we have not been incited thereby to love or reverence them leſs, to forſake or renounce them: and ſhall we for a little perſecution fall off from Chriſt our ſpiritual father, which makes Chriſtians and Saints of us, and if obey'd conſtantly, and adher'd to in ſpight of perſecution, will beſtow eternal life on us as a reward of our patience and perſeverance?

10. The carnal parents indeed chaſtiſed you when you were children and no longer, and that (as having abſolute dominion over their children) by the rules of their own judgment or will, which are oft corrupt; but all God's chaſtiſements are for your advantage, that you may be the higher advanced toward his purity or ſanctity: and ſo 'tis a mercy of his, and a kindneſs above that of parents, that he never gives over this ſpecial care of you, but continues this healthful diſcipline unto you.

† matter of joy, but ſorrow, χαρᾶς ἀλλὰ λύπης
* but at laſt it returns ὕστερον δὲ ἀποδίδωσι

11. Tis true indeed, that there is in all affliction that which is ungrateful to fleſh and blood, and ſo cannot be joyous to us at the preſent; but then in the end it gives us our payment for all our patience, viz. a bleſſed reward of bliſs and peace to all that have ſuffered any thing as Chriſtians. e.

12, 13. Wherefore encourage all the cowardly puſillanimous fearful perſons (ſee Note on v. 3. b. and c.) and by the conſiderations here offered to you, remove all things out of the way which may diſcourage the weak, and make them forſake their Chriſtian courſe, when they ſee it perſecuted; but on the other ſide, whomſoever you ſee thus weak, or in danger of being thus perverted or diſheartned through his own fears, cure him of his fears, and eſtabliſh and confirm him in his courſe of Chriſtianity.

14. Two great faults there be in the Gnoſticks, of which I would adviſe you, malice and uncleanneſs, all filthy pollutions of the fleſh; and be you careful ye be not ſeduced into either of theſe, but on the contrary ſtrive as much as is poſſible to maintain peace, and all kind of charity even with your perſecutors, and be ſure ye do not make uſe of Chriſtian liberty to licentiouſneſs, to the neglecting of that purity and ſanctity of life, without endeavour of, and growth in which, no man ſhall come to heaven;

*leſt there be any root of bitterneſs ſpringing up with poiſon, and thereby many be infected, ſee Act. 8. Note b.

15. Taking all care that ye walk like Chriſtians, that ye do not fall off from the Goſpel-ſtate (ſee Note on c. 13. d.) leſt the hereſie of the Gnoſticks begun in Simon Magus be found among you, (ſee Note on Act. 8. d.) and that poiſon prove infectious to others:

17. Which prophaneneſs of Eſau's in ſelling at ſo ſmall a rate the privileges of the first-born (to which the Prieſthood was annexed) was ſo provoking a ſin in God's ſight, that after when he would have gotten the bleſſing from Iſaac, and beſought him to reverſe his act, to do otherwiſe than he had done, to give him the bleſſing, that is, the promiſe of Canaan for his ſeed (when he had with error, but withal by the ordering of divine providence, given it to Jacob) and thereupon cried with an exceeding bitter cry, Gen. 27. 34. he was not able to prevail with him with all this importunity; which ſignifies how impoſſible it is for them who have been thus prophane as to forſake Chriſt, or that which is moſt ſacred, the publick aſſemblies of his ſervice, (reſembled by Eſau's ſelling his birth-right) for the removing a little preſſure, to get the reward of a Chriſtian, happineſs here, and heaven hereafter (reſembled by the bleſſing) though they would never ſo fain get it, and expreſs vehement ſorrow, that they cannot.

18. For ye are not come unto the mount that might be touched and burned with fire, nor unto blackneſs, and darkneſs, and tempeſt,]

18. This is enough to inforce the great admonition of this Epiſtle, of holding faſt the faith, and not falling off, for perſecutions, to Judaiſm and hereſie: for you Chriſtians have a more honourable calling than that of the Jews, that was only to the Law given from mount Sinai, a mountain on earth, only that ſet out with terrible repreſentations of fire, and thick clouds, and thunder, and lightning,

24. Yea unto Jeſus Chriſt, who, as a mediator between God and us, hath eſtabliſhed a ſecond covenant, and aſſured us that it is indeed the covenant of God, and conſequently that we may be confident that God will perform his part of it, and now requires of us, and gives us grace to perform ours; and to his blood, with which we muſt be ſprinkled, before we can be admitted into heaven, (as the Prieſt was to ſprinkle himſelf before he went into the Holy of holies) which is quite contrary to Abel's blood, as 'tis mentioned in Geneſis, that called for vengeance on Cain, this called for mercy even upon his crucifiers, if they would repent and reform, and doth powerfully draw down mercy on the penitent believers: or that hath much more efficacy in it to obtain God's acceptance than had the blood of Abel's ſacrifice, which was the firſt type of the blood of Chriſt, of which we read, and of which it is ſaid, that God had reſpect to it. l.

25. See that ye refuſe not him that ſpeaketh; for if they eſcaped not who refuſed him that * m ſpake on earth, much more † ſhall not we eſcape, if we turn away from him that ſpeaketh from heaven:]

And therefore be ſure ye deſpiſe not Chriſt, who is come to deliver God's will unto you: For if they were deſtroyed that contemned Moſes that delivered the Law from mount Sinai, then much ſeverer deſtruction is to be expected for them that deſpiſe the commandments of Chriſt, that delivers them immediately from heaven. m.

27. † And

27. For that is the notation of the phraſe which is rendred [Yet once] which ſignifies ſome final ruin, and that very remarkable, as here the total ſubverſion of the Jews, of all their law and policy, as of things that were made on purpoſe to be deſtroyed, deſigned by God only for a time, for that imperfect ſtate, as a forerunner and preparative to the Goſpel, which therefore is a ſtate of which there is no mention of the ſhaking it, nor conſequently of any other future ſtate that ſhall ſucceed it, which ſignifies that that is moſt certainly to indure for ever, till the end of the world.

28. We therefore that are vouchſafed our part in this immutable kingdom, or ſtate under Chriſt, a condition that no perſecutions, nor even the gates of hell, ſhall prevail againſt, but it ſhall be ſure finally to overcome and ſurvive all oppoſition, let us take care to hold faſt and not forſake the Goſpel, (ſee Note on ch. 13. d.) through which we may ſerve God ſo as he will now accept of, with reverence of ſo glorious a maſter, and with fear of his wrath, if we do provoke him by abuſing his mercies (ſee Phil. 2. c.)

29. For our God is a conſuming fire.]

Annotations on Chap. XII.

a. V. 1. Lay aſide every ——] This verſe is wholly Agoniſtical (as appears by the ἀγῶνα combat, or race mentioned in the cloſe of it) and muſt be explained in every part by proportion with the ἀγῶνες or games among the Græcians. Theſe Agones were ſacred and ſolemnly kept, and in them there was a kind of Aſſiſes or Court of Judicature. He that propoſed the combat (to which refers προκειμένῳ ἀγῶνι the propoſed race in the end of the verſe) that ſet the laws of the Agones, and adjudged the crown to the conquerour, was called βραβεὺς or κριτὴς the Judge; and to him Chriſt is here compared, who as he is like the ἀρχηγὸς, leader, that goes foremoſt, and ſhews us the way in our Chriſtian race, ſo he is τελειωτὴς v. 2. the rewarder and crowner of them that conquer. So again, he that proclaimed the laws of the combat was called κήρυξ, the præco, or cryer, 1 Cor. 9. 27. and they that were ſet at the goal to diſcern and pronounce who came firſt thither (and ſo was conqueror) were μάρτυρες witneſſes, and as they brought in evidence, ſo the crown was awarded by the Judge: and not only they, but all that ſtood about as ſpectators, to behold and commend the courage and conſtancy of the athletæ, were μάρτυρες witneſſes alſo. And of them there was always good ſtore, a great concourſe of people, from whence they were called πανηγύρεις frequentiæ, populous meetings, to behold the games, to ſee who were conquerors in them. To theſe laſt are here compared thoſe great examples of Faith and Patience, which had been mentioned in the former chapter, who being now at their journies end, their goal, their reſt, are ſuppoſed to look on the preſent Chriſtian racers, both to give evidence whether they run well or no, and with their commendations to hearken and encourage them in their combats, that they faint not or give over. And there being ſo many here mentioned in the former chapter, they are fitly called νέφος a cloud, as any great number or troop of men is Rhetorically called a cloud, and that very frequently among authors. And becauſe the ſpectators in thoſe games ſtood on either ſide of the race or ſtadium, or otherwiſe round about, at the other games of wraſtling, &c. or at a Theatre, it is therefore ſtyled περικείμενον νέφος, an encompaſſing cloud of witneſſes, or ſuch as is placed round about us, to look and teſtifie how men behave themſelves in their race. It is farther ſufficiently known, that they that were to perform any of thoſe exerciſes, uſed all care to fit and prepare themſelves for it by diet before, ſo as it might fit them to perform their courſe, and at the time, by having nothing on that might hinder or foreſlow them. To this purpoſe they did carefully rid themſelves of all weight, made themſelves as light as they could, and left their very garments might hang in their way, incumber them in their courſe, they generally put them off, and ran naked, γυμνοὶ καὶ ἀχίτωνες, ſaith * Porphyrie, naked and without their garments, from whence they were alſo called γυμνασιαὶ, referring to their naked running. To this way of preparing themſelves to the race the Author here refers; to that of weight diſtinctly, by ἀποθέμενοι ὄγκον πάντα, laying aſide, or putting off, all weight, meaning thereby moſt probably the love and care of the world, which is apt to preſs down the ſoul, and was a very conſiderable temptation in thoſe times of perſecution, where the love of the world was ſuch enmity with God, and made ſo many inclinable to the Gnoſticks, in hope of preſerving their worldly wealth. To the latter, the ſtripping themſelves, putting off their garments, our ordinary Tranſlation refers the latter words, ἀποθέμενοι τὴν εὐπερίστατον ἁμαρτίαν, laying aſide that ſin which doth ſo eaſily beſet us, taking the word εὐπερίστατος in an Active ſenſe, for intangling (as a light garment is wont to do) and ſo hindring their courſe, not by its weight or preſſing down, as the ὄγκος or weight before, but by ſome other way of encumbring or diſturbing, as light garments, which by the wind or motion of the air become troubles and hindrances to the racer. And anſwerable to that we might imagine the fears that come acroſs men in their Chriſtian courſe, and much hinder their ſpeed, and interrupt their conſtancy. And that cowardly homor, thoſe treacherous fears, that, like the light garment, intangle them at every ſtep, muſt be laid aſide, or elſe they will never run, δι' ὑπομονῆς, with indurance, or perſeverance, the race that is ſet before them. But of that word εὐπερίστατος it muſt be obſerved, that as it is an ἅπαξ λεγόμενον, only this once uſed in the whole Bible, ſo it will be matter of ſome difficulty to determine what is the exact importance of it. Firſt then, it is not reaſonable, or according to any analogy, to render it, as it is ordinarily rendred, in an Active ſenſe; περίστατος of which it is compounded, and ἀπερίστατος which is the contrary to it, being certainly Paſſives; and ſo Saint Chryſoſtom here inclines moſt to a Paſſive ſignification. Secondly, then ſuppoſing it a Paſſive, one notion of the word preſently offers it ſelf (from the Apoſtles uſe of περίστασιν 2 Tim. 2. 16. and Tit. 3. 12. to decline or avoid) that which may eaſily be declined. So Joſephus, ſpeaking of the Eſſeni, τὸ δ' ὀμνύειν αὐτοῖς περίστατον, ſwearing is avoided by them: and Lucian, ἵνα μὴ ἐκφεύξωμαι καὶ περιστήσωμαι ὥσπερ τοὺς λυττῶντας τοὺς κυνῶν, I will avoid and decline them as I would mad dogs. But this cannot here be thought the Apoſtle's ſcope, to diminiſh the force of this ſin here, as a thing eaſily to be avoided by our care, but rather to note it as very noxious, and apt to ſeduce and miſchief, if it be not carefully warded. If therefore this notion of περίστασις be here taken, then certainly the meaning of the word muſt be, not that which may very eaſily be avoided, but is very fit to be declined or taken heed of, that which there is all reaſon to part with, and ſo ἀποτίθεσις to put off, as being ſo uſeleſs and ſo dangerous and hurtful in our courſe. But a third notion, I ſuppoſe, of this word may be thus fetch'd out. Περιστάσεις literally ſignifies circumſtances, as when we read in Rhetoricians ψιλαὶ ἀπερίστατοι, a bare naked poſition: ſo in Georgius Alexandrinus in the * life of Chryſoſtom, a poor, helpleſs, diſtreſſed woman is called ξένη καὶ ἀπερίστατος: and ζήτημα ἀπερίστατον, a queſtion generally propoſed, without the circumſtances of time, place, perſon, intention, occaſion: ſee Hermogenes l. 3. περὶ ἐπιχειρημ. According to this it is that Heſychius explains ἀπερίστατον by μωρὸν, ἀφορμὰς μὴ ἔχον, which I ſuppoſe is thus to be rendred, Stolidum, nullus habens hypotheſes, nulla argumenta, fooliſh, and that which hath no reaſons, arguments, or conſequently pretences for it. And if this be the notion of the Privative, then εὐπερίστατος will be that which hath ſuch fair arguments and pretences for for it, the ſin which is ſet forth with ſuch goodly circumſtances to ingratiate and recommend it to us; as when he that denies Chriſt, doth it (as the Gnoſticks ſaid of themſelves) only with the mouth, not with the heart, and again with an innocent intention, and only to avoid perſecution and utter undoing in the world. Agreeable hereunto it is, that S. Chryſoſtom uſeth πειρασεις, applied to ſin, to denote temptations, Tom. 3. p. 555. l. 20. Διὸ καὶ ἐπᾴδει λέγων, ὅπου πανὸς ἁμαρτήματος διαβολικῆς καὶ πάσης πειρασέως τῆς ἀνθικειμένης τοῦ πειρασμὸς ὅλων καὶ τὰς ἁμαρτίας· where as he explains all diabolical ſin by ἁμαρτίας ſins, ſo he evidently interprets πειρασεις by πειρασμὸς temptations. And of theſe πειρασεις in this notion he there underſtands the phraſe εὐπερίσατος ἁμαρτία, for ſo he adds in that place, l. 21. Εὐπερίσατον γὰρ ἡ ἁμαρτία, πάντοθεν ἰσαμένη, ἔμπροσθεν, ὄπισθεν, καὶ ἅπαξ ἡμᾶς καταβάλλουσα, for ſin is provided with temptations, being encompaſſed (where we ſee the Paſſive uſe of the word) on all ſides, before, and behind, and ſo ſhoots at us, or ſtrikes us. So Tom. 4. p. 698. l. 30. Σατανικὴ πείρασις, temptation of Satan. So Heſychius Presb. Centur. 2. 85. Εἰ δὲ ἐκ πειρασέως τινος χαυνωθείημεν, but if by any temptation we become more remiſs. Thus Diogenes Laertius in the life of Zeno, that it is the part of a wiſe man γλίσχρως ἀνθρωπίνων σαρκῶν καὶ πείσασιν, to eat man's fleſh in caſe of extremity, or when he is by ſuch forcing motives invited to it. And this ſenſe as it agrees beſt with the critical importance of the word, ſo it accords exactly with the Context and ſcope of the Author; who here exhorts to venture all the hazards, perſecutions, death it ſelf, rather than, upon any pretence, to forſake the Aſſemblies, to deny Chriſt, c. 10, 11. and here in this chapter he ſets Chriſt's example before them, a pattern of conſtancy and perſeverance even to death. And ſo this is the moſt probable notion of the word that I can think of.

b. Κάμνειν

V. 3. Wearied] Κάμνειν is alſo an Agoniſtical word, literally ſignifying to be tired, belonging to them that are worſted in any of thoſe exerciſes (Νικώντων γὰρ οὐκ ἔστι κάμνειν, ſaith Plutarch, it cannot be affirmed of the victors) to go out of the field like a wounded, or wearied, or worſted perſon. So when Coriolanus being wounded was admoniſhed by his friends to retire, and cure his wounds, he anſwered, οὐ δεῖ νικῶντα κάμνειν, A conquerour ought not to retire, or ſubduce himſelf out of the field. And thus generally it ſignifies to give over fighting, ἀπείπειν and ἀπαγορεύειν in Phavorinus, to give over, to deſpair, and again ὀκνῆσαι to play the coward, or run-away.

c. Ψυχαῖς ἐκλυόμενοι

Ib. Faint in your minds] Ψυχαῖς ἐκλυόμενοι, and ἐκλυόμενοι ſimply, v. 4. ſignifies in the ſame ſenſe that κάμνειν, to turn coward or puſillanimous, ſuch as whoſe ſouls within them fall away like water, diſſolve, and 'tis ſpoken of thoſe who give over the attempt as hopeleſs, flie diſheartned, creſt-fallen, out of the field (ἀναπίπτοντες and ἀθυμοῦντες in Thucydides) expreſſed again, v. 12. by παρειμένας χεῖρας the hands that hang down, which note the prælii detractatio, giving over the buſineſs, yielding, flying out of the field, confeſſing themſelves conquered. So Ecclus. 2. 12. after the woe againſt them that truſt not in the Lord, δειλαὶ καρδίαι cowardly hearts, and χεῖρες παρειμέναι the hands hanging down, are put together, for which the Greek of Jer. 35. 3. read ἀνειμένας χεῖρας extended hands, as in * Plutarch ἀνατείνειν χεῖρας to hold up, and in Cicero, manus tollere, in Virgil, tendere palmas, to hold up, or ſtretch out the hands; the holding out and hanging down of the hands being both equally contrary to the uſing them, or holding them up, (the exerere lacertos ſtretching the arms in a manlike manner againſt all oppoſers) and both ſigns of a conquered perſon, that yields himſelf ſo, which the Greek expreſs by ἀπαυδᾶν.

V. 4. Reſiſted unto blood] Of the umbratilis pugna, or σκιαμαχία, beating the air, or πυγμὴ, we have formerly ſpoken, on 1 Cor. 9. 26. the firſt lighter skirmiſhes before the ſtata pugna, or ſet combat, the beginning of the bloody fight. To this the Apoſtle here refers when he ſaith, ye have not yet reſiſted, μέχρις αἵματος, as far as blood, that is, as far as the old athletæ were wont, who after the πυγμὴ, or brandiſhing of their arms or weapons, at laſt fell to down-right blows with their cæſtus in their hands, which ordinarily brought the blood with them. This the Apoſtle applies to their ſpiritual agones (τὰ τῆς ψυχῆς Ὀλύμπια ἀγωνισμάτων the Olympicks of the ſoul in Porphyry's ſtyle, and here, πρὸς τὴν ἁμαρτίαν ἀνταγωνιζόμενοι, combating againſt ſin) that they had no reaſon to be diſheartned with Chriſt's permitting them to be afflicted and perſecuted, as they were, for there are far greater and bloodier combates againſt ſin, ſuch as bring blood and death, and againſt thoſe they muſt be provided, in compariſon of which theirs yet are but σκιαμαχίαι or skirmiſhes.

V. 11. Peaceable fruit] Agreeably to the former Agoniſtical expreſſions in the beginning of the chapter, is here added γεγυμνασμένοις, exerciſed in theſe gymnaſia of afflictions, and the receiving of their βραβεῖον or reward, ſtyled here καρπὸς δικαιοσύνης the fruit of righteouſneſs, that fruit which belongs to all righteous men now under the Goſpel (or elſe according to a ſingular notion of δικαιοσύνη righteouſneſs for felicity, mention'd in the Note on 2 Tim. 4. 8.) and emphatically ἐπουρανίος καρπὸς, referring, as the learned P. Faber hath conceived, to the corona oleagina, the olive crown, (that tree being an emblem and ſymbolum of peace) of which the Olympian crowns for their victors were ordinarily made. f. βέβηλος ὡς Ἠσαῦ

V. 16. Prophane perſon as Eſau] Why Eſau, in ſelling his birth-right, is here called prophane, will appear by that known obſervation among the Jews, that as long as God was ſerved within private walls, before the erecting of the Tabernacle and Temple, and inſtitution of Prieſthood, the right of Prieſthoood in every family was annexed to the primogeniture, the firſtborn was ſtill the Prieſt. Thus Exod. 24. 5. when 'tis ſaid that Moſes ſent the young men of the children of Iſrael to offer burnt-offerings and peace-offerings, unto the Lord, the Chaldee paraphraſe renders them בוכרי the firſt-born, and Uzielides adds this Scholion, becauſe as yet the Aaronical Prieſts were not inſtituted. This, ſay the Jews (and 'tis reaſonable to believe them) was it that made Jacob ſo ambitious of the πρωτοτόκια or privileges of the primogeniture: and if Baal Haturim, on Gen. 28. out of Bereſith Rabba, may be heeded, this was it which Jacob deſired to have confirmed to him by God in thoſe words, Gen. 28. 20. If God will be with me. And therefore for Eſau to ſell this ſacred privilege for one meſs of pottage, to undervalue this prerogative of offering to God ſo vilely, out of a little preſent impatience, (and proportionably for the Hebrew Chriſtians, for a poor ſecular end, viz. to rid themſelves of a little perſecution or affliction for the Goſpel, to quit the publick ſervice of God, as it appears ſome did at this time, c. 10. nay to forſake Chriſtianity it ſelf, to apoſtatize utterly (to which that was but a præludium) and ſo to part with that privilege of Prieſts which belongs to all Chriſtians, ſo far as the prerogative of offering up prayers to God) this will eaſily be acknowledged an act of great prophaneneſs. To which may be accommodated that which the Jeruſalem Targum, Gen. 25. 34. ſaith of Eſau, he contemn'd his primogeniture, and ſet at nought his part in the world to come, and denied the reſurrection of the dead, viz. becauſe in contemning his privileges of Primogeniture, and in that of the Prieſthood, he is interpreted to have done all this.

g. πανήγυρις

V. 23. General aſſembly] The word πανήγυρις ſignifies properly θέατρον, συνάθροισις, a theatre, a multitude of people come together, as in the Grecian games to behold their agones and their ſacra. Hence doth it ſignifie alſo any frequentia populi, but eſpecially a promiſcuous mix'd multitude from all parts, and, in a ſacred ſenſe, an aſſembly of worſhippers of all ſorts and countries; which is a particular notation of the Chriſtian Church, the net which gathers up good and bad (that is, Jews, which were called the only people of God before, and Gentiles, which were proverbially called ἁμαρτωλοὶ ſinners) is made up of a company of all nations, nay takes in the Angels themſelves named immediately before, and who are ſaid to ſing, and join with us in our publick aſſemblies.

h. ἐκκλησία πρωτοτόκων

Ib. Firſt-born] The Firſt-born had not only the privilege of the Prieſthood before the Law, but always ſince, the פי שנים the double portion, διπλῆ τιμὴ, the portion not only of poſſeſſions, but of dignity and honour above the reſt of the brethren. And proportionably the Apoſtles, which were either ſimply the firſt converted to the faith of Chriſt, or elſe preferred before others, as Judah to the Primogeniture of dignity, and Levi in reſpect of the Prieſthood, are call'd here the firſt-born, and the Church firſt founded in them, and planted by them, is here called ἐκκλησία πρωτοτόκων, the Church of the firſt-born, the Apoſtolical Church.

i. Ἀποτετεγμένοι ἐν οὐρανοῖς

Ib. Written in heaven] Ἀποτέγφω ſignifies to be enrolled (ſee Note on Luk. 2. i.) and this belonged either to all the congregation of Iſrael, Num. 1. 18. or in a ſpecial manner to the firſt-born of every family, who had that dignity before others, and in time came (as families grew into tribes) to be princes of the tribes of their fathers, Num. 1. 16. or to ſome choice renowned men, who were to be captains, or heads, of thouſands in Iſrael, or finally to all ſouldiers liſted or enrolled. And to this manner of enrolling doth this phraſe ἀποτετεγμένοι ἐν οὐρανοῖς, written, or enrolled, in heaven, refer, to denote thoſe that are regiſtred by God, matriculated in heaven, that is, beſide the Apoſtles, all other holy men, renowned in the book of God: and ſo this phraſe is fit to be joined to the πρωτότοκοι foregoing in the forementioned notion.

k. Τετελειωμένοι

Ib. Made perfect] Τετελειωμένοι are thoſe that have received their crown, their reward, in the Agoniſtical notion ſo often mentioned, that is, that have attained the end of their race, are triumphant in heaven. And the uſe of this very phraſe among the Jews is ordinary, קדושים נכלים ἅγιοι τετελειωμένοι, thoſe that are advanced to be, as they are wont to ſay, under the throne of glory.

l. דם ה׳ אבל

V. 24. That of Abel] The meaning of this paſſage דם ה׳ אבל, or, as Theophylact and others read, דם ה׳ אבל, is not eaſily reſolved on. If it be ה׳, it may then agree with Abel as the Accuſative caſe, and then it muſt be rendred then Abel, meaning then Abel ſpake; or elſe referring the ה׳ to ῥαντισμὸν going before, and reading Ἄβελ in the Genitive caſe, it will then be rendred, then that (ſprinkling) of Abel, noting the ſprinkling of blood which in that ſacrificing of his firſtlings, Gen. 4. 4. he is ſuppoſable to have uſed. If it be τὸ, then as it is certain it muſt refer to αἷμα blood precedent, and ſo denote the blood of Abel, ſo it is uncertain what blood is meant, whether the blood of Abel ſhed by Cain, or the blood of Abel's firſtlings in his ſacrifice. So that all theſe four poſſible notions of the words are in effect but two: the firſt and the third referring to that of Abel and his own blood ſhed by Cain; and the ſecond and fourth to the blood of the cattel in his ſacrifice. And which of theſe is now to be preferred is the only difficulty. That the firſt ſhould be it, the authority of the Greek Commentators and others would incline, and the manner of the Scripture-ſtyle in many places (uſing words and phraſes, which muſt be ſuppoſed to ſignifie much more than their natural importance affords; ſee Note on Mat. 12. e.) may help to perſuade it. For thus it may then be explicated very commodiouſly; That whereas the blood of Abel, the firſt that ever ſuffered, called for nothing but vengeance on the murtherer, the blood of Chriſt, quite contrariwiſe, called for mercy on his very crucifiers, and on all the world of men beſides, and ſo ſpake as good things as Abel's did ill, cryed as loud for pardon as his is ſaid to do for vengeance. But if we conſider the deſign of the whole Context, which is the comparing the ſtate and œconomy under the Law and before Chriſt with that now after or ſince his coming, and the preferring the latter infinitely beyond the former, we ſhall then have great reaſon to incline us to accept the ſecond ſenſe, that the ſprinkling of the blood of Chriſt, that ſacrifice of his upon the Croſs, had infinitely more efficacy in it (and that devolved to us) to obtain God's acceptance, than that ſacrifice of Abel's, the firſt great type of that ſhedding the blood of Chriſt, this lamb of God, is affirmed in the Scripture to have had. That this ſacrifice of beaſts offerred by Abel ſhould here be mentioned with Chriſt's ſacrifice of his own body on the Croſs, the reaſon is evident, becauſe all the ſacrifices of beaſts, not only under the Law, but before it, among the Patriarchs, before and after the Deluge, were all types of Chriſt's one perfect ſacrifice. And Abel's being the firſt of theſe recorded in Scripture, and atteſted to have had much of God's acceptation, particularly more than Cain's (ſee Heb. 11. 4.) is therefore the fitteſt to be inſiſted on in this place. And that Chriſt's blood is ſaid to ſpeak better things than that, and ſo than any other blood in ſacrifice, is agreeable to Heb. 9. 13, 14. For if the blood of Bulls —— how much more the blood of Chriſt, and ver. 22, 23. And almoſt all things are purged by blood —— It was neceſſary therefore that the heavenly things themſelves ſhould be purged by better ſacrifices than theſe. And accordingly in the antient Liturgies, and in the Canon of the Maſs now in uſe, when the Bread and Wine is conſecrated into the Sacrament of the body and blood of Chriſt, the prayer makes mention of Abel's ſacrifice, and Melchiſedek's offering, chuſing out thoſe two as the moſt antient and eminent types (under the Old Teſtament) of this ſacrifice of the blood of Chriſt commemorated in that Sacrament. This (and much more, which, if it were needful, might be added to this purpoſe) will make it reaſonable to have annex'd this latter ſenſe to the former more ordinary, if not to prefer it before it.

m. Χρηματίζειν

V. 25. Spake] χρηματίζειν is a word of a ſpecial ſignification, noting Divine Revelation, either by בת קול the voice from heaven, or any other way. So Mat. 2. 12, 22. revelation of God's will by dream, and Luk. 2. 26. by that or ſome other ſuch way, and Act. 10. 22. a revelation by an Angel. So of Moſes Heb. 8. 5. and here of Noe, ch. 11. 7. and Rom. 11. 4. ὁ χρηματισμὸς that voice from heaven to Elias, 1 Kin. 19. 12. Hence ſaith Phavorinus, χρηματισμὸς, ὁπτασία, it ſignifies a viſion, νομοθεσία, the giving of the law; and again, χρηματισμὸς δίδωμι, ἤγουν θείας λόγους oracles or divine ſpeeches, agreeable to the known notion of χρηστήριον, for μαντεῖον τῦ Θεῦ, an oracle of God. According to which notion of the word it is here to be rendred, not ſpeaking ſimply, but ſpeaking from God, delivering oracles, warnings, or precepts from him.

Paraphraſe. CHAP. XIII.

1, 2. And for particular directions of Chriſtian life, I ſhall commend theſe unto you at this time, in reſpect of your preſent ſtate.

1. LET brotherly love continue.
2. Be not forgetful to entertain ſtrangers, for thereby ſome have entertained Angels unawares.]

Be kind unto all Chriſtians, not only thoſe of your own nation, Jews, but to any of all countries, ſtrangers ſo called or aliens: let not the Chriſtian vertue of hoſpitality to ſtrangers be ſtrange to you, for by the practice of that Abraham and Lot, Gen. 18, and 19. received Angels into their houſes unawares.

3. Have that compaſſion to priſoners, that ſenſe of their ſufferings, as you would have if you were in the ſame condition with them; relieve and reſcue thoſe that are under any affliction, as men that know and conſider your ſelves to be in the ſame frail humane eſtate, ſubject to all that befalls any man.

3. Remember them that are in bonds, as bound with them; and them which * ſuffer adverſity, as being your ſelves alſo in the body.]

* are evil intreated κακουχουμένων

4. And whereas the Gnoſticks pronounce marriage unlawful, but indulge to all unnatural luſts, do ye look on marriage not only as lawful, but as honourable, inſtituted by God: only take care that you make uſe of it as a fortification againſt all unlawful luſts. For fornication of what ſort ſoever, which the diſlike of marriage brings many to, and adultery, which is the violation of marriage, are ſins that will be ſeverely puniſhed by God.

4. † Marriage is honourable in all, and the bed * undefiled: but † whoremongers and adulterers God will judge.]

† Let marriage be honourable among all, τίμιος ὁ γάμος ἐν πᾶσι, * be undefiled ἀμίαντος † fornicators πόρνους

5. Let

* diſpoſition, temper of mind, manners, be free from the love of money, ἀφιλάργυρος ὁ τρόπος

5. Let your * converſation be without covetouſneſs; and be content with † ſuch things as ye have: for he hath ſaid, I will never leave thee nor forſake thee.] † the things that are preſent τοῖς παροῦσι

5. And in ſuch times, eſpecially as theſe of perſecution, there is no temper ſo fit for you to be furniſhed againſt, as that of covetouſneſs: whatever God at preſent allows you, be ye fully ſatisfied with that. For what God ſaid to Joſhuah of the Jews, he ſaith to all true Chriſtians, of whom thoſe were the type, that he will by no means utterly deſtitute them, and ſo they have no need of that fear which is wont to betray men to covetouſneſs.

6. So that we may boldly ſay, The Lord is my helper, and I will not fear what man ſhall do unto me.]

6. So that we Chriſtians, particularly you Hebrew Chriſtians, that ſuffer ſo much for the profeſſion of the faith, may from the word of God take courage, and ſay, I will truſt God with my ſecurity, and live fearleſs of all danger, knowing that as long as he ſees it beſt for me, he will deliver me from worldly dangers, and that when he permits them to come, the utmoſt ſhall do me no hurt.

* Be mindful of your Governors μνημονεύετε τῶν ἡγουμ.

7. * Remember them [b] which have the rule over you, who have ſpoken unto you the word of God: whoſe faith follow, conſidering the end of their converſation.]

7. Set before your eyes the Biſhops and Governours that have been in your Church, and preached the Goſpel to you, obſerve their manner of living, their perſeverance till death, and then make their faith, their perſeverance and conſtancy in the doctrine of the Goſpel, the example for you to imitate and tranſcribe. b.

8. Jeſus Chriſt the ſame yeſterday, and to day, and for ever.]

8. The ſame faith that then was the true faith in which they perſevered to the death, will be ſo now unto you and to all ages; you have no reaſon to think that 'tis ſo ſuddenly changed, that Judaiſm which they took to be aboliſhed, ſhould now be in force again among you, as your Gnoſtick teachers are willing to perſuade you.

† various ποικίλαις * which walked περιπατήσαντες

9. Be not carried about with † divers and ſtrange doctrines: for it is a good thing that the heart be [c] eſtabliſhed with [d] grace, not with meats, which have not profited them * that have been occupied therein.]

9. This change and bringing in of new doctrines of Judaiſm into the Church is a piece of dangerous inconſtancy: 'Twere ſure more for the turn to be grounded in the truth, to take that which is beſt for your turn, and then never to remove or be carried about from that to any other. And that that is the Goſpel, and not the Moſaical Law about ſacrifices and meats, &c. that this is much better for the ſoul than tother, will ſoon appear unto you if you conſider how empty and unprofitable thoſe obſervances of the law always were, (conſidered in themſelves) even when they were in force; for even then they that dealt in them were really little profited by them, (ſee ch. 10. 1, 2, 3. where the ſacrifices are ſaid only to be a commemoration of ſin, unable to expiate, and ſo leaving in eſtate of damnation, unleſs they advance farther to Chriſt, ſignified by thoſe ſacrifices.) c. d.

10. We have an altar, whereof they have no right to eat which ſerve the tabernacle.]

10. And if any man think his Judaizing will do him no hurt in reſpect of Chriſtianity, that thoſe that ſtand for the Moſaical performances may yet have their portion in Chriſt, let him know he is miſtaken. For Chriſt, the only Chriſtian altar to which we bring all our ſacrifices, and who is ſo beneficial to us, will not be beneficial to them that depend on the Moſaical Law, they that do ſo have no right to partake of Chriſt (Gal. 5. 2. If you be circumciſed, Chriſt ſhall profit you nothing.)

† for a ſin-offering περὶ ἁμαρτίας

11. For the bodies of thoſe beaſts whoſe blood is brought into the ſanctuary by the high prieſt † for ſin, are burnt without the camp.]

11. And the truth of this you may diſcern by a ceremony among the Jews, to wit, in the ſacrifice of atonement or expiation, of which the prieſt never eat a bit, the blood he carried in with him into the holy place, and the body was burnt without the camp: Now by that ſacrifice the Meſſias was typified moſt lively, as is acknowledged by themſelves, ſo that they, even the Prieſts and principal perſons among them, being not allowed to eat of that ſacrifice, might hence collect this truth in hand, that they that eat or partake of Chriſt, ſhould reap no benefit by him as long as they pretended their law in force, and depended on theſe legal ceremonies for heaven.

12. Wherefore Jeſus alſo, that he might ſanctifie the people with his own blood, ſuffered without the gate.]

12. And that the burning that ſacrifice (all the body of it) without the camp, ſo that no part of it was uſeful to the Jews, people or prieſt, did typifie this truth, that Jews relying on their religion ſhould not receive benefit by Chriſt, may farther be illuſtrated by our Saviour's practice, who when he was to enter into the holy place, that is, heaven, to bleſs and ſanctifie us, and to that end to ſhed his own blood, to carry it as it were in with him, as the prieſt did the blood of goats and bullocks into the holy place, (to ſignifie that there is no means of expiation to be had but by his blood) he ſuffered without the gate, ſo fulfilling the type, and confirming this truth typified by it, that it was not by thoſe legal ſacrifices, but by Chriſt's offering himſelf, that any benefit is to be hoped for by us.

13. Let us go forth therefore unto him without the camp, bearing his reproach.]

13. Let us therefore leave the Judaical ſervice, the Moſaical Law, though many afflictions threaten us for ſo doing, let us relie wholly on Chriſt upon the croſs, (know nothing but Jeſus Chriſt and him crucified) and take all afflictions, in the way to that, chearfully, therein imitating Chriſt himſelf, who indured the croſs, deſpiſed the ſhame, &c.

14. For here have we no continuing city, but we ſeek one to come.]

14. For this that is to be had here, is no condition of reſt and tranquility; we, like Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob, that ſojourned in Canaan, are not to look upon our preſent being, as the preferment which is promiſed Chriſtians (which if it were, we might then expect it free from afflictions) but we have a future expectation of ſtability, whereon we depend.

[e] fruit of our lips, giving thanks to his name.]

15. By him therefore let us offer the ſacrifice of praiſe to God continually, that is, the

15. Let us therefore now our high prieſt is entred heaven, by him offer up to God our Chriſtian ſacrifice, our ſacrifice not of beaſts bodies, but that figured by them, our ſacrifice of praiſe; and that not like to that of the Jews, at ſome ſet ſeaſons only, but continually all the days of our lives; not the fruit of our herds, to be burnt upon his altar, but the offering of our charity, alms and mercy, our Chriſtian ſacrifice, v. 16. joined with our thankſgiving to God (and never omitted by the primitive Chriſtians in their Euchariſt) anſwerable to the free-will-offerings or vows, Hoſ. 14. 3. in acknowledgment of his power and goodneſs. e.

16. But * to do good and to communicate, forget not; for with ſuch ſacrifices God is well pleaſed.]

16. But be ſure not to omit any ſeaſon of charity or ſupply to any brothers wants that can at any time be offered to you; for this is of the ſame nature and obligation with the former. All ſuch are offerings to God, very acceptable to him, (whatſoever ye do to one of theſe little ones, ye do unto him) and required now of us under the Goſpel as our only Chriſtian ſacrifice.

17. Obey thoſe that are ſet to rule you in your ſeveral Churches, the Biſhops (ſee Note a.) whoſe whole care is ſpent among you, as being to give an account of your proficiency in the Goſpel. And by your ſubmiſſion to them do ye endeavour to make their task as eaſie and ſweet as you can, that they may have joy not ſorrow in the execution of it; for 'twill be ſmall benefit to you that they have no comfort in the diſcharge of their office toward you, and as long as they do it ſadly, cannot do it ſo effectually as otherwiſe they might.

Annotations on Chap. XIII.

a. Τίμιος ὁ γάμος

ἐν πᾶσι

V. 4. Marriage is honourable] The main difficulty here is, what Verb is here to be underſtood, and taken in, for the clearing the conſtruction. It may poſſibly be ἐστὶ, is, and then the only remaining difficulty will be, what ſhall be meant by ἐν πᾶσι, whether it be moſt fitly rendred in all, whether denoting all things, that is, all reſpects, or all men, that being of ſeveral ages or of ſeveral qualities, are yet capable of marriage, or whether, as Theophylact adds, in all times of perſecutions or of releaſe from perſecutions; or whether, according to the promiſcuous uſe of Prepoſitions in theſe writers, and particularly of ἐν, oft taken notice of in other places, it be to be rendred among all, that is, among all men, noting the general eſtimation and opinion of all men of all nations, whether Heathens, Jews, or Chriſtians, among all whom (ſave the Gnoſtick-hereticks, then newly ſprung up) marriage had been look'd upon with honour. This might eaſily be ſhewed out of the Jewiſh writers and cuſtoms. Marriage and procreation was the means of taking away their reproach, and ſo a note of peculiar honour among them. So likewiſe among the Heathens, the Lacedemonians law appointed a mulct firſt for the ἄγαμοι unmarried, then another for the ὀψίγαμοι thoſe that married late, as the third, and the ſevereſt, κακογαμίαν for marrying ill. See Ariſto's Commentaries in * Stobæus. And * Muſonius in his book, whether marriage be any hindrance to Philoſophers, hath diſcourſed it at large, ὅτι μέγα καὶ ἀξιοπόθητον ὁ γάμος, that marriage is a great and deſirable thing, as being the beginning of the conſtitution of families, cities, kingdoms, the only lawful means of continuing the world, and that therefore the Gods have taken ſpecial care of it, Juno, Cupid and Venus; and conſequently that it is unreaſonable to affirm μὴ προσήκειν ἀνθρώπῳ ταῦτα, that there is any ſort of men, philoſopher, or other, for whom this is not convenient. See Hierocles alſo, as he there is ſet down in * Stobæus, out of his tract on this ſubject. And plenty of the like obſervations we have among the antient Romans, who have injoyed great privileges by this of marriage and propagation; the jus trium liberorum, the privilege which they had that had gotten three children in lawful marriage, is famouſly ſpoken of among them. And accordingly to theſe premiſſes, this ſenſe will be very perfect truth, Marriage is honourable among all men, Jews, Heathens and Chriſtians alſo, among whom Chriſt hath left it in the ſame dignity in which he found it, having inſtituted nothing to the prejudice of lawful marriage, but, as Theophylact adds, looking upon it with honour, as that which ἐν σωφροσύνῃ τηρεῖ preſerves men and women in ſobriety and continence, or abſtinence from all unlawful pleaſures. All which being granted, and ſuppoſed to be moſt true, yet it ſeems moſt probable from the Context, that not ἐστὶ is, but ἔστω let be in the Imperative, is the Verb which is here underſtood. Let marriage be honourable among all, and let the bed, the marriage-bed, be undefiled, or ſimply the bed, whether in or out of marriage, ſo as to contain the monial as well as conjugal chaſtity, proportionable to the Fornication as well as Adultery after mentioned in the interdict. That it is thus, by way not of affirmation, but exhortation or precept, may appear by the verſes before, which from the beginning of the Chapter are all exhortatorie, and in the Imperative, but eſpecially v. 5. where the ſtyle is exactly the ſame as here, ἀφιλάργυρος ὁ τρόπος, diſpoſition, or converſation, without covetouſneſs, and yet the ſenſe muſt neceſſarily be thus made up (and ſo our Engliſh hath rendred it, let your converſation be without covetouſneſs, and ſo again ἀρκούμενοι be content with the things that are preſent. To this agrees what Georgius Alexandrinus ſaith in the life of Chryſoſtom, p. 188. l. 15. that he always bid them τίμιον τὸν γάμον καὶ τὴν κοίτην ἀσπίλους φυλάττειν, to keep marriage honourable——which being taken from this place evidently, is by him ſet by way of exhortation. And to this rendring therefore I do adhere, as an admonition ſeaſonably given, contrary to the * Gnoſticks infuſions among them.

b. ἡγούμενος

V. 7. Them which have the rule] The word ἡγούμενος is a common word to ſignifie all kind of authority or rule: ἡγούμενος λαοῦ, ruler of the people, Eccluſ. 9. 22. ἡγούμενος ἐκκλησίας, ruler of the congregation, chap. 13. 54. ἡγούμενος δυνάμεων, ruler of the armies, 1 Mac. 13. 8. ἡγούμενος Ἰουδαίων, ruler of the Jews, v. 42. ἡγούμενος ἔθνους, ruler of the nation, Eccluſ. 17. 13. ἡγούμενος πόλεως, ruler of the city, , c. 10. 2. ἡγούμενος ἀδελφῶν, ruler of the brethren, v. 24. and c. 49. 17. and frequently ἡγούμενος ruler, ſimply. So the Hebrew נשיא and משל and נגיד, which are ordinarily rendred ἄρχων governour, are often ἡγούμενος ruler. And what kind of government it is, muſt ſtill be judged by the circumſtances of the context in any place, and not from the nature or uſe of the word. In the New Teſtament it is aplied to Chriſt, as ruler or governour in Iſrael, Mat. 2. 6. and ſo alſo to the government of the Apoſtles in the Church, Luk. 22. 26. ὁ ἡγούμενος ὡς ὁ διακονῶν let him that ruleth, that is, who ſhall be conſtituted ruler in the Church, be as he that ſerveth; and there it is all one with ὁ μείζων ἐν ὑμῖν the greater, or greateſt, among you. So Joſeph is ἡγούμενος εἰς Αἴγυπτον, a ruler over Ægypt, Act. 15. 22. Judas and Silas that were ſent by the Council of Apoſtles and Elders at Jeruſalem, and choſen ἐξ αὐτῶν out of them, and ſo ſome of that number of the Biſhops of Judæa, that were in the Council, are called ἄνδρες ἡγούμενοι ἐν τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς, rulers among the brethren, which there appear to be Biſhops of Judæa, (ſee Note on Act. 15. e.) and accordingly do teach and exhort and confirm and impoſe hands, all which were the Biſhop's office in that place. And thus it is here uſed in this verſe, and again v. 17, and 24. περὶ ἐπισκόπων λέγει, he ſpeaketh of Biſhops, ſaith Chryſoſtom and others. And theſe the Biſhops of Jeruſalem, and the other cities of Palæſtine (τοῖς ἐν Παλαιστίνῃ καὶ ἐν Ἱεροσολυμοῖς, ſay the Scholiaſts in the Argument of the Epiſtle) to whom the Epiſtle was ſent. Of theſe there are theſe characters in this Chapter, all agreeing to this interpretation; Firſt, that they had ſpoken to them the Word of God, that is, preached the Goſpel to them in this verſe: Secondly, that they watch'd over their ſouls, and are to give an account of them; and conſequently the Hebrews muſt obey and be ſubject to them, ver. 17. all evidences of their charge and authority in the Church: Thirdly, all their rulers, and all the ſaints, are the two comprehenſive words which contain all the Hebrews, to whom this Epiſtle is written, the former noting the Biſhops, the latter all the faithful committed to their charge. And 'tis obſervable that the latter Jewiſh Writers, when they ſpeak of Chriſtian Biſhops, expreſs them by a word of great affinity with this here, retaining the Greek ἡγεμὼν in their language, with little or no change, הגמון or אגמון, either with or without the Aſpirate. So in Abrabaneel on Iſa. 34. fol. 54. col. 4. ſpeaking of the famous

ἄνδρες ἡγούμενοι

famous Burgenſis, from a Jew turned Chriſtian, and at laſt become a Biſhop, he ſaith, that he was formerly called Solomon the Levite, and afterward became שר וגדול בין הנוצרים a ruler and a great man among the Nazarites, or Chriſtians, אגמון בורגינשיש Egemon, that is, Epiſcopus, Burgenſis. See Elias Levita in Thisbi, and Buxtorf. Lex. Talmud. in the word אגמון.

βεβαιῶσ

V. 9. Eſtabliſhed] The Hebrews expreſs food by the ſtaff of bread, becauſe feeding is the ſuſtaining and upholding of the body, which would otherwiſe, as a cripple deprived of his crutch, as the ſick or weak man of his ſtaff, ſoon fall to the ground. Accordingly the Hebrew סער ſtabilivit, fulcivit, to eſtabliſh and ſuſtain, ſignifies alſo refecit, refreſhing, and doth ſo eſpecially when 'tis joined with לב heart (anſwerable to καρδία here) as Pſalm 104. bread to ſtrengthen man's heart, and Gen. 27. with corn and wine I have ſuſtained him. And in Chaldee and Syriack the ſame word ſignifies eating, taking meat. So 1 Kin. 13. 7. Come home with me, וסערה and feed, or eat, the Septuagint, καὶ ἀρίστησον and dine; and Luc. 22. 11. the Syriack hath למסער to eat, and among the Rabbins ordinarily סעודה convivium, a feaſt. And ſo here βεβαιῶσ to be eſtabliſhed (one ſenſe of that Hebrew סער) is ſet to ſignifie that other of feeding or eating, and with the addition of χάριτι, with grace, imports the Goſpel, the ſpiritual food of ſouls, to tend more to our ſpiritual advantages than ever the ſacrifices of the Jews did or could, which are here called βρώματα meats, becauſe of them part being ſacrificed to God, part going to the Prieſt, the reſt went for the furniſhing a feaſt for the ſacrificers and others whom they invited to them, and therewith they refreſhed and cheered themſelves before the Lord, Deut. 12. 18.

d. χάρις

Ib. Grace] That χάρις grace hath in many places of the New Teſtament, and particularly in this, a ſpecial peculiar notion to ſignifie the Goſpel, as that is oppoſed to the Law (upon this ground, becauſe the matter of the Goſpel is free undeſerved mercy; and beſides, the ſending Chriſt and the Holy Ghoſt and the Apoſtles to reveal this is an act of infinite charity in God alſo) will appear, not only by the oppoſition here to βρώματα meats, which as βρώσεις alſo ſignifie the Moſaical feaſts and ſacrifices, 1 Cor. 8. 8. Heb. 9. 10. Rom. 14. 17. Col. 2. 16. but more evidently by viewing theſe many other places in the New Teſtament, wherein the word χάρις ſignifies the Goſpel; John 1. 17. ἡ χάρις καὶ ἀλήθεια grace and truth, the Goſpel, (and ſubſtance of all the Moſaical ſhadows) is ſaid to have come by Jeſus Chriſt, in oppoſition to the Law by Moſes. So Act. 11. 23. ἰδὼν τὴν χάριν having ſeen the grace of God, that is, the Goſpel, ſo ſucceſfully preach'd among them, (ſee Note on Act. 18. d.) and accordingly c. 13. 43. they exhort them ἐπιμένειν τῇ χάριτι to continue in the grace, that is, the Goſpel of God that had been preached, the doctrine thus mercifully revealed from God by them. So Act. 14. 3. the Lord is ſaid to bear witneſs to the word of his grace, that is, by miracles to confirm the preaching of the Goſpel. So v. 26. and c. 15. 40. Paul and Barnabas were commended by the Apoſtles τῇ χάριτι τοῦ Θεοῦ to the grace, that is, the Goſpel, of God, to the preaching of it, expreſs'd after by εἰς τὸ ἔργον ὃ ἐπλήρωσε, the work which they performed. So c. 15. 11. διὰ τῆς χάριτος Ἰησοῦ, by the Goſpel, in oppoſition to the yoke of the Law laid by the Judaizers upon the Chriſtians. So πεπιστευκότες διὰ τῆς χάριτος, they that believed through the preaching of the Goſpel. So c. 20. 40. εὐαγγέλιον τῆς χάριτος the Goſpel of grace, and v. 32. λόγῳ τῆς χάριτος the word of his grace, that is, preaching of the Goſpel. So ἐλάβομεν χάριν we received grace, Rom. 1. 5. and then ἀποστολὴν Apoſtleſhip; firſt the mercy of receiving the Goſpel, then commiſſion to preach it. So Rom. 5. 2. εἰς τὴν χάριν ταύτην unto this grace, the Goſpel, in which we ſtand, &c. So c. 6. 14, and 15. we are not under the law, but ὑπὸ χάριν under grace, that is, under the Goſpel. So 2 Cor. 1. 12. ἐν χάριτι Θεοῦ by the grace of God, the Goſpel, ſet in oppoſition to the σοφία σαρκικὴ the fleſhly heathen wiſdom (becauſe this was no way to be attained but by God's revealing it:) ſo c. 6. 1. they are exhorted not to receive χάριν Θεοῦ the Goſpel again, εἰς κενὸν in vain. So Gal 2. 21. οὐκ ἀθετῶ τὴν χάριν τοῦ Θεοῦ, I do not evacuate the Goſpel, I do not let that great favour of God of revealing the Goſpel to me to be caſt away upon me, and c. 5. 4. of them that depended on the Law, τῆς χάριτος ἐξεπέσατε, ye have fallen from grace, that is, from the Goſpel. So Eph. 1. 6. the glory of his grace, and 2. 7. the abundant riches of it, that is, of the Goſpel revealed to the heathen. So Col. 1. 6. ἀφ' ἧς ἡμέρας ἠκούσατε καὶ ἐπέγνωτε τὴν χάριν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐν ἀληθείᾳ, from the day that ye heard and knew the grace of God in truth; where by the conjunction of ἀλήθεια truth with it (as before in John, grace and truth) and the hearing and knowing, 'tis clear there can be nothing meant by χάρις grace but the Goſpel. So 2 Theſſ. 2. 16. a good hope ἐν χάριτι in the Goſpel; and 2 Tim. 2. 1. ἐνδυναμοῦ be ſtrong ἐν τῇ χάριτι in the preaching of the Goſpel. So Tit. 2. 11. the grace of God hath appeared, teaching, &c. clearly the Goſpel and the doctrine thereof. So in this Epiſtle, c. 10. 29. the ſpirit of grace, the ſpirit of God that, in God's great kindneſs to us, was ſent to conſecrate the Apoſtles to their office of preaching the Goſpel. So c. 12. 15. ὑστερῶν ἀπὸ τῆς χάριτος τοῦ Θεοῦ, falling ſhort of the grace of God, noting apoſtaſie or defection from the Goſpel; and perhaps contrary to that v. 28. χάριν ἔχωμεν, let us hold faſt grace. So 1 Pet. 1. 10. περὶ τῆς εἰς ὑμᾶς χάριτος, the grace to you, or the Goſpel preached unto you, and v. 13. ὅτι τὴν φερομένην ὑμῖν χάριν the Goſpel brought to you, and c. 5. 12. teſtifying ταύτην εἶναι ἀληθῆ χάριν τοῦ Θεοῦ, that this is the very Goſpel of God. So Jude 4. transferring the grace of God to laſciviouſneſs, that is, making that uſe of the Goſpel to Libertiniſm.

χάριν ἔχωμεν

e. καρπὸς χειλέων

V. 15. Fruit of our lips] Some difficulty there is in the phraſe καρπὸς χειλέων fruit of lips. 'Tis ordinarily conjectured that the Greek tranſlation in Hoſea, ch. 14. 2. whence it is taken, read פרי fruit, in ſtead of פרים calves, which the Hebrew Copies retain, and inſtances of the like have been given Note on Heb. 8. a. But Mr. Pocock renders another account of it, viz. that καρπὸς is here taken in the notion of κάρπωμα, the word uſed by the Septuagint for an holocauſt, which being ordinarily of young bullocks, the Hebrew פרים vituli, calves, may fitly be rendred by it. The only difficulty is to reſolve what the reaſon is that holocauſts ſhould be called κάρπωμα· and his conjecture is good, becauſe theſe being above what was preſcribed by the Law, they bear proportion to fruit or banquet after meal, and accordingly they are called by the Rabbins קיץ למזבח ſummer fruit for the Altar, or a banquet over and above the preſcribed ſacrifice: for as it is the cuſtom after a feaſt to ſerve in fruit, ſo, ſaith Bartenorius, after they have offered the due oblations of every day, they bring the holocauſts for their free-will-offerings. See Maimon. ad Miſhnaioth, tr. Shekalim, c. 4. §. 4 But if this be not imbraced, why yet may it not be reſolved that the 72. retaining the ſenſe, thought fit (as often they do) lightly to change the words, and ſo to ſet fruit for calves? By this means 'tis become far more fit for our Apoſtle's turn, to ſignifie our Chriſtian ſacrifice or free-will-oblations, works of mercy, &c. which together with our praiſes of God we offer to him, proportionable to the offering to God thanksgiving, and paying vows, Pſ. 50. 14. which being promiſed by the lips and ſpoken with the mouth, Pſal. 67. 14. the payment of them is really καρπὸς χειλέων here, the fruit, and calves, of our lips. This fruit of the lips is here viſibly ſet down as all one with the θυσία αἰνέσεως, ſacrifice of praiſe. Thus the τοῦτʼ ἔστι, that is, enforceth. Now the ſacrifice of praiſe is literally זבח תודה θυσία αἰνέσεως, ſo called Pſal. 49. 15, 24. Pſal. 107. 22. Pſal. 116. 17. and that the σωτήριον ſalvation, ver. 13, that is, the peace-offering, or treſpaſs-offering, Lev. 7. where for האשם, the treſpaſs-offering, the Septuagint have θυσία σωτηρίου the ſacrifice of ſalvation, v. 1. θυσίαν αἰνέσεως, the ſacrifice of praiſe, v. 2. θυσίαν αἰνέσεως σωτηρίου, the ſacrifice of ſalvifick praiſe, v. 3. And this the Chriſtian

θυσία αἰνέσεως

ſtian offers in the Euchariſt, wherein, according to the Primitive practice, every man brings his liberal oblation, the bread and wine, and fruits of the ſeaſon, in * Juſtin Martyr's time, and afterward that which was proportionable thereto, never coming to God empty, or without remembring the Corban, ſaith * S. Cyprian. For this being offered to God, by the Biſhop or Prieſt with thankſgiving (from whence it was called the Euchariſt) thereby to acknowledge God the Author of all the good things we enjoy (primitias earum quæ ſunt ejus creaturarum offerentes, ſaith * Irenæus) is properly our ſacrifice of praiſe, a real ſacrifice, viz. the δῶρα gifts or oblations which there we bring, and that a ſacrifice of praiſe or thankſgiving, being farther ἀνάμνησις θυσίας a commemoration of Chriſt's ſacrifice, ſaith Chryſoſtom; and ſo literally καρπὸς χειλέων ὁμολογούντων here, the fruit, or free-will-oblation of praiſing lips, or of lips giving thanks, or confeſſing in the name of the Lord, that Lord of our ſalvation whom we there commemorate. And then to all this follows very naturally, in the next verſe, to do good and to communicate forget not: for with ſuch ſacrifices God is well pleaſed: that is, over and above this ſolemn Euchariſtical oblation, we muſt alſo be mindful of daily continual works of charity upon all occaſions, and wants of our poor brethren; this of charity and mercy being our acceptable Chriſtian ſacrifices required by God in exchange for thoſe daily ſacrifices of the Jews, that were conſumed with fire, went all into ſmoak, were not laid out to ſo much ſolid profit, (the relief of our poor brethren, God's known proxies upon earth) as theſe our Chriſtian ſacrifices are.

THE [a]GENERAL EPISTLE OF [b]JAMES.*

a. Καθολικὴ

b. * the Apoſtle, ſo moſt of the copies read, Αποσόλε

BY the word Καθολικὴ, Catholick, is here noted, that this Epiſtle was not written to any particular Church of one denomination, as S. Paul's Epiſtles were, but to all the Jewiſh converts whereſoever they were. That thoſe were diſperſed into ſeveral parts, and thence called the διασπορὰ, diſperſion, ſee Note on Joh. 7. d. The places where they eſpecially lived are mentioned 1 Pet. 1. 1. and Pontus being there firſt mentioned, S. Cyprian mentions that Epiſtle of his, as that which was called Epiſtola Petri ad Ponticos, The Epiſtle of Peter to thoſe of Pontus, Cyprian l. 3. de Teſtimon. 39. But that not to exclude the other parts of their diſperſion after mention'd. Such Epiſtles as theſe are thoſe which are antiently called ἐγκύκλιοι, which being delivered to the Church of ſome one city, were appointed by them to be tranſcribed, and ſent about to all the other Churches within ſuch a κύκλῳ, compaſs or circuit.

Who the writer of this Epiſtle was, is thus far agreed on amongſt moſt, that it was the Biſhop of Jeruſalem, though the Syriack conceive it to be the ſon of Zebedee: But he was cut off by Herod, Act. 12. 1. before this diſperſion of the Jewiſh Chriſtians was ſo conſiderable as it was at the writing of this Epiſtle. The main queſtion is, what James it was that was Biſhop there, whether James the ſon of Alpheus, one of the Twelve, or ſome other. That it was the ſon of Alphæus is thought to be favoured by the title of the Epiſtle, which in moſt Copies hath Ἰακώβε τῦ Ἀποσόλε of James the Apoſtle. But this ſure is a miſtake; for the Biſhop of Jeruſalem was James the Juſt, known by the title of the brother of the Lord, that is, the ſon of Cleophas (Chriſt's uncle) and ſo his couſin-german, which is ordinarily expreſſed by brother in the ſacred Dialect. So Clemens Hypotyp. l. 6. in Euſeb. l. 2. c. ά. Peter and James and John (the ſons of Zebedee) μὴ ὀπσιάζειν δόξης; ἀλλὰ Ἰακώβον τὸν Δίκαιον ἐπίσκοπον Ἱεροσολύμων ἐλέσθαι, did not contend for the dignity, but choſe James the Juſt Biſhop of Jeruſalem. And this, it ſeems, as next of kin to Chriſt; For of Simeon the ſecond Biſhop ſaith Hegeſippus in Euſebius, l. 4. c. κϚ'. Μετὰ τὸ μαρτυρῆσαι τὸν Ἰάκωβον τὸν Δίκαιον, πάλιν Συμεὼν ὁ τῦ Κλωπᾶ καθίσαται ἐπίσκοπος, ὃν προέθηντο πάντες ὅτι ἀνεψιὸν τῦ Κυρίε ἐδόκουν, After the Martyrdom of James the Juſt, Simeon again was conſtituted Biſhop of Jeruſalem, whom all preferred to that dignity, as being (after James the next, or) ſecond couſin of Chriſt. Now that this James the Lord's brother was not one of the Twelve, is clear by Euſebius, l. 1. c. ιά. Εἷς ὢν τῶν λεγομένων τῦ σωτῆρος μαθητῶν, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἀδελφὸς ὤν, This James was one of the reputed diſciples, yea and brethren of Chriſt. Where diſciples are clearly oppoſed by Euſebius to the Twelve. So in the Author of the Recognitions, this James is affirmed to be none of the Twelve. So in the Menologie of the Greek Church they celebrate three Jameſes, James the ſon of Alphæus, Octob. 9. James the brother of the Lord, Octob. 23. and James the ſon of Zebedee, Apr. 30. So ſaith Euſebius again, l. 2. c. κγ'. that he was called James the Juſt, ἐπεὶ πολλοὶ Ἰάκωβοι ἐκαλοῦντο, becauſe there were many of that name. See more of this Note on 1. Cor. 15. a. As for the title of Apoſtle which here is beſtowed upon him, that is no objection againſt what hath hitherto been ſaid. For S. Hierom in his Comment. on Iſaiah calls him the thirteenth Apoſtle; and upon the mention of him Euſebius adds, l. 1. c. ιά. εἰθ' ὡς ἔοικε τέτοις καὶ μίμησιν τῶν δώδεκα πλείσων ὅσων ὑπαρξάντων Ἀποσόλων, beſide the twelve there were many other Apoſtles in that age, after the ſimilitude, or by way of imitation, of the twelve. And Theodoret pronounces indifferently, τοὺς νῦν καλυμένους ἐπισκόπους, Ἀποσόλους ὠνόμαζον, thoſe that are now called Biſhops, they then called Apoſtles. So Thaddæus (not Lebbæus or Judas, one of the Twelve, but, ſaith Euſebius) one of the Seventy, who ten years after Chriſt was ſent by Thomas to the King of Edeſſa, is out of the Syriack records of that city called Ἀποσόλῳ Θαδδαίῳ, the Apoſtle Thaddæus. Lo Luke, or poſſibly Silas, S. Paul's fellow-traveller, is named among the Apoſtles of the Church, 2 Cor. 8. 23. and ſo by Epiphanius and Theophanes Luke is ſtyled Ἀπόσολος Apoſtle. So Mark S. Peter's follower, that firſt planted the Church in Alexandria and Pentapolis is by the Anonymus writer of his life in Photius, by Euſebius, l. 2. c. κδ'. by Epiphanius, Hær. 51. called Ἀπόσολος Apoſtle. So Timothy, converted by S. Paul, and after that made Biſhop of Epheſus, is by the Anonymus in * Photius ὁ Ἀπόσολος Τιμόθεος, the Apoſtle Timothy, and in Theodoret on 1 Tim. 3. 1. Ἀσιανῶν Ἀπόσολος ὁ Τιμόθεος, Timothy the Apoſtle of the Aſiaticks. And ſo Theophanes, τῷ Ἰουλίῳ μηνὶ γεγόνασιν ἐγκαίνια τῶν ἁγίων πανσέλων, Ἀνδρέα, Λυκᾶ, καὶ Τιμόθεε, τῶν ἁγίων Ἀποσόλων, In the month July were the dedication of the memorials of Andrew, Luke, and Timothy, the holy Apoſtles. So Titus is by Theodoret ſtyled Κρησὶν Ἀπόσολος Τίτος, Titus the Apoſtle of the Cretans. And ſo Epaphroditus, Phil. 2. 25. is Ἀπόσολος ὑμῶν your Apoſtle; for which Theodoret gives the reaſon, becauſe τῆς ἐπισκοπικῆς οἰκονομίας ἐπετέτραπτο, ἔχων ἐπισκοπὴν, πρεσβυσείαν, he was intruſted with the Epiſcopal government of them. So Clemens Romanus the Biſhop of Rome is by Clemens Alexandrinus l. 4. called ὁ Ἀπόσολος Κλήμης the Apoſtle Clemens, by S. Hierom in Iſa. 52. vir Apoſtolicus, an Apoſtolick perſon, by Ruffinus, De Adulterat. lib. Orig. pene Apoſtolus, almoſt an Apoſtle. So Ignatius, Biſhop of Antioch is by Chryſoſtom in his Encomium of him called Ἀπόσολος Apoſtle.

* Bibl. num. 254.

For the time when this Epiſtle was written, there is no certainty of defining, ſave that, as it muſt be after the Apoſtles preaching and converting the Jews in the other regions beſide Judæa, ſo it muſt be before the year 63. for then this James was put to death by Annas the younger, the High-prieſt. See Joſephus Antiq. l. 20. c. 8. The deſign of the Epiſtle is viſible, to fortifie the faithful againſt all temptations wherewith the Gnoſtick-hereticks could ſolicit them, and to ſecure their patience, and purity, and faith and charity, and all other Chriſtian practices in them, and to foretel them the no ſtead that their worldly wealth moſt ſolicitouſly preſerved will ſtand them in at the approaching calamity, which will involve incredulous Jews and Gnoſticks together, cap. 5. 1. hereby comforting the faithful, and encouraging them to perſevere till this coming of Chriſt for their reſcue from their perſecutors, v. 8.

CHAP.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. I.

1. James the Biſhop of Jeruſalem, employed by God and Chriſt in the ſervice of that Church, ſends greeting to the Jewiſh Chriſtians that are diſperſed among the nations out of Judæa in divers cities.

1. JAMES a ſervant of God, and of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, to the twelve tribes which are * ſcattered abroad, greeting.]

* in the diſperſion ἐν τῇ διασπορᾷ

2. Look upon it as the bleſſedeſt condition that can befall you, the joyfulleſt thing imaginable, that you meet with afflictions here in your Chriſtian courſe, and thoſe of many ſorts and kinds, a ſucceſſion of many of them.

2. My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall † into divers temptations,]

† among πειρασμοῖς, ſee Lu. 10. 30.

3. And this you will do, if you duly conſider the gainful effects of theſe afflictions: For as by them your faith is tried whether it be ſincere or no, ſo that trial exerciſes and gives you the habit of that excellent Chriſtian vertue, of patience, and courage, and conſtancy; and that being a ſuperiority of mind, and a victory over a man's ſelf, over his moſt hurtful and unruly paſſions, his fears, his ſorrow, his rage, his revenge, and over all the world beſides, over injuries, rapines, contumelies, death it ſelf, it muſt needs be a delightful joyous vertue.

3. Knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience.]

4. And then let this patience, by conſideration of the advantages of our ſuffering for Chriſt and pieties ſake, and by the delightfulneſs of theſe exerciſes of it, advance to this pitch of rejoicing in tribulations, of bleſſing and glorifying God for them, together with conſtancy and perſeverance therein, and the more and heavier the afflictions are, of rejoicing ſtill the more, v. 2. which is the giving patience the full ſcope, improving that vertue to the higheſt degree of perfection: and this will be infinitely for your advantage, the greateſt riches that ye can be capable of in this world.

4. * But let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and intire, wanting nothing.]

* And ἡ δὲ

5. To this indeed there is not only fortitude required, but wiſdom, and that of the higheſt nature. And if in ſuch times of preſſure as theſe, any man want this true heavenly ſpiritual wiſdom, this skill of managing himſelf at this time, of ſecuring his intereſt with Chriſt rather than with the world, of depending on Chriſt's care of him, without uſing other artifices of ſecuring himſelf, of bearing not only patiently but joyfully the utmoſt evils, let his recourſe be continually to God, whom he need not make ſcruple or be aſhamed to conſult upon every occaſion; for his liberality is not confined, like ours, nor is he wont to reproach thoſe whom he gives any thing to, and he will certainly ſhew him this truth, and furniſh him with this ſtrength of enduring chearfully, and give him, when time comes, the experimental knowledge of what I here ſay, how joyful a thing it is to be thus exerciſed, and to retain this ſuperiority of mind in all the afflictions that can befall us.

5. † If any of you lack wiſdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not, and it ſhall be given him.]

† But if, εἰ δὲ

a. 6. But let him come to God with firm adherence on him, a mind reſolved, whatſoever comes, to ſtick faſt to God, to uſe no means of delivering himſelf, but ſuch as are acceptable to him, never entertaining any doubt, whether God's ways or his own are to be adhered to for the obtaining of his ends, making no queſtion of God's power or will to anſwer his requeſts, and therefore praying and depending on him quietly for an iſſue out of all: Whereas the contrary doubting or wavering keeps men in a perpetual tempeſt and agitation of mind, always toſſed from one hold, one dependence to another, ſee Note on 1 Joh. 5. b.

6. But let him ask [a] in faith, nothing wavering; for he that wavereth is like a wave of the ſea driven with the wind and toſſed.]

7. And beſides it is the blaſting of our prayers, God being not wont to hear them that do not ſincerely and faithfully depend on him,

7. For let not that man think that he ſhall receive any thing of the Lord.]

8. A wavering, inconſtant Chriſtian, that together with the faith of Chriſt applies himſelf to unlawful courſes for his own ſafeguard, hath the infelicity of never knowing which way to turn himſelf, being always betwixt two, and diſquieted upon all occaſions: ſee Eccluſ. 2. 13, 14, 15, 16.

8. A double-minded man is unſtable in all his ways.]

b. 9, 10. But let the rich man that falls into a low condition through the afflictions to which this world is ſubject, be as well pleaſed and thank God as heartily for his being reduced to this low eſtate, as a poor man is wont to be when he is preferred and exalted, (ſee Note on Mat. 9. d.) Or thus, It is no unhappy ſtate for a man to have loſt all, to be brought low in the world, and ſo to have nothing left to loſe or ſecure. Nay this he may really look on as a dignity, or preferment, that he hath reaſon to be very glad of, and not to mourn for. And ſo likewiſe may the rich man look with joy upon the plundrings and violences that befall him; becauſe his riches is as fading and tranſitory a thing as the greenneſs of the graſs, not worth the valuing; and the care of keeping and perpetuating it unto him, will bring him a great deal of temptation and vexation, and little of joy or advantage.

c. 11. For as it is with the green graſs on the ground, as ſoon as ever the ſun riſeth and ſcorcheth it, it makes it wither, and all the florid part and beauty vaniſheth preſently, and there is no poſſible preſerving it at ſuch a time; ſo the rich man, when afflictions and devourers come upon him, doth in a ſmall time wither and fall away, his riches leave him, or he them, if God ſee fit to ſend or permit afflictions, he will not by all his dexterities, by any means, (but prayer, and fidelity, and conſtancy, ver. 5, 6, 7.) be able to avert them.

11. For the ſun * is no ſooner riſen with a burning heat, but it withereth the graſs, and the flower thereof falleth, and the grace of the faſhion of it periſheth: ſo alſo ſhall the rich man † fade away in his [c] ways.]

12. Whereas on the other ſide, for the true conſtant pious Chriſtian, it is a bleſſed thing for him that he meets with afflictions, which are but means to try and exerciſe his Chriſtian vertues; which being done, he ſhall receive approbation from God, and with it a reward, ſuch as in the Goſpel is promiſed to all that adhere and cleave faſt to God, if not deliverance here, eternity hereafter.

13. Let no man that by afflictions is brought to any ſins, ſay that God is the author of this; for as God cannot himſelf be brought to ſin by any means, ſo doth not he by ſending affliction ſeduce or inſnare any, cauſe him to fall by that means, (as appears by the ſincere Chriſtian, whoſe fidelity is not betrayed, but approved by afflictions.)

13. Let no man ſay when he is tempted, I am tempted of God: for God cannot be tempted † with evil, neither tempteth he any man.]

16, 17. Do not permit your ſelves to be deceived by the Gnoſticks that creep in among you, and flatter you with hopes that they by their compliances will be able to preſerve you from ſuffering here. No certainly, it is God muſt ſecure you, or ye are not likely to be ſecured; the preſent avoiding of perſecutions by not confeſſing of Chriſt will ſtand you in ſmall ſtead, involve you only in the deſtruction that attends the perſecutors: and this will be a ſad deceit, when it befalls you. How much better and ſafer will it be to adhere to God, when every good thing that is given to men, whether of the lower or higher ſort, the ordinary prizes in their ſpiritual exerciſes, and the moſt illuſtrious crowns, (ſee Note on Phil. 3. d.) come from heaven, deſcend to us from God, who is the great ſpring and fountain of all good things, who like the ſun ſends out light to all that want, but then is not like that in its changableneſs (as in the ſeveral appearances of the ſun, when it riſeth, when 'tis high noon, and when it ſets, whereas God is conſtant in the ſame powring out his rays on us, hath no riſing nor ſetting) nor again in his yearly removing or going from us, which cauſes different ſhadows on the earth? God ſends forth his light without mixture of ſhade, his gifts without all niggardlineſs or reſtraint.

d. 16. * Do not err, my beloved brethren,

18. He hath now begotten us in a more excellent way and manner than when we were called his children, being Iſraelites, begotten us by the Goſpel to be Chriſtians and heirs of ſalvation, and therein he hath allowed us the favour of being the firſt that have been called to this dignity, Epheſ. 1. 12. and that out of no conſideration of any thing in us, but only of his own free will and pleaſure, which being an evidence of his free goodneſs towards us, we have little reaſon to miſdoubt him.

19. Wherefore, my beloved brethren, let every man be ſwift to hear, ſlow to ſpeak, ſlow to wrath.]

19. Seeing therefore God hath been ſo gracious to us, let theſe advantages be made uſe of to reform every thing that is amiſs, let it engage us to thoſe moral duties oft recommended to us, as to be very ready to hear and learn, and yet very deliberate and wary in our words, ſo to be very hardly brought to anger or impatience, whatever the wickedneſs of men, whatſoever our provocations be.

20. For the wrath of man worketh not the righteouſneſs of God.]

20. For it is not at all agreeable to the Chriſtian temper, required Mat. 5. to be impatient, and fall out into ſudden wrath or anger; and he that is ſuch, will never be able to do that which is preſcribed by God, and acceptable to him under the Goſpel.

21. Wherefore lay apart all filthineſs and ſuperfluity of naughtineſs, and receive with meekneſs the engraffed word, which is able to ſave your ſouls.]

21. And as the ſins of wrath and malice, ſo obſervable in the Gnoſticks among you, (which are therefore called dogs, and the conciſion, by S. Paul) ſo likewiſe of luſt alſo, all thoſe that circumciſion noted the caſting from us, and are anſwerable to the ſuckers that grow from the root of the tree, let them be plucked off and removed, that you may be the more docile and capable of receiving the whole Goſpel-doctrine, which is as it were a graff of a ſweet, kindly fruit, graffed into the ſtock of our ſowre and corrupt nature, and being received and proſpering in our hearts, will fructifie unto holineſs, and finally will bring men to heaven.

22. But be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own ſelves.]

22. But then 'twill not be ſufficient to receive that doctrine into your ears or brain, but it muſt be uniformly practiſed, or elſe it is but the deceiving of your ſelves.

23. For if any be a hearer of the word, and not a doer, he is like unto a man beholding his e natural face in a glaſs;

24. For he * beholdeth himſelf, and goeth his way, and ſtraightway forgetteth what manner of man he was.]

23, 24. For he that hears the directions that are given in the Goſpel for good life, and the motives and obligations to it, and when he hath done ſo, ſets not with any care to live accordingly a pious Chriſtian life, may be reſembled to a man looking in a mirrour, to obſerve what ſpots or ſullages are there in his face, and when he hath done, goes away, and forgets what he ſaw there, never thinks to reform what was amiſs.

25. But he that hath ſtudied the Goſpel to purpoſe, ſeen his own image there, all that he is concerned in for his preſent and eternal well-being, and hath not looked ſlightly, but inſiſted, continued looking on it, and lays it to heart, and applies it to practice, and lives and acts accordingly, actually performing that which is required of him, that man may receive comfort and joy in his courſe, and God will bleſs him in it.

26. If any man among you ſeem to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, that man's religion is vain.]

26. If a man appear or make ſhew of ſerving and worſhipping God, profeſs to be religious, and yet gives his tongue the reins to rail riotouſly on his fellow-Chriſtians, that man deceiveth himſelf, flattereth himſelf with vain hopes, if he think that his religion ſhould ever ſtand him in any ſtead.

Annotations on Chap. I.

a. πίστις

V. 6. In Faith] The word πίστις faith, which is generally thought in this place to belong to believing that the prayers ſhall be heard, may very well be taken in the ordinary notion, for a firm adherence to the doctrine of Chriſt, a conſtancy in the Chriſtian profeſſion and practice. Thus is believing uſed Eccluſ. 2. 13. Wo to him that is faint-hearted, for he believeth not; and this joined with the ſinner that goes two ways, v. 12. as here the double-minded man, oppoſed to praying in faith, is farther explained by doubting, and wavering, and inſtability. So in Herodotus, l. 1. χρὴ πίστιν ἐν φιλίῃ τίθεσθαι, κραδίην μὴ δίπλῃ πεφυκέναι, Men muſt preſerve faith in friendſhip, and not be polluted with a double heart; where, as here, faith and the double heart are oppoſed in this ſenſe. This notion will very well agree with the Context, where comforting the diſperſed perſecuted Chriſtian Jews, ver. 2. and bidding them rejoice in thoſe ſufferings, to which he again returns, v. 9. (which argues that all which is betwixt doth alſo belong to the ſame matter) he inforces his exhortation, v. 3. by remembring them that the trial of their faith, meaning that by which their faith or conſtancy is tried, that is, afflictions (ſo δοκίμιον ſignifies, and differs from δοκιμὴ, Rom. 5. 4. as τελείον from τελειωσις, that by which the judgment is made from the judgment it ſelf,) worketh, or perfecteth patience, that is, that if they had no afflictions to trie their conſtancy of adhering to Chriſt, there were then no place for that great Chriſtian vertue (at leaſt no way of perfecting it) to which the promiſes were made, viz. patience, perſeverance; which patience muſt have its perfect work. v. 4. that is, Chriſtianity requires perfect patience, and perſeverance in ſpight of all temptations; and he that fails in any, loſes all, and he that is not tried (and gives teſtimony of his ſincerity) in every thing, he is imperfect and wants ſomewhat that trial would make him capable of. But becauſe in the many temptations of the world a man may fail, or for want of wiſdom how to behave himſelf miſcarry ſometimes, (and that conſideration may diſcourage men when heavy preſſures come tumbling in upon them) therefore v. 5. he proceeds to anſwer that objection, by telling them that this defect is reparable by prayer, God can ſupply them in this (and Chriſt in the like condition bids the Diſciples take no thought, never premeditate, what anſwer they ſhall give.) If they refer themſelves in prayer to God's guidance in this matter, he will give them this wiſdom abundantly. But then, v. 6. that which is required to qualifie them to have this prayer of theirs granted by God is, that they keep cloſe to God, have no waverings, or inconſtant demurs, or doubtings, whether they ſhall keep cloſe or no; in the ſame ſenſe as calling upon God in truth, or in faith, Pſal. 145. 18. (the Hebrew באמת indifferently ſignifies either) is conſtantly to adhere to God on whom they call. In which S. James looks particularly on the Gnoſtick compliances and warpings of ſome Chriſtians, that to avoid perſecutions were ready to forſake Chriſt, which is here expreſſed by the wave driven by the wind of perſecution (as Eph. 4. 14. by falſe doctrine) and the double minded, unſtable perſon, ver. 8. (which c. 4. 8. is alſo look'd on as impure) which had no reaſon to expect any wiſdom or aſſiſtance from God, v. 7. And ſo though 'tis poſſible the asking in faith may ſignifie in a narrower ſenſe, confidence that his prayers ſhall be heard, yet it accords very well with the ſcope, that it ſhould be taken in the greater latitude; when he prays for wiſdom to behave himſelf in perſecutions as he ought, let him ſtick faſt to his profeſſion, and never waver in that, come to God with that firm unmoved moved purpoſe and reſolution of mind, and he ſhall be ſure to be aſſiſted by God. So 1 John 3. 22. Whatever we ask we receive from him, becauſe we keep his commandments, adhere and ſtick faſt to him, and do what is pleaſing to him.

b. Καυχάσθω ὁ ἀδελφὸς, &c.

V. 9. Brother of low degree] What the meaning of this verſe is, Καυχάσθω δὲ ὁ ἀδελφὸς ὁ ταπεινὸς ἐν τῷ ὕψει αὐτοῦ, but let the brother that is low, triumph, or rejoice, in his height, is to me very doubtful, and therefore I have ſet down two notions of which it is capable. The former hath already been ſet down from an idiom of the ſacred dialect, Mat. 9. d. and need not be again recited here. The latter hath theſe probabilities for it. Firſt, from the Context, which from the beginning of the Chapter had been to exhort them to rejoice in tribulations, to count it all joy, ver. 2. and that is all one with καυχᾶσθε, rejoice, or boaſt here; and then that which is matter of all joy, or of boaſting, being always ſome good acceſſion, ſome dignity, ſome advancement, it is very reaſonable that that which he is bid rejoice in ſhould be look'd on as ὕψος αὐτοῦ his height, his preferment. Secondly from the word ὕψος which is here uſed, and ſignifies height, not ὕψωσις exaltation, or being made high, which is it that is oppoſite to ταπείνωσις, being brought low, v. 10. which notes this ὕψος or height to be that which the brother which is low hath whilſt he remains ſuch, and not that to which he is raiſed from his low eſtate, and ceaſeth to be low when he is ſo raiſed. And upon this notion the ſecond ſenſe is founded, that the Chriſtian in a low condition is not to be ſad or dejected at that, as at an unhappy eſtate, but to look upon it with joy, as a thing that hath many huge advantages in it, eſpecially in ſuch times of perſecution to Chriſtians as thoſe were, (it riddeth him of envy, plunderings, and continual fears) a preferment, or dignity, to him. Thirdly, from the δὲ but, in the front, But let the brother, &c. which is a note of connexion with the former, and ſo an argument that this is the meaning, which is moſt agreeable with the foregoing diſcourſe, which was wholly of the advantages of afflictions, and rejoycing in them, and not of exaltation. And thus alſo it will connect very fitly with the following verſe: for if the perſon in a low eſtate be to look upon it as a preferment or advantage, then in reaſon the rich man is to rejoice at his ταπείνωσις being brought low, that is, at his being reduced to that condition which is ſaid to have ſo much of height and advantage in it. All this thus put together enders this a very probable interpretation.

ταπείνωσις

c. τροχεῖαι

V. 11. Ways] The word τροχεῖαι ways here may poſſibly be a change of the tranſcriber for ἐμπορεῖαι, tradings or merchandiſes, as c. 4. 13. 'tis the rich man's ſpeech, ἐμπορευσόμεθα καὶ κερδήσομεν, we will traffick and gain. But becauſe τροχεῖαι ways hath no inconvenient ſenſe in it, therefore there is no uſe of any ſuch alteration.

d. ἀποσκίασμα τροπῆς

V. 17. Variableneſs] The word ἀποσκίασμα ſignifieth Aſtronomically the ſeveral habitudes and poſitions wherein the Sun appears to us every day at the riſing, in the Meridian, and when it ſets. And ſo τροπὴ is alſo a like word belonging not to the daily, but yearly courſe of the Sun, which is farther from us or nearer to us, after the meaſure or in the proportion that it moves toward the Northern or Southern Tropick. And from thence it is that it caſts ſeveral ſhadows to the ſeveral people of the world, and gives Geographers occaſion to divide them into Ἄσκιοι, ἑτεροσκίοι and ἀμφισκίοι, thoſe that caſt no ſhadows, thoſe that caſt ſhadows on one ſide, and thoſe that caſt ſhadows round about. And agreeable to this is the word ἀποσκίασμα caſting off ſhadow here, and being joined with τροπῆς turning, ſignifies the variation of the ſhadows, according to the various motions of the Sun before mentioned.

e. πρόσωπον γενέσεως

V. 23. Natural face] Some difficulty there is in underſtanding this verſe, which will be reſolved, if, as ordinarily it is thought πρόσωπον γενέσεως αὐτοῦ, be determined to ſignifie no more than a man's own face reflected to him in a glaſs, and ἔσοπτρον be taken for that glaſs or mirror. For then the meaning of the verſe will be, that the word of God is as ſuch a glaſs, reflecting to him the pourtraiture of himſelf, ὁποῖός ἐστι, what a kind of perſon he is, whether there be any thing amiſs in him or no; and he that hears the word of God and doth it not, is, as if a man ſhould look upon, and contemplate his face in a looking-glaſs, and no more, (That will be the meaning of κατανοεῖ, he that beholdeth, in the Preſent tenſe.) As for any uſe or effect of this looking, it follows, he beheld and went away, and preſently forgot: when he hath ſeen what blemiſhes there are to be wiped off, to be reformed in him, he contents himſelf with having ſeen them, and having done ſo departs, and never thinks more of them, lays not to heart what he ſees thus amiſs in himſelf, forgets to reform or amend any thing. To this interpretation the chief objections are, firſt, from the word γενέσεως, which ſeems unneceſſarily added, when πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ his own face would have ſerved the turn; and again, γένεσις ſignifying birth or nativity, it is not obvious what ſhould be meant by the face of his own birth: ſecondly, from the γὰρ for, ver. 24. which ſeems to divide the period, and make that of going away and forgetting, the proof of his being like a man that beheld his face in a glaſs, whereas by this interpretation the going and forgetting, is connected with his ſeeing his face, and both of them together are the thing to which the forgerful hearer is reſembled. To the firſt of theſe this anſwer may be offered, firſt, that a man may be ſaid to have a double face, an inward and outward, a ſpiritual and corporal; the face of his mind, thoughts and actions, and that is to be beheld and conſidered in a ſpiritual mirror, the word of God, as the outward, the bodily face or countenance, is by the ordinary glaſs or mirror repreſented to us. And the ſimilitude being here ſet between one of theſe and the other, it will not be improper to the mention of the face to add a word of diſtinction, πρόσωπον γενέσεως, that face which belongs to man by nature, by birth, and is not acquired by ſtudy, by actions, by any thing in his own will or choice, as the face of his mind, the ſoul may be ſaid to be. Or it is poſſible, becauſe πρόσωπον ſignifies ſometimes a falſe face, that of an actor, a ſtage-player, a perſonator, that here πρόσωπον γενέσεως, that face that he is born with, may be ſet oppoſite to that. As for the ſetting it in the Genitive caſe Adjectively, that is an ordinary Hebraiſm, as the Mammon of unrighteouſneſs for the unrighteous Mammon: and we have an example of it in this very place, ver. 25. ἀκροατὴς ἐπιλησμονῆς, an hearer of forgetfulneſs, for a forgetful hearer, which is as ſtrange as here the face of his own birth, for his natural countenance, or that which he hath by his birth. To the ſecond it may alſo be anſwered, firſt, That the particle γὰρ is not always cauſal, or a note of probation in theſe writers, but ſometimes a form of connexion only; and yet ſecondly, That here (according to the interpretation premiſed) it may be allowed to have that force, his going and forgetting being the reaſon why he that hears, and doth not the Word, is likened to him that thus only looks or contemplates. Not that every one that ſees his face in a glaſs, doth, when he goes away, forget; but that he that doth only look, and, without more care or effect of his looking, doth go away and forget, is a fit emblem of the forgetful hearer of the Word. From this notion of the words there will now be no reaſon to inquire (as ſome have done) whether a face ſeen in a reflexion or mirror be ordinarily retained in the memory of the man whoſe face it is, that is, whether a man uſe to remember his own face; much leſs for that nicer queſtion, whether women ordinarily do it, though men do not, as if that were the reaſon why the word ἀνὴρ a man in the Maſculine were here uſed, and not ἄνθρωπος, which is common to man and woman. Theſe ſure were no part of Saint James's obſervation, but only that he or ſhe that have looked on themſelves in a glaſs, may poſſibly go away and never think more of what they ſaw, never wipe off the ſpots which they diſcerned there; and then that man or woman is a fit emblem to expreſs the matter in hand, the bare unfruitful hearer of the Word. Having thus cleared this interpretation of the words from thoſe objections, it is not unreaſonable to acquieſce in it; and therefore I ſhall not trouble the Reader with another interpretation, which I had conceived more appliable to this place, by rendring περόσωπον γενέσεως the ſcheme of a man's nativity, in the Aſtronomer's uſe of the word γένεσις (and ſo * S. Chryſoſtom, πολλοὶ τὴν γένεσιν ἑαυτοῖς ἐπιτεχίζουσιν, and frequently elſewhere for the Aſtrologer's caſting mens nativity,) and the Evangeliſt's notion of the word πρόσωπον, face, Mat. 16. 3. Luk. 12. 56. for the appearance of the skie (and in like manner of the heavens) at any point of time, for which Origen in his Philocalia uſeth χειμαλισμὸς ἐπὶ τῆς γενέσεως, the habitude or figure at the nativity, and then interpreting ἐν ἐσόπτρῳ in an Artiſt's glaſs, wherein he repreſents to any man his fortune.

* To. 3. p. 266. li. 9.

f. V. 27. Pure religion] That this verſe is a defenſative particularly againſt the Gnoſticks of that time, may appear by theſe two parts of worſhip here mentioned; the firſt charity to them that want, the ſecond ſpotleſneſs from the pollutions eſpecially of the fleſh, but alſo from other ſins of the word. Theſe two branches are ſtyled by two names, the one pure, the other undefiled, worſhip, and both of them taught both by God the Father in the Old Teſtament, and now by Chriſt. Contrary to theſe were the Gnoſtick practices in the two particulars. For the ſecond, both of uncleanneſs, even the higheſt baſeneſs and villany, and of loving the world, and the pleaſures and advantages thereof, more than God, and complying with the perſecutors ſtill, rather than they would ſuffer any thing, there is very often mention made in the Epiſtles; and for the firſt, beſide the very frequent inculcations of the duties of charity, and the finding fault with (and complaining for) the want of them, there is in Ignatius's Ep. ad Smyrn. an eminent teſtimony. For fortifying them againſt the hereſie of the times, μηδεὶς πλανάσθω, let no man deceive you, &c. and having reſolved that faith and charity τὸ ὅλον ὄντιν, ὧν οὐδὲν κρατέιται, are betwixt them the whole, or all, of a Chriſtian, before which nothing is to be preferred (in oppoſition to the Gnoſticks, who ſuppoſed themſelves ſo perfect that they had no need of either) he ſpeaks plainly and punctually of them, under the name of ἑτεροδοξοῦντες εἰς χάριν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ τὴν εἰς ἡμᾶς ἐλθοῦσαν, of falſe opinions toward the grace of Chriſt which is come to us, and bids them obſerve how contrary they are to the doctrine of God in theſe particulars following; Περὶ ἀγάπης οὐ μέλει αὐτοῖς, οὐ περὶ χήρας, οὐ περὶ ὀρφανοῦ, οὐ περὶ θλιβομένου, οὐ περὶ δεδεμένου ἢ λυομένου, οὐ περὶ πεινῶντος ἢ διψῶντος, They have no care of charity, no care for the widow, nor orphan, nor oppreſs'd, nor impriſoned, nor hungry, nor thirſty. In which reſpect it is manifeſt that this Apoſtle, c. 2. v. 14. proceeds to a punctual diſcourſe of the abſolute neceſſity of ſuperadding works of charity to faith, or elſe it will profit nothing, directly oppoſite to the doctrine of Simon and his Gnoſticks, of whom ſaith * Irenæus, Hos qui in eum & Helenam ejus ſpem habeant, & ut liberos agere quæ velint, ſecundum enim ipſius gratiam ſalvari homines & non ſecundum operas juſtas, They that place their hope on Simon and his Helen, as free men did what they would, deeming that men were ſaved by his grace, and not according to any good works or endeavours. So of the Valentinians, the progeny of thoſe Gnoſticks, ſemetipſos non per operationem, ſed eò quòd naturaliter ſpirituales, omnino ſalvari, That they are not ſaved by working, but becauſe they are naturally ſpiritual: Quapropter & intimoratè omnia quæ vetantur hi qui perfecti ſunt operantur, And therefore they that are perfect act without fear all things that are forbidden. This was S. Auguſtin's ſenſe of the deſign of this Epiſtle, De fide & oper. c. 14. Quoniam hæc opinio tunc fuerat exorta, aliæ Apoſtolicæ Epiſtolæ Petri, Johannis, Jacobi, Judæ contra eam maximè dirigunt intentionem, ut vehementer adſtruant fidem ſine operibus nihil prodeſſe, Becauſe this opinion was riſen up in that time, all the Catholick Epiſtles of James, &c. were chiefly intended againſt it, vehemently aſſerting that faith without works will profit nothing.

'tis a moſt unchriſtian thing to be partial to one before another Chriſtian on conſideration that one is richer or in better cloaths than the other.

2. For if there come unto your [b] aſſembly a man with a gold ring, in goodly apparel, and there come in alſo a poor man in vile raiment,]

b. 2. For if a cauſe in your judicatures or conſiſtories happen between a rich gallant and a poor beggerly perſon,

† And ye ſhall look upon him, καὶ ἐπιβλέψητε ἐπὶ * fairly καλῶς † And are not doubtful in, or debate not among your ſelves * or promiſe, for the King's MS. reads ἐπαγγελίας

3. † And ye have reſpect unto him that weareth the gay clothing, and ſay unto him, Sit thou here * in a good place; and ſay to the poor, Stand thou there, or ſit here under my foot-ſtool,]

3. And if you ſhall make a difference between them in reſpect of their wealth and cloaths, and ſhall ſet one in a more honourable place than the other, (ſee Note b.) conſider one and deſpiſe the other,

4. † Are ye not then [c] partial in your ſelves, and become judges of evil thoughts?]

c. 4. And without any doubt or conſider the merit of the cauſe, but as wicked corrupt judges, hand over head, adjudge the cauſe to the rich, (and deſpiſe the poor, v. 6.) whatſoever the juſtice of the cauſe and merit of it be, or prefer the rich before the poor, and judge the cauſe by the perſon, not the perſon by the cauſe;

5. Hearken, my beloved brethren, hath not God choſen the poor of this world, rich in faith, and heirs of the * kingdom, which he hath promiſed to them that love him?]

5. This is a moſt unchriſtian dealing in you. And then do but conſider, Hath God had any ſuch partialities in beſtowing Chriſtianity and his graces on men? nay, hath he not on the other ſide picked out men as poor as any, to be as eminent believers and ſaints as any?

6. But ye have deſpiſed the poor. Do not rich men oppreſs you, and draw you before the judgment-ſeats?

6, 7. But you, if a man be poor, deſpiſe him, conſider him not. And truly 'tis no

† which is called upon you? τὸ ἐπικληθὲν ἐφ' ὑμᾶς;

7. Do not they baſpheme that worthy name † by which ye are called?]

very amiable thing to be rich, nor doth it produce any excellencies in them that are ſo, or favours toward you, that deſerve to be ſo conſidered by you; for riches make men apt to oppreſs others, and to enter vexatious ſuits againſt them, and to deſpiſe Chriſtianity, and blaſpheme that good profeſſion of yours.

8. If ye fulfil the royal Law according to the Scripture, Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour as thy ſelf, ye do well.]

8. If ye obſerve the law of Chriſt our king, which he hath in a particular manner preſcribed us, Joh. 13. 34. and 15. 12. and to which above all other men all we Chriſtians are to be ſubject, and that agreeable to what is mentioned in the Old Teſtament, Levit. 19. 18. the command of meaſuring our love to our neighbour by that which we bear to our ſelves, this is ſomewhat like a Chriſtian.

* reproved ἐλεγχόμενοι

9. But if ye have reſpect to perſons, ye commit ſin, and are * convinced of the Law as tranſgreſſors.]

9. But if ye uſe this partiality, ver. 2. this is a ſin, and ſo condemned by the Law, Lev. 30. 15. Deut. 1. 17. and 16. 19. Exod. 23. 3. and ſo you offend even againſt the Law, and not only againſt the Goſpel.

† is become γέγονε

10. For whoſoever ſhall keep the whole Law, and yet offend in one point, † he is guilty of all.]

10. And 'tis but a ſmall excuſe for you to think that this is but one tranſgreſſion, and therefore not conſiderable: For the obedience to God's will is required univerſally to all that he commands, and he that offends in one, though he keep all the reſt, is guilty of the breach of that obedience, and puniſhable as well as if he had broken all.

11. For he that ſaid, Do not commit adultery, ſaid alſo, Do not kill: now if thou commit no adultery, yet if thou kill, thou art become a tranſgreſſor of the Law.]

11. For it is the ſame Law-giver that impoſed the one and the other law, that interdicted adultery and murther, and his authority is equally deſpiſed by the committing of either.

12. Let your words and actions be like thoſe that are to be judged, not by the Moſaical Law, which requires thoſe external obſervances ſo ſeverely, circumciſion under pain of death, &c. but by the law of Chriſt, which hath ſet us at liberty in this kind, and requires of us another ſort of performances.

12. So ſpeak ye, and ſo do, as they that ſhall be judged by the law of liberty.]

13. And firſt for the latter of theſe, that of actions, 'tis certain that among the precepts of Chriſt there is none more eminent than that of works of mercy, unto which the promiſes of God's mercy are ſo linked and proportioned, that he that condemns others ſhall himſelf be condemned, and he that doth forgive others needs not fear God's condemnation, Mat. 6.

13. For he ſhall have judgment without mercy that hath ſhewed no mercy: and mercy * rejoiceth againſt judgment.]

* triumpheth over κατακαυχᾶται

14. And 'tis not for a Chriſtian to ſay that his faith ſhall render ſuch works it will.

14. What doth it profit, my brethren, though a man ſay he have faith, and have not works? can faith ſave him?]

unneceſſary, for indeed without ſuch works his faith will nothing profit him, and 'tis ridiculous to think

15. For in caſe a Chriſtian be in great want and diſtreſs for ſupply of the neceſſaries of life, food and raiment,

15. If a brother or ſiſter be naked, or deſtitute of daily food,]

16. And you give him good words, bid him have plenty, or wiſh he had, but do no more to help him to the things which he hath need of for his body: what is he the better for your words?

16. And one of you ſay unto him, Depart in peace, be you warmed, and filled; notwithſtanding ye give them not thoſe things which be needful to the body: what doth it profit?]

17. So if faith be by it ſelf, without actions conſequent and agreeable to it, 'tis as fruitleſs and liveleſs as thoſe words were.

17. Even ſo faith, if it hath not works, is dead † being alone.]

† by it ſelf καθ' ἑαυτὴν

18. And any man that looks on this uncharitable believer, will be able to reprove him thus, Talk as much of thy faith as thou wilt, no man will believe thee, thy works muſt be ſuperadded to the confeſſion of thy faith, to approve the ſincerity of it.

18. * Yea, a man may ſay, Thou haſt faith, and I have works: ſhew me thy faith † without thy works, and I will ſhew thee my faith by my works.]

* But one will ſay ἀλλ' ἐρεῖ τις

† So the Syriack, Arabick and Latin copies read, and ſo the King's MS. χωρὶς --- others read ἐκ by

19. One act of thy faith is, the believing one true God, and this is moſt abſolutely neceſſary to thee: But if thy life be not anſwerable to this part of thy faith, and that evidenced by piety and charity, thou art then to remember that the believing there is one God is ſuch a good quality as is common to thee and the devils alſo, and if it have no more joined to it, will beſtead thee no more than them.

19. Thou believeſt that there is one God, thou doſt well; the devils alſo believe and tremble.]

20. 'Tis a meer vanity to conceive that faith without Chriſtian obedience can be effectual to juſtification, and you may diſcern it by this.

20. But wilt thou know, O vain man, that faith without works is dead?]

21. Abraham was the father of the faithful, the great example of faith and juſtification: but 'twas not upon his bare believing God's promiſe that he was juſtified, but upon that high act of obedience to God, in being ready to offer up his only ſon, in whom the promiſes were made to him.

21. Was not Abraham our father juſtified by works, when he had offered his ſon Iſaac upon the altar?]

22. And ſo you ſee his obedience to God's commands, as well as belief of his promiſes, concurred to the rendring him capable of the continuance of God's favour and approbation. And through the performance of that ready obedience it was, that his faith came to attain the end deſigned it.

22. * Seeſt thou how faith wrought with his works, and by works was faith made perfect?]

* You ſee βλέπεις

23. And by this trial of his obedience it was that Abraham was moſt eminently ſaid to be approved by God, 1 Mac. 2. 52. and look'd on as a friend by him, Gen. 22. 15. and in which that place of Scripture (before delivered Gen. 15. 6.) concerning God's imputing his faith for righteouſneſs, was moſt eminently completed.

23. And the Scripture was fulfilled, which ſaith, Abraham believed God, and it was imputed to him for righteouſneſs: and he was called the friend of God.]

24. And ſo this is one great teſtimony that to a man's approbation with God obedience is required, and not faith deemed ſufficient, that hath not that joined with it.

24. Ye ſee then, how that by works a man is juſtified, and not by faith only.]

25. Another evidence of this truth is to be fetch'd from that we read of God's approving and rewarding of Rahab, a proſelyte and ſtranger, no native Jew, whoſe faith is ſet forth, Heb. 11. 30. and ſhe in a ſpecial manner rewarded by God, Joſ. 6. 25. and what was it that was thus rewarded in her? why, her care and charity to thoſe that were ſent to view the land, Joſ. 2. 4.

25. Likewiſe alſo was not Rahab the harlot juſtified by works, when ſhe had received the meſſengers, and had ſent them out another way?]

26. And ſo the concluſion is clear and infallible, that as the body of man, without the ſoul inlivening it, exerciſes no actions of life, ſo doth not faith profit to our juſtification without works of obedience to the commands of Chriſt, juſtice and Charity, &c. v. 1, 8, 14.

26. For as the body without the ſpirit is dead, ſo faith without works is dead alſo.]

Annotations on Chap. II.

a. Δόξα χεισῦ

V. 1. Faith of our Lord] Δόξα χεισῦ, the glory of Chriſt, we have explained often to belong to the Shechinah, that again to his ἐπιφάνεια or appearance in the fleſh, his Incarnation, and all that was conſequent to that. This being here improved with the addition of the words Lord Jeſus Chriſt, doth more ſet out the neceſſity of obeying, and obſerving all thoſe things which this Lord and Saviour, the Meſſias of the world, hath commended to his Diſciples, that is, to all Chriſtians, believers, faithful perſons, of which nature eſpecially is charity in the following verſes, and impartial ſtrict juſtice (ſuppoſed and contained in that) in this preſent verſe. Then for πίσις τ̃ δόξης the faith of the glory (for ſo the Syriack conſtrues the words) it ſignifies this Chriſtian faith, this faith, or profeſſion of, or believing this Incarnation and Reſurrection of Chriſt; and πίσιν ἔχειν ἐν προσωπολημψίαις, to have this faith in, or with, reſpect of perſons, is to look on thoſe that profeſs this faith, not as they are Chriſtians, but as they are rich or poor, preferring partially one before the other, accordingly as he comes into your courts in greater ſplendour. And ſo the meaning of the whole verſe is, that they that are profeſſors of Chriſtianity (and are here ſuppoſed to be ſo, and are put in mind of it by the title of ἀδελφοί μου, my brethren,) ought not to have any ſuch unchriſtian temper in them, as in their Judicatures (for ſo συναγωγὴ ſignifies an aſſembly for Judicature, and that for Eccleſiaſtical as well as Civil affairs, and ſo it ſeems to ſignifie here, ver. 2.) to prefer or favour one Chriſtian before another, only in reſpect of his wealth or fine cloaths, when Chriſt hath equally received them both, or (if any) hath preferr'd the poor, v. 5.

πίσις τ̃ δόξης ---

πίσιν ἔχειν ἐν προσωπολημψίας.

b. συναγωγὴ

V. 2. Aſſembly] That συναγωγὴ ſignifies all kind of aſſemblies, meeting in the market-place, Mac. 6. 2. Conſiſtories for Judicature, Mat. 10. 17. and 23. 34. (and not only places for the publick ſervice of God) hath been formerly ſaid, Note on Mat. 6. d. That it may do ſo alſo among Chriſtians, and that it doth ſo here, appears, firſt, by the προσωπολημψία acceptation of perſons, partiality, ver. 1. which eſpecially reſpects Judicatures; ſecondly, by the footſtool, v. 3. which was proper to great perſons, Princes on their Throne, or Judges on their Tribunal; thirdly, by the word κεῖσαι ἐγένεσθε, ye become Judges, v. 4. they were Judges, it ſeems; fourthly, by the mention of κρίσεις Judicatures, ver. 6. which clearly ſignifie ſuch Conſiſtories, 1 Cor. 6. 4. and laſtly, by v. 9. where their partiality, particularly that of preferring the rich to a better place than the poor, is ſaid to be a breach of the Law: For ſo by a Canon of the Jews it is provided, that when a rich man and a poor have a ſuit together before their Conſiſtories, either either both muſt ſit or both ſtand in the ſame rank, to avoid all marks of partiality. Agreeable to which is the now preſent practice of the Jews; ſo that if in matter of difference about meum and tuum a Chriſtian, having to do with a Jew, think fit to refer it to a Chacham or Judge among them, and at his coming into the room where he is, chance, or chuſe (as taking himſelf to be a perſon of better quality) to ſit down, he preſently ſaith to the Jew, be he never ſo mean, Sit thou down alſo.

c. ἐ διεκρίθητε

V. 4. Partial] What is the meaning of ἐ διεκρίθητε here, will not eaſily be reſolved: I ſuppoſe it may beſt be done by theſe degrees. Firſt, by obſerving that διακρίνεσθαι in the Middle voice generally ſignifies in theſe Books either doubting, (wavering, Mat. 21. 21. Mar. 11. 23. Act. 10. 20. and 11. 11. Rom. 4. 20.) or diſputing, there being a connexion betwixt theſe two, he that doubts always diſputing with himſelf. From whence alſo it ſignifies to implead (with τινὶ or πρὸς τινα added to it) or to lay any thing to ones charge, either in or out of Judicature; as Act. 11. 2. they of the Circumciſion διεκρίνοντο πρὸς αὐτὸν, charged Peter, or diſputed with him, ſaying, Thou wenteſt in to the uncircumciſed, and didſt eat with them. For the notion of wavering Heſychius is punctual, Διεκρίθη, ἐμερίσθη, ἐδίστασεν, ἐυλαβήθη, it ſignifies to be divided, to doubt, to fear; ſo twice in this Epiſtle, c. 1. 6. μηδὲν διακρινόμενος, nothing wavering, ὁ γὰρ διακρινόμενος, for the waverer. And as by this notion of the word I conceive a difficult place will be explained, Jude 22. (ſee Note m. on that Epiſtle) ſo we may conclude that in this Epiſtle c. 3. 17. ἀδιακρίτως will be beſt rendred without wavering or conſtant, (ſee Note f. on that Chapter.) Secondly, by obſerving the force of ἐν ἑαυτοῖς in your ſelves added to it: for as that refers oftentimes to the inward thoughts of the heart, (and then not to doubt in themſelves is to do what they do without any inward reluctance, check, or ſcruple, or dubitancy, which in a ſinful and irrational fact (as this here ſpoken of is) cannot but be a great aggravation of it) ſo, being applied to diſceptations or diſputes, it oft ſignifies among themſelves, or one with another. And if it be ſo here, it will then belong to the Judges in this Eccleſiaſtical Council, or aſſembly of Biſhops, debating or conſidering among themſelves what juſtice there is in the cauſe. Thirdly, by obſerving that punctation which we find of it in Oecumenius (and ſo alſo in ſome printed copies) without any note of Interrogation. And that that is the right reading is ſufficiently evident, both by the Mood, and the Copulative καὶ and, which connect it with what went before, and demonſtrate it to be govern'd of the Ἐὰν if, v. 2. as εἰσέλθῃ, and ἐπιβλέψητε, and εἴπητε are. And then this muſt needs be the right rendring of it, If a man enter having a gold ring, and if a poor man in ſordid apparel enter alſo (that is, if they implead one the other) and if you look on (or have a partial reſpect to) the rich, and ſay unto him, &c. καὶ ἐ διεκρίθητε ἐν ἑαυτοῖς, and if ye either doubt not diſpute not, within your ſelves, in your own hearts, or elſe among your ſelves make no diſceptation about it, never conſider the merit or juſtice of the cauſe, but meerly looking upon the perſons, which of them is in fine, which in ſordid clothes, and become Judges of evil thoughts, unrighteous Judges. Where the ſenſe being all this while ſuſpended, one difficulty there is ſtill remaining to reſolve what ſhall be the latter part of the period, anſwerable to the If by way of ἀπόδοσις. And that may poſſibly be the Ἀκούσατε ἀδελφοὶ, Hear, my beloved brethren, v. 5. as if he ſhould ſay, If in your Judicatures you deal thus partially, I muſt then tell you, or bear you, and remember, my beloved brethren, Hath not God choſen the poor? that is, done quite contrary to what you now do? Or elſe there muſt be acknowledged (which is very ordinary) an Ellipſis, thus to be ſupplied, If you do thus and thus, then ſure you are partial to your fellow-Chriſtians, v. 1. And either of theſe are very commodious, and ſufficiently clear the words from all farther difficulty; whereas there be many difficulties that preſs the other reading by way of Interrogation: as firſt, that the καὶ before the ἐ is not at all rendred or taken notice of in that reading; and ſecondly, it is ſcarce to be obſerved in any Author that the negative words ἀ, ἐκ, ἐχ, ἐχὶ, or μὴ, are at any time interrogative when they ſtand not firſt in the ſentence, as here the ἐ doth not, the καὶ being before it; and thirdly, that other reading ſuppoſes and proceeds upon a notion of διακρίνεσθαι which may belong to the Active διακρίνειν, but never to the Mean voice (as διακρίνεσθαι is) in the New Teſtament, or any other Author, or Gloſſary.

CHAP. III.

Paraphraſe.

* teachers † a greater judgment μεῖζον κρῖμα

1. MY brethren [a], be not many * Maſters, knowing that we ſhall receive † the greater condemnation.]

1. And as for actions, (ſee c. 2. 12, 13.) ſo for words ye are not to judge your brethren, or to take upon you that office of Maſter or Teacher, which belongs only to Chriſt, but to conſider that there is a greater, an higher judicature, the judgment of God to which we are all reſerved.

2. For in many things we offend all. If any man offend not in word, the ſame is a perfect man, and able alſo to bridle the whole body.]

2. The beſt of us have much to blame and accuſe in our ſelves, and therefore ſhould not be forward to accuſe or judge others. And of all vices, thoſe of the tongue (whereof this of judging is an eminent one) are moſt ordinary, and they that can rule and manage that (as the Judaizers are far from doing, c. 4. 11.) and keep innocent from all faults of that kind, do thereby demonſtrate themſelves to be true ſincere Chriſtians, able to reſiſt all other temptations, and guide all their actions according to the Chriſtian rule.

* bridles χαλινοὺς

3. Behold, we put * bits in the horſes mouths that they may obey us, and we turn about their whole body.]

3. As in managing of horſes, when by a bridle put into his mouth we have gotten power over that part, we are thereby enabled to diſpoſe of the whole beaſt, though a very ſtrong one, as we pleaſe.

4. Behold alſo the ſhips, which, though they be ſo great, and are driven of fierce winds, yet are they turned about with a very ſmall helm whitherſoever the governour liſteth.]

4. And ſo though a ſhip on the ſea be a vaſt unwieldy veſſel, and in the power of winds and waves (as we are of temptations) to carry it violently before them, yet the Pilot by means of the helm or ſtern, a ſmall part, of an inconſiderable bigneſs, is able to rule it and turn it as he pleaſe.

‡ So * makes great boaſts μεγάλα καυχᾶται

5. [b] † Even ſo the tongue is a little member, and * boaſteth great things: behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth.]

5. Again the tongue is one of the ſmalleſt parts of a man's body, and yet makes a great noiſe, doth a great deal of hurt, ſtirs up faction and contention in the Church, as a little fire, ye know, will ſet a whole houſe or any the greateſt pile on fire.

† or is ſet in the members a fire of iniquity to the world * wheel of affairs. † all the nature * by the nature of man

6. [c] And the tongue is † a fire, a world of iniquity: ſo is the tongue among our members, that it defileth the whole body, and ſetteth on fire the [d] * courſe of nature, and it is ſet on fire of hell.]

6. And the tongue cannot more fitly be reſembled than to fire, for though it be but one, and that a very ſmall member of the body, yet ſo it may be uſed as to ſet the whole ſociety of men, a church, a kingdom, a whole world, on fire with ſtrife, and contention, and all wickedneſs, infecting and poiſoning the whole ſociety, ſetting all in combuſtion, being it ſelf ſet on work by the devil, kindled by that fire that comes from hell.

7. For † [e] every kind of beaſts, and of birds, and of ſerpents, and things in the ſea is tamed, and hath been tamed * of mankind.]

7. 'Tis in the power and skill of man, (as through all times we ſee) to repreſs the violence and poiſon of all other creatures, to ſubdue and diſarm them of their weapons and means of hurting mortally:

8. But the tongue can no man tame, it is an unruly evil, full of deadly poiſon.]

8. But the tongue is more hard to be ſubdued than any of theſe, an irremediable author of many evils, ſtrikes, and wounds, and kills like the moſt venemous beaſt, and no antidote is ſufficient againſt it.

9. There-

9. And what a foul ſin is it in a Chriſtian or profeſſor of piety, to uſe this member to ſo diſtant offices, to confeſs with the tongue and acknowledge him who is both our God and our father, and to judge and rail at our Chriſtian brethren, who for that image of God they bear upon them, are to be looked on and uſed with all kindneſs?

9. Therewith bleſs we God, † even the Father, and therewith curſe we men, which are † and ἁγ made after the ſimilitude of God.]

10. This contrariety of our practices is a moſt unchriſtian thing, and ought to be reformed in you, your profeſſion of piety to God ought to have all charity to your fellow Chriſtians accompanying it.

10. Out of the ſame mouth proceedeth bleſſing and curſing. My brethren, theſe things ought not ſo to be.

11. No fountain can ſend forth two ſorts of waters of ſo diſtant a nature, ſo contrary one to the other, ſweet water, to which the effluxions of our charity may fitly be compared, and bitter water, by which curſing was expreſs'd, Num. 5. 21.

11. Doth a fountain ſend forth at the ſame place ſweet water and bitter?]

12. Any more than one tree can bear the fruit that belongs to another tree.

12. * Can the fig-tree, my brethren, bear olive-berries? either a vine, figs? ſo can no fountain yield both ſalt water and freſh.]

* A fig-tree, my brethren, cannot bring forth olives, or a vine figs, neither will ſalt water produce ſweet, for the K.'s MS. reads ὅτε ἀλυκὸν γλυκὺ ποιῆσαι ὕδωρ

13. And therefore for them that deſpiſe and condemn others, and take upon them to be the only perfect men, ver. 1, 2. the Gnoſtick Judaizers, let them know wherein the true Chriſtian knowledge conſiſts, even in doing all works of charity as well as piety, with all meekneſs (as that is oppoſed to pride of their own wiſdom) accompanying them.

13. Who is a wiſe man, and † indued with knowledge amongſt you? let him ſhew out of a good converſation his works with meekneſs of wiſdom.]

† knowing ἐπιστήμων

14. But bitter emulation and contention is far from being a piece of ſpiritual wiſdom, and therefore if this be among you, what is this but an hypocritical boaſting? or ye have little reaſon to boaſt, or pretend that you are the wiſe or ſpiritual, as the bitter contentious Gnoſticks do, ſee v. 15.

14. But if you have bitter envying and ſtrife in your hearts, * glory not, and lie not againſt the truth.]

* do ye not boaſt and lie — μὴ κατακαυχᾶσθε καὶ ψεύδεσθε

15. This is quite contrary to the true celeſtial wiſdom that Chriſt came to teach and infuſe into us; 'tis that which, firſt, the love of the world, ſecondly, mens own carnal unregenerate hearts, or thirdly, Satan himſelf that profeſſeth to be an enemy of all good men, infuſeth into them.

15. † This wiſdom deſcendeth not from above, but is earthly, * ſenſual, deviliſh.]

† this is not the wiſdom that deſcendeth from — ἐκ ἔστιν αὕτη ἡ σοφία — * animal ψυχικὴ

16. For there is nothing ſo ill, that is, ſinful, be it ſedition, or diſturbance of the whole State or Church, and nothing ſo ill, that is, miſerable, no ſuch curſe to any community, or unquietneſs to any particular perſon, but it is certainly to be expected where emulation and contention have once entred.

16. For where envying and ſtrife is, there is † confuſion and every evil work.]

† ſedition ἀκαταστασία

17. But the true Chriſtian celeſtial wiſdom indeed may be known by theſe properties, that it is, firſt, pure from all luſts and filthineſs, ſo frequently practiſed by the Gnoſticks; ſecondly, peaceable, and ſo quite contrary to the contentious factious humor of the Gnoſticks; thirdly, not rigid, but gentle, mild, equitable, receding from his own ſtrict right in order to peace (ſee Note on 2 Cor. 10. a.) fourthly, very ready to believe any thing that is good of another, or that may mitigate or alleviate his fault, (ſee Note on 1 Cor. 13. c.) fifthly, abounding in all charitable works; ſixthly, without all wavering or inconſtancy, or danger of falling off to the ſeducers or perſecutors, Gnoſticks or Jews, or without making any difference, a liberal diſtribution to all that want; ſeventhly, without diſſimulation, or appearing to be what they are not, ſuch as the falſe brethren, 2 Cor. 11. 26. which brought ſuch miſchief on the Apoſtle.

f. 17. But the wiſdom that is from above is firſt pure, then peaceable, * gentle, and eaſie to be intreated, full of mercy and good fruits, † [f] without partiality, and without hypocriſie.]

* mild, eaſie to be perſuaded, ἐπιεικὴς, εὐπειθὴς † without wavering, or making a difference

18. But they that love and follow peace ſhall accordingly be repay'd the reward of the righteous, the peace and all the mercies of God ſhall be their reward.

g. 18. * And the [g] fruit of righteouſneſs is ſown in peace † of them that make peace.]

* But † for them that cauſe τοῖς ποιοῦσι

Annotations on Chap. III.

a. μὴ πολλοὶ διδάσκαλοι γίνεσθε

V. 1. Be not many maſters] What the full importance of this admonition is, μὴ πολλοὶ διδάσκαλοι γίνεσθε, be not many maſters, may perhaps be thus collected: One great fault of the Judaizing Chriſtians and Gnoſticks, frequently taken notice of, is that of judging others, the orthodox Chriſtians, and ſeparating from them. Thus Rom. 2. 1. the ὁ κείνων, he that judgeth, in the beginning and end of the verſe, hath been ſhewed to ſignifie (ſee Note a. on that chapter) him that teacheth the neceſſity of obſerving the Moſaical Law, and accuſeth and ſeparateth, and ſpeaks evil of the orthodox Chriſtians as breakers of the Law, as ἁμαρτάνοντες a ſort of Apoſtates, becauſe they are not circumciſed. Theſe are there farther deſcribed, v. 18, 19, 20. as thoſe that take upon them to know the will of God moſt perfectly (and are thence called Gnoſticks) to be guides of the blind, lights of them that are in darkneſs, inſtructers of fools, Διδάσκαλοι νηπίων, teachers or maſters of babes, &c. where their aſſuming thoſe titles of guides, lights, inſtructers, maſters, is joined with the judging of others as blind, ignorant, fools and babes. And as there διδάσκαλος teacher or maſter (the ſame as here) is one of the titles they aſſumed, ſo v. 21. is, ὁ ἕτερον διδάσκων ἑαυτὸν thou that teacheſt another, in this ſenſe again, thou that aſſumeſt to know more than all others, to be able to inſtruct and teach others, as if no man knew his duty but they. Theſe are again deſcribed Rom. 14. 4. by the ὁ κείνων ἀλλότριον οἰκέτην, he that judgeth another man's ſervant, that when Chriſt hath given Chriſtians liberty in the matter of Circumciſion and other Judaical performances, require all thoſe performances of their fellow-Chriſtians, as if they, not Chriſt, were the lords and maſters of their faith. So again Col. 2. 16. Μήτις ὑμᾶς κρινέτω, Let no man judge you in meat or drinks, &c. where the judging is that of the Judaizers, and is called dogmatizing, ver. 20. by ordinance retrenching that liberty that Chriſt hath given us, and thereupon judging all that are not their diſciples; and ſo that is all one with this notion of διδάσκαλος maſters here. A ſpice of this humor it was that Chriſt noted in the Phariſees, Mat. 23. when he tells them they loved to be called Rabbi, Rabbi, v. 7. that is, my maſter, my maſter, my guide, my inſtructer; which Chriſt forbidding his diſciples to imitate, gives this reaſon, εἷς γάρ ἐστιν ὑμῶν ὁ καθηγητής, for one is your guide, or maſter, Chriſt: and again ver. 10. μηδὲ κληθῆτε καθηγηταί, Be not ye called guides or maſters, for one is your maſter, Chriſt. And that this is the notion of διδάσκαλος maſters here, may appear firſt, by the circumſtances of the Context; and ſecondly, by comparing them with theſe other places now mentioned. For the firſt, in the 12th verſe of ch. 2. S. James ſpeaks diſtinctly to theſe Judaizers, and admoniſheth them of their words as well as actions, that they are to be guided by the Chriſtian, not Moſaical law, and accordingly to be judged; that the Chriſtian law teacheth liberty from the Moſaical, and they that ſpeak or do contrary to that liberty are much to be blamed. Which being thus generally propoſed on thoſe two heads, he begins, (by way of ἐπάνοδος) firſt with the laſt, actions, thoſe eſpecially of mercy, moſt contrary to the practice of theſe Judaizers, who fiercely perſecuted the orthodox Chriſtians, and on that head he proceeds to the end of the Chapter, ſhewing how little available faith or Chriſtian profeſſion will be without charity. And then at the beginning of this Chapter he returns to the firſt, that of the tongue or ſpeech, a ſpecial part of which is that of judging others, and ſo goes on to this matter of the unrulineſs of the tongue, v. 3, &c. and ſhews how contrary that is alſo to Chriſtian profeſſion, v. 9. it being the curſing of men when they pretend to pay reverence and bleſſing to God. And this, it ſeems, they were guilty of, not only by what had before been ſaid, c. 1. 26. that he that ſeems to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, that man's religion is vain, but here alſo, v. 10. My brethren, theſe things ought not to be ſo. And that they are the Gnoſticks that are thus noted by him, appears v. 13. Who is wiſe, and ἐπιστήμων, knowing among you? let him by a good converſation ſhew his own works with meekneſs of wiſdom: intimating, that this proud, faſtidious, ſupercilious wiſdom, judging and cenſuring others, is that which is here deſigned to be beaten down by him, and ſo the πικρὸς ζῆλος, bitter zeal, v. 14. And that is the reaſon alſo that c. 4. 11. having exhorted them not to ſpeak againſt one another, he adds, He that ſpeaks againſt his brother, and judgeth his brother, ſpeaks againſt the law, and judgeth the law, that is, by his practice condemns the law of God, which he ſo zealouſly profeſſeth to ſtand for. That this is the importance of the place may appear, ſecondly, by comparing this verſe here with Rom. 14. 10. There for the ſuppreſſing this fault of theirs, judging or ſetting at nought the brother, this reaſon is given, πάντες γὰρ παραστησόμεθα τῷ βήματι τοῦ Χριστοῦ, for we ſhall all appear before the judgment-ſeat of Chriſt (as in another matter, 1 Cor. 4. He that judgeth me is the Lord, therefore judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come, &c. that is, judging others is an unchriſtian thing, derogating from Chriſt's judicature, to which all muſt be referred:) And ſo here, Be not many maſters, knowing we ſhall receive a greater judgment, that is, anſwer for what we do at an higher judicature. And ſo again, c. 4. 12. There is one law-giver who is able to ſave and to deſtroy (that is, to whom all judging is to be referred) who art thou which judgeſt another? This is farther confirmed by comparing it with 1 Tim. 1. 7. where of the Gnoſtick Judaizers (evidently deſcrib'd v. 6. by the τινὲς ἀστοχήσαντες, and ἐκτραπέντες εἰς ματαιολογίαν, ſwerving from the faith and good conſcience, and being turned to vain ſpeaking) he ſaith that they are deſirous to be teachers of the Law, that is, Rabbis, that is, all one with the διδάσκαλοι Maſters or teachers here, and this, it ſeems, in reſpect of their aſſerting the neceſſity of the Chriſtian's obſerving the Moſaical Law (as appears ver. 8.) and that is in effect the judging of them that obſerve it not. And ſo 1 Tim. 6. ſpeaking of theſe under the title of ἑτεροδιδασκαλοῦντες Heterodox teachers, puffed up, as Gnoſticks, but μηδὲν ἐπιστάμενοι knowing nothing, he adds mention, as of their envy and ſtrife, ſo of their evil ſpeaking, and evil ſurmiſing, the judging which we now ſpeak of. As for the putting in the word πολλοὶ many, be ye not many maſters, I ſuppoſe that is in oppoſition to the εἷς διδάσκαλος or καθηγητὴς the one maſter or guide, Mat. 23. or the εἷς νομοθέτης, the one law-giver or judge here, Jam. 4. 12. For it being Chriſt's office only to give laws to the Church, theſe Judaizers do clearly intrench upon his office, and ſo are πολλοὶ διδάσκαλοι, many, inſtead of the one Maſter. This one difficulty being thus explained, and the interpretation confirmed, the reſt of the Chapter will be very perſpicuous and coherent to it, which in any other interpretation of the verſe will be obſcure, and the connexion very hard to be diſcerned.

b. V. 5. Even ſo] That the word οὕτω, ſo, here, is a note of the latter part, or ἀπόδοσις, of the ſimilitude, may at firſt ſight be believed, but upon farther conſideration will be found a miſtake. For that which is here added is not fitly illuſtrated by the foregoing ſimilitude of the horſe or ſhip, but by another ſimilitude annexed after it, with the particle ἰδοὺ, behold; for that is the way of bringing in ſimilitudes (and is uſed before v. 3, and 4.) and not only the forms ὥσπερ, οὕτω, as, and ſo. Nay when the plain ſenſe or matter to be illuſtrated is firſt ſet down, as here it is, v. 2. If any man offend not in word, he is able to bridle the whole body alſo; there the ἰδοὺ, behold, is by much the fitteſt form to introduce the ſimilitude, as there it doth of the horſe and ſhip. And if that be converted into the other form, it muſt be by placing the latter part firſt after this manner, As a man turns or rules an horſe by a bridle, or a ſhip by a ſtern; ſo he that hath command of his tongue, is able to bridle or rule the whole body. And again v. 5. As a little fire ſets a great deal of matter on fire; ſo the tongue, being a little member, μεγαλαυχεῖ, makes a great noiſe, keeps a great ſtir, puts whole multitudes into a combuſtion. And therefore another notion of οὕτω ſo is here to be taken notice of, as a form of bringing in a ſecond or third part of a diſtribution, without any ὡς or ὥσπερ as antecedent. And ſo it ſeems to be in this place, a form of tranſition from one part of the Diſcourſe of the tongue, conſidered when it is bridled, v. 2, 3, 4. to another, v. 5, &c. when it is not bridled, and will be beſt rendred, In like manner, or ſo likewiſe. As for the οὕτω, v. 6. which ſeems otherwiſe uſed, it is not to be found in the King's MSS. not the Syriack. See Note c.

V. 6. And the tongue ——] The words of this v. 6. in the ordinary copies, Καὶ ἡ γλῶσσα πῦρ, ὁ κόσμος τῆς ἀδικίας· οὕτως ἡ γλῶσσα καθίσταται, &c. And the tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity: ſo is the tongue ſeated in the members, ſeems not to be rightly ſet. The Kings MS. leaves out the οὕτως. But that change will not render the words any complete ſenſe. The Syriack ſeem to have read it ſhorter without the latter, οὕτως ἡ γλῶσσα, ſo the tongue, and to have read, τῷ κόσμῳ to the world, in ſtead of ὁ κόσμος the world; and then the plain meaning is, And the tongue is placed in the members, a fire of iniquity to the world: that is, As a fire in the midſt of a great deal of combuſtible matter ſets all preſently in a flame, ſo doth the tongue in our members, it is a cauſe of contention, ſedition, &c. (and ſo of the greateſt iniquity, that ſin of uncharitableneſs, ſo contrary to the Chriſtian law) to the world, the whole ſociety of men about us. That this is the true rendring of the place, by making the world anſwerable to the ὕλη matter which is ſet on fire (and not that the tongue compared to fire is here ſtyled a world of iniquity) appears by the end of the verſe, where in like manner it is ſaid φλογίζειν to put into a flame τὸν τροχὸν γενέσεως the wheel of affairs. See Note d.

d. Ib. Courſe of nature] That γένεσις ſignifies affairs or actions, all that comes to paſs, ſee Note on Mat. 1. a. Τροχὸς ſignifies a wheel, and the Hebrews are wont Rhetorically to expreſs buſineſs or affairs of the world by the turning of wheels: אין חסבינה גלגלי אופני פרשיכם, how are the rolling, or whirling, of the wheels of your affairs turned? Buxtorf. Inſtit. Epiſtol. Epiſt. 1. And ſo ὁ τροχὸς γενέσεως will ſignifie the compaſs or ſphere or ſucceſſion of affairs, meaning of men or mankind; and ſo putting that into a flame, will be in another phraſe all one with πῦρ τῷ κόσμῳ fire to the world, at the beginning of the verſe, putting the world, that is, all the affairs of the world, into a combuſtion.

Another notion I have had of this phraſe, which I ſhall but mention, by taking γένεσις in the Aſtronomer's notion (touch'd on Note on c. 1. e.) for Nativity or Geniture, as that notes all the events of life, by Aſtrologers conjecturally foretold from the poſition of the heavens at the time of any one's birth. This the Artiſts might fitly repreſent in a wheel, bringing up one part of the life (and the events thereof) after another, to which the antients' wheel of Fortune may ſeem to refer; and when this wheel was repreſented fiery, that would fitly note contentions and wars, &c. And accordingly φλογίζειν τὸν τροχὸν τῆς γενέσεως might be rendred to ſet the wheel of Nativity on a light flame, that is, to turn the whole life into contentions and feuds, which is but an elegant way of expreſſing that ſenſe which is acknowledged to belong to theſe words.

e. V. 7. Every kind of beaſts] For the underſtanding this verſe, it muſt firſt be premiſed that the notion of φύσις nature for γένος kind, or οὐσία eſſence, being, in Heſychius, is commodious to it here, both in the beginning and end of the verſe: ſo that πᾶσα φύσις θηρίων, &c. may ſignifie all kind of beaſts, that is, beaſts indefinitely: ſo ἀνθρωπίνη φύσις may be mankind, that is, men indefinitely of all ages or times, proportionably to δαμάζεται and δεδάμασται is tamed and hath been tamed, that is, in all times perpetually have been tamed. The greater difficulty will be, what is meant by δαμάζειν to tame: that may (as ordinarily it doth) ſignifie cicurare, rare, to take off from wildneſs, and ſo to make tame and familiar, to bring to hand; and that may be very appliable both to θηεία and πετεινὰ, beaſts and birds, which are by men thus tamed, and made ſerviceable to us. But becauſe this is not ſo commonly practiſed in Serpents and Fiſhes, and yet theſe are here named indifferently with the former, it is more reaſonable that another notion of the word ſhould here be pitched on, which may indifferently be appliable to all the kinds here mentioned, and that is the notion of ſubduing, maſtering, getting power over them: ſo ſaith Heſychius, Δαμάζεῖ, ὑποδάεῖ, it ſignifies to be ſubdued, kept under, the very Latin, domari, reſtrained, that it ſhall not be able to offend or hurt; and ſo here ἀκαθάχετον, that which is not, cannot be reſtrained, is oppoſed to it. And then this will be of a larger extent, belong to all hurtful creatures, which by horns, or teeth, or heels, or by their poiſonous nature are able to hurt us, and to all the ſeveral ways and inventions that men have to avoid and reſtrain theſe, by taking them, depriving them of their weapons of offence, their ſtings, their teeth, or when they have bitten or poiſoned any man by curing that wound, overcoming that poiſon. And this laſt of poiſon, if it be not primarily here meant, is certainly to be taken in, as may be gueſſed by the ἀντιπόδοσις, or ſecond part of the ſimilitude, v. 8. where the tongue that no man can ſubdue or reſtrain, is ſaid to be full ἰὸς θανατηφόρου, of deadly, mortiferous poiſon, whereas the poiſon of other things is conquerable, curable, and ſo when v. 6. 'tis ſaid σπιλοῦν to defile, that is, to infect, or poiſon, the whole body: and accordingly the θηρία in the front, which we render beaſts, are vipers, among the Phyſicians, Nicander, &c. whoſe θηριακὰ comes from thence; and ſo θηρίον is uſed for a venomous beaſt, Act. 28. 4. (all one with ἔχιδνα viper. v. 3.) and ſo are Ἑρπετὰ ſerpents alſo, and to that may poſſibly belong the other part of that enumeration, the creatures of the other elements, the air and water, πετεινὰ and ἐνάλια. And then perhaps it may not be amiſs to reſume the common ordinary notion of φύσις nature for the natural quality and faculty of all theſe here named, whether ſtrength, violence, ravenouſneſs or poiſonouſneſs, which is by nature implanted in ſeveral creatures, enabling them to hurt and kill us, which yet ἀνθρωπίνη φύσις, by man's nature, his wit, underſtanding, faculty of inventing of means to ſecure himſelf, or weaken or diſarm them, have from time to time been ſubdued, weakned, deprived of their power of hurting mortally, whereas the tongue cannot be reſtrained; the poiſon of that is mortal, and neither to be cured nor prevented.

f. ἀδιάκριτος

V. 17. Without partiality] That διακρινόμενος ſignifies to diſpute, or doubt, or waver, in the middle voice, and not to judge, or be partial, hath been already ſhewed (ſee Note on c. 2. c. and on Jude m.) To which it is moſt conſequent that ἀδιάκριτος here ſhould ſignifie, without wavering; and ſo it will be a very fit Epithet of the ſupernal wiſdom, the true Chriſtian piety, that he which hath it adheres firmly and conſtantly to Chriſt, whatſoever temptations attempt to drive or invite him from it. And this is moſt fitly added here, where the character of the true Chriſtian is ſet oppoſite to that of the Gnoſticks, whoſe compliances (ſo often noted in him) with the Jews or Heathens, when the Chriſtian was perſecuted by either, were the higheſt degree of wavering and inconſtancy, and eſpecially his doctrine of the ἀδιαφορία, that it was an indifferent thing to forſwear Chriſt in time of perſecution. And ſo this part of the character is fitly prefix'd before ἀνυπόκριτος, without hypocriſie, which oppoſeth the Chriſtian to the falſe deceitful Profeſſor of Chriſtianity, ſuch as betrayed the ſincere orthodox believers to the Jews and perſecuters. If there be any queſtion of this, it muſt be becauſe of the connexion here with καλῆς καρπῶν, good fruits. For thus indeed the word is ſometimes applied, and then it ſignifies an univerſal liberality. Thus in Palladius Lauſiac. Hiſt. κεφ. ϛμδ'. Olympias, which is there called κοινωνὸς καὶ διάκονος πάντων δεομένων, one that communicated and miniſtred to all that wanted, and ſo diſperſed or diſſipated an immenſe wealth, πᾶσιν ἁπλῶς καὶ ἀδιακρίτως ἐπήρκεσεν, ſhe aided all liberally and ἀδιακρίτως· where it may poſſibly ſignifie without any difference; ſo Gentianus Hervetus reads it indiſcriminatim, to all that wanted whatſoever they were: but it may alſo ſignifie without doubting, or wavering, and ſo cohere with the ἄπειρον ἐκεῖνον καὶ ἀμέτρητον πλοῦτον διασκορπίσασα (immediately precedent) diſperſing that infinite and unmeaſurable wealth, which ſhe had, without any doubt, or wavering, or demur, ariſing from worldly fear of her own want, which this liberality might cauſe, as when Chriſt commanded, Luc. 6. 35. to do good and lend, μηδὲν ἀπηλπίζων, deſpairing, or doubting nothing. See Note on that place. And ſo though poſſibly it may ſignifie here, without making any difference in acts of mercy, which is a kind of partiality, yet it may as fitly alſo be rendred without doubting, as that is applicable to mercy and good fruit, that is, to liberality alſo. ἀδιακρί-τως

V. 18. Fruit of righteouſneſs] Some difficulty there is in this verſe, ariſing from the different notions that καρπὸς fruit and εἰρήνη peace are capable of. Καρπὸς fruit noting that which is any way (whether naturally or morally) produced, ſignifies either an effect or reward. As an effect it is uſed v. 17. immediately precedent, where of the ſupernal wiſdom it is ſaid, that it is πλήρης ἀγαθῶν καρπῶν full of good fruits, thoſe fruits being the effects or productions of that wiſdom. But elſewhere it ſeems to be taken in that other notion. So Heb. 12. 11. where chaſtening though at preſent not joyous, is yet ſaid afterward to yield (by this moral way of production, not as an effect, but a reward) the peaceable fruit of righteouſneſs: and ſo here the ſame phraſe, καρπὸς δικαιοσύνης fruit of righteouſneſs, that is, of that ſupernal wiſdom, or Chriſtian piety and charity (ſee Heb. 12. e.) ſignifies the reward of it; and this is here ſaid to be ſown, as there to be yielded or returned (ſo ἀποδίδωσι ſignifies retribution) here ἐν εἰρήνῃ in peace, as there to be εἰρηνικὸς peaceable. Then for εἰρήνη peace, that ſignifies, firſt, that vertue of charity, peace with men; and ſo 'tis certainly uſed in the end of the verſe, in oppoſition to all the uncharitableneſs and emulations in the former part of this and the beginning of the next Chapter, and conſequently ποιεῖν εἰρήνην to do or make peace (proportionable to the phraſes ποιεῖν δικαιοσύνην, to do righteouſneſs, and ποιεῖν ἁμαρτίαν to do or commit ſin) ſignifies to uſe all diligence of endeavour and induſtry to attain it, διώκειν εἰρήνην to purſue peace, φιλοτιμεῖσθαι καὶ ἡσυχάζειν to be emulous, ambitious of quiet, ſtudiouſly to contend for it; and ſo is εἰρηνοποιοὶ peace-makers uſed, (ſee Mat. 5. Note d.) But then it doth alſo ſignifie, according to the notion of the Hebrew שָׁלוֹם, all happineſs and proſperity, as when Peace be to you is the form of ſalutation, and contains all the bleſſings in the world, ſpiritual and temporal, under it; and ſo by the ordinary figure of ſacred Rhetorick, ἀνανέκλασις (ſee Note on Mat. 8. k.) it ſeems to ſignifie here in the former place, in peace, that is, in a moſt happy, gracious manner, or with a confluence of all felicity attending it. g. καρπὸς καρπὸς δικαιοσύνης εἰρήνη ποιεῖν εἰρήνην διώκειν εἰρήνην φιλοτιμεῖσθαι ἡσυχάζειν

Paraphraſe. CHAP. IV.

1. All the open wars among the Jews at this time, (ſee Note on c. 5. c.) and all the lower ſtrifes, and diſſentions, and emulations wherein the Chriſtian Judaizers are now engaged againſt others, (ſee Zonar. in Can. Ap. 65.) are far from any pious or divine ſupernal principle, c. 3. 17. they proceed viſibly from your own carnal hearts, your deſires and purſuits of thoſe things that are matter of ſatisfaction to your luſts within you, thoſe ſenſual luſts which firſt war againſt your reaſon and upper ſoul, and then againſt the directions of God's Spirit, firſt move a ſtrife within your own breaſts, rebelling againſt the law of the mind, Rom. 7. and then diſquiet all others near you.

1. FRom whence come wars and * fightings among you? come they not hence, even of † luſts that war in your members?] * contentions μάχαι † pleaſures ἡδονῶν

2. Ye

2. Ye * luſt, and have not: ye kill, and † deſire to have, and cannot obtain: * ye fight and war, yet ye have not, becauſe ye ask not.]

2. All your coveting, and envying, and contending, and fighting brings you in no kind of profit, becauſe praying to God, which is the only means of attaining, is neglected.

3. Ye ask and receive not, becauſe ye ask amiſs, that ye may conſume it upon your own luſts.]

3. And for them that do pray to God, 'tis yet among many of you only, or principally, for ſuch things which may be inſtrumental to your luſts, and therefore God, who hath promiſed to grant all things that we pray for, if it be for our advantage that he ſhould, doth not grant you ſuch prayers as theſe.

4. Ye adulterers and adultereſſes, know ye not that the friendſhip of the world is enmity with God? Whoſoever therefore will be a friend of the world, is the enemy of God.]

4. And ye that thus behave your ſelves to God as adulterers or adultereſſes to their mates, that receive other loves into competition with him, that think to love God and the world too, muſt know that this cannot be done, the loving of the world, the purſuing of worldly ends or advantages, is not the loving but the hating of God; whoſoever therefore is a lover of the world, is by that to be preſumed to be a profeſs'd enemy of God's.

5. Do ye think that [a] the Scripture ſaith in vain, The ſpirit * that dwelleth in us luſteth to envy?]

5. This odiouſneſs of carnal minds in the ſight of God was long ſince expreſſed in the Old Teſtament concerning the old world, Gen. 6. where, as the cauſe of the threatned deluge, is mentioned, that the ſpirit that was in the men of that age, v. 3. that is, their ſouls or minds, were inſatiably ſet upon their own luſts, imagined evil continually.

6. But he giveth more grace; wherefore he ſaith, God reſiſteth [b] the proud, and giveth grace to the humble.]

6. To thoſe God then gave time of repentance, an hundred and twenty years, and pardon if they would make uſe of it, and ſo God doth ſtill; but that ſtill available to men only upon condition of repentance and reformation, according to what is ſaid in another Scripture, Prov. 3. 34. God ſetteth himſelf againſt the ſtubborn vitious perſon, but is gracious and merciful to the obedient and penitent.

7. Submit your ſelves therefore to God; reſiſt the devil, and he will flie from you.]

7. By this it appears how neceſſary it is for all that expect any mercy from God to be wholly conformed to his will; and whatever ſuggeſtions to envy, ſtrife, emulation, the devil, and that wiſdom which is not from above, c. 3. 15. ſhall offer to you, do you repel them; and it is not in his power without your conſent to hurt you, but he will certainly, being repelled, depart from you.

8. Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you: cleanſe your hands, ye ſinners, and purifie your hearts, ye double-minded.]

8. Make your humble addreſſes in prayer to God, and faithful obedience to him, and he will be ready to aſſiſt you againſt all temptations mentioned ver. 8. As for all you Gnoſticks, that are for God and the world too, ver. 4. (ſee Note a. on ch. 1.) which will profeſs Chriſt no longer than 'tis ſafe to do ſo, inconſtant, cowardly, wavering hypocrites, your hearts muſt be purified from that prophane mixture, and wholly conſecrated to God's ſervice.

9. Be afflicted, and mourn, and weep: let your laughter be turned to mourning, and your joy to heavineſs.]

9. Your reformation of ſuch ſins as theſe muſt be joined with great humiliation, and mourning and lamenting them: And that but ſeaſonably at this time, for there be ſad days approaching on this nation, utter exciſion to the unreformed, to the unbelieving obdurate Jews, and to all the Gnoſtick hereticks among them, ſee c. 5. 1. and Jude Note a.

10. * Humble your ſelves in the ſight of the Lord, and he ſhall lift you up.]

10. The only way to get into the number of thoſe that then ſhall be delivered, is timely to repent and return unto Chriſt.

11. † Speak not evil one of another, brethren. He that ſpeaketh * evil of his brother, and judgeth his brother, ſpeaketh † evil of the law and judgeth the law: but if thou judge the law, thou art not a doer of the law, but a judge.]

11. Speak not againſt them which do not obſerve thoſe legal ceremonies which ſome of you Jewiſh Chriſtians do ſtill retain, nor condemn any man for not obſerving them, for he that doth ſo, ſpeaketh in effect againſt the law by which that Chriſtian rules his actions (that is, the law of Chriſt, the Goſpel) cenſures that for imperfect, in that it commands not thoſe things; and if thou doſt ſo, then inſtead of obeying the law of Chriſt, thou undertakeſt to over-rule and judge it, and canſt not truly be called a Chriſtian.

12. There is one law-giver *, who is able to ſave and to deſtroy: who art thou that judgeſt another?]

12. Chriſt, and none elſe, hath authority to give laws unto us, and puniſh the refractary, and it is not for you to impoſe obſervances where he hath given liberty.

13. Go to now, ye that ſay, [c] To day or to morrow we will go into ſuch a city, and continue there a year, and † buy and ſell, and get gain:]

13. And (as now the times are, a ſudden deſtruction approaching the Jews) one admonition will be very ſeaſonable for thoſe that uſe theſe or the like arrogant forms of ſpeech, To day, &c. aſſuming to themſelves power over the future:

14. Whereas ye know not what ſhall be on the morrow: for what is your life? it is even a vapour that appeareth for a little time, and then vaniſheth away.]

14. Whereas (beſide the Atheiſticalneſs of it, in taking themſelves off from depending on God) it is certain they do not know what they ſhall be able to do to morrow: For even your life it ſelf, on which all your deſigns muſt neceſſarily depend, is but a moſt frail, mortal, tranſitory thing, ſhort and preſently vaniſheth.

15. For that ye ought to ſay, * If the Lord will, we ſhall live, and do this or that.]

15. And therefore your forms of language ought to be of another making, never mentioning any purpoſe of yours, but with ſubordination to the good pleaſure of God.

16. But now ye rejoice in your [d] boaſtings: all ſuch rejoicing is † evil.]

16. And for you to take pleaſure in ſuch inſolent ſpeeches as theſe, is a wicked Atheiſtical thing.

17. Therefore to him that knoweth to do good, and doth it not, to him it is ſin.]

17. And for Chriſtians to be guilty of this, who have received ſo much light and knowledge to the contrary, this will render you the more inexcuſably guilty and puniſhable.

Annotations on Chap. IV.

V. 5. The Scripture ſaith] There is no place of Scripture of the Old Teſtament which can own ſo much of this citation as that Gen. 6. where in the Septuagint's reading there is πνεῦμα ſpirit, and ἐμμένει abideth; and the ἐμμένον abiding there, is all one with the κατοικεῖν ſojourning here. Now whereas 'tis here added of that Spirit, that it doth ἐπιποθεῖν εἰς φθόνον, deſire to envy, firſt 'tis clear that the πνεῦμά μου my ſpirit, there, is the ſpirit or ſoul of man, given him by God, and ſo called God's in reſpect of the original, (ſee Note on 1 Pet. 3. f.) but ſignifies the mind of man as it is in him, and is corrupted by an habit of worldly and wicked deſires, which cannot be affirmed of God's holy Spirit, (and for any evil Angel, it will be hard to ſay, either that ſuch dwell in, or that it is they that luſt in us. It is our own corrupt hearts, even when the devils move us, to which the luſt and all the ſin is to he imputed:) and 2ly, this is parallel to what Gen. 6. 3. is ſaid of that old world, that man is fleſh and the thoughts of his heart always evil, that is, his carnal or worldly deſires are inſatiable, bent to all manner of wickedneſs; the deſires here being diſtinctly noted by ἐπιποθεῖν, deſiring, and either the wickedneſs or inſatiateneſs of them by φθόνος envy, which ſometimes in Authors is the contrary to liberality, and ſignifies all manner of covetouſneſs, pining to ſee any man have what we have not, and elſewhere ſignifies malice, violence, and the like. As for the addition here ver. 6. But he giveth more grace, that ſeems to be the Apoſtle's own obſervation of that place in Geneſis, that when the world ſo provoked God, yet he gave them time of repentance (as it there follows, Nevertheleſs his days ſhall be an hundred and twenty years, they ſhall have that ſpace allowed them to reform and eſcape punishment) and so God in Christ doth now; and upon repentance there is yet mercy and pardon to be had, upon which is superstructed naturally that which follows, Wherefore be saith, &c.

b. ὑπήφανος — V. 6. The proud] The word ὑπήφανος here notes not particularly the vice of pride and haughtiness, but a general disobedience and resistence against the Law of God, which is called ὕβρις, contumeliousness, and superbia, pride, in opposition to obedience, as in Virgil,

——— Regum est
Parcere subjectis, & debellare superbos,

It is the part of Kings to spare those that submit, and subdue the proud: a place directly parallel to this here out of the Proverbs, and which S. Augustine conceives to be had from thence. The place in the Proverbs reads, God scorneth the scorners (because scorners use to repel with scoffs all good counsels and admonitions.) And so saith Æschylus Περσ.

Ζεὺς τοι κολασὴς τ' ὑπερκόμπων ἄγαν
Φρονημάτων ἔπεσιν εὐθυντὴρ βαρύς,

God is the just and heavy punisher of the proud.

c. σήμερον — προβάσσόμεθα — eth — ith — eth — V. 13. To day, or to —] It was an old saying of the Hebrews, mentioned by Ben Syra, Let no man say he will do any thing unless he first say, If the Lord will. On which occasion there follows in him a story of a man, who, when he said, To morrow I will sit with my spouse in the marriage-chamber, was admonish'd that he ought to say, אם גזר השם If God will, and he answered, Whether God will or not, I will sit there. Of whom, saith he, it followed, that he sat with her all the day, but at night when they were going to bed, before he knew her, they were both dead. Wherefore they said, The spouse went up to her marriage-bed, and knew not what would befall her; therefore whosoever desires to do any thing, let him first say, If God will.

d. Ἀλαζονεία αὐθάδεια — V. 16. Boastings] Ἀλαζονεία signifies boasting, or assuming to ones self more than belongs to him, and differs from αὐθάδεια self-pleasing or insolence, Tit. 1. 7. in this, that this is a great love, or high opinion, of ones self, φιλαυτία self-love, 2 Tim. 3. 2. being puffed up, 1 Cor. 13. 4. being wise in ones own conceit, Rom. 11. 25. and 12. 16. but that is a fastuous speaking: and as this is ordinarily expressed in magnifying ones own abilities or power above other men, so hath it here a notion little different from it, speaking in such a form as if he depended not upon God himself, and so it belongs to the fault reprehended v. 13. when a man promises or affirms that simply which is not in his power, but as God is pleased to enable or concur with him. And thus it is used Prov. 27. 1. Boast not thy self of to morrow, that is, assume not to thy self arrogantly that thou wilt do this or that to morrow, for, saith Solomon, thou knowest not what a day may bring forth. These kind of speeches then are here called ἀλαζονείαι boastings, and they that take pleasure in such language, in assuming thus to themselves, speaking thus magnificently of their own purposes, as here said καυχᾶσθε ἐν ταῖς ἀλαζονείαις, to rejoice, or glory, in such boasting: and though all sort of rejoicing be not, yet πᾶσα καύχησις τοιαύτη, all such kind of rejoicing, is evil, v. 16. and that in an high degree.

Paraphrase.

CHAP. V.

1. There will now shortly come such days, that all the rich among you, or that place any part of their interest on this world, are likely to have a very mournful time of it, in respect of their great disappointments, and the sad destructions and calamities that are about to fall on the Jews.

1. GO to now, ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries * that shall come upon you.]

* that come ἐπερχομέναις

2. You have not employed your wealth, like faithful stewards, as God hath appointed you, to the relief of them that want, but let them rot in your hands for want of use: your food, like Manna, is putrified by being kept, Exod. 16. 20. and so the garments which would have covered the needy, being laid up in your wardrobes, are devoured by moths.

2. Your riches are † corrupted, and your garments * moth eaten.]

† putrified σέσηπε
* are become — γέγονεν † are rusified κέκλωε
* you have treasured it up ἐθησαυρίσατε

a. 3. And that rust which is wont to breed in iron by lying unused, breeds in your coin, your gold and silver (which are not ordinarily capable of rust) and this covetous withholding more than is meet, will not only tend to your want, but is moreover a foul and crying sin, that shall rise in judgment against you, and shall gnaw on and devour your flesh; your treasuring up wealth is as the treasuring up fire, which shall only help to bring more miseries upon you, and so more fearfully to consume you, when the destruction of the Jews, now approaching, comes, and falls most sharply upon the wealthiest men, (as soon after it fell out.)

3. Your gold and silver † is cankered, and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh [a] as it were fire: * ye have heaped treasure together for the last days.]

4. These riches of yours have not kept you from being unjust, but rather tempted you to oppression of the poor labourer. And this griping and cruelty of yours is a crying sin, and will bring down severe vengeance upon you from the Lord of hosts.

4. Behold, the hire of the labourers which have reaped down your fields, † which is of you kept back by fraud, crieth: and the cries of them which have reaped are entred into the ears of the Lord of * sabaoth.]

† being by you taken away, ὑφ' ὑμῶν ἀπεστερημένος
* hosts σαβαὼθ

5. You have set your hearts upon the pitiful poor delights and joys of this earth, lived delicately and luxuriously (as Dives.) And what hath all this been, but the pampering your selves as it were for the shambles?

5. Ye have † lived in pleasure on the earth, and been wanton: ye have * nourished your hearts as in a day of slaughter.]

† revelled and been luxurious ἐτρυφήσατε
* fed your hearts as for the day — ἐθρέψατε — ὡς ἐν

6. Your nation hath condemned Christ to death and crucified him, he making no resistance; and now ye Gnostick Judaizers, have dealt in like manner with the pure orthodox Christians.

6. Ye have condemned and killed the just; and he doth not resist you.]

b. 7. As for you that are Christians indeed, and are now persecuted by them, ye may be confident that Christ will shortly come and avenge his and your cause upon them, see ver. 8. and therefore ye may well wait patiently so short a space, till that time come, and then you shall be rescued from the present distresses (see Note on Mat. 24. b.) For thus doth the husbandman give you an example of patience, waiting for the fruit of the earth, and in order to that, for the showers that come in the seed-time to fit the ground, and before harvest or reaping, to plump the corn, and accordingly he defers to do one or other, to sow or reap, with patience, and attendance to the other duties of his calling, till those seasons come.

7. Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the [b] coming of the Lord. Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the pretious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the † early and latter rain.]

† former πρώϊμον

8. And their example ye may very fitly transcribe at this time, and thereby confirm and encourage your selves in your adherence to Christ, whatever your sufferings are, as being assured that coming of Christ (described Mat. 24.) in vengeance on his enemies, is now very near approaching (see Mat. 24. b. and Heb. 10. 37.)

8. * Be ye also patient, stablish your hearts: for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh]

* Do ye endure patiently, and your selves confirm — μακροθυμήσατε καὶ ὑμεῖς στηρίξατε

c. 9. Envy not one another, break not out into those acts of zeal or emulation or murmuring against one another, lest you bring that vengeance upon you; for behold the coming of Christ to the destruction of the Jews and malicious persecuting Gnosticks, is now very nigh at hand, see Mat. 24. b.

9. [c] † Grudge not one against another, brethren, lest ye be condemned: behold, the Judge standeth before the * door.]

† Do not sigh
* gates θυρῶν

10. And whatsoever the temptations or persecutions are which might tempt you to comply and join with the persecuters, consider what ye read and know of the prophets of God in the old Testament, who when they came to proclaim God's judgments against the sinful Jews, were generally very contumeliously used by them, but yet never fainted or were discouraged thereby: and such examples will fortifie you against the like temptations, that they may not have any impression on you, to weary you out of your constancy, and bring you to join with the Judaizers.

10. Take, my brethren, the prophets, who have spoken in the name of the Lord, for an example of suffering affliction, and of † patience.]

† longanimity μακροθυμίας

11. Behold,

11. Behold, * we count them happy which endure. Ye have heard of the patience of Job, and have ſeen the end of the Lord; that the Lord is pitiful and of tender mercy.]

11. There is nothing that, according to the principles of Chriſtianity, is more honourable and bliſsful, than ſuffering patiently and conſtantly. You remember what ſufferings Job met with, and upon his patient bearing of them, what in the end the Lord gave him, double to all that he had loſt, Job 42. 10. By which it appears, how far God is from deſpiſing us in our afflictions, or leaving us in the hands of the perſecuters, how much he loves, and how careful he is of you.

12. But above all things, my brethren, ſwear not, neither by heaven, nor by the earth, nor by any other oath: but let your yea be yea, and your nay nay; leſt you fall into † condemnation.]

12. One ſpecial caveat I ſhall farther give you, that ye permit not your ſelves that cuſtom of ſwearing, by heaven or earth, or any other form of oath. Inſtead of ſuch unneceſſary cuſtoms it will be much more for your turn that ye take care that your performances be agreeable to your words (ſee Note on 2 Cor. 1. b.) that you fall not into lying or or falſe ſpeaking.

13. Is any among you afflicted? let him pray. Is any merry? let him ſing Pſalms.]

13. Again let your care be, that whenever any affliction befalls you, your praying to God be the conſtant effect of it, as on the other ſide, ſinging thankſgivings, of your proſperity.

14. Is any ſick among you? let him call for the [e] elders of the Church, and let them pray over him, [f] anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord:].

14. When any man falls into any diſeaſe, he is to look on it as that which comes from God for ſome ſpecial end of his, very ordinarily for ſome ſin of ours committed either againſt God or man, not yet repented of, as it ought: and becauſe the man ſo viſited may not be ſo well able to judge of himſelf, but that he may ſtand in need of ſpiritual directions and counſel, to diſcern his own guilts, and becauſe whatſoever his condition be, he may receive much benefit thereby, let him call to his aſſiſtance ſome ſpiritual perſon, the Biſhop in every city (ſee Note on Act. 11. b.) or whoſoever is by or under him ordained for ſuch offices; and when he hath afforded the ſick man his beſt directions and aſſiſtance, let him alſo pray to God with and form him, that God will pardon his ſins, aſſuage his pains, remove the diſeaſe, and reſtore him to his former health, withal uſing that ceremony of unction, ſo ordinarily uſed by Chriſt in curing diſeaſes, and doing it in the name of Chriſt.

15. And the prayer of faith ſhall ſave the ſick, and the Lord ſhall raiſe him up, and if he have committed ſins, [g] * they ſhall be forgiven him.]

15. And the prayer of the Biſhop, &c. and of the ſick, if it come from faith in Chriſt in the one, praying to God in Chriſt for his recovery, and in the ſick perſon from a true Chriſtian, penitent heart, ſhall be of force (ſave where God is pleaſed otherwiſe to diſpoſe of it, for the good of the patient and his own glory) to heal and recover the ſick, (ſee Note on Mat. 10. g. and Luc. 13. b.) and God ſhall reſtore him to his former health: To which purpoſe alſo it is uſeful, that, if upon examination he be found to have committed any waſting ſin or ſins, which probably have brought this diſeaſe on him, the ſick perſon firſt fit himſelf for, and then receive abſolution from the Biſhop.

16. [h] Confeſs † your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed: The * effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much.]

16. Upon theſe conſiderations therefore, it will be very proper for all that are in this eſtate, to make acknowledgment of their ſins to ſuch as are thus called to viſit them, and that, beſides other reſpects, in order to their cure from ſuch diſeaſes as are then upon them, by virtue of their interceſſion to God for thoſe who ſhall thus approve to them the ſincerity of their repentance, ſee Gen. 20. 7. For this is certainly known, that the prayer of a man of God, to which he is incited by the Spirit (as the prophets were when they prayed, and as they were under the Goſpel who had the gift of miracles, ſee Note on Gal. 5. b.) will be very effectual, even work miraculous cures.

17. Elias was a man ſubject to like paſſions as we are, and he prayed earneſtly that it might not rain, and it rained not on the † earth by the ſpace of three years and ſix months.]

17. Elias was a prophet, and a righteous man, but a man for all that, and ſubject to the ſame afflictions and frailties that we are; and yet by earneſt prayer he brought drought and famine upon the land, for the puniſhment of the ſins of the people, that ran idolatrouſly after Baal, and ſo upon the land of the ten tribes it rained not for three years and an half, Luk. 4. 25. and Rev. 11. 6.

18. And he prayed again, and the heaven gave rain, and the earth brought forth her fruit.]

18. And upon ſome reformation he again prayed, 1 Kin. 18. 45. and he was heard in abundance of rain and fruits.

19. Brethren, If any of you do err from the truth, and one convert him,]

19. To conclude this diſcourſe, begun v. 14. let this be remembred and conſidered by all, If any Chriſtian tranſgreſs the Evangelical rule of life, fall into ſin, and any man take him off from that vicious courſe,

20. Let him know, that he which converteth the ſinner from the error of his way, ſhall ſave a ſoul from death, and ſhall [i] hide a multitude of ſins.]

20. It is a moſt excellent glorious work of mercy; which he hath wrought, the effect of which is, that God will free him on whom this change is wrought from death eternal, and perhaps from temporal preſent death through ſickneſs fallen on him for that ſin, ver. 15. and beſides he will accept and reward that charity of him that hath wrought that good work on him with the free diſcharge of whatſoever ſins he hath formerly been guilty, but hath now repented of.

Annotations on Chap. V.

a. ὡς πῦρ ἐθησαυρίσατε

V. 3. As it were fire] That the words ὡς πῦρ, as fire, are to be joined with ἐθησαυρίσατε, ye have treaſured up, and not with the former, the ſenſe doth much inforce, and the antient manner of writing without points doth well permit; and it hath a ſpecial ſignificancy in this place, agreeable to the times wherein this Epiſtle was written. For the laſt days, being the time of the Jews deſtruction, (ſee Note on Act. 2. b.) and to treaſure up wealth as fire, being no more than to lay up their wealth ſo as it ſhould miſchief, and devour, and conſume inſtead of advantaging them, this is here moſt truly ſaid of the uncharitable and unchriſtian Judaizers at that time, in reſpect of the deſtruction of that people approaching, where the rich miſers were the moſt miſerably haraſs'd of any. See Note on Rev. 9. c.

ἐγγίζει ἡ παρουσία

b. παρουσία τῦ κυρίυ

V. 7. Coming of the Lord] The coming of the Lord is here expreſly defined by Oecumenius to be Ῥωμαϊκὴ ἔφοδος the expedition of the Romans, to which he there applies the words of Chriſt concerning John, If I will that he tarry till I come, Καὶ γὰρ παρέμεινεν ἕως τότε ὁ τῆς ζωῆς ταύτης χρόνος ἕως τῆς ἁλώσεως Ἱερουσαλὴμ καὶ μικρὸν ἐπέκεινα, For the time of this life was to him extended until the taking of Jeruſalem, and a little beyond it.

c. μὴ στενάζετε

V. 9. Grudge not] The practices of the Zelots among the Jews, a little before the great miſerable deſtruction of that people, are often mentioned in Joſephus, and referred to in this Epiſtle eſpecially, and in thoſe of S. Peter, written about the ſame time and to the ſame perſons that this of S. James was, viz. to the diſperſed of the Jews. And although thoſe to whom the Epiſtles were directed immediately were the Jewiſh Chriſtians, yet of theſe there were ſo many that did ſtand for the continuance of the Moſaical Law, and ſo were Judaizing Chriſtians, and theſe lived ſo intermixtly with the unconverted Jews themſelves, and ſo maliciouſly acted with them to the perſecuting of the orthodox Chriſtians, that as ſome paſſages of this Epiſtle ſeem to belong only to the Jews unconverted, as the former part of this Chapter till ver. 7. ſo many more pertain to thoſe that went on with them in their ſins, thoſe that reconciled Chriſtianity and the world, and all the moſt enormous ſenſual ſins, c. 4. 4. and particularly the outrageous practices of the Zelots, For ſo it appears by Act. 21. 20. that many miriads of converted, or believing, Chriſtian Jews were all ζηλωταὶ τῦ νόμυ, of the number of the Zelots, that were very vehement perſecutors of all that ſtood not for the Law of Moſes. To theſe refers the unruly tongue c. 3. compared to a fire that kindled ſo much matter, made ſuch combuſtions among them, φλογίζουσα ſetting into a flame the whole wheel, or courſe, of affairs, v. 5, 6. untamable, v. 8. full of curſing and bitterneſs, v. 10, 11. and in plain words πικρὸς ζῆλος bitter zeal, v. 14. and again ζῆλος zeal or envy, v. 16. and from thence ζῆλος ἀκαταστασία καὶ πᾶν φαῦλον πρᾶγμα, ſedition, or tumultuouſneſs, and every evil deed, the very character of the

πόλεμοι καὶ μάχαι

Zelots in Joſephus: ſo again, c. 4. the πόλεμοι καὶ μάχαι ἐν ὑμῖν, the wars and quarrels among them, ver. 1. which, as it is obſerved, were firſt inteſtine among themſelves, begun by thoſe of the Zelots, and ſo prepared them to their wretched deſolation when the Roman Eagles came: and more punctually v. 2. φονεύετε καὶ ζηλοῦτε ye kill and envy. And to this purpoſe the φονεύετε καὶ ζηλοῦτε here moſt properly belongs, which though it ſignifie ſighing, or groaning, or murmuring, yet becauſe that is an effect of envy and emulation, which ſighs at other men's proſperity, and becauſe envy proceeds wholly from uncontentedneſs, (as in the ſtory of Cain it appears, firſt his countenance was ſad, and then he maligns and ſlays his brother;) therefore by a figure it is ſet to ſignifie the ſame thing that φθόνος and ζῆλος, envy and bitter zeal had before ſo often done.

d. V. 12. Condemnation] The antient Copies generally (and, beſide thoſe produced by others, the forementioned in Magdalene College Library in Oxford) read εἰς ὑπόκρισιν into hypocriſie. The word ὑπόκρισις in the Septuagint ſignifies ψευδολογία falſe ſpeaking; for the Hebrew חנף, which vulgarly ſignifies to be an hypocrite, to diſſemble, ſignifies alſo to lye; to deceive, to deal fraudently (as near in ſignification as in ſound to our knave, as it is now uſed among us:) and ſo one of theſe is taken for the other, the word ὑπόκρισις ſet to ſignifie ψευδολογία, falſe ſpeaking. And then the exhortation of this place will be parallel to that of Philo, Κάλλιστον τὸ ἀνώμοτον, ὕστερον δὲ ἀληθεύειν ἐφ' ἑκάστοις ὡς πανταχοῦ λόγους ὄρκους εἶναι νομίζειν. It is beſt not to ſwear at all, but to take ſuch care of ſpeaking truth with every man, that our words may be thought to be oaths. And that of the Arabians, Let thy ſpeech be I and No, that thou mayſt be a true ſpeaker among all men; and Joſeph. de Bell. Jud. l. 2. c. 12. of a ſort of Jews, Πᾶν μὲν τὸ ῥηθὲν ὑπ' αὐτῶν ἰσχυρότερον ὅρκου· τὸ δὲ ὀμνύειν αὐτοῖς ἄπειρον, κρεῖττον αὐτὸ τῆς ἐπιορκίας ὑπολαμβάνοντες, ἤδη γὰρ ἤδη καταγνῶσθαί φασι τὸν ἀπιστούμενον δίχα Θεοῦ, All that is ſaid by them is ſtronger than an oath. Swearing is forbidden by them, counting it worſe than perjury, and affirming that that man is already condemned as unfit to be truſted, which is not believed without calling God to witneſs.

c. Πρεσβύτεροι τῆς ἐκκλησίας V. 14. Elders of the Church] What is here meant by Πρεσβύτεροι τῆς ἐκκλησίας, Elders of the Church, is not eaſie to be determined. If there were at the time of the writing this Epiſtle, beſide the ſeveral Biſhops in each Church, a ſecond order, of Presbyters under the Biſhops, and above the Deacons, and of them more than one in each Church, it would then be moſt reaſonable to interpret this place of thoſe. But becauſe there is no evidence whereby theſe may appear to have been ſo early brought into the Church, (ſee Act. 11. b.) and becauſe Πρεσβύτεροι in the Plural doth no way conclude that there were more of theſe Elders than one in each particular Church (any more than that the ſick man was bound to call for more than one) and becauſe Πρεσβύτεροι, Elders of the Church, was both in the Scripture-ſtyle (ſee Note on Act. 11. b.) and in the firſt writers, the title of Biſhops, and becauſe when there were ſecondary Presbyters more than one in every city, the ſick man cannot be thought obliged by this Text to call for the whole college, or one ſick man for more than one; and laſtly, becauſe the viſiting of the ſick is antiently mentioned as one branch of the office of Biſhops; therefore it may very reaſonably be reſolved, that the Biſhops of the Church, (not the Elders of the Jewiſh Synagogue, but the Biſhops of the Chriſtian Church, Seniores Chriſtianæ congregationis, as Eraſmus paraphraſeth it, the Elders, or Governours, of the Chriſtian congregation) one in each particular Church, but many in the univerſal Church, and ſo alſo many in the Church of the diſperſion, to which this Epiſtle is addreſſed, are here meant by S. James. Thus in Polycarp's Epiſtle to the Philippians, where the Πρεσβύτεροι Elders being the higheſt order mentioned, and thoſe to whom κρίσεως judicature belongs, may (as in Papias, and Irenæus, and Clemens Alexandrinus, and Tertullian they do) moſt reaſonably be conceived to denote Biſhops. One part of their office is ſet down, that they are ἐπισκεπτόμενοι πάντας ἀσθενεῖς, thoſe that viſit all the ſick. And accordingly ſo it moſt probably muſt in this place.

Ib. Anointing him with oil] That anointing with oil was a ceremony ſometimes uſed by Chriſt and his Apoſtles in working their miraculous cures, healing diſeaſes, and caſting out devils, appears Mar. 6. 13. where at the Apoſtle's going out, it is ſaid, that they caſt out devils, καὶ ἤλειφον ἔλαίῳ πολλοὺς ἀῤῥώστους, καὶ ἐθεράπευον, and anointed many ſick perſons with oil, and cured them. Another ceremony there was uſed to the ſame purpoſe, impoſition of hands, Mar. 16. 18. and Act. 9. 17. and 28. 8. And to theſe prayer was added as the more effectual and ſubſtantial performance, of which Unction and Impoſition of hands were only the ceremonies; and this prayer commenced in the name of Chriſt, or elſe the name of Chriſt, in prayer, called over the ſick. And by theſe means, together with the ſick man's examining and confeſſing, and ſincerely forſaking whatſoever ſin he ſtood guilty of, either toward God or man, it was ordinarily, while thoſe extraordinary gifts remained in the Church, for diſeaſes to be cured, and health reſtored to the ſick, without the uſe of any other means, of phyſick, &c. where as the prayer of faith, or calling the name of Chriſt over the ſick, was the means of curing the diſeaſe, v. 15. and ſo Act. 3. 16. Chriſt's name hath made this man ſtrong, and the faith which is by him hath given him this perfect ſoundneſs; ſo the ceremony, whether of Oil or Impoſition of hands, was indifferently either uſed or not uſed by them. In the Goſpels many ſuch cures are wrought without either; and ſo in the Acts by taking by the hand, by embracing, c. 3. 7. c. 20. 10. and by his bare word, ch. 9. 34. and ſo again ver. 40. and c. 14. 10. and c. 16. 18. and 19. 12. From whence it appears, Firſt, to what end this Unction was uſed, preciſely to that of miraculous healing, or recovering the ſick to health; and that not through any efficacy or virtue in the oil, but directly the contrary, as touching the eyes, laying on the hands, and ſaying the word, were uſed, none of which have any natural force in them, nor were uſed on other deſign than to demonſtrate the miraculouſneſs of the work, which was wrought without any contribution of means. Secondly, that this uſage, as a bare ceremony, was not inſtituted by Chriſt, or any way commanded to be continued by the Apoſtles or their ſucceſſors in the Church, even while the gifts of healing did continue among them, but was by the Apoſtles themſelves very frequently omitted in their working of cures. Thirdly, for that uſe of unction or enoiling, as a viand to thoſe that depart out of the world, there being nothing ſaid of it here (but on the contrary the whole uſe of it in order to the recovering of the ſick,) there is no colour of ground for aſſerting it, nor obligation to the uſe of it, to be met with in the New Teſtament; and therefore allowing it to be a bare ceremony, or a ſign of our ſpiritual cure, it is ſtrange how it ſhould come to be eſteemed a Sacrament, and that diſtinguiſhed from Abſolution on the ſick bed, and as ſuch, be deemed, neceſſary to all that depart out of this world, and uſed to them only when it is thought certain that they will die, and all this meerly on the authority of this one place, where it is deſigned on purpoſe to the recovering of the ſick perſon. Fourthly, that even in order to the recovering of the ſick, it is not now a ceremony of any propriety or fitneſs for uſe, the gift of miraculous healing being not now pretended to in the Church, and therefore this ceremony which was then ſometimes attendant on that gift, and was adjoined to the exerciſe of it, on purpoſe to ſhew that it was clearly a gift, operating without natural means (to which end the unefficaciouſneſs of unction was very proper) muſt long ſince ceaſe to have any propriety. Mean while the other part of S. James's direction here to the ſick are very worthy obſerving in order to our preſent practice; that they ſhould call for the Elders of the Church; that thoſe Elders ſhould pray over, or for them, and that in the name of our Lord Jeſus; and that if the ſick

have upon examination been found guilty of any ſin or ſins, which may probably have brought that admonition from heaven (that ſickneſs) upon him, he confeſs them to God, and if they be treſpaſſes againſt a brother, confeſs them to the injured perſon, and deſire his reconciliation alſo, and in either caſe approve the ſincerity of his reſolution, contrition and change of mind to the Elder or ſpiritual perſon, who may be deemed in many reſpects more likely to paſs a right judgment on it than he can on himſelf, and by his offices is rendred moſt fit to be thus intruſted and employed; and then laſtly, that upon a due performance of all this, and upon a due preparation of the patient, and expreſſion of his ſincere deſire of it, the Abſolution of the Church ſhould be afforded him. And as this may be a very proper method to be uſed for the obtaining the peace of God, and of real comfort to the true penitent ſoul; ſo may it now by the bleſſing of God, in caſe the diſeaſe was ſent for ſuch correction, be a moſt probable means, together with the skilful directions and applications of the Phyſician, and a patient ſubmiſſion to them, σώζειν κάμνοντα, to recover the diſeaſed: and to qualifie him to receive benefit by the Phyſician, and to partake of the promiſe here, ἐγερεῖ αὐτὸν ὁ Κύριος, The Lord ſhall raiſe him up, when he in wiſdom and mercy ſhall ſee that fitteſt for him; and the like may be ſaid of all other afflictions. For as certainly as God hath the diſpoſing of the world, every particular diſeaſe that befals any is ſent by him, and from him comes with ſome commiſſion, whether to remove out of this world, or to exerciſe patience, or to mortifie ſin, or to call to reformation; and if the latter be it (as I think I may truly ſay moſt commonly it is, and it is moſt ſafe to ſuſpect and examine always whether it be not ſo) then nothing can more contribute to the remove of this evil than to take away the cauſe of it, and to perform that work for which it was ſent, according to what we find in the cures wrought by Chriſt, that the forgiving of the patient's ſins, Son, thy ſins are forgiven thee, is the ordinary preface to his recovery. And ſo Eccluſ. 2. 11. before God's releaſing, or delivering, in time of tribulation, there is firſt his δοῦναι ἀφέσεις remitting of ſins, as 2 Mac. 3. when Heliodorus had been ſcourged for his ſacrilegious enterprize, and the high prieſt offered ſacrifice for his recovery, v. 32. the Prieſt is ſaid to have made an atonement, and God thereupon to have granted him life, v. 33. And ſo in Hezekiah's ſickneſs, when the Prophet is ſent unto him, this is the method of his recovery. And accordingly the ſon of Syrach counſels, Eccluſ. 38. 9. My ſon, in thy ſickneſs be not negligent: but pray unto the Lord, and he will make thee whole. Leave off from ſin, and order thy hands aright, and cleanſe thy heart from all wickedneſs. Give a ſweet ſavour, and a memorial of fine flower; and make a fat offering, as one that is to die. Then give place to the Phyſician, for the Lord hath created him. ——There is a time when in their hands there is good ſucceſs. And why may not this be that time which I now mention? The errors of the Romiſh practice in this point are very ſufficiently provided againſt by our Biſhops in the days of Henry the Eighth, in their book ſet out by the King, and intituled, A neceſſary Doctrine and Erudition for any Chriſtian man, upon the head of Extreme Unction. It is agreably the grave and ſober concluſion of Cutbert Tonſtall Biſhop of Durham at that tiſſie in his book Contra impios blaſphematores Dei prædeſtinationis, p. 53. ſpeaking of theſe very words of S. James, Hanc ſalutarem admonitionem ſequens Eccleſia Catholica ſuadet ante ulla corpori adhibenda humana medicamenta animam Deo eſſe reconciliandam, nè fruſtrà laboret medicus illi ſubvenire quem Deus ob peccatum flagellat, ſine cujus prius obtenta gratia non convaleſcet æger, The Catholick Church following this wholſome admonition adviſes, before men uſe any human medicines to the body, that their ſouls be reconciled to God, leſt the Phyſician labour in vain to cure them whom God chaſtiſeth for ſin, without whoſe pardon firſt obtained, the ſick will not recover. This indeed is a proper uſe of, and concluſion from this Text: and it will hardly without wreſtling yield any other.

V. 15. They ſhall be forgiven him] That ἀφεθήσεται here muſt be taken Impersonally, and ſo rendred, abſolution, or remiſſion, ſhall be given him, may appear by the antecedent ἁμαρτίας ſins, which being the Plural number cannot be joined with this which is in the Singular, nor is there any other Noun that can belong to it: For if ὁ Κύριος the Lord were the antecedent to it, it muſt have been in the Active voice, ἀφήσει he ſhall remit them. And thus in all probability it would have been, if it had been a promiſe of God's pardon or remiſſion; for then, as it was ſaid, the Lord ſhall raiſe him up, ſo would it commodiouſly have been added, and if he have committed ſins, he, that is, the Lord, will remit them. By this Impersonal form therefore ſomewhat elſe ſeems to be meant beſides the Lord's remiſſion, and then that, from the precedent mention of the Elders of the Church, will be concluded to be the abſolution of the Church in the hands of the Rulers thereof, the Biſhops, of which, ſee Note on John 20. 23. This is of two ſorts; firſt, a releaſe of the offender from the publick Cenſures of the Church, Excommunication, &c. (inflicted on ſcandalous offenders upon publick cognizance of their faults) upon repentance reſtoring ſuch to their communion again: ſecondly, more private, in caſe of any waſting ſin more privately committed, and in confeſſion revealed to the ſpiritual perſon; in which caſe, upon faithful promiſe of reformation and obedience to ſpiritual advice and direction (upon recovery to health) the Elder may and ought to give the ſick perſon the peace of the Church, and the benefit of Abſolution. And that being by him done Miniſterially, and pro officio, and clave non errante, as it brings the bleſſing and prayers of the Church along with it, ſo it may reaſonably tend to the quieting of the Conſcience, and avoiding all ſcruple and doubtfulneſs (as our Church affirms in the exhortation before the Communion) and be a means of obtaining a releaſe from the diſeaſe if God ſee fit, or a pawn and pledge of remiſſion in heaven.

V. 16. Confeſs your faults—] What is the meaning of παραπτώματα ſins here, is matter of ſome doubt: For as, according to the notation of the word, it may ſignifie ſome lapſes or lighter ſins, and ſo be oppoſed to ἁμαρτίας πεποιηκώς, having committed ſins, in the former verſe; ſo by the ἀλλήλοις one to another, adjoining, it may ſeem to be reſtrained to treſpaſſes, offences againſt the brethren, that is, other men, or Chriſtians, and ſo to be oppoſed to ἁμαρτίας ſins againſt God. In either of theſe notions the ἐξομολογεῖσθε ἀλλήλοις confeſſing one to another will not neceſſarily import any more than confeſſing thoſe lighter ſins to any inferior fellow-Chriſtian, or to the wronged brother, the addition of whoſe prayers may be very uſeful to the obtaining any mercy from God, particularly that of the ἰαθῇ healing, that here follows; and the ſeeking his reconciliation in caſe of treſpaſs will be a duty, if not of this, of another Text, Mat. 5. 24. and muſt be performed before there be any reaſon to hope that God will accept his private offerings or prayers, for the removing that puniſhment which his injuring his brother hath cried to heaven for and fetch'd down upon him. But it is to be obſerved, that the King's MS reads this place with ſome variation, ἐξομολογεῖσθε οὖν ἀλλήλοις τὰς ἁμαρτίας, Confeſs therefore your ſins to one another, and ſo the Latin alſo. And then as that diſtinction of the two ſorts of ſins, heavier and lighter, againſt God and againſt the brother, is ſuperſeded here; ſo the οὖν therefore, connecting it to what went before, the prayer and abſolution of the Elders, and indeed the Elders being the only perſons who are ſuppoſed to be preſent there, and whoſe prayers ex officio will be moſt fit to be compared with Elias's praying, v. 17. it muſt follow, that the ἀλλήλοις one to another, muſt be reſtrained only to the Elders forementioned (as πάντες ἀλλήλοις ὑποτασσόμενοι in the ordinary Copies, 1 Pet. 5. 5. Be ye all ſubject to one another, muſt ſignifie, as it is defined by the matter, ſubjection which is not mutual, nor of ſuperiors to inferiors, nor of equals to equals, but only of inferiors to ſuperiors) and the confeſſing of ſins to them be here preſcribed as the preparative and condition of their

their Abſolution. To which purpoſe it is certain, that as Repentance, if it be ſincere, comprehends confeſſion to God, and if the penitent deſire to approve the ſincerity of it to the ſpiritual perſon, and obtain Abſolution from him, it is neceſſary that he make at leaſt a general confeſſion, and ſuch as ſhall not hide any ſort of his guilts from him, (as we read at John Baptiſt's Baptiſm, Mat. 3. 6. and in the ſtory Mat. 19. 18. where the Greek Fathers and Scholiaſts agree, Δεῖ πάντα πιστὸν λέγειν τὰς ἑαυτῶν ἁμαρτίας, &c. Every faithful man ought to tell his offences, and to renounce and diſclaim them,) and very uſeful and expedient that he deſcend to particulars alſo, that his prayers may be more particularly adapted to his wants, and probably prove more efficacious by this means; ſo this particular confeſſion will be very advantageous to the penitent for the obtaining direction to the moſt proper remedies for the reſiſting and preventing the returns of thoſe ſins, in order to his fortifying himſelf againſt them.

i. Καλύψει πλῆθος ἁμαρτιῶν

20. Hide a multitude of ſins) What is the meaning of this phraſe, Καλύψει πλῆθος ἁμαρτιῶν, ſhall cover a multitude of ſins, is a matter of ſome difficulty to determine. It ſeems to be a proverbial ſpeech, and very near that of Prov. 10. 12. Love covereth all ſins: and if by analogy to that it be interpreted, it muſt ſignifie to cover other mens ſins from our own eyes, to cauſe us to look favourably on others faults, to ſee few faults in them, in order to peaceable and friendly living with them: for thus in that place of the Proverbs the oppoſition inforceth, Hatred ſtirreth up ſtrifes, but love covereth all ſins; where hatred being oppoſed to love or charity covering all ſins, muſt alſo be oppoſite to ſtirring up ſtrife, and ſo muſt be the compoſing of our minds, breeding kindneſs and charity to others, which is done by ſeeing as few faults in them as may be. And thus the ſaying of Pythagoras (who is thought to have had ſome knowledge of the Scriptures of the Old Teſtament) ſeems to be interpretable, Ἡ μὲ ἐσθὴς τ' ἀρρυθμίαν, ἡ δ' εὐνοια τ' ἁμαρτίαν κεκάλυκε, A garment hides the ill proportions of the body, but good will, or charity, hides ſins. But it will be very unreaſonable to affix this ſenſe to this place, which ſpeaks of him that converts another from the evil of his ways, and ſo ſhall ſave that other's ſoul from death, but cannot fitly be ſaid in the future to breed in himſelf charity to that other, or to look upon his ſins with favour and indulgence. It muſt therefore firſt be remembred, what hath oft elſewhere been noted, that the writers of the New Teſtament do make uſe of phraſes or places in the Old, in other ſenſes than what in the fountain belonged to them, not by way of teſtimony, but by way of accommodation, affixing to the words ſome ſenſe which they will fitly bear, though not that which had originally belonged to them. And then ſecondly, Καλύπτειν ἁμαρτίαν, to hide ſin, is a known phraſe for pardoning or forgiving of ſins. So Pſal. 32. 1. Bleſſed is the man whoſe iniquity is forgiven, and Ὧν ἀπεκαλύφθησαν αἱ ἁμαρτίαι, whoſe ſins are thus covered; and ſo it may moſt reaſonably ſignifie here. And then the only queſtion will be, whoſe ſins they are which he that converts another to righteouſneſs ſhall cover, his own or that other man's, That they are not his own, is thought reaſonable; becauſe then a man ſhall be ſaid (or his charity ſhall be ſaid) to cover, that is, to forgive his ſins, which is the work of God only. But that objection is of no force, or if it were of any, it would equally hold againſt a man's covering another's ſins: for neither he nor his charity can forgive another's ſins, in propriety of ſpeaking. And therefore there being a neceſſity to acknowledge ſome figure in the expreſſion, it will be as eaſie by that figure to interpret it of a man's own ſins, That as in Daniel c. 12. 3. They that turn many to righteouſneſs ſhall ſhine as the ſtars for ever and ever, and as Dan. 4. 27. Nebuchadnezzar is exhorted to break off his iniquities by ſhewing mercy to the poor, and as they that had fallen under the Cenſures of the Church by ſin were, in the antient Church, according to the Apoſtolick rules, to fit themſelves for Abſolution, not only by repenting and reforming their ſins, but by addition of ἐλεημοσύναι, works of charity and mercy; ſo this great charity of converting any from the errour of his way, which is a means of ſaving the ſoul of the converted alive, ſhould be very acceptable in the ſight of God, and being added to his ſincere repentance for his ſins, how many ſoever he hath committed, ſhould be effectual to the obtaining his pardon, through the mercies of Chriſt under the Goſpel. And as this ſenſe ſeems moſt agreeable to this place, where there is a double encouragement offered to excite that charity; firſt, the intuition of the advantage to the receiver, ſaving his ſoul alive (which includes, and cannot well be improved with the addition of covering, or forgiving, his ſins) and ſecondly of the advantage that devolves to himſelf; ſo it will be found perfectly concordant with the doctrines and interpretations of the antient Church, and no way unreconcilable with the merits and ſatisfaction of Chriſt (by which only it is that God becomes propitious to our beſt performances) or the doctrine of Juſtification by faith, which doth not exclude, but ſuppoſe, the rewarding of our charity. If this be the meaning of this place, there will then be little reaſon to doubt but it is the importance alſo of the ſame words, 1 Pet. 4. 8. for charity ſhall cover a multitude of ſins, which are uſed as an argument to the believing Jews to impreſs on them the practice of Chriſtian charity then, at that time of the approach of God's judgments on the obſtinate perſecuting Jews and Gnoſticks, whoſe impurities, and hating and purſuing of the orthodox Chriſtians, were ſure to bring vengeance ſuddenly upon them, and ſobriety, and vigilance in prayer, and fervent charity, were the likelieſt means to avert it from any; the latter of which, ſaith the Apoſtle, hath that force in it, as to propitiate God to thoſe that have been formerly guilty of many ſins, ſuppoſing now they have repented and forſaken them.

[a] First EPISTLE GENERAL

[†] PETER.

[†] the Apoſtle Peter, for the Copies ordinarily read Τῦ Ἀποσόλυ Π.

[a] Πέτρυ πρώτη

THE time of writing this firſt Epiſtle of S. Peter is ordinarily affirmed to be the 44th year of Chriſt, at which time he is ſuppoſed to have planted a Church at Rome, and from thence to have wrote this Epiſtle to the Jewiſh Chriſtians, which either before their Chriſtianity dwelt out of their own country (ſee Act. 2. 10.) or, becauſe they were Chriſtians, were driven out of it, Act. 11. 19. That it was written from Rome, ſeems evident by the ſalutation in the cloſe, ch. 5. 13. where the συνεκλεκτὴ, fellow-choſen, queſtionleſs ſignifies their fellow-Church of Jewiſh Chriſtians; and that ἐν Βαβυλῶνι, in Babylon, denotes Rome, ſee Note on Revel. 18. a. That S. Peter and other the Apoſtles were perſecuted by Herod Agrippa appears Act. 12. 1. and accordingly the Apoſtle's going out of Judæa is placed by Baronius in An. Chr. 43 that is, in the ſecond of Clandius's Empire. That Peter came to Rome in that ſecond of Claudius, is affirmed by Euſebius in Chronico, and in like manner by S. Hierom De ſcript. Eccleſ. Secundo Claudii anno Simon Petrus Romam pergit, In the ſecond year of Claudius Simon Peter goes to Rome: and ſo ſaith Oroſius, l. 7. c. 6. that at the beginning of Claudius, Peter came to Rome, and converted many there to the faith of Chriſt, according to that of Epiphanius, that the Church of Rome was founded by Peter and Paul. And ſo ſaith * Gaius and Dionyſius Biſhop of Corinth; the former calling the monuments of thoſe two Apoſtles τροπαῖα τ ταύτλω ἱδρυσαμένων τ ἐκκλησίαν, the trophees of thoſe that built that Church, and the latter calling that Church τ ὑπὸ Πέτρυ κ Παύλυ φυτείαν γενομένην, the plantation made by Peter and Paul. All which as they are evidences of Peter's having been at Rome, ſo is that the prime thing doubted of by thoſe later writers which queſtion this date of this Epiſtle. Agreeably hereunto the principal deſign of this Epiſtle is to comfort and confirm thoſe Jewiſh converts who were thereupon driven from their homes, Act. 8. and from Judæa and Samaria, where at firſt they were ſcattered, v. 1. driven farther off at length by the malice and perſecutions of the obdurate Jews, to Phœnice and Cyprus and Antioch, Act. 11. 19. and here to Pontus, Galatia and Cappadocia, Aſia and Bithynia. Which perſecutions for the name and profeſſion of Chriſt he makes matter of the greateſt joy to them, c. 1. 6. and ſo again, c. 4. 13. mixing withal many precepts agreeable to their preſent condition, eſpecially that of abſtaining from carnal luſts, c. 2. 1. and diſcharging the offices that belonged to them in their ſeveral relations of ſubjects, c. 2. 13. of wives, c. 3. 1. of husbands, v. 7. of Biſhops in the Church, c. 5. 1.

† this word is not in the Greek.

18. Conſidering that Chriſt by his death hath taken away the legal rites of meer external obedience, which wanted that inward purity which Chriſt came to teach us, wherein the Sages of the Jews placed all their religion, and that therefore the falling back to that is the forfeiting a greater privilege than a redemption out of the power of temporal enemies, ſuch as is wont to be purchaſed with gold;

18. For as much as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as ſilver and gold, from your vain converſation received by tradition from your fathers;]

19. The blood of Chriſt the Paſchal, and conſequently immaculate Lamb, (ſee Note on Act. 7. c.) being much more precious than any coin or money, and the deliverance more valuable than that from the deſtroyer there, Exod. 12. 13.

19. But with the pretious blood of Chriſt, as a lamb without blemiſh, without ſpot;]

20. In order to whom was the diſpoſition and œconomy of all the former times as viſibly as if God had ſet Chriſt, and what he hath done and ſuffered, always before his eyes, as an idea, or image, according to which he formed all things from the beginning of the world, and agreeably he hath now at laſt ſent him into the world on purpoſe for our ſakes,

20. Who verily was * fore-ordained before the foundation of the world, but was manifeſt in theſe laſt times for you,]

* foreknown προεγνωσμένου

21. Who by believing on him are far from departing from the God of Iſrael, but do indeed the more firmly believe and depend on him, as that ommipotent God who hath raiſed Chriſt from the dead.

21. Who by him do believe in God that raiſed him up from the dead, and gave him glory, that your faith and hope might be in God.]

22. Having therefore by yielding obedience to the Goſpel (preached to you) brought your minds, without all mixture of hypocriſie, to the ſincerity and purity of Chriſtian charity, be careful that ye continually perſevere in the exerciſe and practice of that vertue one toward another;

22. † Seeing ye have purified your ſouls in obeying the truth through the Spirit, unto unfeigned love of the brethren; ſee that ye love one another with a pure heart * fervently,]

† Having purged your minds through obedience of the truth

by the Spirit, Τὰς ψυχὰς ὑμῶν ἡγνικότες ἐν τῇ ὑπακοῇ τῆς ἀληθείας διὰ πνεύματος * or durably ἐκτενῶς

23. Conſidering that ye are regenerate to a new life, not by any humane mortal, but ſupernatural immortal means, even by the word of Chriſt, who liveth for ever, and whoſe will is now immutably revealed in the Goſpel, and conſequently muſt be anſwered with the conſtancy and perſeverance of your obedience.

23. Being born again, not of corruptible ſeed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God which liveth and abideth for ever.]

24. For whereas all humane things periſh and fade away (ſee Jam. 1. 10.) and come ſuddenly to nothing from the greateſt beauty and glory, and accordingly the Jewiſh carnal external ordinances are now abrogated,

24. For all fleſh is as graſs, and all the glory of man as the flower of graſs: the graſs † withereth and the flower thereof * falleth away;]

† is withered ἐξηράνθη * is fallen away ἐξέπεσε

25. The word of God now revealed to us by Chriſt ſhall never be abrogated, but continue and laſt for ever; and this is that Goſpel which hath been preached to and received by you, from which therefore you muſt not fall off to Judaiſm again, whatever your temptations or allurements are from the Jews or Gnoſticks.

25. But the word of the Lord endureth for ever: and this is the word † which by the Goſpel is preached unto you.]

† which is preached τὸ εὐαγγελισθὲν

Annotations on Chap. I.

a. ῥαντισμὸς αἵματος

V. 2. Sprinkling of the blood] What is meant here by ῥαντισμὸς αἵματος Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, the ſprinkling of the blood of Jeſus Chriſt, will be diſcernible by obſerving that it is in the ſame caſe, and ſo in conjunction with ὑπακοὴν obedience preceding. By this it appears that it muſt be taken in a paſſive ſenſe, ſo as they are ſuſceptible ceptible of it who are here ſaid to obey, that is, ſo as the believers here, through the ſanctification of the Spirit, ſhall be ſprinkled with that blood. The only queſtion is, what notion of our being ſprinkled with Chriſt's blood is here referred to. For more poſſible notions there are of which the matter is capable. The principal, that in reference to the practice Exod. 24. 8. where the people are ſprinkled with blood, by way of obſignation of the Covenant between God and them; for upon reading of the Covenant in the audience of the people, and upon their profeſſing, All that the Lord hath ſaid we will do, and be obedient, v. 7. it follows, v. 8. Moſes took the blood and ſprinkled it upon the people, and ſaid, Behold the blood of the Covenant which the Lord hath made with you, concerning all theſe words. Were it not for that laſt clauſe, concerning all theſe words, it might ſtill be uncertain what part of the Covenant it was, (whether only that on God's, or that alſo on the peoples part) which was thus ſigned, and conſequently ſignified by the ῥαντισμὸς ſprinkling of blood: but by the uſe of the phraſe, all the words, v. 3. viz. all the words which the Lord hath ſaid, 'tis evident that the peoples part, which is obedience, and not only God's part in making good his promiſes to them, was it that was ſealed, and ſo ſignified by their being ſprinkled with blood by Moſes, and to it is immediately annexed, All that the Lord hath ſaid will we do, and be obedient, v. 7. And Moſes took the blood and ſprinkled it, &c. ver. 8. And to this it is very agreeable that here it is (in the ſame caſe) joined with ὑπακοὴ; obedience and the ſprinkling of the blood of Jeſus, noting this of Evangelical obedience to be the condition required on our part in this new Covenant, which Chriſt ſealed with his blood, in like manner as that Moſaical Covenant was there ſealed with ſprinkling of blood, and to which he hath both enabled and obliged us by his death, having given himſelf for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purifie to himſelf (which is the effect of ſprinkling) a peculiar people, &c. Tit. 2. 14. and ſo we read of this blood of ſprinkling (by which Chriſt's death is typified) that it was the blood of the Covenant which the Lord commanded to you, Heb. 9. 20. a rite to engage our obedience to God. And this ſeems to be the moſt proper notation of the words, and is fully parallel to that of Epheſ. 1. 4. where God is ſaid to have choſen us in Chriſt that we ſhould be holy, &c. Some other notions the phraſe might be capable of, either to ſignifie God's pardon and acceptance, Heb. 9. 22. Rom. 3. 25. (but that will not ſo well agree with the Paſſive acception of the word, looking rather on God, who is the Agent in it, and the blood of Chriſt the meritorious cauſe of it, whereas this being joined with obedience, ſeems to be ſomewhat in us, to which we are enabled and engaged by the blood of Chriſt) or elſe to denote our imitating Chriſt's conſtancy and perſeverance, ſhedding our blood in his cauſe, as he hath given us an example. And thus indeed to be ſprinkled by Chriſt's blood may be a phraſe, figuratively to ſignifie our tranſcribing this bloody copy of his, but yet ſeems not to be any part of the intimation of the ceremony of ſprinkling with blood in Exodus, from which this rather ſeems to be tranſcribed.

CHAP. II.

Paraphraſe.

* naughtineſs, κακίαν

1. WHerefore laying aſide all * malice and all guile, and hypocriſies, and envies, and all evil ſpeakings,]

1. Wherefore arming your ſelves againſt the erroneous and all kind of deceitfulneſs doctrines and practices of the Gnoſtick hereticks that inſinuate themſelves among you, to infuſe villany, and hypocriſie, as alſo of malice, and calumniating of others the pureſt Chriſtians,

† So ἐπιποθήσατε is to be rendred, but it may be perhaps ἐπιπόσατε, † here the King's MS. adds εἰς σωτηρίαν

2. As new-born babes † deſire * the [a] ſincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby: †]

2. Behave your ſelves with that ſimplicity which becometh new-born children, ſuck in that pure nouriſhment which by your rulers is afforded you (ſee Rom. 12. a.) viz. inſtruction, or Chriſtian doctrine, and that pure from all Jewiſh or heretical mixtures, which may increaſe your Chriſtian ſtature, advance you to an higher pitch of Chriſtianity, and at laſt bring you to ſalvation.

and then it muſt be read, drink or ſuck in, * the rational pure milk τὸ λογικὸν ἄδολον γάλα

3. If ſo be ye have taſted that the Lord is gracious:]

3. Which ſure you will do, if you have but once (as David ſaith of God's Law, Pſal. 34. 9.) taſted how ſweet, how much for our advantage it is, which is deſigned us in the Goſpel of Chriſt;

* rejected ἀποδεδοκιμασμένον † with God elect precious, παρὰ Θεῷ ἐκλεκτὸν ἔντιμον

4. To whom coming, as unto a living ſtone, * diſallowed indeed of men, but † choſen of God, and pretious,]

4. To whom aſſociating or conjoining your ſelves

(by obedience and worſhip) as to a living, not dead foundation, or corner-ſtone, rejected indeed by the Jewiſh Sanhedrim, but in God's account moſt choice and eſteemed, and meant for the foundation of a viſible Church,

* Be ye alſo built ὡς αὐτοὶ οἰκοδομεῖσθε, or built on him ---- for an holy prieſthood, for the King's MS. reads ἐποικοδομεῖσθε and εἰς ἱεράτευμα

5. * Ye alſo as lively ſtones are built up, a ſpiritual houſe, an holy prieſthood, to offer up ſpiritual ſacrifices, acceptable to God by Jeſus Chriſt.]

5. Do you accordingly, not as dead but living members, join together, not only in inward piety, but in continual aſſemblies or Church-meetings, of which every Chriſtian is to be a part, and ſo all together make up a ſpiritual temple, that is, congregation, to pray unto, and praiſe God, to perform to him thoſe acts of the Chriſtian ſacrifice to which you are as it were conſecrated and ſet apart by God, and which being now offered to God in the name of Chriſt, or through what he hath ſuffered and done for us, will be ſure to be acceptable to God, without the bodily ſacrifices of the Jews, or obſervation of their Law.

6. Wherefore [b] it is contained in the Scripture, Behold, I lay in Sion a chief corner-ſtone, [c] elect, precious: and he that believeth on him ſhall not be † confounded.]

6. According to that which the Scripture tells us, that in

b.

the erecting the new Church under the Goſpel, Jeſus Chriſt and his doctrine, in oppoſition to all other, is appointed by God to be the foundation of the foundation, ſo that all that is in the Church muſt be founded and built on him: and whoſoever doth ſincerely believe, and is truly built on him, ſhall never fail of his expectation, he ſhall never miſcarry that lays his weight on that foundation: ſee Note on Rom 9. m.

c.

† put to ſhame καταισχυνθῇ

* is the preciouſneſs ἡ τιμὴ

7. Unto you therefore which believe * he is precious: but unto them which be diſobedient, the ſtone which the builders diſallowed, the ſame is made the head of the corner,]

7. To you therefore that are believers, this is matter of infinite advantage, but for thoſe that ſtand out in unbelief, to them belongs the reproach of that prophecy, that he that is refuſed by the Jews is honoured by God, and made the ſole total foundation of his Church; on which nothing muſt be built which he hath not taught, no Judaical old or heretical new doctrine muſt be mingled with it.

8. And a ſtone of ſtumbling, and a rock of offence, even to them which ſtumble at the word, being diſobedient, whereunto alſo they were [d] appointed.]

8. But this foundation-ſtone, ſuch an one as ſhould be apt to hurt and miſchief many, who ſhall apoſtatize and fall off from the faith of Chriſt through fear of perſecution; and by that means be deſtroyed among the perſecuters. And this is no ſtrange thing, but the very ſame that is propheſied of, and ſo appears to be part of God's decree, that they that obey not the Goſpel of Chriſt ſhould be deſtroyed by him, or that the ſeed ſown in ſtony ground ſhould at the ſcorching of the Sun wither away, that all carnal profeſſors ſhould be thus tried and diſcovered by perſecution, and ſo that this corner-ſtone ſhould be the bruiſing and ruining of many, who ſtumble and fall from Chriſt becauſe Chriſtianity brings ſufferings along with it.

† an elect kindred, γένος ἐκλεκτὸν * a people for a poſſeſſion, † vertues ἀρετὰς

kingdom or multitude of prieſts, ſet apart and conſecrated for the continual ſerving and daily waiting upon God, a people that being delivered from the dominion of other your former maſters, ſin, and Satan, and perſecuters, and ſet free to be lords of your ſelves, with liberty to what Chriſt commands you, and ſo kings, muſt now behave your ſelves alſo like ſo many prieſts, (thoſe who ſpent all their time in ſacrificing, &c. and ſo ſhould you) in the performing conſtant ſervice unto God in the publick aſſemblies, which God requires of you, as he did the ſacrifices of the Levitical prieſts (ſee Note on Rev. 1. d.) and ſo a ſacred holy nation, (as the whole people of the Jews were an holy people in one reſpect, Lev. 25. 23. and as the Levites were in another) a peculiar treaſure of Chriſt's for him to preſerve firſt, Mal. 3. 17. then to poſſeſs as his own, that ſo by this means, by this conſtant publick ſerving of him, you may ſet forth and illuſtrate Chriſt's powerful and gracious workings (ſee Note on 2 Per. 1. a.) who hath wrought ſo glorious and bleſſed a change in you:

10. Who at firſt continued in unbelief among your brethren the Jews, and ſo were become a kind of heathen people, were not at all within the obedience of Chriſt, the pale of his Church, but now are received into it; you that a long time, while Chriſt lived here on the earth, had not the happineſs to believe in him, but have found place of repentance ſince, and are now received into the Church and the favour of God.

10. Which in time paſt were not * a people, but are now the people of God; which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy.] * the people λαὸς

11. To you therefore that are at this time diſpers'd among the nations, c. 1. 1. (ſee c. 1. 17.) as to ſo many ſcattered, travelling perſons, who ought of all others to be moſt wary to avoid dangers, and to behave your ſelves tenderly as in the ſight of ſtrangers, my preſent exhortation becomes ſeaſonable, to avoid the doctrines and practices of the Gnoſticks, and to that end to remember that you are not at home, but in a journey, and ſo that it is moſt unſeaſonable for you at ſuch a time to indulge your ſelves to the exceſſes and jollities which men in their own houſes or countries do ſometimes indulge to, but do not uſe them in a ſtrange place, or before thoſe they know not; remembring farther the dangerous malignant nature of ſuch luſts, that they are moſt pernicious to the ſoul.

11. Dearly beloved, I beſeech you as ſtrangers and pilgrims, abſtain from fleſhly luſts, which war againſt the ſoul;]

12. But that you on the contrary live ſo as may be of good report among the Gentiles, that they that look on Jews, not only as perſons of another Religion, but alſo as rebels and malefactors, may ſee the Chriſtians to be quite otherwiſe, and by your actions reverence you, and ſo entertain a good opinion of Chriſtian Religion, which hath ſuch an influence upon you, in making the Chriſtian Jews ſo much more regular and meek than the other Jews are, more quiet under the heathen government which is now over them, and ſo more capable of good uſage under the Emperors, when they ſend their Proconſuls to ſuppreſs the ſeditions, than the unbelieving Jews have appeared to be.

12. Having your converſation honeſt among the Gentiles, that whereas they ſpeak againſt you as evil doers, they may * by your good works which they ſhall [f] behold, glorifie God in the [g] day of viſitation.] * revering you by your good works glorifie

13. Be obedient therefore to every heathen governour (ſee Note on Rom. 8. c.) upon obligation of conſcience, becauſe he is inſtituted by God: and this whether to Cæſar the Emperor in the firſt place, as the Supreme;

13. † Submit your ſelves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's ſake: whether it be to the King, as ſupreme;] † be ſubject therefore to every humane creature κτίσει ἀνθρωπίνῃ

14. Or in the next place, and in ſubordination to him, to Proconſuls and Procurators, by Commiſſion appointed by him, for the keeping of Courts, puniſhing of malefactors, and rewarding and encouraging the obedient.

14. Or unto Governours, as unto them that are ſent by him for the puniſhment of evil doers, and for the praiſe of them that do well.]

15. For to this doth Chriſtian Religion oblige all, that by ſubjection to our heathen ſuperiours, and by all other Chriſtian performances (ſee Note on c. 4. f.) we ſhould leave the heathens unable to object any thing againſt us:

15. For ſo is the will of God, that with well doing ye may put to ſilence the ignorance of fooliſh men:

16. As men that are freed by Chriſt from many yokes, but not from that of ſubjection to God or to ſuperiors, and therefore not pretending to any ſuch liberty, nor covering ſedition, &c. under colour of Chriſtianity, as the Gnoſticks did, 1 Tim. 6.

16. As free, and not * uſing your liberty for a cloke of maliciouſneſs, but as the ſervants of God.] * having liberty for a covering of wickedneſs, ἐπικάλυμμα ἔχοντες τῆς κακίας τὴν ἐλευθερίαν

17. Give every man the honour and obedience due to him. Love all your fellow-Chriſtians. Fear God; and, in ſubordination to him, pay all obedience to the Emperor.

17. Honour all men. Love the brotherhood. Fear God. Honour the King.]

18. Let all ſervants approve their obedience to their maſters to be ſincere, by performing it not only when they uſe them kindly and favourably, but even when by unjuſt uſage they provoke them to ſome impatience and reſiſtance, for this is the ſeaſon for them to ſhew forth the influence of Chriſtianity upon their hearts.

18. Servants be ſubject to your maſters with all fear, not only to the good and gentle, but alſo to the froward.]

19. And this will be accepted graciouſly and rewarded by God (ſee Luk. 6. 32. and Luk. 1. Note k.) if upon ſight of our duty to God we bear with all patience thoſe preſſures which moſt unjuſtly light upon us.

19. For this † is thank-worthy, if a man for conſcience toward God endure griefs, ſuffering wrongfully.] † is or ſhall be a reward χάρις

20. For what great matter is it, worth conſidering or rewarding, what heroical action is it to which honour is thought to be due, if men indure ſubmiſſly thoſe puniſhments which fall juſtly on them for their demerits? But on the other ſide, if when ye have done no ill, and are then by your ſuperiors abuſed and uſed contumelioufly, if this be born patiently and humbly by you, and do not provoke you to any reſiſtance or return of violence, this is that Chriſtian vertue of meekneſs, which God will certainly reward in you.

20. For what glory is it, * if when ye be buffeted for your faults, ye ſhall take it patiently? but if when ye do well and ſuffer for it, ye take it patiently, this is † acceptable with God.] * if having offended and being buffeted εἰ ἁμαρτάνοντες καὶ κολαφιζόμενοι, or perhaps puniſhed, for it may poſſibly be κολαζόμενοι † a reward, v. 19.

21. For unto this your Chriſtianity directs and leads you, and Chriſt himſelf hath given you an eminent example to be tranſcribed and imitated by you:

21. For even hereunto were ye called: becauſe Chriſt alſo ſuffered * for us, leaving † us an example that ye ſhould follow his ſteps:] * for you ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν † you ὑμῖν

22. Who though he were perfectly innocent, Iſa. 53. 9. was yet adjudged to all the contumelies that the moſt ſhameful death could bring along with it;

22. Who did no ſin, neither was guile found in his mouth;]

23. And when he was reviled by them, Mat. 26. 67. he was far from reviling them again; when he was crucified, he gave them not ſo much as an ill word, but prayed his father to forgive them, as many as had any excuſe of ignorance to plead for them, and for all others he remitted them, and all the injuries done him by them, to God's tribunal.

23. Who when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he ſuffered, he threatned not; but committed * himſelf to him that judgeth righteouſly:] * it

24. Who bare on the croſs the puniſhment of our ſins, that we might never think fit to go on in that courſe which brought ſuch ſufferings on Chriſt, but live piouſly by way of gratitude to him, and kindneſs to our ſelves, for ever after, having been cured by theſe ſufferings of his.

24. Who his own ſelf [h] † bare our ſins in his own body on the tree, that we being dead to ſin ſhould live unto righteouſneſs: by whoſe * ſtripes ye were healed.] † carried our ſins to the tree ἀνήνεγκεν ἐπὶ τὸ ξύλον * blewneſs μώλωπι

25. For ye were formerly in falſe erroneous ways, ready to bring deſtruction upon you, but now are converted and come home to Chriſt's fold, and ſo obliged never to go aſtray ſo again.

25. For ye were as ſheep going aſtray, but are now returned unto the ſhepheard and Biſhop of your ſouls.]

Annotations on Chap. II.

a. λογικὸν γάλα

V. 2. Sincere milk] What λογικὸν γάλα rational milk ſignifies hath been noted on Rom. 12. Note a. that milk, or food, which men, that is, rational creatures, feed on, and which men, rational creatures again, the Apoſtles of Chriſt, afford them for their ſpiritual nouriſhment or inſtruction. Such figurative ſpeeches as theſe are very ordinary, and have no more ſtrangeneſs in them than νοητὴ or πνευματικὴ τροφὴ, intellectual or ſpiritual food, that is, food to the underſtanding or to the ſpirit; Νοῦς, and λόγος, and πνεῦμα, the underſtanding, and reaſon, and ſpirit, being in effect all one, and milk being every where uſed for that inſtruction that is fit for thoſe of younger years, Heb. 5. 12. Agreeable to this figurative expreſſion of rational milk is that of Plato, when he calls Rulers νομέας καὶ τροφοὺς ἀγέλης ἀνθρωπίνης, feeders and paſtors of the humane herd; this flock of reaſonable creatures which are fed with this rational milk. And ſo in Euſtathius on Homer Ἰλιαδ. ε'. Ἀνθρωπίνῳ ποιμαντικῷ ἀσκήσαντες, they that exerciſe this trade of feeding men, (as ſhepheards feed their flocks,) which have therefore ſo ordinarily that title of ποιμένες Paſtors.

b. περιέχει

V. 6. It is contained] The word περιέχει is taken notice of by Grammarians as a word fit for the citing any paſſage out of an Author. So in Erotian's Medicinal Lexicon, in the word Κάμμορος, λέξις περιέχουσα is a word which is to be met with in the author and place which he there cites. Here it is uſed Impersonally, as ἀπέχει (ſee Mar. 14. Note d.) and ſo 1 Mac. 15. 2. and 2 Mac. 9. 18. Accordingly περιοχὴ is uſed for any place cited out of the Scripture, Act. 8. 32.

c. ἐκλεκτὸς

Ib. Elect] By occaſion of this word ἐκλεκτὸς elect, in this place, it will not be amiſs to give an account, once for all, of the uſe of that and the like words generally in the Scripture. To begin with the Old Teſtament firſt; the Hebrew word which muſt eſpecially be taken notice of is בחר, probavit, examinavit, elegit, to approve, examine, chuſe. From whence is the Noun בחור, directly anſwerable to ἐκλεκτὸς elect here, taken Adjectively: And therefore Prov. 7. 3. where the Hebrew hath בחר, and our Engliſh render rightly from thence, The Lord trieth the hearts, the Septuagint read ἐκλεκταὶ καρδίαι παρὰ Κυρίῳ, hearts elect before the Lord. This word בחור is from hence taken by them to ſignifie, 1. any choice perſon fit for employment, eſpecially for war, and from thence is uſed 1 Mac. 4. 1. for a choice party, ἐκλεκτὴ ἵππου, a thouſand of the choice, that is beſt, horſe-men, and Exod. 14. 7. choſen chariots; and ſo the left-handed men, that were ſuch excellent archers, Jud. 20. 16. are ἐκλεκτοὶ choſen men; and Pſal. 78. 31. the choſen men, that is, the ſouldiers, or military men; and accordingly the word doth ſignifie a young man, who is fitteſt for military and ſuch other employments. Thus 1 Sam. 8. 16. בחוריכם we render your goodlieſt young men, (which the Septuagint miſtaking, and reading ק in ſtead of ח, render τὰ βουκόλια ὑμῶν your herds) and Deut. 32. 25. it is clearly taken for young men in oppoſition to maidens, עלמהין ſaith the Targum. But the notation which is moſt primitive and literal to it, is that of choice, or choſen, as that notes the beſt, and thoſe that are upon trial found fit to be preferred before others, as every בחור choſen man in Iſrael, 2 Sam. 6. 1. And David gathered together all the choſen men in Iſrael, all that were fit for the militia: and indeed by a Metalepſis it was that it came to ſignifie a young man, becauſe the age was determined, after which (and not before) a man was thought fit for that imployment; and ſo the choice men, or thoſe of the militia, were conſequently thoſe of ſuch an age; and therefore Num. 11. 28. when Joſhua is called a ſervant of Moſes מבחוריו (which the Targum reads מעלמוהי of his young men) the Septuagint reads ἐκλεκτὸς αὐτοῦ, a choice perſon about him. Thus again from men is the word brought to be applied to things, as Gen. 23. 6. במבחר קבורינו in the choice of our ſepulchres: בשפר, ſay the Targum, in the fairneſs, that is, in the faireſt and beſt of them. So Deut. 12. 11, your choice vows, or the choice of your vows, and Eſay. 22. 7. the choiceſt valleys, and ſo Ecclus 24. 15. Σμύρνη ἐκλεκτὴ, the choiceſt, or beſt myrrhe; and (to add no more) Iſa. 28. 16. from whence the words in S. Peter are cited, the λίθος ἐκλεκτὸς, choice ſtone, here, is there juſtly rendred a tried ſtone, the Hebrew בחר ſignifying this trying and fitting it for the place where it was to be ſet, viz. for the corner, to which, being the principal place of the whole building, that ſtone that was truly fit upon trial, is truly ſaid to be a precious corner-ſtone, in the words following both there and here. Beſides בחר, there is alſo another word very near it, which is oft uſed in this ſenſe: the Hebrew ברר, which ſignifying to make pure and clean, ſignifies alſo elegit to chuſe, and then the Noun ברור from thence is rendred καθαρὸς, ἁγνὸς, and ἐκλεκτὸς pure, clean, elect promiſcuouſly, and elect as that ſignifies the beſt of the kind. So ὄρνις ἐκλεκτὴ a cramm'd fowl, ſaith Buxtorf, and 2 Sam. 22. 27. with the pure thou ſhalt be pure, which the Greek reads μετὰ ἐκλεκτοῦ ἔσῃ ἐκλεκτὸς, with the elect thou ſhalt be elect. As the Arabick עפא which ſignifies to clarifie and purge, ſignifies alſo to chuſe, to ſet apart, to deſign to an office, as of David, Pſal. 78. 70. and of the Diſciples, Act. 1. 2. In the New Teſtament we have the Verb ἐκλέγεσθαι, the Subſtantive ἐκλογὴ. and the Adjective ἐκλεκτὸς. The Verb ſignifies to prefer one before another, either in the beſtowing of undeſerved favours, or deſigning to an office. In the firſt ſenſe, Mar. 13. 20. οὓς ἐξελέξατο they whom God had choſen, that is favoured before others, to wit, the believing Jews, who ſhould be delivered out of that deſtruction which lay ſo heavy upon πᾶσα σὰρξ all fleſh, that is, the whole Jewiſh nation: And that the Chriſtians of them were deſigned to this favour, ſee Mat. 24. Note g. out of Joſephus, by whom it appears that the ſiege of Jeruſalem by Gallus was unexpectedly raiſed, by which means all the Chriſtians in the city got out of it to ſome other place, ſo that when Titus came ſome months after to the fatal ſiege, there was not one Chriſtian remaining in it. So Joh. 15. 16. You have not choſen me, but I have choſen you, that is, 'Tis not you that have begun to me, that were firſt in your expreſſions of kindneſs and favour to me, but I to you. And ſo v. 19. I have choſen you out of the world, that is, allowed you this favour of taking you out, diſcriminating you from the reſt of the world, by taking you nearer to my ſelf than I have done other men. So Act. 13. 17. ſpeaking of God's favour to the Iſraelites beyond all other people, he ſaith, ἐξελέξατο τοὺς πατέρας ἡμῶν, he choſe our fathers, and exalted the people, &c. according as they are called ἐκλεκτοὶ his choſen, Ecclus. 46. 1. and Jeruſalem ἐκλεκτὴ πόλις a choſen city, c. 49. 7. So 1 Cor. 1. 27, 28. and in the parallel place, James 2. 5. God hath choſen the fooliſh, weak, deſpiſed things, that is, perſons of the world, and τοὺς πτωχοὺς the poor of this world, that is, revealed the myſteries of the Goſpel unto them, allowed them that favour above learned, proud Grecians; and ſo Epheſ. 1. 4. ἐξελέξατο ἡμᾶς ἐν αὐτῷ, hath choſen us in him, is God's beſtowing upon us that favour of being Chriſtians, of revealing his Goſpel to us, making known the myſtery in Jeſus Chriſt, v. 9. a favour much beyond any vouchſafed to the former ages. For the ſecond ſenſe of deſigning, or chuſing, to ſome office, ſo it is Lu. 6. 13 ἐκλεξάμενος ἀπ' αὐτῶν δώδεκα, out of the number of Diſciples ſequeſtring twelve for Apoſtles. So Joh. 6. 70. and 13. 18. Act. 1. 2, and 24. And ſo the Apoſtles deſigning Stephen to the office of Deacon, ἐξελέξαντο they choſe him, Act. 5. 6. So c. 15. 7. and ſo of thoſe that were deſigned to be ſent to Jeruſalem, Act. 15. 22, and 25. Theſe are all the places in the New Teſtament wherein the Verb is uſed (unleſs thoſe two to another matter, Mary's chuſing the better part, and the gueſts chuſing the uppermoſt places) and in all theſe the Context ſhews the meaning, and uſe of it, when it is ſpoken of God, that it belongs either to ſome ſpecial undeſerved favour of God, peculiarly that of revealing the Goſpel, or to his deſignation to ſome peculiar office, eſpecially that of Apoſtleſhip. Proportionable to theſe two notions of the Verb, is that of the Subſtantive ἐκλογὴ, in reſpect of the undeſerved favours, freely afforded one before another, ſo as we are ſaid to chuſe when no obligation lies upon us, and to be obliged, when we cannot chuſe. So we have κατ' ἐκλογὴν according to election, Rom. 9. 11. where it ſignifies the free unobliged preferring of the younger before the elder, and κατ' ἐκλογὴν Θεοῦ πρόθεσις God's purpoſe in that reſpect, his free determination to prefer the Jews, that ſhould come from Jacob, before all other people, particularly before Eſau's progeny, the Edumæans. So Rom. 11. 5. λεῖμμα κατ' ἐκλογὴν χάριτος, the remnant according to the election of grace, that is, the remnant that ſhould have the favour to be left or reſerved, according to the rule obſerved in the Goſpel, the humble, pious Jews, that believed the Goſpel, when the reſt ſtood out and were deſtroyed; which, though a reward of their repentance and faith, was yet an act of free mercy in God, thus to accept of their repentance. And ſo v. 7. the election hath obtained, that is, the believing Jews, the remnant which had that free undeſerved favour from God, above the reſt. And v. 28. of the Jews again, that they were κατὰ τὴν ἐκλογὴν ἀγαπητοὶ, beloved according to the election, that is, beloved in reſpect of the undeſerved promiſes of peculiar favour made to that people for Abraham's ſake. So 1 Theſſ. 1. 4. ὑπὸ Θεοῦ τὴν ἐκλογὴν ὑμῶν, your election from God, that is the great favour of God, ſo unexpected to the Gentiles, to have Chriſt and the Goſpel made known unto them, and 2 Pet. 1. 10. where they are adviſed to all diligence βεβαίαν ποιεῖσθαι to confirm or aſcertain to themſelves τὴν κλῆσιν καὶ ἐκλογὴν their calling and election, that is, that ſpecial favour vouchſafed unto unto them, to retain to Chriſt, to be Chriſtians firſt, and then to be that peculiar remnant to whom thoſe ſpecial promiſes were made, and in whom they ſhould be fulfilled, when all the reſt of that people ſhould be deſtroyed. One only place more there is wherein this word is uſed, σκεῦος ἐκλογῆς Act. 9. 15. where God ſaith of Saul, σκεῦος ἐκλογῆς μοί ἐστιν οὗτος, he is to me a veſſel of election which ſeems to refer to the ſecond notion of chuſing, viz. to that office of the Apoſtleſhip. Laſtly for the Adjective ἐκλεκτὸς, that is proportionable to the uſe of the word in the Old Teſtament, for the choicer ſort of men approved of by God, preferred before others in that reſpect; as Mat. 20. 16. and 22. 14. Many are called, but few are choſen, ὀλίγοι ἐκλεκτοί, there are many that retain unto Chriſt, many Chriſtian profeſſors, but few ſpecial labourers in the former place; few fit to be received at his table, few penitent ſincere believers, in the latter, ſee Note on Mat. 20. c. And ſo Luk. 23. 35. where Chriſt is ſaid by the Jews to be ὁ Ἐκλεκτὸς Θεοῦ, the choſen of God, one that had exactly approved himſelf to God and that in an eminent manner, and ſo ſhould in any reaſon be delivered by him. Thus in this place, where Chriſt is compared to a corner-ſtone, he is called (however he be rejected by men) παρὰ Θεῷ ἐκλεκτὸς, elect with God, v. 4, and 6. a choice approved ſpecial ſtone in the eſtimation of God, and therefore ἔντιμος pretious alſo in both places. And ſo perhaps when the Chriſtians, to whom he writes, are called by him γένος ἐκλεκτὸν a choice ſort of people, v. 9. And ſo all the other phraſes joined with it do import. Thus it is frequently uſed, as in the New in an Evangelical ſenſe for one of Chriſt's militia, a believer, a Chriſtian, a faithful ſervant of his, as they that are ſuch differ from all others, unbelievers and crucifiers of Chriſt. Thus διὰ τοὺς ἐκλεκτούς, Mat. 24. 22, 24, 31. and Mar. 13. 20, 22, 27. Luc. 18. 7. all in the ſame notion, to ſignifie believers or Chriſtian Jews that had that promiſe, that they ſhould eſcape out of thoſe calamities that fell on that whole nation, the οἱ σωζόμενοι the ſaved, Luc. 13. 23. And an obſervable place there is to this purpoſe in Theophylact. on Mat. 22. 14. (though OEcolampadius leave it out in his Tranſlation, yet extant in the Roman Edition) πολλοὺς καλεῖ ὁ Θεὸς, μᾶλλον δὲ πάντας, ὀλίγοι δὲ ἐκλεκτοί· ὀλίγοι γὰρ σωζόμενοι καὶ ἄξιοι ἐκλεγῆναι παρὰ Θεοῦ. ὥστε τὸ μὲν Θεοῦ τὸ καλεῖν, τὸ δὲ ἐκλεκτὸς ἡμέτερόν ἐστι, God calls many, or rather all, but there are few elect: for there are few that eſcape, or are fit to be choſen or approv'd by God: ſo that it is God's part to call, but ours to be elect or not: which ſuppoſes the σωζόμενοι and ἐκλεκτοὶ the ſaved and the elect to be all one, and both thoſe the Chriſtians that Mat. 24. 22. are ſaid σώζεσθαι to eſcape and to be ἐκλεκτοὶ elect, viz. thoſe that in that great tribulation that overwhelmed the Jews did yet eſcape and ſurvive. Thus again in that general notion for believers and Chriſtians. Rom. 8. 33. Τίς ἐγκαλέσει κατὰ ἐκλεκτῶν Θεοῦ; Who ſhall lay any thing to the charge of God's elect? bring any charge againſt the faithful ſervants of Chriſt, the lovers of God, v. 28. So Ruſus, ἐκλεκτὸς ἐν Κυρίῳ, elect in the Lord, Rom. 16. 13. a ſpecial believer, certainly without any relation to any particular decree of God's concerning him, which could not appear concerning his perſon, (Of the ἐκλεκτὴ κυρία the elect Lady, 2. Joh. 1. and her ἐκλεκτὴ ἀδελφὴ elect ſiſter, v. 14. ſee Note on 2 Joh. a.) and therefore muſt be ſo interpreted as to denote that which was diſcernible in him, viz. his faith and Chriſtian behaviour. So ὡς ἐκλεκτοὶ τοῦ Θεοῦ as the elect of God, Col. 3. 12. that is, as faithful, approved diſciples and ſervants of his; and 2 Tim. 2. 10. I ſuffer all for the elect, that is, the Chriſtian believers, for the advancement of the Goſpel; and Tit. 1. 1. διὰ πίστιν ἐκλεκτῶν Θεοῦ, for the faith of the elect of God, that is, of the ſincere, converted Chriſtians, or believers, in oppoſition to all the reſt of the unbelieving world, as 1 Tim. 5. 21. ἐκλεκτοὶ ἄγγελοι, the elect Angels, are thoſe that did not apoſtatize, but continued faithful and obedient to God; and 1 Pet. 1. 1. ἐκλεκτοὶ παρεπίδημοι the elect ſtrangers, that is, the believing Jews that ſojourned in that Country. And this ſeems the more clear by Apocal. 17. 14. where κλητοὶ καὶ ἐκλεκτοὶ καὶ πιστοὶ the called and elect and faithful, are joined together as words of the ſame importance; and if there be any difference, then is πιστοὶ faithful to be looked on as an higher degree than ἐκλεκτοὶ elect, as that than κλητοὶ called. For that they ſhould be ſo called to denote the order of time, ἐκλεκτοὶ before πιστοὶ faithful, as Election from the beginning before Faith in time, will not be agreeable to the place, becauſe then κλητοὶ, being called, muſt be in order before Election, which cannot be affirmed. The ſhort is, that the word notes generally ſomewhat of eminence above other men, of difference from them, as the believer or Chriſtian excells and differs from all that are not ſuch, and ſo the ſincere from the formal profeſſor or hypocrite; and that is all the notation of it. Agreeable to which is that of Phavorinus, Ἐκλεκτός ἐστιν, ὁ κατὰ πολλῶν, διὰ τὸ ἔχειν αὐτὸν ἔξια τινὰ παρὰ τοὺς ἄλλους ἐκλεπρεπῆ, the word ſignifies one that differs from other men, or is preferred before them, becauſe he hath ſome choice works above thoſe others. And in Heſychius, Ἐκλεκτὸς (for which the ordinary Copies read corruptly Ἔκλητος) ἔνδοξος, τίμιος, it notes famous, honourable, a perſon of approved excellence, value and eſteem.

V. 8. Appointed] The word τιθέναι, to put, or ſet, is ordinarily uſed for appointing, or ordaining, and being applied to God, or ſpoken indefinitely, doth oft ſignifie his decree or deſtination. Thus Joh. 15. 16. ἔθηκα ὑμᾶς, I have appointed you, as harveſters to go abroad in all the world, and bring in converts to heaven. So of Chriſt, Act. 13. 47. Τέθεικά σε εἰς φῶς ἐθνῶν I have ſet, that is, appointed or decreed, thee a light for the Gentiles. So 1 Theſſ. 5. 9. Οὐκ ἔθετο ἡμᾶς ὁ Θεὸς εἰς ὀργὴν, ἀλλ' εἰς περιποίησιν σωτηρίας, God hath not ſet us, that is, decreed, determined us, to wrath or deſtruction, (as he doth thoſe whom for their obſtinate courſe in ſin he forſakes, and no farther calls them to repentance) but for the obtaining of ſalvation; that is, hath decreed to call us to the knowledge of the truth by the preaching of the Goſpel, and ſo to repentance and reformation here, the means to attain eternal ſalvation hereafter, if we do not reſiſt and evacuate his gracious calls and admonitions. And ſo without queſtion it is to be underſtood here, that of the ἀπειθοῦσιν τῷ λόγῳ of them that diſobey the word, or Goſpel, of Chriſt, and ſo προσκόπτουσι fall or bruiſe themſelves, or (if the comma, as it is in the ordinary Copies, be placed after τῷ λόγῳ the word, not before it) προσκόπτουσι λόγῳ fall and bruiſe themſelves at the word, ἀπειθοῦντες diſobeying and rejecting it when it is preached to them, it may truly be ſaid, εἰς ὃ καὶ ἐτέθησαν, that they were ordained thereunto. And of that there are two poſſible interpretations, both agreeable to analogy of faith; firſt, that the ἀπειθοῦντες, they that diſobey the Goſpel, that ſtand out obſtinately againſt it, ἐτέθησαν were decreed and appointed by God to ſtumble and fall at that ſtone, that is, to be bruiſed and ruined by this means, to be deſtroyed among the crucifiers, and condemned with them hereafter, it being moſt juſt with God, that they that will not reform and amend at the preaching of the Goſpel, and ſo receive benefit by it, ſhould be for their obſtinacy condemn'd; and ſo much the worſe for it, as the Goſpel is ſaid to be the ſavour of death to them that periſh, or go on ſtill in their deſtructive courſes, and as Chriſt is ſaid by Simeon Luc. 2. 34. κεῖται εἰς πτῶσιν to be ſet, that is, decreed by God (the ſame that τίθεται to be ſet or ordained here) for the falling of many in Iſrael, that is, of thoſe that believe not on him. This is the moſt obvious ſenſe of the words by referring εἰς ὃ, to which, to προσκόπτουσι τῷ λόγῳ, ſtumble, or fall, at the word, and interpreting the fall of the miſchief, not the ſin, (which is noted by ἀπειθοῦντες diſobeying) that they incur by this means. But if (as others conceive) the ἀπείθεια diſobedience be that to which they are ſaid to be ordained, yet may that be taken in a commodious ſenſe alſo, That the Goſpel was deſigned by God to be of ſuch a temper, and the profeſſion of it mix'd with ſo many perſecutions, that none of the proud, worldly-minded men (repreſented by the ſtony and thorny ground in the Parable) none but the humble and honeſt heart could lay hold on it. But the former ſenſe is moſt agreeable to the Context, v. 7. where Chriſt is ſaid to be a ſtone of offence ἀπειθοῦσι to the diſobedient; which muſt needs ſignifie the fall and miſchief chief of the disobedient, not their disobedience simply to be the thing here spoken of, and to which they are said to be appointed, ver. 8. However it is clear that here can be no proof or testimony of any absolute, irrespective decree of God either for sin, or without sin for punishment: for if sin, disobedience, should be decreed or ordained by God, then disobeying would be a compliance with his ordination or will, and thereby cease to be sin (which is a resisting of his will:) and for punishment, that cannot here be supposed to be without sin, the sin of disobedience, or infidelity, being here named, upon which they are ordained to that punishment, and not without respect unto it.

c. λαὸς εἰς περιποίησιν

V. 9. A peculiar people] What λαὸς εἰς περιποίησιν signifies here, must be discerned from Exod. 19. 6. whence it is taken (though the words are removed out of their place, and these, which are there before the royal priesthood, here placed after it.) The Hebrew reads there והיתם לי סגלה, which is literally, you shall be to me a treasure, or κειμήλιον, any thing that is laid up and preserved most carefully. The Greek render it there more according to the sense, ἔσεσθε μοι λαὸς περιούσιος, ye shall be unto me a special, or peculiar people as that phrase is used and rendred Tit. 2. 14. And though the Apostle here doth not use that whole phrase, yet he takes λαὸς people from thence, and for the word סגלה, he renders it from Mal. 3. 17. εἰς περιποίησιν for an acquisition, or possession; for so there that speech of God's, אשר אני עשה סגלה, which I make a treasure, or κειμήλιον (that is lay up tenderly and carefully, and, as it follows, spare as one spareth his son that serveth him) is rendred in the Greek, ᾧ ἐγὼ ποιῶ εἰς περιποίησιν, which I make for an acquisition, or treasure. What the word περιποίησις signifies hath been shewed on Heb. 10. d. viz. the same with σωτηρία, saving or preserving; and so it perfectly agrees with the Hebrew סגלה, which is a jewel to be preserved, or kept, most safely: and so λαὸς εἰς περιποίησιν are those whom God means to keep most charily, as his dearest children or most valued treasure: and so that is the meaning of the whole place here, that whereas other temporary believers, according to the purport of the seed on the stony ground in the parable, do fall off from Christ in time of persecution, and so, by complying with the persecuters, bring certain destruction on themselves, even in this world, take part in that ruin of the Jews; the faithful persevering Christians are most carefully preserved by God, and rescued out of the common destruction of Jews and Gnosticks, and eternally crowned afterward. And the consequent of this their preservation is the exaltation of the glory of God by this means, who hath thus powerfully rescued them out of that unbelief, (wherein the generality of the Jews lye immersed) and then magnified his providence in securing them; as it follows here, that ye may set forth, &c. See Note on Eph. 2. c.

περιούσιος λαὸς

f. ἐποπτεύσαντες

V. 12. Behold] The word ἐποπτεύσαντες in this place may probably signifie more than looking on; because first, that will not so well agree with ἐκ καλῶν ἔργων by your good works, and the supplying it by which they shall behold, supposeth ἐκ καλῶν ἔργων by your good works to belong to δοξάζωσι glorifie following, whereas it is evidently joined with ἐποπτεύσαντες. Secondly, ἐποπτεύειν to behold, is c. 3. 2. put with an Accusative case after it, ἐποπτεύσαντες ἁγνὴν ἀναστροφὴν, beholding your conversation. Hesychius hath a word near unto this, ἐποπτίζει, which he renders αἰδεῖται revere; and ἐπιποπτεύειν, proportionable to the Latin suspicere, (looking on the ground, to note modesty and reverence) is ordinarily taken in that sense: And that which seems most probable is, that either ἐποπτεύειν may have that sense also, or else be by the scribe mistaken for one of those, and so be best rendred revering you or looking with reverence upon you.

g. ἡμέρα ἐπισκοπῆς

Ib. Day of visitation] What the day of visitation signifies here, may be a matter of some question, but that in part resolved by the use of the same phrase, Isa. 10. 3. What will ye do in the day of visitation, and the desolation which shall come from far? where it is evident that the day of visitation, and the coming of desolation, or destruction, are all one. So to visit signifies to punish, to avenge, very frequently in the Prophets, Shall I not visit for this? shall I not be avenged, &c. and, I will visit their offences with a rod. And so the Bishops title, ἐπίσκοπος Visiter, may fitly be given him in respect of the rod or censures, the Ecclesiastical punishments intrusted to him, which are εἰς ὄλεθρον σαρκὸς, for destruction of the flesh, and εἰς καθαίρεσιν for excision. This then being premised, the only difficulty will be, what day of vengeance this was that here is meant. And the Context seems sufficient to answer that. For having admonished the Christian Jews to behave themselves honestly among the Gentiles, that they may not speak against them as evil doers, and presently specifying wherein this honest conversation consisted, in submitting to, and obeying their heathen Governours, ver. 13. this evidently refers to the frequent seditions that were stirred up among the Jews against the Roman yoke, which made them look'd on by their Procurators and the Emperors as unquiet, turbulent people, and brought the Roman armies and destructions upon them. And so against this it is that he warns the Jews Christians, that they meddle not with them that are given to changes, join not with the seditious, and that upon this motive, that by so doing, by being found quiet, obedient subjects, when this vengeance comes upon the seditious, the heathens may observe the difference betwixt believing and unbelieving Jews, the first very good, the second very ill subjects, and so have a good opinion of that religion that hath wrought so much good upon them, (and perhaps be attracted to Christianity, when they come to destroy the Jews.) And thus indeed it happened, that presently after Titus's destroying of the Jews, the Christians had favour from the Emperors, liberty for their assemblies, halcyonian days bestowed on them. The Syriack here reads in the day of temptation, that is, of affliction coming on the Nation, the falling of which upon the obdurate unbelieving Jews, and the escaping of the Christians (as most remarkably they did by Gallus's raising the siege, and the Christians going out, and flying to Pella, could not but be taken notice of by the heathens, and so be means of their acknowledging of God's good providence and mercy toward the Christians, and glorifying God for this work of his. And so this is the full importance of this place.

ἐπίσκοπος

h. Ἀναφέρειν

V. 24. Bare our sins] Ἀναφέρειν is to carry up, to bear to an higher place: and because the θυσιαστήριον or altar was such, it therefore signifies to offer up a victim there, Heb. 7. 27. Jam. 2. 21. but here being joined (not, as there, with θυσίας sacrifices, but) with ἁμαρτίας ἡμῶν our sins, and ἐπὶ ξύλον to, or upon, the cross, (which was an high place also, and therefore his crucifixion is expressed by ὑψωθῆναι being lifted up or exalted) it must therefore here signifie to bear, or carry up, our sins thither, which is a phrase for suffering the punishments for sin, making expiation for them; as Num. 14. 33. where the Hebrew read ונשאו את זנותיכם, and they shall bear, or carry, your fornications, the Chaldee render it וילבלון & suscipient, and they shall undergo, that is, litterally ἀναφέρειν which the most learned P. Fagius renders, luent pœnas peccatorum vestrorum, they shall bear the punishments of your sins. Thus βαστάζειν κεῖμα, Gal. 5. 10. to bear the judgment, is to be punished for sin, and Ezek. 18. The son shall not bear the iniquity of the father, that is, be punished for it.

Paraphrase.

1. LIkewise, ye wives, be in subjection to your own husbands, that if any obey not the word, they also without the word may be * won by the conversation of the wives,] 1. And as there is one obedience and subjection due from subjects and servants to their Kings and Masters, c. 2. 13, 18. so there is another due from wives to their husbands, which ought to be with so winning an humility and kindness, that the husbands that are not converted to Christianity by the Gospel preached to them, may by the enamouring behaviour of their wives, which they are taught by Christanity, be, without any more preaching, wrought on, and converted to the faith,

2. While they behold your chast conversation † coupled with fear.] 2. When they observe your modesty and chastity, joined also with all due respect and reverence to your husbands, v. 5, 6. or, Beholding that modesty in you, which the fear of God, Christian religion doth infuse into you.

4. But the inward ſecret inviſible beauty of the heart, made up of incorruptible materials, meekneſs, &c. whereas all thoſe external are fading and corruptible; or conſiſting in the truth and ſincerity, and conſtancy of the meek and quiet ſpirit; meek, in a lowly opinion of your ſelves, and quiet, in a contented enjoying of what God ſends, without diſquieting or diſturbing the peace of the family (as in greater ſocieties, emulation, ambition, covetouſneſs, are the diſturbing and ſhaking of whole Kingdoms:) and this, as it is the greateſt ornament in the eyes of men, ſo is it moſt highly valued and rewarded in the ſight of God.

7. Let the husbands in like manner live conjugally with their wives, and behave themſelves toward them as Chriſtianity requires of them, or as the myſtical underſtanding of the ſtory of their creation directs, providing for them that they want nothing, becauſe they are not ſo able to provide for themſelves, and conſidering that they are by God deſigned to be co-partners with them of all the good things of this life, which God beſtows in common on them, that ſo they may alſo join efficaciouſly in prayers to God; firſt, as having this perfect union and community of every thing, the want of which would be ſome hinderance to the joint performance of that duty of prayer; and ſecondly, that being provided for by the husband, the wife may have no diſtractions and ſolicitudes for the world, which are moſt apt to diſturb her prayers alſo.

Annotations on Chap. III.

a. Κρυπτὸς καρδίας ἄνθρωπος

V. 4. Hidden man of the heart] Κρυπτὸς καρδίας ἄνθρωπος is a phraſe made up of two Hebraiſms. 1. τὸ κρυπτὸν καρδίας, the hidden, or ſecret, of the heart, is an Hebrew form of ſpeech; as when Pſal. 51. 8. the Original hath בסתם in clauſo, ſecretly thou haſt made wiſdom known to me, the Targum read בטמיר לבא in the hidden of the heart, that is, in the heart which is hidden. Then for κρυπτὸς ἄνθρωπος the hidden man, that is by the ſame analogy that παλαιὸς ἄνθρωπος the old man, and καινὸς ἄνθρωπος the new man, and καινὴ κτίσις the new creature, as they ſignifie continuing in ſin and renovation of life, and ὁ ἔσω ἄνθρωπος, the inner man, that is, the mind of man, oppoſite to the carnal or ſenſitive appetite; and ſo κρυπτὸς καρδίας ἄνθρωπος the hidden man of the heart ſhall be no more than its oppoſition to ὁ ἔξωθεν the outward, &c. v. 3. will inforce, viz. the inward inviſible accompliſhments or beauty of the heart, according to that of the Poet, παλαιὸς ἄνθρωπος, καινὸς ἄνθρωπος, καινὴ κτίσις ὁ ἔσω ἄνθρωπος,

Γυναικὶ κόσμος ὁ τρόπος, κ' ἡ χρυσία behaviour, not golden ornaments, are the ſetting out of a woman.

b. τὸ ἄφθαρτον ἀφθαρσία

Ib. Not corruptible] Τὸ ἄφθαρτον incorruptible here may ſignifie as ἀφθαρσία incorruptibleneſs, Eph. 6. 24. the durableneſs and conſtancy of the vertue ſpoken of, that will not be corrupted or debauched by any temptations to the contrary, and this proceeding from the ſincerity and ſimplicity of the affection at the preſent, which is likely to make it durable; as in nature the more ſimple and uncompounded things are, the leſs they are corruptible, whereas the double principle renders every thing the more liable to corruption: and therefore the Scholiaſt on Homer gives the reaſon why the plague coming in the army,

Ἡμιόνους μὲν πρῶτον —— ſeized firſt upon the mules, which are a mixed ſpecies, made up of the horſe and the aſs; εὐδιάφθορον γὰρ πᾶν τοιοῦτο, for ſuch creatures, ſaith he, are moſt ſubject to corruption and infection of all others. But another notion there is of which the phraſe is capable, in oppoſition to the χρυσία, &c. gold chains and ornaments v. 3. for thoſe, though pretious, are corruptible, and therefore ch. 1. 8. ſilver and gold are the inſtances of the φθαρτὰ corruptible things. And in oppoſition to thoſe, ἐν ἀφθάρτῳ in the incorruptible, &c. will here ſignifie that incorruptible ornament of a meek and quiet ſpirit, ſo much more valuable than gold.

χρυσία

c. χρ γνῶσιν

V. 7. According to knowledge] That χρ γνῶσιν, according to knowledge, doth here more probably denote that knowledge of duty by which a Chriſtian's life and actions muſt be directed, is the opinion of Hugo Grotius, who applies to this ſenſe thoſe other places, Rom. 15. 14. filled with all knowledge, able to inſtruct others, and 1 Cor. 1. 5. inriched in all knowledge, and 2 Cor. 6. b. in purity and in knowledge. To this it may perhaps be fit to add (what hath been noted 1 Cor. 1. Note c. and will again be enlarged on 2. Pet. 1. c.) that the word γνῶσις knowledge hath a critical notion in theſe Books, for a ſpecial χάρισμα or gift of the Spirit, 1 Cor. 12. 8. viz. that ſort of Chriſtian knowledge which conſiſts in explaining of parables or myſterious expreſſions in Scripture. And that may be thus appliable to this place; The duty of the husband toward the wife is beſt to be learned from the myſtical explication of the words, and ſtory of the creation of the man and woman, Gen. 1. 27. God created them male and female, and bleſſed them, and ſaid unto them, Be fruitful and multiply, and repleniſh the earth, and ſubdue it, and have dominion over the fiſh of the ſea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth. And God ſaid, Behold, I have given you every herb bearing ſeed, which is upon the face of all the earth, and every tree in the which is the fruit of a tree yielding ſeed, to you it ſhall be for meat. And c. 2. 22. God took out one of Adam's ribs, and made it a woman; And Adam ſaid, This is now bone of my bone, and fleſh of my fleſh, —— Therefore ſhall a man leave his father and his mother, and cleave unto his wife, and they ſhall be one fleſh. That by this rule of the Creation the Chriſtian doctrine of the duties of husbands and wives is regulated, appears Mat. 19. 4. where to that queſtion about Divorces Chriſt anſwers, Have ye not read that he which made them at the beginning, made them male and female, and ſaid, For this cauſe ſhall a man leave father and mother, &c. What therefore God hath joined together, let no man put aſunder. And ſo Mar. 10. 6. So 1 Cor. 6. 16. What, know you not (making this a ſpecial piece of knowledge) that he which is joined to an harlot is one body with the harlot? for they two, ſaith he, ſhall be one fleſh. And Epheſ. 5. 31. having ſaid, For this cauſe ſhall a man leave his father and mother, and ſhall be joined to his wife, and they two ſhall be one fleſh, he adds, v. 32. This is a great myſtery —— collecting myſteriouſly (or κατὰ γνῶσιν, according to knowledge, that is, by the skill of interpreting myſteries of Scriptures) all the conjugal love and union, as between husband and wife, ſo between Chriſt and his Church, from that one paſſage in the Creation. So 1 Cor. 11. 8. to prove that the wife is to be covered, as a token of her ſubjection to her husband, he ſaith, For the man is not of the woman, but the woman of the man; neither was the man created for the woman, but the woman for the man. All which are but concluſions drawn by this γνῶσις or myſtical explication, from thoſe paſſages in the creation of man and woman. And ſo it may be very fitly affirmed here of the ſeveral parts of the husband's duty to the wife, they are all evidently concluſible (κατὰ γνῶσιν according to knowledge, or by explication of the hidden ſenſe) from the words in the Creation. Firſt, συνοικοῦντες cohabiting (contrary to the infuſions of the Hereticks falſly called Gnoſticks) is the interpretation of the firſt part of God's bleſſing, Gen. 1. 28. in theſe words, Be fruitful and multiply, and again of their two being one fleſh. And this Plato himſelf appears to have learned from the ſtory of the Creation, writing in Convivio and his Dialogue, περὶ ἔρωτος, that antiently male and female were put together in one body, and were after by Jupiter cut aſunder; concluding, ἕκαστος οὖν ἡμῶν ἐστιν ἀνθρώπου σύμβολον, every one of us is the ſhare of a man, ἅτε τετμημένων, ὥσπερ αἱ ψῆτται ἐξ ἑνὸς δύο, cut aſunder, like the ſole-fiſhes, made two of one: and this is the reaſon, ſaith he, that every one ſeeks out and deſires a wife, τὸ ἑαυτοῦ ἕκαστος σύμβολον, every one the other part of him, ἐπιχειρῶν ποιῆσαι ἓν ἐκ δυοῖν, καὶ ἰάσασθαι τὴν φύσιν, endeavouring to reunite the divided parts, to make one of two, and ſo to cure the diſmembred nature. To which Fable S. Chryſoſtom refers, * when he ſaith of man and woman, ὥσπερ ἡμίτομα δύο εἰσὶ, they are as two halves cut aſunder. Secondly, The woman's being taken out of the man's ſide, doth, not only with the Jews in theirs, but with Chriſt and his Apoſtles in their Chriſtian Cabala, ſignifie that the woman is dependent of the man, unable to ſubſiſt without him; from whence it follows here, that he muſt provide for her honour or maintenance, as being the weaker veſſel (ſee Note d.) Thirdly, The woman's being joined with the man in the dominion over the creatures, God's having given the fruit of the earth for food to them both in common or equally, Gen. 1. 28, 29. is a direct foundation of what is here added, that they are συγκληρονόμοι coheirs of the gift of life, as ζωὴ life ſignifies the neceſſaries of life, of which therefore the wife is in all reaſon to partake with him: or if ζωὴ be taken for life it ſelf, then it belongs to the Creation, male and female created he them; which is again a myſtical proof or argument of conviction, that they that partake of life equally, ſhould alſo partake of the neceſſaries of life. To which we ſhall not need to add a third acception of ζωὴ life for eternal or everlaſting life, which ſeems not to be looked on here. See Note e.

ζωὴ

d. τιμὴ

Ib. Honour] The word τιμὴ ordinarily ſignifies maintenance: ſo 1 Tim. 5. 3. τὰς χήρας τίμα honour, that is, maintain, relieve, the widows; and ſo when the ruling elder is ſaid to be worthy of double honour, 1 Tim. 5. 17. that denotes ſuch a proportion of maintenance above others as was wont to belong to the elder brother in the family. So Act. 28. 10. of the Barbarians πολλαῖς τιμαῖς ἐτίμησαν ἡμᾶς, they honoured us with many honours, that is, made us many entertainments when we were there, καὶ ἀναζομένοις ἐπέθεντο τὰ πρὸς τὴν χρείαν, and when we went away, they brought us in all things for our uſe. So in Cicero, Medico honos debetur, honour is due to a Phyſician, that is, a reward or fee. And ſo Ariſtotle, Rhet. l. 1. c. 5. among the parts of τιμὴ honour, reckons δῶρα τὰ παρ' ἑκάστοις τίμια, gifts, honorary donatives, καὶ γὰρ δῶρον δοκεῖ κλῆμα εἶναι δόσις, καὶ τιμῆς σημεῖον, for a gift is the giving a poſſeſſion, and a ſign of honour. So Num. 22. 37. Am not I able to honour thee? that is, to give thee mercedem a reward, ſaith S. Hierom: for ſo the Hebrew כבד ſignifies both honour and reward, and alſo the neceſſaries or proviſions in an army (opes, pecudes, ſupellectilem omnem, wealth, cattel, all kind of proviſion, ſaith Schindler) Jud. 18. 21. And ſo as the Hebrew בזה ſignifies both to deſpiſe, and to take no care of; ſo to take care of, to provide for any, is expreſſed by honouring. So Mat. 15. 6. and ſhall not honour his father, &c. that is, ſhall afford him no maintenance or relief, ſee 1 Tim. 5. d. And ſo here ἀσθενέστερον τιμῶ to afford ſupplies or maintenance to the wife, as being the weaker veſſel, taken out of, and depending on him for the neceſſities of life.

e. χάεις ζωῆς

Ib. Grace of life] The ſeveral notions of the word χάεις grace in the Sacred dialect have been often taken notice of. See Note on Luk. 1. k. Act. 2. f. Heb. 13. d. Act. 18. e. All of them ſpringing from that primary notion of it for charity and liberality. Thus is the word uſed 1 Cor. 16. 3. ἡ χάεις ὑμῶν, your charity or liberality to the poor Chriſtians. So Eccluſ. 17. 22. ἡ χάεις, &c. the charity of a man, and c. 20. 13. χάεισες μωρῶν the charities of fools; for ſo it follows v. 14. The gift of a fool, &c. and chap. 40. 17. it is rendred bountifulneſs. Thus in Ariſtotle χάεις is defined ὅταν τις ὑπαργῇ καὶ βοηθῇ τῷ δεομένῳ, μὴ ἀντί τινος μηδ' ἵνα τι αὐτῷ τῷ ὑπαρξάντι, ἀλλὰ ἵνα τῷ ἐκείνῳ τι, Rhet. l. 2. c. 7. When any man relieves him that wants, not that he himſelf may gain any thing by it, but only that the other may. Where the Anonymus Scholiaſt expounds it χάεις, ἤτοι δωρεὰν, Grace, that is, gift; and ſo Heſychius, χάεις, δωρεά. So in Callimachus, εἰς Δῆλον,

Σῴζεο, μὴ σύ γ' ἐμεῖο πάθῃς κακὸν εἵνεκα, τοὶ δὲ
Αἶψ' ἑλεημοσύνης, χάεσσι δέ σοι ἕασι' ἀμοιβή.

I wiſh you may ſuffer no ill for this mercy to me, but that you may be rewarded for your Charity: where χάεις is clearly interpreted by alms or mercy. So 2 Cor. 8. 1, and 4. 'tis clearly uſed for a gift or liberal beneficence to the poor. Thus in this Epiſtle, c. 4. 18. ποικίλη χάεις Θεοῦ the manifold grace of God, is God's liberality of divers kinds, particularly the wealth that he hath given to men, as to ſtewards, to diſtribute to them that ſtand in need of it: and at the beginning of the verſe it is called χάεισμα, Ἕκαστος καθὼς ἔλαβε χάεισμα, Every man as he hath received wealth, or any other ſuch gift of God. So the grace of God, ſo often mentioned, is the mercy and gift of God; as in the Benedictions, The grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, all one with ἀγάπη God's love, and κοινωνία communication after it. So Joh. 1. 16. we have received χάεν grace, mercy, liberal effuſion of goodneſs, ἀντὶ χάεως θεοῦ, in reſpect of (and in proportion to) his great goodneſs, and mercy, and abundant charity to us, mentioned before, v. 14. and after, v. 17. where the grace of Chriſt is ſet oppoſite to the ſtrictneſs of the law, which hath nothing of mercy in it. Agreeable to this notion of χάεις, as it ſignifies an act of this mercy in God, that is, a gift, is the uſe of it in this place, where the husbands are commanded to diſtribute to their wives all things that they ſtand in need of, ὡς συγκληρονόμοι χάεως ζωῆς, as copartners of the gift of life: that is, the wife and the husband are joined together in receiving from God that largeſs of his, whether it be ζωῆς, as that ſignifies life it ſelf, as we know it was in the Creation, God equally diſtributed this gift of life to them; or as it notes the comforts and neceſſaries of life, the wife as well as the husband hath right of inheritance from God to all the good things of this life, as having equally dominion given to them both over the fiſh, and fowl, and beaſts and herbs, and trees, Gen. 1. 28. all which are given them for meat, v. 29.

V. 19. Spirits in priſon] For the explicating of this very obſcure place, the beſt riſe will be that which S. Hierom on Iſaiah hath ſuggeſted to us, by looking on the words of God to Noah concerning the ſins of the old world, and his judgments deſigned againſt them, Gen. 6. 3. where conſidering Noah as a prophet (and preacher of repentance to the old world) it will not be ſtrange if the expreſſion be prophetical and figurative. The Hebrew hath it thus, לא ידון רוחי באדם, which the ordinary Engliſh render, My ſpirit ſhall not always ſtrive with man, the Greek οὐ καταμενεῖ πνεῦμά μου ἐν τοῖς ἀνθρώποις τούτοις, my ſpirit ſhall not abide in theſe men, perhaps reading לא ילון from לון to lodge, or abide. The Engliſh render the Hebrew ידון, as it came from דין, diſceptavit, judicio contendit, to contend, or go to law; but the word comes from נדן, which ſignifies a ſheath, 1 Chron. 21. 27. and is uſed for a body, Dan. 7. 15. my ſpirit in the midſt of my body, as being the ſheath or receptacle of the ſoul: and ſo the writers of the Talmud ordinarily uſe it, and Tertullian De reſurrect. Caro vagina afflatûs Dei, Fleſh is the ſheath of the breath of God, no doubt referring to this place; and accordingly לא ידון is literally to be rendred ſhall not abide as a ſword, &c. in a ſheath. For the removing all improbableneſs of thus reading ידון (not ילין pernoctabit) and taking it in the notion of abiding, or continuing, in fleſh, and not of ſtriving, as the Interlinear and our Engliſh render it, and as ידין indeed would require to be rendred, I ſhall only add two things; firſt, That the antient Interpreters with one accord agree in the ſenſe of abiding, or inhabiting. The Chaldee read, לא יתקים דרא בישא הדין קדמי לעלם, This evil generation ſhall not always remain before me: the Syriack and Arabick, My ſpirit ſhall not dwell in man for ever: the LXXII. as we ſaid, οὐ μὴ καταμείνῃ, ſhall not abide; and ſo the Latin, non permanebit, ſhall not abide. This is a ſtrong argument, that they who, when they meet with ידין, uniformly render it κρινεῖ, &c. by words of judging, yet rendring this in ſo diſtant a manner, did not read that word, or in that ſenſe, but ידין as all Copies have it, in a notion of abiding, or being in another. And although the Scripture of the Old Teſtament give us no farther inſight into this word than that once we find נדן for a ſheath of a ſword, once for a body of a man; yet by theſe ſo diſtant notions of it, we have reaſon to ſuppoſe that there was ſome original comprehenſive notion of it belonging to more, or elſe it could not have been applied, in the Chronicles and in Daniel, to theſe two ſo diſtant particulars. A ſheath and a body, differ much the one from the other, yet agree in this, that as one is the repoſitory or abiding-place of the ſword, into which it is put, ſo the other is of the ſoul; and from this agreement no doubt it is, that they are expreſs'd by the ſame word. And then it would be very ſtrange, if that word, thus common to them, ſhould not natively ſignifie that wherein they thus agree, viz. abiding, or being put in, or kept in, or confined to ſuch a place, or ſome ſuch thing. 'Tis evident that many Hebrew words are of a far greater latitude of ſignification and comprehenſiveneſs than we can by the uſe of them in the Bible (which is but a volume χάεων ἀντὶ χάεως θεοῦ

f. Πνεῦμασι ἐν φυλακῇ

volume of a narrow compaſs) diſcern or conjecture, as appears eſpecially by the uſe of them in Arabick books, which language is certainly but a dialect derived from the Hebrew. And therefore it is not unreaſonable on the grounds premiſed, and thoſe more than obſcure indications in the Bible which we have of it, that this ſhould be the native meaning of the Verb, though in other places of the Bible we do not exactly meet with it. The ſecond thing is, that though ירון were not the reading, nor by the LXXII. and the other interpreters believed to be ſo, yet 'tis ſo ordinary for words of affinity in ſound or writing to have a nearneſs of ſignification, that theſe Interpreters, which did not always render literally, but oft by way of Paraphraſe, might probably enough have an eye to the notion of ירין for abiding, and ſo render it καλαμένειν to remain, or abide, for which in this matter Saint James uſeth καλοικεῖν to ſojourn, or abide, as in an Inn, for a night, Jam. 4. 5. for after this manner of liberty it is, that the Jeruſalem Targum on this verſe evidently takes in both the interpretations of ירון and ירין. In the latter ſenſe from דון to judge, their Paraphraſe thus begins, Non adjudicabuntur generationes quæ futuræ ſunt poſt generationem in diluvio perditioni, vaſtationi aut deletioni univerſali, The generations which ſhall be after the generation of the flood ſhall not be adjudged to an univerſal perdition, vaſtation, or blotting out. A truth indeed ſecured by God's promiſes at large, chap. 8. 21. and 9. 11. but no way pertinent to this place, where the Deluge it ſelf is threatned. Only on occaſion of the affinity in ſound and writing of לא ירין, not judging, here, to לא ירון, this part of the Paraphraſe, though alien to the place, ſeems to be begotten. But then for the former, as the words are undoubtedly read לא ירון רוחי, ſo the Paraphraſe proceeds in relation to them, Annon ſpiritum meum filiis hominum indidi? Have I not put my ſpirit into the ſons of men? an evident proof of their underſtanding ירון in a notion of putting one thing into another, which conſequently may be reſolved to be the general acception of the active Verb, and then that which is ſo put doth abide in it, as in a repoſitory of ſome ſort or other; ſuch is a ſheath to a ſword, a priſon to him that is put into it, a cabinet to that which is laid up in it, the body to the ſoul, as long as the man lives. As for רוחי my ſpirit, or breath, that ſure is that breath breathed by God into man, Gen. 2. 7. by which he became a living ſoul (ſee Jam. 4. a.) Spiritum meum filiis hominum indidi, I have given my breath, or ſpirit, (afflatus Dei in Tertullian) to the ſons of men, ſaith the Hieruſalem Targum there, according to that of Seneca, Ep. 66. Ratio nihil aliud eſt quàm in corpus humanum pars Divini ſpiritus merſa, Reaſon is nothing elſe but a particle of the Divine ſpirit immerſed in a man's body; and ſo in the Poet is a man's ſoul called ——divinæ particula auræ, Hor.

a particle of the divine breath, or ſpirit. From hence the meaning of thoſe words is clear, My ſpirit ſhall no longer be ſheathed in man, that is, the ſouls which I have breathed or given to men, the ſons of Adam, and which are ſheathed in them, impriſoned, detained unprofitably, ſhall no longer continue or abide in them: ſo ſaith S. Chryſoſtom, ἐμὴ καλαμείνη τὸ πνεῦμά μου ἐν ἀνθρώποις τούτοις, ἀντὶ τοῦ, οὐκ ἐάσω αὐτοὺς λοιπὸν ζῆν, My ſpirit ſhall not always abide among theſe men, is inſtead of, I will not ſuffer them to live any longer: and this, as a figurative obſcure expreſſion, is twice afterward ſet down more clearly, the Lord ſaid, I will deſtroy man, whom I have created, from the face of the earth, v. 7. and the end of all fleſh is come before me, and I will deſtroy them from the earth, v. 13. It muſt here be farther obſerved, that in the latter part of that third verſe is added, firſt, the reaſon of that ſentence of God; ſecondly, the ſpace in his long-ſufferance deſigned, before which was paſt, it ſhould not be executed. The former in theſe words. For that he alſo is fleſh, that is, extremely given to the ſatisfying of the fleſh, that Age being a moſt carnal and abominable Age, uſed ordinarily by the Jews (under the phraſe of דור המבול the age of the deluge) for an example of all impiety; and that I ſuppoſe here meant alſo by, the earth was corrupt before God, ver. 11, and 12. the corruption there, as φθοραὶ φθορᾶς. in the Apoſtles, ſignifying all manner of unnatural luſt and villany. And for the latter, it is evident that they were allowed ſixſcore years to repent in, and avert the judgment, and that Noah was ſent to preach repentance to them by denouncing the judgment and building the Ark. Ecce dedi ut reſipiſcentiam agerent, Behold I have given them that ſpace, that they might repent, ſaith the Hieruſalem Targum. And accordingly this Age is ordinarily, and by way of Proverb, uſed by the Jews as an evidence and example of God's μακροθυμία, his patience and long-ſuffering to ſinners, before he comes to puniſh them. And when the judgment came upon that world of ungodly men, yet a remnant was delivered, Noah and his family in the Ark, from periſhing in the waters. By this explication of that verſe in Geneſis, as it already appears how perfect a parallel that was of God's dealing with the Jews, giving them time to repent, delivering all that did repent, and deſtroying the whole nation beſides; ſo it is evident that from thence this verſe of S. Peter's may be interpreted. For the τὰ ἐν φυλακῇ πνεύματα the ſpirits in the priſon, or cuſtody, or ſheath, here (φυλακὴ ſignifying any kind of receptacle, Rev. 18. 2.) are thoſe ſouls of men that lay ſo ſheathed, ſo uſeleſs and unprofitable in their bodies, immerſed ſo deep in carnality as not to perform any ſervice to God, who inſpired and placed them there (and 'tis elſewhere a figurative ſpeech to expreſs wicked men, who are called priſoners, in priſon, that is, ἐν φυλακῇ, Iſa. 42. 7. and ch. 49. 9. and bound in priſon, Iſa. 61. 1.) they, the thoughts of whoſe hearts were evil continually, v. 5. To theſe Chriſt, that is, God eternal, πορευθεὶς ἐκήρυξεν ἐν πνεύμασι, went and preached in, or by, that Spirit by which he was now raiſed from the dead: where firſt, the word Χριστὸς Chriſt is uſed, not Θεὸς God, according to the general opinion of the antient Fathers of the Church, that he which of old appeared to the Patriarchs was (not the firſt but) the ſecond perſon in the Trinity, Chriſt the Son, not God the Father, and that thoſe appearances of his were præludia incarnationis, preluſory and preparative to his taking our fleſh upon him. And accordingly thoſe verſes of the Sibylline Oracle, which introduce God ſpeaking to Noah about the Ark, and ſetting down the ſpeakers names by Numbers, (Ἐννέα γεφύμαι· ἔχω τετρασύλλαβός εἰμι, νόῃ μι.

Αἱ τρεῖς αἱ πρῶ') δύο γεφύμαι· ἔχουσιν ἑκάστη,
* Ἡ λοιπὴ δ' τὰ λοιπὰ καὶ εἰσιν ἄφωνα τὰ πάντα.
Τῷ πανὸς δ' ἀριθμῷ ἑκατονταάδες εἰσὶ δὶς ὀκτὼ Καὶ τρεῖς τεὶς δεκάδες † σοὶ δισσά——)

are beſt interpreted by Θεὸς σωτὴρ, God Saviour, that is, Chriſt: for to thoſe two words belongs all that is ſaid in thoſe verſes; they conſiſt of nine letters, four ſyllables, the three firſt of two letters apiece, and the fourth of the remaining three, of five conſonants, and four vowels; and ſo likewiſe the numeral importance of each letter amounteth to the juſt number of 1692. as it is there deſcribed. See Cantar. Novar. Lect. l. 1. c. 3. Secondly, the phraſe πορευθεὶς ἐκήρυξεν went and preached, or going preached, is but an idiom of the ſacred ſtyle, wherein πορευθεὶς going, and ſuch like words, are frequently uſed as παρέλκοντα expletives; ſo, to omit many more, Epheſ. 2. 17. ſpeaking of Chriſt after his departure from the world (in the ſame manner as here before his coming into it) and of his preaching by his Apoſtles, not perſonally himſelf, to the heathen world, S. Paul expreſſes it after the ſame manner as here, καὶ ἐλθὼν εὐηγγελίσατο εἰρήνην, and he went and preached peace. Thirdly, by his Spirit is evidently here meant that Divine power by which he was raiſed from the dead, after his crucifixion, and by which he means now to act revenge on his crucifiers after a while, if they repent not, but in the mean time to preach repentance to them. And that makes the parallel exact betwixt the matter here in hand and the ſtory of the old world. Here men are divided into two ſorts, v. 17. thoſe that ſuffer for well doing, the pious, conſtant, yet perſecuted Chriſtians, and thoſe that ſhall ſuffer for evil doing, the contumacious obdurate perſecuting Jews and Gnoſticks; as there the violent and corrupt on one ſide, which were, after the hundred and twenty years, ſwept away

* So Guil. Canterus rightly reads it, not αἱ λοιπαὶ

† So again, Guil. Cant. not σωὶ γ' ἑπλὰ away with the Deluge, and Noah (and his family) on the other ſide, who by being ſet forth as an example of the godly, delivered out of temptations, 2 Pet. 2. 5, 9. appear to have been oppoſed and wronged by them. And therefore to prove (what was undertaken, v. 17.) that even in reſpect of this world, it is far better to be of the number of the perſecuted, who ſhall be delivered, than of the moſt proſperous perſecuters, which ſhall after a time be deſtroyed, as the example of Chriſt was very pertitent, v. 18. who having ſuffered a while, was raiſed in power to deſtroy the crucifiers; ſo the example of the old world is fitly made uſe of alſo, who are evidently pointed at not only by the πνεύμασι ἐν φυλακῇ, ſpirits in the ſheath, or cuſtody, or priſon, (which ſo fitly agrees with the יְרִיעָה ſheathed in the old prophecy) but by that which here follows, ἀπειθήσασί ποτε, which were diſobedient of old, ſee Note g. (which clearly takes it off from belonging to the Gentiles of Chriſt's time, to which ſome interpreters are willing to apply the place) and that ποτε of old defined by the ὅτε when that follows, ὅτε ἅπαξ ἐξεδέχετο when once God's long-ſufferance waited (or without once, ὅτε ἀπεξεδέχετο, as the King's MS. reads it) ἐν ἡμέραις Νῶε, when it waited in the days of Noe, &c. which particular of God's long-ſufferance, awaiting their repentance 120 years, and daily admoniſhing and reproaching them all that time (ſee Heb. 11. 7.) by the κατασκευαζομένου κιβωτοῦ preparation of the ark, and his ſaving the remnant (as the ſon of Syrach calls it Ecclus. 44. 17.) by this means, δι' ὕδατος through, or out of, the water (ſee 1 Cor. 3. Note b.) are very commodiouſly applied to S. Peter's preſent purpoſe alſo, Chriſt's deferring this vengeance on the Jews fourty years after his crucifixion, being on purpoſe deſigned, firſt, to bring the crucifiers to repentance, ſecondly, to make trial of the patience and perſeverance of the ſincere Chriſtians, and to deliver them peculiarly out of this deluge of deſtruction, Rev. 2. 7, &c. when all others, Jews and temporizing Gnoſticks, were deſtroyed.

g. ἀπειθήσασι

V. 20. Diſobedient] The word ἀπειθήσασι diſobedient is uſed for a courſe of great notorious ſin, ſpoken of the παραπικραίνοντες exaſperators, provokers, Heb. 3. 16, 18. againſt whom God's oath was gone out, that they ſhould not enter into his reſt, ver. 19. They are here certainly the wicked men of the old world, on whom the flood came, called ἀσεβῶν κόσμος, the world of the ungodly, 2 Pet. 2. 5. which are there joined with the wicked of Sodom. From whence and from ſome other evidences it is probably to be concluded what their ſin was which brought the flood upon them, viz. the ſin of unnatural uncleanneſs, or Sodomy, contrary to that breath of God breathed on them, the light of law, and reaſon, and nature, and the very ſoul within them. For ſo Gen. 6. 2. upon the ſons of God taking them wives of the daughters of men, preſently follows the decree of God to ſend the Deluge upon them. The ſons of God, and of men, were certainly the worſhippers of the one true, and the many falſe gods, and the marrying of thoſe Idolaters was the means of inſnaring the godly in the heathen Idol-worſhips, and all the villanies in their practices, or ſacrifices (as after it was Num. 25. 2.) This is there in general expreſſed, v. 5. by The wickedneſs of man was great upon the earth, meaning by πονηρία wickedneſs, villany (as ἀσεβείας incontinence, Mat. 23. 25. is πονηρία wickedneſs, Luc. 11. 39.) and v. 11. by, The earth was corrupt before God, and filled with all violence, by corruption ſignifying theſe unnatural luſts, ſo ordinarily called φθορὰ, and φθείρεσθαι, corruption and being corrupted (ſee Note on 2 Pet. 1. b. and 2. b.) and by violence either the ſame again in the moſt enormous kind, ſuch as was by the Sodomites offered to the Angels (ſee Note on 1 Cor. 5. h.) or elſe perſecuting all others that would not go on with them in all their riotous courſes, and both together expreſſed v. 12. by one of them, corrupt, And all fleſh corrupted his way, and both again by violence, v. 13. The end of all fleſh is come before me: for the earth is filled with violence. So that either of theſe ſingle, (or, which in probability is all one, both together,) is the notation of the ſin for which the flood came, and the interpretation of the ἀπειθήσασί ποτε, thoſe that of old were diſobedient in this place.

φθορὰ φθείρεσθαι

V. 21. The like figure] The King's MS. reads Ο καὶ ἀντίτυπον, &c. where Ο in Capital letters (as that whole book is written) ſignifies oftentimes ᾧ, as in an Inſcription of an antient cup in Athenæus ΔΙΟΝΤΣΟ is written for Διονύσῳ. And ſo in an old Copy in Magdalene College in Oxford it is clearly, ᾧ ἀντίτυπον the antitype of which. As for the word ἀντίτυπον, it may perhaps be here fit to note that, as it is certainly beſt rendred Antitype, to preſerve the ſignification of the Greek, whatſoever ſhall here appear moſt fitly to belong to it, ſo the Greek is capable of very diſtant ſenſes. For firſt, it ſignifies (not a like, but) a contrary. So in * Xenophon, Τὰ μὲν εἰς χάριτα διὰ τοῦ ἄρχοντος ἐγένετο, τὰ δὲ ἀντίτυπα δι' ἄλλων, Matters of favour are done by the Prince himſelf, but the contrary by other men. So ſaith Heſychius of it, Ἀντίτυπα, Ἀντιτυπῆσαι, ἐναντιοῦσθαι, ἀντιπεῖν, and Ἀντιτυπίαι, ἀντιλογίαι, ἐναντιώσεις: It ſignifies contrariety or contradiction; and ſo we know the prepoſition ἀντὶ moſt ordinarily imports. And this the place would not unfitly bear, that Baptiſm is quite contrary to the Ark of Noah, but yet ſaves as that ſaved. There the deſtruction was by water, and only they were ſaved which got into the Ark; but here water is the means of ſaving from deſtruction, and they periſh which have not this immerſion or baptiſm here ſpoken of. Beſide this there is a ſecond notation of this word, as ἀντὶ ſignifies pro as well as contra, and ſo it may here be fitly rendred. For when it is compounded in the notion of pro, it notes in ſtead of another, as Ἀνθύπατος proconſul, is he that ſupplies the Conſul's place, is in his ſtead. And ſo it may be here, ᾧ ἀντίτυπον βάπτισμα, baptiſm in ſtead, or ſupplying the office of the Ark, ſaves us now. In this ſenſe Antitype is ordinarily taken among us for that which (is not it ſelf a type, or figure, but) ſupplies the place of ſome former type; ſo purity of the heart is the Antitype of Circumciſion, that is, that which is now by Chriſt required in ſtead of that ceremony among the Jews. But beſide both theſe, there is a third notation of the word, for ἀντίσεχον, a copy, differing from τύπος, ſo as the impreſſion in the wax differs from the ingraving in the Seal. So the Old Gloſſary renders both thoſe words, ἀντίσεχον and ἀντίτυπον, by exemplum and exemplar. And thus is the word uſed, Heb. 9. 24. and generally in the Eccleſiaſtick writers, and is beſt expreſs'd by parallel, or anſwerable, and may ſo here fitly be rendred, parallel whereunto Baptiſm —

Paraphraſe. CHAP. IV.

1. Ye muſt therefore, ſeeing Chriſt hath ſuffered for you, reſolve to follow and imitate him in ſuffering alſo, or dying with him, viz. dying to ſin (ſee v. 6.) or ceaſing from it, as he that is dead, or hath crucified the fleſh with affections and luſts, always doth,

And if it be ſo, what is this but a very ominous ſign, that it will be very heavy and inſupportable to the wicked, the obdurate crucifiers of Chriſt, and perſecutors of Chriſtianity, whoſe portion is that other far bitterer part of the Cup, which is reſerved for them even in this world, a fatal exciſion now ſuddenly approaching? after the righteous have been ſufficiently tried, then their rod is to be caſt into the fire, and ſo an utter deſtruction of the obdurate Jews (ſee Luk. 23. 31.) and that in an heavier manner in another world after this life.

Annotations on Chap. IV.

a. Παθὼν ἐν σαρκὶ

V. 1. Suffered in the fleſh] What is here meant by ſuffering in the fleſh, (or, as the King's MS. reads, σαρκὶ, to the fleſh) which we are to do by way of correſpondence to Chriſt's crucifixion, doth not only appear by many other phraſes elſewhere, as being dead to ſin, crucified with Chriſt, noting thereby mortification and forſaking of worldly ſinful courſes; but alſo by the diſtinct words here added, πέπαυται ἁμαρτίας, he hath ceaſed from ſin, which refer the phraſe here to reformation of wicked lives, not to ſuffering of afflictions, as the words might be thought to ſignifie. And this irrefragably appears by v. 2. That we ſhould no longer live the reſt of our time in the fleſh to the luſts of men, but to the will of God. Which verſe if it be compared with that harder phraſe, κεκριμένους κατὰ ἀνθρώπους σαρκὶ, judged to the fleſh according to men, v. 6. it may poſſibly give ſome light to the explication of it. For ἐπιθυμίαις ἀνθρώπων the luſts of men, ver. 2. may well be anſwera-

πέπαυται ἁμαρτίας

κεκριθῶσι κατὰ ἀνθρώπους σαρκὶ

ble to κατ' ἀνθρώπους σαρκὶ, the flesh according to men, v. 6. noting thereby the cuſtomary ſinful luſts of the Gentiles, as on the other ſide, the will of God, v. 2. is all one with the ſpirit according to God, the godly ſpiritual inclinations and diſpoſitions: and then why may not μηκέτι βιῶσαι, living no longer, that is, dying, be all one with κριθῶσι be judged or condemned, or ſentenced to death? For when all the phraſes that belong to Chriſt's ſufferings, Crucifixion, Death, Burial, are applied by accommodation from Chriſt to the Chriſtian, in reſpect of his dying to the fleſh, to the world, to ſin, and when the oppoſite to being judged is living, (and when that oppoſition is ſtrictly obſerved in all other parts of the phraſe, πνεύματι ſpirit oppoſed to σαρκὶ fleſh, and κατὰ Θεὸν according to God, to κατ' ἀνθρώπους according to men) why ſhould not κρίνεσθαι to be judged or condemned, which is the thing immediately preparatory to execution, be taken here (though not often elſewhere) for execution, or ſuffering that ſentence; and ſo κριθῶσι σαρκὶ, judged to the fleſh, be all one with dead to the world or fleſh, that is, mortifying all ſinful luſts, oppoſed to living according to God, to the ſpirit, an holy and godly life? Another notion theſe words, v. 6. may be thought capable of, ἵνα κριθῶσι μὲν κατ' ἀνθρώπους τῇ σαρκὶ (ſpeaking of penitent ſinners involved in a common ruin) that though as far as men can ſee, κατ' ἀνθρώπους according to men, they be judged in the fleſh, ſwept away in the calamity, in reſpect of their bodily outward condition, yet they are at reſt, and ſo in their ſoul or ſpirit, live with God. If ſuffering in or to, the fleſh, v. 1. did belong to afflictions, this then might probably be the meaning of v. 6. But the former being otherwiſe determined by the Context, this latter will beſt be interpreted by analogy therewith.

b. οἰνόφλυξ

V. 3. Exceſs of wine] Οἰνόφλυξ, μέθυσος, ὁ εἰς τὸ οἶνον ὁρμῶν· φλύειν γὰρ τὸ ὁρμὴν ἔχειν πρός τι, ſaith Phavorinus; the word ſignifies a drunkard, one impetuouſly given to wine. And again, Οἰνοφλυγία, ἐπιθυμία οἴνου ἀμέτρου, an immoderate deſire of wine.

c. ξενίζεσθε

V. 4. Think it ſtrange] Ξενίζεσθαι is to wonder as at a new or ſtrange accident. So in Polybius, ξενίζεσθαι καὶ διαπορεῖν διὰ τὸ παράδοξον, to think ſtrange and doubt as at a paradox; all one with ξενοπαθεῖν to be ſurprized with ſome unexpected event. So Ξενίζω, ἐκπλήττω, in Phavorinus, and proportionably in the Paſſive, Ξενίζεσθαι, ἐκπλήττεσθαι, to be ſtricken on a ſudden, or amazed: ſo here again, v. 12. μὴ ξενίζεσθε τῇ πυρώσει, be not ſurprized, amazed, aſtoniſh'd, or vehemently affected with wonder, at that πύρωσις which is among you.

d. ἀνάχυσις

Ib. Exceſs of riot] Ἀνάχυσις, φυρμὸς, σύγχυσις, ſaith Phavorinus: where σύγχυσις ſignifying confuſion is a general word, and would not much tend to the illuſtrating of the other, did not the φυρμὸς tell us what kind of confuſion it was, viz. a confuſion of ſexes in committing thoſe baſe ſins; for ſo ſaith he of φυρμὸς, μολυσμὸς, ῥύπος, μίασμα, it notes thoſe filthy abominable pollutions: and accordingly Heſychius having rendred it φυρμὸς, θηλεία, interprets the latter of theſe μαλακία mollities, the word ſo commonly uſed for effeminacy, and particularly for theſe baſe ſins. Another notion of this word there is (the primitive, I ſuppoſe, whence this is by Metaphor derived) for ponds or cavities which are filled with the ſea at the time of flote, and will carry boats at ſuch times to the main land, and to cities built there. So ſaith Strabo l. 3. Λέγουσι ἀναχύσεις αἱ πληρούμεναι τῇ θαλάττῃ κοιλάδες ἐν αἷς πλημμυρίσι καὶ πολλῷ δίκλω ἀνάπλους ὑπὸ τὰ μεσόγαιαν ἔχουσαι καὶ τὰς ἐπ' αὐτῆς πόλεις. Theſe Ptolemy calls ἐκχύσεις, as our Humber in England is by him expreſs'd by Ἄκις (in all probability for Ἄκρα) ἔκχυσις. And this overflowing of the ſea is very fit to expreſs this of extravagant enormous luſt (See Note on Jude b.) Agreeable to this is the notion of Ἀσωτία here alſo joined with it: Ἄσωτος, ἀκόλαστος, ἀσώτους, and Ἀσώτως, αἰσχρῶς ſaith Phavorinus; it notes incontinence, and laſciviouſneſs, or filthineſs, which what it ſignifies in that writer, will appear by the account which he gives of ἀσωτεύεσθαι viz. that principally and properly it ſignifies τὸ παρὰ φύσιν τῇ γυναικὶ μίγνυσθαι, the ſin mentioned Rom. 1. 26. from whence, ſaith he, there was a city called Ἀσέλγη, ὅπου κακῶς ἔχουσι οἱ ἄνθρωποι, καὶ ἀλλήλοις ἐκοινώνουν, where ſuch unnatural villanies were ordinarily committed: and κοινῶς, ἀσέλγεια ἀκαθαρσία uncleanneſs, but that eſpecially of the baſeſt and fouleſt ſort, as may appear by his rendring Ἀρρητοποιία by ἀσέλγεια, ἀκρασγία· by which it appears that theſe two words ſignifying each of them ſo unſavourly, are joined together to denote thoſe ἀθέμιστοι εἰδωλολατρεῖαι abominable practices of the Gentiles in their idolatries, v. 3.

Ἀσωτία

e. πύρωσις

V. 12. Fiery trial] What πύρωσις here ſignifies will eaſily be defined from the notion of the Hebrew רלק, which ſignifies two things, to perſecute, and to ſet on fire. So Pſal. 10. 2. where the Hebrew is rendred by us, the wicked doth perſecute the poor, the LXXII. read, ἐμπυρίζεται ὁ πτωχὸς, the poor is ſet on fire. And ſo again, צרף, which ſignifies to try, (either as gold is by the fire, or as men by afflictions) is by the LXXII. Pſal. 17. 3. rendred ἐπύρωσας caſting into the fire. And accordingly πύρωσις regularly will ſignifie in general, any kind of adverſity or ſharp perſecution, which (a fire blown up into flames, to gold or other metals is the means of exploring and purifying them) is in like manner here ſaid to be γινομένη ὑμῖν εἰς πειρασμὸν, befallen them for their trial. Thus Prov. 27. 21. δοκίμιον ἀργυρίῳ καὶ χρυσῷ πύρωσις, caſting into the fire is the tryal for ſilver and gold, and Pſal. 66. 10. ἐπύρωσας ἡμᾶς, ὡς πυροῦται ἀργύριον, thou haſt caſt us into the fire, as ſilver is caſt into the fire, unleſs perhaps that ſhould be read ἐπείρασας ὡς πειράζεται thou haſt tried us as ſilver is tried, and ſo in other places of the Old Teſtament. The word we have again, Rev. 18. 9. where καπνὸς πυρώσεως we rightly render the ſmoak of her burning, or being ſet on fire. If this be now applied to the Jews in general at that time, it may then be fitly interpreted of the great combuſtions and ſeditions cauſed by the Ζηλωταὶ and σικαριοὶ, Zelots and ſeditious, oft mentioned by Joſephus, which raiſed ſuch ſtirs among them, and brought ſuch heavy, bloody ſlaughters upon them before their deſtruction by the Romans, and not only in, but out of Judæa. And in oppoſition to theſe perhaps it is, that they are adviſed to be Ζηλωταὶ τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ Zelots of that which is good, for ſo the King's MS. reads in ſtead of μιμηταὶ imitators or followers, c. 3. 13. and accordingly now, when the τὸ τέλος ἤγγικε the deſtruction or fatal exciſion was but approaching, the πύρωσις is ſpoken of as already γινομένη ἐν ὑμῖν befallen among them, and ſo may fitly be the forerunner of their deſtruction, as Joſephus obſerves it was. But if it be more ſtrictly applied to the Chriſtians to whom S. Peter writes, it muſt then ſignifie the perſecutions which, from the Jews and Gnoſticks, fell on the pure and orthodox Chriſtians, whereever Chriſtianity was planted in the Provinces, and was particularly εἰς πειρασμὸν, for the exploring and trying them, the malice of the perſecuters being ſuch (and no other means of appeaſing them, ſave the denying of the Faith, or, by compliances, ſeeming to do ſo) that whoſoever was not ſincere, was ſure to be tempted out of his profeſſion.

πύρωσις

τέλος ἤγγικε

f. δόξη

V. 14. Glory] That δόξη glory is anſwerable to the Hebrew Schechinah the appearing of God by Angels, or any other glorious way, hath been often ſaid, Note on Mar. 1. a. (ſee 2 Pet. 1. 3, 17. and Jude 24.) and that that alſo ſignifies that eminent way of God's appearance, (which is therefore called his ἐπιφάνεια) the Incarnation and being of Chriſt here on the earth, hath been formerly noted alſo, on Joh. 1. c. So 2 Cor. 4. a. the glory of God in the face of Jeſus Chriſt, is the glorious exhibition of God, ſo viſible in Chriſt here on the earth. And ſo moſt probably here it ſignifies; and then τὸ τῆς δόξης τὸ τῆς δόξης will be the ſtate or condition of Chriſt when he was here uponthe earth, with which is here fitly joined τὸ πνεῦμα τοῦ τὸ πνεῦμα Θεοῦ, the ſpirit of God (ſo Chriſt incarnate was, God bleſſed for ever) that is, the ſame way of diſpenſation and œconomy which was uſed on Chriſt when he was here on earth (ſee Note on Luk. 9. e.) And that this is the meaning of it here, will be judged by the Context, which pronounces them happy that are reproached for Chriſt's name; becauſe by that means they are made like Chriſt, that prime perſon that ſuffered for well doing.

g. ἀλλοτριεπισκοπία

V. 15. A buſie-body] What the ἀλλοτριεπισκοπία here ſignifies, will beſt be gueſt by obſerving firſt that it is here joined with other great and groſs ſins, Theft, Murther, Evil-doing; ſecondly, by comparing it with another word of near ſignification, ἀτακτία 2 Theſſ. 3. 11. (againſt which the Apoſtle exhorts, 1 Theſſ. 4. 1.) This crime

crime is either of a lower or higher ſort; the firſt is idleneſs, the ſecond improves it into ſedition. Againſt the former the Apoſtolick doctrine did proceed by way of cenſure, that they were not to be acknowledged in the Catalogue of thoſe poor that were to be relieved by the Church out of the publick ſtock, but rather under the title of the ἄτακτοι diſorderly perſons, uſed as thieves (with whom they are here placed) which were to be ſold as ſlaves, forced to labour, and ſo taken off from their idleneſs and medling with other men's matters. Thus among the Ægyptians idleneſs was a capital crime; among the Lucani, he that lent money to any idle perſon was to loſe it; among the Corinthians the ſlothful were delivered to the carnifex, ſaith Diphilus. Another higher than this there was, of undertaking to have the charge of thoſe that do not belong to them; a fault which at this time was very obſervable among the Jewiſh Zelots, who pretending to and promiſing themſelves a perpetual immunity from all power of men (as the only children of God, which were not therefore to be under any man, particularly under Heathens, but to enjoy an αὐτονομία or immunity) would force all men to join with them againſt the Romans, that is, againſt the publick peace, calling themſelves the εὐεργέτ) καὶ σωτῆρες benefactors and ſaviours of the nation and plundering all that would not be as active and ſeditious as themſelves. Such as theſe were very rife at the time of writing this Epiſtle, and might juſtly be here ranked with thieves and murtherers, being moſt eminently both of theſe, under pretence of zeal to the Law, and making all men perform their duty.

ἄτακτοι

h. δοξαζέτω ὅτι

V. 17. For the time——] The ὅτι here will moſt conveniently be joined with the δοξαζέτω, v. 16. as the matter of the Chriſtians joy, and occaſion of his glorifying God, that this is the ſeaſon of judgments beginning at the houſe of God. For there being two parts of God's κεῖμα or judgment, the one tolerable, the other intolerable, the one for advantage of the ſufferer, the other for the greateſt diſadvantage, the one here called ἄρξασ κεῖμα, the beginning, or τὸ πρῶτον, firſt part, of the judgment, the other τὸ τέλ⊖, the end, or tail of it, the one aſſigned to pious men the οἶκ⊖ Θεῦ houſe of God, the other to the impious, obdurate, ἀπειθοῦντες diſobedient, (ſee c. 3. g.) it muſt needs be look'd on as an happy condition, and that which is matter of joy and not of ſorrow to any, that they have their part in the former of theſe, and not in the latter of them. What the τὸ τέλ⊖ the end here is, may perhaps be queſtioned, whether any vengeance in this life, or that greater in another life. But the anſwer is eaſie: it belongs primarily to the vengeance that here ſhould light upon the obdurate Jews, their utter exciſion now approaching, ſtyled τὸ τέλ⊖ πάντων the end of all things, v. 7. in compariſon with which the perſecutions that now fell on the perſevering Chriſtians from their hands were very light and ſupportable; but this not to exclude, but to be the entrance on that ſad arrier, the dregs of that bitter cup in another world. What is here added of the δίκαι⊖ μόλις σώζε), the righteous ſcarcely eſcaping, is taken from Prov. 11. 31. where that which is in the Hebrew הן צדיק בארץ ישלם, and is from thence rightly rendred by our Engliſh, behold, the righteous ſhall be recompenſed on the earth, is by the Septuagint (by miſtake, as it is probable, of בארץ for ſome other word) rendred δίκαι⊖ μόλις σώζε), the righteous hardly (that is, not without ſome difficulties and perſecutions) eſcapes; where, as the recompence on earth, which the righteous meets with, is the puniſhments and afflictions which befall him in this life, ſo the σώζε) ſaved, muſt be the temporal preſervations here, or immunity from afflictions, and μόλις σώζε) hardly ſaved, his bearing ſome ſharp pungent part of them, but thoſe not comparable with that other part of God's cup of trembling, which expects the ungodly both here in a remarkable deſtruction, and in another world.

1. THE Elders which are among you I exhort, who am * alſo an elder, and a witneſs of the ſufferings of Chriſt, and alſo a partaker of the glory that † ſhall be revealed:]

1. The Biſhops of your ſeveral Churches (ſee Note on Act. 11. b.) I exhort, who am my ſelf employed here at Rome to govern the Church, one that attended Chriſt at his crucifixion, and was alſo at his Transfiguration preſent at that diſcourſe concerning the glory that ſhould be conſequent to his death, (ſee 2 Pet. 1. 16.) the remarkable deſtruction of his crucifiers, and deliverance of his faithful diſciples (ſee Note on 2 Theſſ. 1. 6.)

2. Feed the flock of God which is among you, * taking the overſight thereof, not by conſtraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind;]

2. Take care of your ſeveral Churches, and govern them, not as ſecular rulers by force, but as paſtors do their ſheep, by calling and going before them, (Pſal. 80. 1.) that ſo they may follow of their own accord; nor out of conſideration of the gain which may be made by receiving the contributions of the Church put into your hands, as ſecular rulers again make gain of their government, but ſo ruling them that they may obey your doctrine and example chearfully;

3. Not making thoſe advantages of them that are under you which the Procurators or ſecular governours do of their Provinces, but contenting your ſelves with the portion belonging to you, and walking Chriſtianly and exemplarily before them.

4. And when the chief ſhepherd ſhall appear, ye ſhall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away.]

5. And when Chriſt, which is your ruler and governour, as you are rulers of other men, ſhall come to judgment, you ſhall aſſuredly receive from him a crown, which is not made of ſuch fading materials as thoſe in the Olympick games, but one that fadeth not, a crown of glory, (ſee Note on 1 Cor. 9. 25.) a reward of your good (that is, eminently good) work, or office, 1 Tim. 3. 1. See Note a.

5. Likewiſe ye younger, ſubmit your ſelves unto the elder: yea, * all of you be ſubject one to another, and † be [c] clothed with humility; for God reſiſteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble.]

c.

5. And in like manner all inferiours muſt live obediently under their Biſhops; and ſo muſt all of you be ſubject to thoſe that are ſet over you (ſee Note on Jam. 5. h.) putting on humility as your badge; Or, and ſo muſt all of you put on humility as your badge: For God, ſaith Solomon, ſetteth himſelf againſt the haughty and diſobedient, but is very favourable to the meek and obedient.

6. Submit your ſelves therefore in all obedience to all thoſe that are placed over you by God, that he may in that great ſeaſon of retributions, both here in the time or viſitation (ſee Note on c. 2. 9.) and hereafter in the day of doom, exalt and reward your humility.

8. Be ſober, be vigilant, becauſe your adverſary the devil, as a roaring Lion, walketh about ſeeking whom he may devour:]

8. Obſerve carefully all the rules of ſobriety and vigilance, or diligence; for the devil, that upon all occaſions indicteth and accuſeth you before God, is always watching advantages to get you into his power and reach, and uſeth all means to that end, as a Lion doth roaring, to fright and amaze, and ſo catch his prey:

10. But the ſame God of all mercy and conſolation, who, by revealing Chriſtianity to you, hath advanced you to a capacity and (if you be not wanting to your ſelves) to the poſſeſſion of his eternal glory through the ſufferings of Chriſt, by his ſpecial providence reſtore you to a peaceable quiet condition of ſerving him, after theſe your diſperſions are over (ſee Note on 2 Cor. 13. c.) and by that means confirm you to hold out to the end.

11. And his holy name be for ever bleſſed and magnified by us all. Amen.

11. To him be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.]

12. I have written this ſhort Epiſtle to you by Silvanus, I take it, a worthy and faithful perſon, perſuading you thus to perſevere, and aſſuring you that this which I now preach to you is that faith which was at firſt received and believed by you, wherein ye have continued ſo long.

Annotations on Chap. V.

a. Καλαχυειδίεν

V. 3. As being lords] Καλαχυειδίεν is καλαχρᾶσθαι, ſaith Phavorinus, to have and exerciſe dominion. What this is, will appear by that place of the Goſpel, Mat. 20. 25. where 'tis explained by the practice of the heathen rulers, Kings or Emperors over them, who do κυριάζειν, and καλαχυειδίεν (both to the ſame ſenſe) act as κύριοι lords, maſters of their people; and that not only by dominion over their perſons, but over their eſtates too, ſo far as to maintain all their ſtate out of the peoples purſes by way of tribute and taxes. This is the meaning of διακονεῖσθαι there, ver. 28. to be ſerved or benefited by their ſubjects, the ſame that Xenophon means by ὠφελεῖσθαι ὑπ' αὐτῶν, Præf. to Κύρ. Παιδ. being profited by them: and * Callicratides the Pythagorean in his book of the felicity of families, intimates the ſame by his definition of deſpotick government, ἀ τῷ ἰδίῳ συμφέρον τῷ ἀρχομένῳ, that which reſpects the ruler's own profit, and not the ſubject's. For this is the manner of the Kings of the nations (and conſequently will be ſo of their King, if they will have one) 1 Sam. 8. 11. to receive tributes and the like from their ſubjects, and to be maintained by them in all their ſplendour and greatneſs that belonged to them, all the pomps and expences of their families and courts being fetched out of their ſubjects purſes and perſons. Which conſideration would, ſaith Samuel, make them think their preſent eſtate under the θεοκρατία (being governed by God immediately) much better to them, v. 18. And that is the meaning of the καλαχυειδίεν, to behave themſelves after the manner of theſe, to uſe their power in order to their own profits and greatneſs (like thoſe Neh. 5. 5. where the word κυριάζειν is uſed) And this is here forbidden the governours of the Church, they may not make this their manner of ruling, to exerciſe this power over their flock, but to give them examples of all kind of Chriſtian vertue, and ſo neither to be πλήκτ) ſtrikers, imperious, maſterly perſons, ruling roughly and harſhly, and in oſtentation of their power, nor αἰσχροκερδεῖς, covetous, griping, making advantage of Eccleſiaſtical power to ſqueez gain out of men. Which two things are ſo ſeverely interdicted the Eccleſiaſtical ruler, 1 Tim. 3. 3. and Tit. 1. 17. and perhaps are intended here alſo, v. 2. the firſt by ἐξ ἀναγκασῶς not forcibly, in an Active ſenſe, not uſing violence toward the flock, and the latter by the αἰσχροκερδῶς not making filthy gain, that is ſuch as the uſe of their power over the flock brings them in, over and above that proportion which by the Church is allotted for their maintenance.

b. Κλῆροι

Ib. Heritage] Κλῆροι may here be the ſeveral provinces over which each of the Governours (mentioned together in the Plural v. 1.) are placed. So Act. 1. 25. κλῆρ☉ διακονίας καὶ ἀποσολῆς, the lot of miniſtry and Apoſtleſhip, is that charge or portion aſſigned by lot to Matthias, whither he was to go and officiate and preach the Goſpel: From which diviſion then made among the Twelve at their ſetting out on their travels to plant the Goſpel, they and all others ordained by God to be Apoſtles or Biſhops, had afterward their provinces to govern, ποιμαίνειν, and ἐπισκοπεῖν to rule as Paſtors and Biſhops, v. 2. when they were converted to Chriſtianity: As among the Romans, the Province which ſuch a Proconſul was to adminiſter or govern, was his lot or κλῆρ☉, according to which κληρυχία in Phavorinus is rendred διοικήσεια Lordſhip. In relation to theſe Provinces among the Romans, over which Procurators, or Prætors, or Proconſuls were ſet, or to which they were advanced, as to a Magiſtracy or Preferment, and raiſed great wealth there from their Provinces (as Cicero tells us of Verres and the Prætor of Sicily) it is, that here the Apoſtle commands the Biſhops not to bear rule as they do over their Provinces (that is, by force, and with griping and ſqueezing wealth out of them, that is καλαχυειδίεν τ κλήρων, and ἀναγκασῶς, and αἰσχροκερδῶς, ſee Note a.) but to rule them as Paſtors do a flock, going before, and ſo conducting them, which is here the meaning of τύποι γινόμενοι τῆ ποιμνίυ becoming examples of the flock, after the manner of the ſheep in thoſe parts, where the Paſtor going before, the ſheep hear his voice and follow him, and that, as it is here, ἑκουσίως and προθύμως willingly and chearfully.

c. ἐσκομβώσαντα

V. 5. Clothed] What ἐσκόμβωμα ſignifies, is particularly ſet down by Julius Pollux, Ὀνομασ. l. 4. c. 18. in theſe words, Τῇ τ ὅλων χιτωνίσκ ἱματίδιόν τι προσκεῖ☉ λεγόμενον, ὃ ἐσκόμβωμα λέγ☉ ἢ ἐπίβλημα, Upon the ſervant's coat is added a little white garment called by this name; by which it appears to be a habit peculiar to ſervants, and by what Heſychius and Phavorinus ſay (Ἐσκομβωθεὶς, δεθεὶς, it ſignifies being bound, and again Ἐσκόμβωμα, δεσμὸς a band,) it appears to be ſome kind of girdle or belt; and agreeably Heſychius and Phavorinus explain Κόωνυμ☉ by ἐσκόμβωμα ᾧ ζώννυται αἰγύπτιον, an Ægyptian girdle. This as it is a belt, or girdle, is an emblem of obedience, and much more ſo as that girdle was proper to ſervants; and ſo 'tis here uſed by the Apoſtle to denote humility to thoſe that are placed over them, as their badge by which they may be known to be ſervants of Chriſt. That it is no barbarous word, ſee Photius Epiſt. 156. who cites out of Epicharmus ἐσκεκόμβω☉, and ἐσκομβώσαντ☉ out of Apollodorus, ἐπωμίαν περίξασα διπλῶ ἄνωθεν ἐνεκομβωσάμενο, I girt it upon me: which agrees with the notion of a belt which we have given of it.

d. Ἐκλέγειν Ἐκλέγειν

V. 13. Elected together] Ἐκλέγειν to chuſe and ἐκκαλεῖν to call or cull out, are in effect all one, and greeably ἐκλεκτὴ choſen, and ἐκκλησία Church, are ſo too, noting the ſociety and aſſembly of Chriſtians, as they are ſeparate from the world, and in that reſpect ſaid to be called, or picked, or culled out of it. Thus I ſuppoſe the word is uſed in Ignatius's Epiſtle to the Trallians, or by the interpolator, if that be not the original reading, where ſpeaking of Biſhops he ſaith, χωρὶς τούτων ἐκκλησία ἐκλεκτὴ οὐκ ἔστιν, Eccleſia non eſt cœtus evocatus, aut peculiaris, that is, in effect the Church is not a Church of ſuch as it ought: And ſo it muſt be underſtood by thoſe words which follow in Videlius's copy; and if they were not written by Ignatius, ſeem to be a Scholion to explain them, and as ſuch, to be added to them, ἐ συνάθροισμα ἁγίων, ἐ συναγωγὴ ὁσίων, not a collection of Saints, not an aſſembly of pious men. And then συνεκλεκτὴ will ſignifie that Church which was planted together with them, their ſiſter Church; ſee Note on 2 Joh. a. That S. Peter was now at Rome when he wrote this Epiſtle, in the ſecond year of Claudius, is collected by Baronius, and accordingly Βαβυλὼν here will be reſolved to ſignifie Rome, (ſee Euſeb. l. 2. c. 14. and Jerom. De Scriptor. Eccl. in Marco) ſo called, either διὰ τὸ πάνυ φανὲς, becauſe of the great ſplendor of that city, ſaith OEcumenius, or elſe becauſe of the great confuſion of Idolatry which S. Peter found there, (ſee Rev. 18. Note a.) And ſo the Church in Babylon, the Chriſtians in that heathen city of Rome.

[a] Second EPISTLE GENERAL
PETER.

a. * of the Apoſtle: for the copies ordinarily read τῆς Ἀποστόλου Πέτρ.

THat this ſecond Epiſtle of S. Peter was not at firſt received in the Church of Chriſt with ſo univerſal an agreement and conſent as the former, may be concluded from Euſebius and others of the Antients. But that either it was not received into the antient Canon, or not acknowledged to be written by that Apoſtle, is the too haſty affirmation of ſome few later writers. For the confirming of which, becauſe the poſthumous Annotations of the moſt learned and judicious Hugo Grotius (a perſon which hath deſerved ſo extremely well of this laſt age) have offered a ſpecial argument, it will not be amiſs briefly to conſider it. It is this; Peter, as all know, died under Nero; but this Epiſtle, as it is there ſuggeſted, at leaſt the third Chapter of it, was written after the deſtruction of Jeruſalem. This is attempted to be thus proved: becauſe no Chriſtian ever believed that the end of the world would come till after the deſtruction of the Jewiſh ſtate (but that ſoon after that it would come, was the opinion of many;) whereas, ſaith the objection, the writer of this Epiſtle arms his readers with patience in expectation of the laſt day, if it came not ſo ſoon as they expected. Hereupon the concluſion there is, that Simeon, the Biſhop of Jeruſalem next after James, is probably to be deemed the writer of this Epiſtle, who lived after the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, 'till Trajan's time, and then was crucified. To make this good, theſe inconveniences are preſently foreſeen, which this opinion muſt neceſſarily fall upon. One from the beginning of the Epiſtle, where he is ſtyled Simon Peter, (which cannot belong to Simeon Biſhop of Jeruſalem, who was not called Peter) and Ἀπόστολος Apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt, which as little belongs to Simeon, whoſe predeceſſor James in his Epiſtle ſtyles himſelf no more the δοῦλος a ſervant of Jeſus Chriſt. A ſecond from c. 3. 15. where he calls the Apoſtle Paul ἀγαπητὸς ἡμῶν ἀδελφὸς, our beloved brother. To theſe inconveniences the only expedient that is there offered is this conjecture (Puto titulum fuiſſe, &c.) that the word Πέτρος Peter, ſhould be left out in the Title, and ſo likewiſe the word Apoſtle, and ſo the form be reduced to that of James and Jude, Συμεὼν δοῦλος Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, Symeon the ſervant of Jeſus Chriſt; and ſo likewiſe that the words rendred, our beloved brother, were not in the antient Copies. But of this there is not pretended any colour of authority from any antient Copy, but only, Credo ita comperturum ſi quis antiquiora quàm nos habemus Epiſtolæ hujus exemplaria invenerit, I believe that he which ſhall meet with more antient copies than thoſe which we now have, will find it thus. Which as it is an acknowledgment that no copy which we now have, favours this conjecture, and ſo that it is deprived of all authority or probable ground, ſo it is an evidence of the infelicity and great injury done to learned men, whoſe notes and all their moſt ſudden conjectures, which never paſs'd the Author's review, or ſecond, maturer thoughts, are indifferently put together, and ſet out by others after their death. For it is not imaginable that that moſt judicious learned man, who was ſo great a maſter of reaſon, and ſo ſeldom or never aſſumes to put off any opinion of his own upon his own Puto and Credo, thoughts and beliefs, or conjectures, ſhould thus leave out words and expreſſions upon his own phanſie, without any pretence of any one Copy to aſſiſt him. This will be yet more ſtrange, if it be remembred firſt, that ch. 3. 1. this is ſaid to be a ſecond Epiſtle, written much to the ſame purpoſe with the former, which is very agreeable to St. Peter's being the Author of it, the former being wholly bent to fortifie the Chriſtian ſufferers in their conſtancy againſt the baits and ſeductions of the Gnoſticks, but can no way be competible to Symeon the Biſhop of Jeruſalem, of whom no records of thoſe times tell us, that he ever wrote any, and of whom it is not by thoſe Annotations pretended that he wrote two Epiſtles. Secondly, that ch. 1. 16, 17. there is a whole paſſage which cannot poſſibly belong to Biſhop Symeon, but ſignally doth belong to the Apoſtle Peter, that of having been on the holy Mount with Chriſt, and hearing thoſe words, This is my beloved ſon, &c. which certainly belongs to the Transfiguration, Mat. 17. where only Peter, and James, and John were preſent with Chriſt. And it is as ſtrange, which on thoſe verſes is ſaid in thoſe Annotations, firſt, that theſe words muſt not be referred to the Transfiguration on Mount Tabor, but to that other paſſage, Joh. 12. 28. (whereas H. Grotius in thoſe Annotations (which are known to be his) on Mat. 17. diſtinctly applies the words to that on Mount Tabor.) And ſecondly, that when the voice Joh. 12. 28. was in the other words, καὶ ἐδόξασα καὶ πάλιν δοξάσω, I have glorified, and will glorifie again, it is there ſuggeſted, that the words, This is my beloved ſon, &c. were put in by ſome ſcribes who took the Epiſtle for S. Peter's. For which again there is not the leaſt proof offered from any Copy antient or modern: So unhappy are all thoſe conjectures in this matter, and ſo injurious to him whoſe name they have aſſumed to give them authority. 'Tis true, there is ſome ſhew of proof offered there, that the phraſe, holy mountain, ver. 18. cannot belong to mount Tabor, being uſed by the Hebr. only for the mount Moriah where the Temple was. But that argument is of ſmall validity, becauſe though Moriah be ordinarily ſtyled the holy mountain, and no other vouchſafed that title by the Jews, becauſe of God's preſence peculiar to the Temple, which gave it the title of holineſs; yet it is certain that other places, where God hath appeared to be preſent by his Angels, have by the Jews and God himſelf been acknowledged and ſtyled holy (as when Moſes is commanded Act. 7. 33. to put off his ſhoes, for the place where he ſtands is holy ground) and it is evident that that glorious appearance, and cloud, and voice at mount Tabor were evidences of this preſence, which might therefore, by analogy with the ſacred ſtyle, denominate it an holy mountain. To this purpoſe it is farther evident that S. Jude ver. 18. ſpeaking of the ſcoffers that ſhould come in the laſt time, walking after their own luſts, cites that prediction from the Apoſtles of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, ver. 17. where it is reaſonable to believe that this Epiſtle ch. 3. 3. is referred to, (as indeed a great part of the argument of this Epiſtle is there made uſe of:) for in it thoſe very words are met with, (and are not ſo in any other Apoſtolick writing) Knowing this firſt, that there ſhall come in the laſt days ſcoffers, walking after their own luſts. From all theſe premiſes conſidered, it is abundantly clear, that if there be truth in this Epiſtle, (which they that acknowledge it a place in the Canon, and only queſtion its being written by S. Peter, cannot well be allowed to doubt of) or if S. Jude ſay true, then S. Peter was the Author of it: For there are not greater and ſurer evidences of any Epiſtles being written by the acknowledged Author of it than are theſe fore-named, the title of Simon Peter, the addition of an Apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt, the mention of a former Epiſtle, the having been with Chriſt on mount Tabor, the being called an Apoſtle of Chriſt by S. Jude; all which in all copies ſtand unmoved, to ſecure the authority of this Epiſtle, and to convince us of the Author of it. As for the argument taken from the time of S. Peter's death before the deſtruction of Jeruſalem,

a. Δεύτερος Πέτρου

ὄρος ἅγιον

lem, &c. it is void of all force. For, (to grant all the former parts of it, that S. Peter died under Nero, that that was before the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, that all Chriſtians expected that deſtruction before the end of the world;) Firſt, it doth not follow, that if this Epiſtle were written by Symeon, it ſhall therefore fall to be after the deſtruction of Jeruſalem: for James the firſt Biſhop was put to death, and ſo Symeon ſucceeded in that See, eight years before the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, and five years before the death of S. Peter. Secondly, it is not true which is ſuggeſted in the argument, and on which one thing all the validity of it depends, that this Epiſtle was written after the deſtruction of Jeruſalem. And for the only proof of that, taken from hence, that the Author of this Epiſtle arms his readers with patience in expectation of the laſt day, that is as far from truth alſo, there being no word in this Epiſtle to that matter. One paſſage there is which refers to the end of the world, chap. 3. ver. 7. but not as approaching or conceived by any to approach: But the other paſſages of the coming of the day of the Lord as a thief, and the like, belong all to that judgment on the Jews, expreſſed in like phraſes by Chriſt, Mat. 24. and by the Apoſtles in their Epiſtles, and not to the day of univerſal doom or deſtruction of the whole world, (ſee chap. 3. Note d.) Having thus anſwered the pretenſions againſt the Author of this Epiſtle, it remains that we inquire of the time of writing it, which by c. 1. 14. may juſtly be concluded to have been a little before his death, and that in the time of his laſt danger before his Martyrdom, from the evident approach whereof, or revelation concerning it, he affirms himſelf to know that the time of his putting off this his tabernacle, that is, his death, ταχινή ἐστι, is very ſuddenly to come, very near at hand. That Peter and Paul from ſeveral parts of their travels came to Rome about the twelfth of Nero, to defend, and comfort, and confirm the Church that was perſecuted there, hath been reaſonably concluded by Chronologers. And in this year, Anno Chr. 67. about the beginning of October, they are both thought to be caſt into priſon, and ſoon after put to death. And then this is the moſt probable time for the writing this Epiſtle; which being ſo near the war, on which followed the deſtruction of the Jews, it is evident what occaſioned the writing of this Epiſtle (and S. Jude's, which being on the ſame ſubject muſt be dated about the ſame time) viz. the confirming the perſecuted afflicted Chriſtians in their expectation of that deliverance which they ſhould now ſhortly meet with, by the deſtruction of their perſecuters. The certainty of which he declares, as alſo the reaſons of its being thus long delayed, and the undiſcernibleneſs when it comes, fortifying them alſo againſt the infuſions of the Gnoſticks, who took advantage of the continuing of their perſecutions ſo long, and much ſolicited and aſſaulted the conſtancy of the afflicted Chriſtians; of whom he therefore warns them, and that by foretelling that they ſhould be ſoon deſtroyed alſo, and all that were corrupted by them.

Paraphraſe. CHAP. I.

1. Simon, by Chriſt, whoſe diſciple I was, ſirnamed Peter, and by him after, with others, ſent by commiſſion to preach the Goſpel, to all the Jews wherever they are diſperſed, (ſee 1 Pet. 1. 1.) which have received the faith of Chriſt, (and in that reſpect are as valuable in God's ſight as we the Apoſtles of Chriſt) that faith, I ſay, whoſe object is the righteouſneſs of Chriſt our God and Saviour, either as that ſignifies his way of juſtifying men now under the Goſpel (ſee Note on Rom. 1. b.) or as it may note his fidelity and juſtice in performing what he hath promiſed us in the Goſpel:

1. Simon Peter, a ſervant and an Apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt, to them that have obtained like precious faith with us, * through the righteouſneſs of God, and our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt;] * in or

2. I ſalute you, and wiſh you all that felicity, which I promiſe my ſelf you will enjoy by the receiving of the faith, and by your experience and evidence of God's goodneſs and faithfulneſs to you in Jeſus Chriſt;

2. Grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the † knowledge of God, and of Jeſus our Lord,] † acknowledgment ἐπίγνωσις

3. According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godlineſs, through the * knowledge of him that hath called us † to glory and [a] vertue:] * acknowledgment ἐπίγνωσις † or, by his own glory, for the King's MS. reads ἰδίᾳ δόξῃ

a. 3. According as his divine power hath afforded us all things that pertain to felicity hereafter, or to piety here, by means of our faith, and profeſſion or acknowledgment of Chriſt, who hath revealed himſelf unto us, and called us into his ſchool, by moſt convincing arguments of his authority and miſſion from heaven; firſt by that glorious act of the holy Ghoſt's deſcending upon him, and the angel ſaying from God [This is my beloved ſon, in whom I am well pleaſed,] (For that that is the meaning of the word Glory, ſee Note on Mat. 3. k. Rom. 9. c.) ſecondly, by his miracles which he did among men here, and by his Apoſtles ever ſince:

b. 4. By which two, as evidences and engagements of the truth of them, huge promiſes have been made over to us of a moſt glorious and valuable nature, on purpoſe to allure and attract you to all divine purity, by receiving the faith of Chriſt, and forſaking that abominable courſe of unnatural luſts, and other like ſins, which through the ſect of the Gnoſticks is now become ſo common and ordinary among the profeſſors of Chriſtianity, (ſee Note on c. 2. a.)

4. Whereby * are given unto us exceeding great and precious promiſes; that by theſe you † might be partakers of the divine nature, having eſcaped the [b] corruption that is in the world through luſt.] * have been given δεδόσθαι † may

c. 5. In reſpect of whom it is neceſſary that you be very careful and diligent, that conſtancy, courage, perſeverance, (ſee Note a.) be ſuperſtructed on your profeſſion of the Chriſtian faith; that knowledge of myſteries be joined to that courage, and that it ſupplant it not;

5. * And beſides this, giving all diligence, add to your faith vertue; and to vertue [c] knowledge;] * And to this purpoſe καὶ αὐτὸ τοῦτο, or, And you therefore, for the King's MS. reads καὶ αὐτοὶ ὑμεῖς

6. That ſtrict continence be one thing that accompanies that knowledge; then to that continence, in avoiding the pollutions of the fleſh, to which the Gnoſticks would ſeduce you, under pretence of myſterious knowledge; add a chearful patience, or reſolution of bearing whatſoever may fall on you from the enemies of your profeſſion, whether Jews or falſe heretical Chriſtians; to that patience, piety and frequenting of the publick ſervice of God, not giving over the aſſembly, as ſome of the Hebrews did, Heb. 10. 15. to avoid perſecution;

6. And to knowledge † temperance; and to * temperance patience; and to patience godlineſs;] † continence ἐγκράτειαν * continence

7. Then to your piety, kindneſs to all your fellow-Chriſtians (contrary to the fiery contentions and factions among them, cauſed by the Gnoſticks;) and to that kindneſs to your fellow-Chriſtian, perfect charity to all men, even your enemies and perſecutors.

7. And to godlineſs * brotherly kindneſs; and to brotherly kindneſs charity.] * kindneſs to the brethren φιλαδελφίαν

8. For the practice of theſe vertues, eſpecially if they be in you in any eminent degree, will render you good and faithful ſervants of Chriſt, and ſuch as becomes your Chriſtian profeſſion.

8. For if theſe things be in † you and abound, they make you that you ſhall neither be * barren, nor unfruitful † in the knowledge of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.] † or preſent to you, for the King's MS. reads ὑμῖν παρόντα * ſlothful ἀργούς † unto the acknowledgment εἰς ἐπίγνωσιν

9. And he that falls back into any of thoſe ſins, contrary to thoſe vertues, is like a purblind man that cannot ſee things that are at a diſtance from him, thinks (through this fault in his eyes, or forgetfulneſs in his underſtanding) that Chriſtianity may give him liberty and licenſe, (as the Gnoſticks ſay it doth) whereas it was long ago that Chriſtianity call'd him out of theſe pollutions, and wrought this purification upon him, which is directly contrary thereunto.

9. But he that lacketh theſe things is blind, and cannot ſee far off, and hath forgotten * that he was purged from his old ſins.] * the purification of his former ſins, τῶν παλαιῶν

d. 10. This, brethren, muſt oblige and engage you to all care and diligence to make God's mercies in calling you to be Chriſtians, and deſigning you deliverances, effectual to you. This muſt be done by your vigilancy over your ſelves, that you relapſe not into thoſe former ſins from which you came out at your converſion to Chriſt: which if you do, you ſhall never miſcarry, or forfeit that great benefit of being Chriſtians, and of being that remnant that ſhould now be delivered, when the reſt of the Jews that believe not ſhall be deſtroyed.

10. Wherefore † the rather, brethren, give diligence * to make your [d] calling and election ſure: for if ye do theſe things, ye ſhall † never fall:] † brethren, be ye the more diligent, μᾶλλον, ἀδελφοὶ ποιεῖσθε * or by your good works to make your conſolation and election firm, for the King's MS. reads διὰ τῶν καλῶν ὑμῶν ἔργων βεβαίαν ὑμῶν τὴν παράκλησιν -- † by no means miſcarry οὐ μὴ πταίσητε

11. For

11. For ſo an entrance ſhall be miniſtred unto you abundantly into the everlaſting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt.]

11. For by this means you ſhall be capable of being the men of which the kingdom of Chriſt ſhall be made up, that kingdom which begins in the vengeance executed on the unbelieving impenitent Jews, and in delivering the believers, and ſhall laſt moſt gloriouſly for ever in ſubduing of enemies, and delivering of diſciples.

12. Wherefore * I will not be negligent to put you always in remembrance of theſe things, though ye know them, and be eſtabliſhed in the preſent truth.]

* or, I will put, for the King's MS. reads μιμνήσω ὑμᾶς —

12. The vaſtneſs of your concernments herein makes me thus ſolicitous to inculcate theſe things unto you: not that I think you ignorant in this point of doctrine concerning the method that ſhall be uſed by Chriſt in erecting his kingdom here on earth, viz. by coming in vengeance on the obdurate, and delivering the conſtant perſevering Chriſtians; for I am ſure you have been taught it over and over again, and ſufficiently inſtructed and ſatisfied in the truth of it.

† But δὲ

13. † Yea, I think it meet, as long as I am in this tabernacle, to ſtir you up by putting you in remembrance:]

13. But I think it not amiſs, as long as I live in this world, or in this fleſh, to be your remembrancer, and refreſh theſe notions, ſtir up that knowledge which is already in you:

14. Knowing that ſhortly I muſt put off this my tabernacle, even as our Lord Jeſus Chriſt hath ſhewed me.]

14. Knowing that the time of my diſſolution now ſuddenly approacheth, according as Chriſt, when he foretold of ſome that ſhould ſurvive this coming of his to the deſtruction of the Jews, (which now I ſpeak of) gave an intimation to me that I ſhould not, Joh. 21. 18, 22. and poſitively affirmed that I ſhould be crucified, as e'er long I expect to be.

* But δὲ

15. * Moreover I will endeavour that you may be able after my deceaſe to have theſe things always in remembrance.]

15. And therefore I being to die before this comes to paſs, but many of you likely to live to ſee it, it is my duty and purpoſe by this Epiſtle to fix it in you, that when I am dead and gone, you may remember this certain truth of Chriſt's kingdom, and coming to deſtroy the Jewiſh unbelievers and crucifiers, and to preſerve and reſcue the believers among them, (ſee c. 2. 9.)

16. For we have not followed cunningly deviſed fables, when we made known unto you the power and [e] coming of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, but were eye witneſſes of his majeſty.]

16. For they are not phanſies or deceivable arguments upon which we have grounded this doctrine concerning Chriſt's coming in power to the deſtruction of his enemies, and reſcuing of believers, but the very things which we ſaw adumbrated, and heard diſcourſed on by Moſes and Elias (ſee Note on Mat. 17. a. and Luke 9. 31. Note c.) when I, and James, and John, were with Chriſt on Mount Tabor, and ſaw the Majeſty that was inſtated on him at his tranſfiguration, Mat. 17.

† receiving * magnificent μεγαλοπρεπῶς

17. For † he [f] received from God the Father honour and glory, when there came ſuch a voice to him from the * excellent glory, This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleaſed.]

17. For at the time of his receiving that Majeſty from the Father by way of viſion, foretelling what ſhould ſoon be inſtated on him, there was a voice which came out of that ſhining cloud, Mat. 17. 5. and with it theſe words, Thou art my beloved Son, &c. which ſignified God's deſign of inſtating the kingdom on him.

† we alſo heard, καὶ ἠκούσαμεν * being ὄντες

18. † And this voice which came from heaven we heard, * when we were with him in the holy mount.]

18. And I alſo with James and John heard this voice which came out of the cloud, Mat. 17. 5. being then with him on that mount, where he was transfigured, and which by the evident preſence of God by his Angels there became an holy place: ſee Note on the Title of this Epiſtle.

† And we have a more firm prophetick word, καὶ ἔχομεν βεβαιότερον προφητικὸν λόγον * morning-ſtar

19. † We have alſo a more ſure word of prophecy, whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that ſhineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the [g] * day-ſtar ariſe in your hearts:]

19. And beſide theſe adumbrations by way of viſion in the mount, we have many prophecies in the Old Teſtament concerning this matter, v. 12. of the deſtruction of the Jews, and preſerving of a remnant, which together with Chriſt's predictions Mat. 24. are yet a more firm, ſure, infallible argument to us than any other. And 'tis well done of you to ſtudy and obſerve theſe prophecies, which may ſtay your hearts in this ſtate of affliction and perſecution, until that day of your deliverance come, or till the forerunners of it, Luke 21. 28. begin to ſhew themſelves unto you.

† of their own incitation, motion, letting looſe

20. Knowing this firſt, that no prophecy of the Scripture is † of any private [h] interpretation.]

20. This being a principle known to all, that no Scripture-prophecy is without particular miſſion and appointment from God; that which the prophets there have foretold being not the ſuggeſtions of their own ſpirits, what they thought good, but what God inſpired and moved them to, by his Spirit's coming upon them.

* For prophecy was not any time brought ὅτι οὐθὲ προφητεία ποτὲ ἠνέχθη † being carried φερόμενοι

21. * For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man: but holy men of God ſpake † as they were moved by the holy Ghoſt.]

21. For none of the prophets of any time have undertaken that office on their own heads, or propheſied their own fanſies or perſuaſions, but all the Scripture-prophets have been men called and ſent by God on his meſſages, and inſpired and inſtructed by the holy Spirit of God, every word which they have delivered. And therefore you cannot run any hazard in depending upon that which they have foretold ſhall come to paſs in theſe, which they called the laſt, days, Joel 2. 28, 30, 31, 32. and in many other places.

Annotations on Chap. I.

a. ἀρετὴ

V. 3. Vertue] The word ἀρετὴ vertue, beſide the ordinary known notion of it for probity of manners among men, as the generical word that contains all moral and Chriſtian vertues under it, (in which ſenſe it is uſed Phil. 4. 8.) doth in this Chapter ſignifie two things, very diſtant from one another, and both of them differing from this. In this verſe it ſignifies the power of God which he ſhewed in Chriſt, eſpecially the miracles which he was enabled to work: and ſo 'tis here joined with the glory; whether the deſcent of the Holy Ghoſt on him and on the Apoſtles (which is ordinarily called Schechina and δόξα glory, ſee Mat. 3. c.) or whether the glory that ſhone in his works and doctrine be meant by it. So 1 Pet. 2. 9. ἀρεταὶ κηρύσσειν the vertues (in the Plural) of him that called us out of darkneſs into this great light, that is, his miraculous power, divine actions and words together. But then in the 5th verſe of this Chapter, the word ſeems to have yet a third notion, and belonging there evidently to men, not God, as here, it cannot yet be fitly interpreted by that word Vertue, which is the general comprehenſive title of all vertues; for many of them are after named, as continence, patience, &c. and required to be ſuperſtructed upon this of ἀρετὴ vertue, which would not be ſo proper: but it ſeems rather to ſignifie (in that notion wherein both the Greek ἀρετὴ and the Latins virtus are often uſed) ἀνδρεῖος, 1 Cor. 16. 13. manhood, courage, or fortitude, in adhering to Chriſt, Mat. 16. 24. which the Gnoſticks, againſt whom he arms them, would ſo fain rob them of now in time of perſecutions; ſo as in thoſe verſes of * Euripides, Ἔστι καὶ θανόντι ἀρετῶν ἐπιδεῖξαι θανάτῳ.

Fortitude is very uſeful againſt afflictions, a man may ſhew virtue in his death. For there fortitude and virtue are all one. And ſo to their virtue or courage they muſt add knowledge, that is, that true Chriſtian knowledge, to which their ψευδώνυμος γνῶσις knowledge falſly ſo ſtyled was oppoſed; and to that, continence, contrary to their uncleanneſs and filthineſs; and to that, perſeverance, &c. juſt as 2 Cor. 6. 6. after patience in afflictions, ver. 4. and purity, is γνῶσις knowledge: which again that it is ſet oppoſite to that pretended of the Gnoſticks, ſee the Context there, and Note a. on that Chapter.

b. φθείρεσθαι

V. 4. Corruption] φθείρεσθαι corrumpi ſignifies ſometimes to be debauched to ſin, particularly, and in the moſt eminent manner, to thoſe ſins againſt nature, abominable heathen luſts: ſo 2 Cor. 7. 2. οὐδένα ἐφθείραμεν we have corrupted no man, ſeems to relate to thoſe falſe teachers, the Gnoſticks, among them, who did thus corrupt and ſeduce their diſciples. Agreeable to which is that ſpeech of Heraclitus in his Epiſtle to Hermodorus, Τίνι συμμοιχεύω; τίνι συμμαιφονῶ; τίνι συμμεθύω; τίνι συμφθείρομαι; ἢ φθείρω, ἢ ἀδικῶ, and οὐδένα τῶν ἀπάντων, With whom have I accompanied in adultery, in murther, in drunkenneſs, in corruption, or pollution? I corrupt, I wrong no man of them all. Thus was Socrates accuſed ὡς ἀπατεῶνα, ὡς λυμεῶνα, ὡς φθορέα τῶν νέων, as a deceiver, a debaucher, corrupter of youth; and this the ſum of his accuſation, ἀδικεῖ Σωκράτης διαφθείρων τοὺς νέους, he wrongs and corrupts the young men.

* Lauſiac. in hiſt. xeφ. ξημ.

So in a narration of Hyppolytus in * Palladius, of a Chriſtian Virgin put by the tyrannical Judge into a brothel-houſe, the debauch'd young men ſtrait came, βυλόμενοι ταύτῃ πρὸς φθορὰν ὁμιλεῖν, to company with her for corruption, that is, to commit all filthineſs with her. And ſo after he that freed her from that houſe is ſaid τ ἀτίμε φθορᾶς ἀπαλλάξας to have delivered her from this diſhonourable or vile corruption. And ſo c. 11. 3. So perhaps διαφθείροντες τ γῆν Rev. 11. 18. corrupting the earth, ſee Note c. So Epheſ. 4. 22. the old heathen condition is called the old man, φθειρόμενον κτ τὰς ἐπιθυμίας τ ἀπάτης, corrupted according to thoſe luſts of deceit, that is, the unnatural luſts of the heathen world, then brought into the Church by the falſe teachers, the Gnoſticks. So Jude 10. ἐν τούτοις φθείρονται, in theſe they are corrupted, noting their corrupt practices contrary to nature. Thus οἰκοφθόροι in Ignatius Epiſt. ad Epheſ. is by the Tranſlator rendred Maſculorum concubitores, and by Heſychius μοιχοί, and ſo παιδοφθόρος in the Epiſtle of Barnabas, in this ſenſe, ſo vulgar in other Authors. And thus it clearly ſignifies in this place, (and others of this Epiſtle) having ἐν ἐπιθυμίᾳ in luſt added to it, and τ ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ, that is in the world, referring to thoſe unnatural Gentile practices. So φθορὰ corruption c. 2. 12. is all unnatural filthineſs; ſee Note on Rom. 8. 1. and Note on 2 Pet. 2. b.

c. γνῶσις

V. 5. Knowledge] The true notion of the word γνῶσις knowledge in this and many other places will be beſt diſcerned by obſerving that the word is uſed 1 Cor. 12. 8. as a peculiar χάρισμα or gift of the Spirit (ſee Note on 1 Cor. 1. c. and 1 Pet. 3. c.) and ſignifies the underſtanding of the word of God, that is, the Scriptures, in the diviner and more myſterious ſublime ſenſe, ſuch as the Judaizing Gnoſticks pretended to have an abſtract of, Rom. 2. 20. called there μόρφωσις γνώσεως, ſuch as to which the Jews pretend in their Cabala. So again c. 13. 2. where πᾶσα γνῶσις, all knowledge, is the ſame with εἰδῶ τὰ μυστήρια, know myſteries precedent, and differs from πᾶσα πίστις, all faith, in this, that πᾶσα γνῶσις, all knowledge, is that more ſubtile myſterious underſtanding of the Old Teſtament, and πᾶσα πίστις, all faith, is all kind of Chriſtian faith, even that that hath the gift of miracles annexed to it. So again ver. 8. where 'tis mention'd as an extraordinary gift, and joined with tongues and prophecyings; ſo c. 14. 6. revelation, knowledge, tongues, prophecy: and from thence it comes to ſignifie κοινῶς the more exquiſite knowledge of Chriſt and the myſteries of the Goſpel, as Col. 2. 3. the hidden treaſures of knowledge; which is alſo intimated by κλεῖδα τ γνώσεως, the key of knowledge, Luk. 11. 52. that knowledge which is lock'd up. So Rom. 11. 33. γνῶσις Θεοῦ the knowledge of God, of which there was ſuch a βάθος profundity, and chap. 15. 14. πᾶσα γνῶσις the knowledge of all myſteries. That this is it that is ſpoken of 1 Cor. 8. 1. appears by that which is affirmed of it, that it doth φυσιοῦν, puff up, for ſo knowledge of myſteries is of all things moſt apt to do. So ver. 10. that knowledge which another looks on in thee with that reverence, and on occaſion of which he, being not able to diſcern ſo ſubtilly, comes to ſin and periſh by reaſon of thy having and uſing it, v. 11. So 2 Cor. 4. 6. the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jeſus Chriſt, that is, the underſtanding of that great myſtery wherein God exhibited himſelf to us in the perſon of Chriſt incarnate. So when we read ὑπερβάλλουσα abounding, or ὑπερέχον excelling joined with it, Epheſ. 3. 19. and Phil. 3. 8. From theſe notions of the word it is that the Gnoſticks of thoſe times took their names, pretending to all ſecret myſterious underſtanding of the Old Teſtament, and grounding all the filthy paſſages of their doctrine upon ſeveral places ſo interpreted by them after their own polluted phanſies, as may be ſeen in Epiphanius. This is mentioned by the Apoſtle under the title of ψευδώνυμος γνῶσις knowledge falſly ſo called, 1 Tim. 6. 20. by them called γνῶσις knowledge, and the γνωστικοὶ knowing perſons, but, ſaith he, ψευδώνυμος very falſly ſo ſtyled by them, and ſo 'tis acknowledged by Theophylact. And according to this it is that the Apoſtle Barnabas in his Epiſtle (thoſe fragments of it that are come to us) ſetting himſelf diſtinctly againſt theſe Gnoſticks, that out of the myſtical interpretation of the Old Teſtament brought in many damnable doctrines, (not only the neceſſity of continuing Circumciſion, &c. but the lawfulneſs of all abominable unnatural filthineſs, and withal the denying of Chriſt's coming really in the fleſh) ſets up another γνῶσις, or myſtical expoſition of the Old Teſtament, and in that whole Epiſtle interprets many places of Scripture to the maintaining of Chriſtianity againſt them. And hence I conceive it is that in this Epiſtle, which is ſo wholly deſigned as an antidote againſt the Gnoſticks (as the Epiſtle of S. Jude alſo is) and particularly againſt their abominable filthy practices, the word γνῶσις knowledge is uſed, not for that χάρισμα or gift of myſterious knowledge, but for the true ſaving Chriſtian knowledge, in oppoſition to that pretended to by the Gnoſticks, and therefore it is here encompaſſed with virtue on one ſide, meaning by it courage and conſtancy in the Faith (ſee Note a.) ſo oppoſite to their doctrine of compliances, and ἐγκράτεια continence on the other ſide; and the adding of theſe one to another, courage to their faith, and continence to their γνῶσις knowledge, is by him adviſed to, on purpoſe to teſtifie and demonſtrate their having forſaken the φθορὰ ἐν ἐπιθυμίᾳ, ver. 4. thoſe abominable luſts, ἐν κόσμῳ, ſo uſed in the heathen world, and brought into Chriſtianity by the Gnoſticks.

V. 10. Calling and election ſure] What is meant by κλῆσις calling, hath been ſaid at large Note on Mat. 20. c. the mercy of God in making them Chriſtians; and ſo what by ἐκλογὴ election, Note on 1 Pet. 2. c. that peculiar favour of being the remant to whom the promiſes of deliverance belonged, and in whom they ſhould be fulfilled, when the reſt of that people, remaining obdurate in their ſins, ſhould be deſtroyed. All the difficulty remaining is to determine what is meant by βεβαίαν ποιεῖν, to make either or both theſe firm, or ſure. And firſt, that this refers not to the aſſuring our ſelves of either, that is, to our being confident that we are called or elected, to our acquiring any certainty of belief or firmneſs of hope in our own minds that we are in the favour of God, which is ordinarily ſtyled certitudo ſubjecti, the certainty of the ſubject, may appear by this, that there is in this verſe no mention of either faith or hope, or any thing in us, but only of calling and election, which are acts of God's favour without and concerning us. The King's MS. reads it indeed with ſome change, διὰ τ καλῶν ὑμῶν ἔργων βεβαίαν ὑμῖν τ παράκλησιν κ ἐκλογὴν ποιεῖσθε, by your good works to make conſolation and election firm to you, where conſolation doth more ſound to that ſenſe than calling could do. But of that reading it is obſervable, firſt, That the antient Latin, that appears to have read the firſt part of it as it is in the King's MS. διὰ τ καλῶν ἔργων, by good works, doth not acknowledge the latter, but retains κλῆσιν calling, with the other ordinary Copies; ſecondly, That the word Calling is oft in other places joined with Election, but Conſolation never, which is a farther prejudice againſt this reading; thirdly, That if παράκλησιν conſolation were retained, yet it muſt neceſſarily ſignifie that conſolation as it is afforded by God, not as it is in us, his real goodneſs to us, not our apprehenſion of it, ſo that it may agree with ἐκλογὴν election, which we know is God's electing or preferring of us, or the favour done to us by God, without any intimation of our apprehenſions. Secondly, this phraſe cannot refer to the promiſes of God, ſo as to ſignifie our making them ſure or firm, for they are certainly and immutably ſo already, and it is God, not we, that is to make them ſo, by performing them to us. It remains then that by this phraſe βεβαίαν ποιεῖσθαι to make firm, muſt be meant that which through the grace of God is in the Chriſtian's power by care and diligence to do, viz. to qualifie themſelves with a capacity of receiving the benefit and fruit of theſe mercies and favours of Chriſt, to remove the hindrances which will keep them from being actually beneficial to us, and ſo to render them firm, that is, effectual to the good of our ſouls, And all the promiſes of God being conditional, and our performance of that condition being from us required, that the favours of God beſtowed on us, his calling and election, may be effectually ſuch to us, really for

d. κλῆσις

for our advantage, not our woe, the only way to make them effectual to us is our discharging our parts, performing the condition; and to this it is that our diligence is here required, which cannot be available in any thing else. That this is the meaning of the words may appear by the like phrase, Rom. 4. 16. εἰς τὸ εἶναι βεβαίαν τὴν ἐπαγγελίαν παντὶ τῷ σπέρματι, that the promise may be firm to all the people, which no way refers or looks to their confidence or persuasion of it, nor to the firmness of the promise only, but to the benefit and fruit and effectualness of it to them: so Rom. 15. 8. Christ became a minister of the circumcision for the truth of God, that is, to make good God's promises to the Jews, εἰς τὸ βεβαιῶσαι τὰς ἐπαγγελίας τῶν πατέρων, to make the promises of the father firm, that is, effectual, to exhibit and perform them to them. So Heb. 2. 2. If the word which was spoken by Angels, that is, the Law given to Moses be firm, that is, were performed, failed not of the effect, (without any reference to their persuasion of it,) for so 'tis expressed by what follows, and every transgression and disobedience received a just reward, that is, the breaches of that Law were actually punished. And accordingly here their diligence in making their calling and election firm, is taking care that the mercies of God toward them in calling, and chusing, or preferring them before others, may prove effectual to them, that is, that they may obtain that benefit which was designed them by God in these mercies, and which they certainly shall obtain if they perform what is required of them. Thus in a like phrase, to apprehend, or lay hold on, eternal life, 1 Tim. 6. 12. is but the interpretation of, fight the good fight, going before, the only way to the obtaining of that βραβεῖον or reward (like that in the Olympick games) which is given to none but conquerors, being the contending νομίμως, according to the laws of the agones, fighting and overcoming, which is expres'd Phil. 3. 12. by διώκω εἰ καὶ καταλάβω, I pursue, or run, if so be I may obtain.

V. 16. Coming of our Lord] That παρουσία Χριστοῦ the coming of Christ, signifies the remarkable destruction of the impenitent Jews, and deliverance of the believers among them, hath been often shewed (see Note on Mat. 24. b.) and particularly that 'tis called his coming with power, Mat. 24. 30. that is, as a King or mighty person. Agreeably to that is here the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, δύναμις καὶ παρουσία, in this sense of his coming to discriminate between the persecuters and disciples, so that one should be taken, and the other left, Mat. 24. 40. the obstinate obdurate Jews to be utterly destroyed by the Roman Eagles, as by Christ's executioners, and the faithful among them delivered out of that ruin. And to that doth the Context here, and almost all the rest of this Epistle, direct those words; see ch. 3. 1, and 4. All the difficulty will be, how that which here immediately follows, but were eye-witnesses of his majesty, can belong to this particularly. To which I answer, that the word μεγαλειότης is there set to express that majesty which was by way of vision represented and instated on Christ at the time of his Transfiguration on mount Tabor, at which Peter was present as an αὐτόπτης or eye witness. This is clear from v. 17. by the voice that came out unto him, from the magnificent glory (that is, from that splendid cloud, Mat. 17. 5. Mar. 9. 7. and Luc. 9. 35. and that glorious appearance of angels, called his glory, Luc. 9. 31, 32.) This is my beloved son, &c. the very passage that is there mentioned. Now this Transfiguration was meant by Christ to give Peter and John some image and shadow of (a kind of parable to express) this coming of Christ in this glorious manner against his crucifiers, and for the rescue of all persevering disciples. This appears by these two circumstances; first, by the passage immediately precedent (with which the story of the Transfiguration connects in all the three Gospels where 'tis mentioned,) viz. that he that will save his life, that is, forsake Christianity, to avoid the present pressures, shall lose it, that is, shall be destroyed in that παναπωλεία: but he that will lose his life for Christ's sake, that is, venture the utmost danger rather than fall off from Christ, shall find, or save, it, that is, be thus delivered, at Christ's coming to execute vengeance on those persecuters: which are the very words again used by Christ in the describing of that coming of his to the destruction of the Jews, Luc. 17. 33. And farther, that he that shall be ashamed of Christ, of him shall Christ be ashamed, when he shall come in his own glory, and his Father's, and the holy Angels, that is, when he comes in this kingdom of his (not only at the day of doom, but) peculiarly within the space of the life of some by-standers, as all the Gospels agree in that place, and as at another time, Joh. 21. Christ saith particularly of S. John, who lived to see it. Of which that he might give them some essay, he had three of them up to the mountain, and was transfigured before them, gave them some glimpse of that future glorious coming of his. The second circumstance to make this appear reasonable, is the business of the discourse which was betwixt Moses and Elias and Christ at that time, which appears by Matthew and Mark to be the approach of the great and dreadful day of the Lord, from that question of the disciples, Mat. 17. 10. and Mar. 9. 11. Why then say the scribes, that Elias must first come? who, saith Malachi, was to come before that great and dreadful day. This S. Luke more particularly mentions, c. 9. 31. ἔλεγον τὴν ἔξοδον αὐτοῦ ἣν ἤμελλεν πληροῦν ἐν Ἱερουσαλήμ, they spake of his exodus, which he was ready to perform at Jerusalem. What this Ἔξοδος was hath there been said, see Note on Luc. 9. b. viz. Christ's going out of this world, as Moses went out of Ægypt, Heb. 11. 22. (which one story gives that title of Exodus to that second Book of Moses so called) and to this is that great day of the Lord resembled Jude 5. being attended first, with the destruction (as of the Ægyptians there, the oppressors of him and the people of God, and after of the Israelites themselves that believed not, Jude 5. so) of the Jews here, the crucifiers of Christ, and persecuters of Christians, and withal of all vicious abominable Christian professors, that turn the Gospel into licentiousness; and secondly, with the deliverance of God's people, as there of the children of Israel, so here of all the true Israelites, the faithful disciples of Christ, that stick close to him in despite of persecuters and seducers. In respect of which as Moses was their σωτὴρ saviour, or deliverer, and a God of vengeance to Pharoah, &c. and as saviours are said to judge, Obad. 21. so is this coming of Christ, the coming both of a King and of a Saviour, to destroy enemies and deliver friends. Which being the matter of Elias and Moses's discourse with Christ, at which S. Peter himself was present (and by those very persons somewhat was adumbrated also, Elias being he that called for fire from heaven to consume, and Moses he that thus delivered the Israelites out of Ægypt) S. Peter here may very well mention it, as a demonstrative evidence, by which he was able to make known unto them this power and coming, v. 16. that is, this powerful regal coming of Christ that now we speak of.
